In less than 5 minutes the Senate today unanimously passed the bill authorizing the District to borrow $20,000,000 from the P.W.A. for local construction work. The bill now goes to the House.

As the Senate reconvened, Senator KING called the bill up despite the fact that the committee report on the proposal was not entered until today. Usually at least one Senator will object to consideration of a bill unless the committee report has been filed at least 24 hours earlier.

Was not that a remarkable procedure, Mr. Speaker, for a $20,000,000 bill to be passed in the twinkling of an eye, without it being considered sanely? But it did not get through this House so easily. Ever since it was hurriedly pushed through the Senate in 5 minutes on April 27, 1934, they have been trying to get it through this House. But it has not been easy.

I appeared before the Rules Committee, and urged that this bad precedent be not set. Our able colleague, Mr. CANNON of Missouri, chairman of the committee that handles the District appropriation bill, appeared before the Rules Committee and urged that it be not passed. We did succeed in forcing $9,250,000 out of the bill.

After this bill is passed here in the House with only $10,750,000 allowed, do you think that is going to change this $20,000,000 Senate bill? No; you put that amendment on the Senate bill, eliminating this $9,250,000, and send it back there in the dying hours of the Congress, and what will they do? They will disagree to your amendment, and you will have a $20,000,000 bill sent up here in the dying hours of this Congress, allowing the District government to borrow $20,000,000 more from the taxpayers of this country out of their Public Treasury, with 30 percent of it a pure gift.

Is it necessary, is it right, is it just, is it proper? This is for you to determine. Now, let us see whether or not it is.

Ben Johnson, as I told you the other day, who was one of the ablest chairmen the District of Columbia Committee ever had, stated here that from 1878 up to the last time he had checked it up, this District government, if you made it pay back the gifts the Federal Government had made to it, would owe the Federal Government $581,000,000. This is what he said—$581,000,000 that the Washington people would owe the Federal Government, or the taxpayers that you and I represent back home, and since then they have had a regular bonanza in Washington for the commercial interests here, by getting huge additional hand-outs.

This is the Nation's Capital. It is the seat of this Government. It is set aside for us to manage the Government's business in, and I am tired of seeing these commercial interests here in Washington dictate to the Congress every year about what should be done; and I repeat, if they do not like the way Congress runs the seat of government, let them get up and move out of Washington, because we are going to keep this as the seat of this Government and the Congress is going to run it to suit itself and the American people and not to suit all of these commercial interests in Washington that have been growing richer every year.

In the last 20 years do you know what you have done for Washington? You have spent $200,000,000 of the people's money in permanent improvements. In the last 4 years you have spent $100,000,000 of the people's money in public improvements, paying carpenters and bricklayers and lathers and painters $10 and $12 and $14 a day here in Washington, when back home they have been glad to get $5 or $6 or $7 or $8. Usually when a person dies here you find they leave an estate of $80,000 on up to $1,000,000 and more. Go down here and look at the returns of the estates of people who have died here in Washington.

We have done more for Washington by spending all this money here and by creating these great public institutions than for any other city. The people everywhere want to come here and see Washington. There is hardly a day passes that there are not 100,000 sight-seeing tourists here from the different States, and think of the tremendous amount of money they spend.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield for just a short question?

Mr. BLANTON. I am sorry, I cannot yield. Maybe not as many as go into the gentleman's fair at Chicago, which is also Federally subsidized, but almost as many, and they spend a big sum of money before they get out. They spend from $25 to $50, every one of them who comes here, and this is a bonanza for the commercial interests.

Now, what is the situation as to benefits the people who live here enjoy? They have a tax rate of $1.50, not on a 100-percent valuation. Get these hearings and you will see that Commissioner Hazen swore in these hearings that this present year they reduced the assessed valuation of property in Washington $80,000,000 in the interests of the taxpayer, and with this reduction the tax rate is $1.50. He also states that they intend next year to reduce the assessed valuation $50,000,000 more. This is a reduction in assessed valuation of $130,000,000 this year and next, with a tax rate of only $1.50.

What is the tax rate out at Indianapolis, Ind., or down in Oklahoma? I wish you would check that up. I wish you would go to the largest city in the district of my friend, Mr. GREENWOOD, and see what their tax rate is; go to St. Louis and see what your tax rate is there, comparable with a tax rate of $1.50 here, with a reduction in assessed valuation of $130,000,000 this year and next.

Let me tell you another thing. After you once connect your house with a sewer you never pay another dollar. Suppose you own a house that is 30 years old, during the last 30 years you have not paid a cent for sewer service and you can own it for the next 150 years and never pay another cent for sewer service. How about your water rate? Your water rates are reduced so that the ordinary family, for 10,000 cubic feet minimum of water, pays $7 a year or about 50 cents a month, and down in our home cities we never get it for one month for much less than that. Most of us pay around $5 a month ordinarily, and during the summer months some pay as high as $25 or $30 per month.

How about the other benefits here? Two cents a gallon is the tax on gasoline. In Tennessee they pay 7 cents. What do you pay over in Virginia? Five cents, although the people here pay 2 cents. Over in Maryland they pay twice as much as they pay here.

How about an income tax? In most every other place you pay a State income tax. There is no local income tax in the District. They tax the intangibles an insignificant, low amount. You will find lockboxes in the banks here with millions of dollars of securities upon which there is not a dollar of tax paid. You will find tax dodgers come into Washington from all over the United States, and it ought to be stopped.

They have no local inheritance tax here. You have in Chicago, you have it in my State, you have it everywhere else, but there is none in Washington. These people here are the special pets—"the inarticulate class", as some Member once said. Why, they have a lobby here the like of which I have never seen in my life before. They come in the back door and in the front door and surround you and ring you up at night.

Let me tell you another thing. For the present fiscal year your Congress passed an appropriation bill allowing the District of Columbia $30,375,000 for expenses—for a city of less than 500,000 people. If that is not enough money, I should like to know why. The Budget said that was enough. The President said that was enough.

As soon as Congress adjourned they went to the C.W.A. and the P.W.A., and if you will look at the committee's report, on page 15, you will find where they got an additional fund of $11,365,760 after Congress adjourned.

Now, in this bill they want $20,000,000 more. Talk about a tuberculosis hospital. They want you to think that little children are suffering and do not have anything done for them by Congress. There is a $625,000 plant we have just completed with fittings, bringing the cost up to $640,000, which will be opened July 1.

Mr. KENNEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I am sorry I cannot yield now.

Mr. KENNEY. I want to help the gentleman.

Mr. BLANTON. I have not time to discuss lotteries. They will put your picture in the paper without it, just for interrupting me. I cannot yield. I want to use my time. Now, every tree that is planted around your residence has not cost you anything directly. That is taken out of the $1.50 tax rate. They spray the trees, they prune the trees every year, and it is all taken out of the $1.50 rate. They collect the ashes, they collect the garbage, they collect the refuse, they collect the trash, all gathered free, and paid for out of the $1.50 tax rate. We pay for it back home. But this is all paid out of the $1.50 tax rate here in Washington.

The paving is all paid out of this $1.50 tax rate. Back yonder, until we stopped it, the Government paid one-half of every dollar of expense for the city of Washington. The million-dollar bridge on Connecticut Avenue your people and mine helped to pay for. Why, you have some bridges, like the $14,000,000 Arlington Bridge, where not a dollar of it was paid by the people of the District, but it was paid for by the Federal Government in toto. The district of my friend Mr. SMITH of Virginia did not pay anything. The people of the District did not pay anything for it. His people ride over it every day, but they did not pay anything toward it. The Government gave it to you Virginians. There are some other bridges that have been paid for by the Government.

Why, this Government has spent hundreds of millions of dollars here. It furnishes every dollar of the total expense of the big Howard University plant here; the District does not pay a cent; and one-third of the population of the District of Columbia is made up of colored people; and they are mostly the ones who attend that plant. There are a few scattered ones from the various States, but it is mostly full of Washington people—all paid for by the Government. St. Elizabeths Hospital up here, with 3,000 patients, is all paid for by the Government. The District uses it and pays a little stipend for service. There are several other hospitals here that I could mention upon which large sums are paid by the Government.

I tell you right now, if you can go back home and square yourselves with your people, all right. I have done my duty when I have called your attention to these facts, and when I vote against it I have done my duty. I am now trying to keep the camel from getting its nose under the tent, for that is what this District is trying to do, and that will cause trouble in the future, because you will have to pay it back.

Every one of these items has been considered by the Committee on Appropriations of both House and Senate. And they were turned down as unnecessary. Yesterday your President signed a bill that gives the city of Washington for next fiscal year, with a dollar and a half on the $100 tax rate and assessable values reduced $130,000,000, the huge sum of $35,400,000 for expenses for the coming fiscal year, $5,700,000 of which is a pure gift from the United States.

Mr. COX. How much of that do the people of the States pay?

Mr. BLANTON. There is a pure gift of $5,700,000 paid by the people of the United States.

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Is the gentleman for this bill or against it?

Mr. KENNEY. I would like to help the gentleman.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman cannot help me if he votes for the bill.

Mr. KENNEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I cannot yield to the gentleman unless he is going to vote against this iniquitous measure and not for it.

Mr. KENNEY. Why, the gentleman does not want me to commit myself in advance.

Mr. BLANTON. I am not yielding to one who does not know now how he is going to vote.

Mr. KENNEY. I am listening to the gentleman's argument with an open mind. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I cannot yield. I am not going to waste my time with anybody who has not yet made up his mind how he is going to vote on this question.

Mr. HAINES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BLANTON. I cannot yield now, Mr. Speaker, and I ask that this be not taken out of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman refuses to yield.

Mr. BLANTON. Get these hearings. After a dollar-and-a-half rate, with assessable values reduced $80,000,000 this year, you will see that Mr. Hazen, the chairman of the Board, testified before the committee that he has a surplus on hand now of $5,000,000, unexpended, as of July 1. He can take that surplus and add 15 cents per $100 to the tax rate here, and instead of its being $1.50 he can make it $1.65 per $100, and, adding that to the surplus, he would have enough money to do every single thing that this $10,750,000 borrowing bill proposes. Why do they not raise that tax rate if they want this $10,750,000? They want you to give them the right to borrow, and then they expect some day through your Government and your taxpayers to have you pay the bill. I am not going to do it. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN].

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I am going to vote for the bill, and no pressure has been brought to bear upon me. Nor am I looking to get my picture in the Washington newspapers. The Federal Government, by reason of an act of Congress, is permitting the States and subdivisions of the States to borrow money from the Public Works Administration for needed public projects to relieve unemployment. Who is going to pay back that money? The people of the country are going to pay back the money. There are close to 500,000 people in the District of Columbia. The people of the District of Columbia pay into the United States Treasury in Federal taxes more money than any 1 of 25 States of this Union. Those 25 States are permitted to borrow money from the P.W.A. funds, yet the District, which pays more money into the Treasury than any 1 of those 25 States, is not permitted to borrow any money from the P.W.A. fund. This bill is to grant that permission. The Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, and Alaska can borrow from the P.W.A. Why should the citizens of the District of Columbia that must pay its share of the public debt not have the same right when provisions are made to repay the loan?

I cannot say I am well informed on any proposal except one, and that is the one that provides for the sewage-disposal plant. I do know something about that because I have studied it. The Public Health Service, acting under a Senate resolution, reported, after a thorough investigation, upon the question of a sewage-disposal plant. That report showed the necessity for the construction of one. Based on that report, the administrator of the Public Works Administration granted $40,000 for the purpose of having three of the outstanding sanitary engineers in the United States investigate the matter. Forty thousand dollars has already been spent to investigate and determine whether a sewage-disposal plant is necessary. Those three engineers, in a unanimous, voluminous report, said that the health of every person in the District of Columbia is jeopardized by reason of the manner in which the District disposes of the sewage. This means the health of all, from the President of the United States down, is jeopardized.

The District Commissioners went before the Committee on Rules and told that committee that they did not expect the Congress to appropriate money to pay this back. The Congress will not be called upon to pay a cent back, but the District taxpayers, according to the terms of the bill, must pay it back. It is our duty to grant this permission to the District government. I hope the bill will be passed. I have spoken on this question at length, introduced a bill providing for the construction of the sewage plant, and appeared before the Rules Committee in support of the rule. This only after a thorough investigation that convinced me this legislation is absolutely necessary from the standpoint of protecting the health of 500,000 people.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of the time.

I should like to discuss the merits of the situation dispassionately and for the purpose of giving the Members of the House some information on this project, that perhaps has not been disclosed to them, in the rather passionate and, I might say, in some cases, prejudiced debate which has taken place with respect to the rule. The purpose of this bill is merely to put the District of Columbia upon the same basis with every other city and hamlet in the United States, to permit them to go before the Public Works Administration and make their case for a loan, if they can.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. O'CONNOR. And in addition to being placed on the same basis as every other city and hamlet in the United States, the same basis as Hawaii and the Virgin Islands?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Yes. So that this bill does not appropriate any money, and perhaps will never result in the appropriation of any money. It simply gives this city the right to go before the Public Works Administration and make out its case for these projects, just as any other city would. The Public Works original bill contains this provision, which I want to read to you:

> That this act shall extend to public works in the several States, Hawaii, Alaska, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, and the Virgin Islands.

All that the District Committee and all that I am asking you to do is to give to the Capital of the greatest nation on earth the same privilege you are giving to the Virgin Islands under this act.

Now, why is it not given as you intended to give it? You intended by this act that the District of Columbia should have the benefit of this bill, and it would have the benefit of this bill, except for this fact; that the District of Columbia is not like any other municipality, and it has not any power to borrow any money unless we, its city council, say it shall borrow money. We are the city council of the District of Columbia. That is all there is to this bill. It simply puts the city where you intended to put it when you passed the Public Works Act last year. We, sitting as a city council of the District of Columbia, are simply saying, "You may go to the Public Works Administration and make out a case if you can", just as the Panama Canal Zone, the Virgin Islands, the Hawaiian Islands, and various other dependencies of the United States may do now under this very act. That is all there is to this bill.

However, there was a great deal of objection expressed to this bill in the Rules Committee by the gentleman from Texas, and it was concluded in the Rules Committee that we would ask the District of Columbia to cut down the authorization from $20,000,000 to $10,750,000, and we cut out several items from the bill. That which we left in the bill and which we are asking the District of Columbia be authorized to use is for the Tuberculosis Hospital. That is one item. The gentleman from Texas has shown you some very pretty pictures. Those pictures pertain to one unit of the Tuberculosis Hospital of the District of Columbia. What we want to do is to build a proper tuberculosis hospital, not only for children, but for adults in the District of Columbia, so that the National Capital may not rate in the future as it does now, as the third highest in the country in death rate from tuberculosis.

One other item is for building a wall or enclosure at the Lorton Reformatory. There is a place where you have 2,000 prison population. It is the penitentiary for the District of Columbia. Persons convicted of robbery, murder, or any other crime are sent down there. There is no wall or enclosure for them. There is no place where they can be confined in cells, and by reason of the fact that we have what is known as the "indeterminate sentence law" in the District of Columbia, the Federal penitentiaries will not accept those prisoners. Therefore there is a condition down there that everybody concedes should be remedied.

Then there is the project of purifying the Potomac River. The Potomac River is now receiving raw sewage from this city of 500,000 population. It is disclosed beyond question of doubt and undisputed that that river is contaminated from north of the District line to a distance of 20 miles below the District of Columbia. We are left here in the middle of it and we are compelling 500,000 citizens of America to live under those conditions. All they ask for is an opportunity to borrow money and pay for it out of their own revenues.

The other project is the Gallinger Municipal Hospital. That is very badly needed. It is much overcrowded. That is the only general hospital in the District.

Those items are all meritorious. The Rules Committee spent three mornings selecting what they regarded as the most meritorious items in that bill, in order that it might be presented to the House and that these people might be permitted to make out their case if they had a case.

Now, I want to say something about this tax rate, because the gentleman from Texas said, "Why do not these Commissioners increase the tax rate for the District of Columbia and raise more money to put on these improvements?" For the simple reason, as I said before, that the men sitting on the floor of this House are the town council of the District of Columbia, and they cannot put on any assessments other than what you tell them to put on. Now, the law is that the District Commissioners shall annually fix the tax rate of the District of Columbia and shall fix it at such rate as will raise a sufficient amount of money to pay the appropriation bill that this Congress has made.

So if you appropriate $30,000,000, as you did this year and the tax rate of $1.50 will pay the $30,000,000, that is what we, the town council of the District of Columbia, have said that the District Commissioners must do. They have no power except what you give them. But if the gentleman from Texas really thought that we ought to be permitted to spend more of the money of the taxpayers of the District of Columbia, all that would be necessary would be to appropriate $40,000,000 instead of $30,000,000; and then, automatically under the law, it becomes the duty of the District Commissioners to raise the tax rate from $1.50 to such sum as may be necessary to pay what the Congress, acting as its city council, has appropriated.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the resolution.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BLANTON) there were—ayes 86, noes 15.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground there is not a quorum present; and I make the point of order there is not a quorum present.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, this is not a Republican filibuster, is it?

Mr. BLANTON. No; but on all these big gifts to Washington we are going to pin down the responsibility on the proper shoulders and let the people of the United States know who, by their votes, are responsible.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is not a quorum present.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—years 247, nays 84, not voting 99, as follows:

[Roll No. 173]

YEAS—247

Adams	Beiter	Brown, Ky.	Cannon, Wis.
Allen	Biermann	Brown, Mich.	Carden, Ky.
Andrew, Mass.	Black	Brunner	Carmichael
Arens	Bland	Buck	Carpenter, Kans.
Ayres, Kans.	Bloom	Bulwinkle	Carter, Calif.
Bacon	Boileau	Burke, Nebr.	Carter, Wyo.
Bailey	Boland	Burnham	Cary
Bakewell	Boylan	Byrns	Castellow
Bankhead	Britten	Cady	Cavicchia
Beam	Brown, Ga.	Caldwell	Claiborne

Clarke, N.Y.	Gillespie	Lindsay	Scrugham
Cochran, Mo.	Gillette	Lloyd	Sears
Cochran, Pa.	Goldsborough	Lozier	Secrest
Coffin	Goodwin	Lundeen	Seger
Cole	Granfield	McCarthy	Sinclair
Condon	Gray	McCormack	Sirovich
Connery	Greenway	McGrath	Sisson
Connolly	Greenwood	McKeown	Smith, Va.
Cox	Gregory	McLean	Smith, Wash.
Cravens	Haines	McReynolds	Snell
Crosby	Hancock, N.Y.	Maloney, Conn.	Somers, N.Y.
Crosser, Ohio	Harlan	Maloney, La.	Steagall
Crowe	Hart	Martin, Colo.	Strong, Pa.
Crump	Hastings	Martin, Mass.	Strong, Tex.
Culkin	Healey	Mead	Stubbs
Cullen	Hildebrandt	Millard	Studley
Cummings	Hill, Knute	Milligan	Sullivan
Darden	Hill, Samuel B.	Montague	Sutphin
Dear	Hoeppel	Moran	Swank
Deen	Hollister	Moynihan, Ill.	Swick
Delaney	Holmes	Musselwhite	Terry, Ark.
De Priest	Hope	O'Brien	Thom
Dirksen	Hughes	O'Connell	Thomas
Ditter	Imhoff	O'Connor	Tobey
Dondero	Jacobsen	Oliver, N.Y.	Traeger
Dowell	Jenckes, Ind.	Owen	Treadway
Doxey	Jenkins, Ohio	Palmisano	Truax
Drewry	Johnson, Minn.	Peavey	Turpin
Driver	Johnson, Okla.	Perkins	Underwood
Duffey	Johnson, W.Va.	Pettengill	Utterback
Dunn	Kahn	Peyser	Vinson, Ga.
Eagle	Kee	Polk	Vinson, Ky.
Eaton	Keller	Powers	Wadsworth
Edmiston	Kelly, Ill.	Prall	Wearin
Edmons	Kelly, Pa.	Ramsay	Weaver
Eicher	Kennedy, Md.	Ramspeck	Weideman
Ellenbogen	Kennedy, N.Y.	Randolph	Welch
Ellzey, Miss.	Kenney	Rankin	Werner
Evans	Kerr	Reece	West, Ohio
Farley	Kleberg	Reed, N.Y.	West, Tex.
Fiesinger	Knutson	Reilly	White
Fitzpatrick	Kocialkowski	Richards	Whitley
Fletcher	Kopplemann	Robertson	Wigglesworth
Focht	Lambeth	Robinson	Williford
Ford	Lamneck	Rogers, Mass.	Withrow
Foss	Lanzetta	Rogers, Okla.	Wolcott
Frear	Larrabee	Rudd	Wolverton
Fuller	Lea, Calif.	Sabath	Wood, Mo.
Gasque	Lehlbach	Sadowski	Woodruff
Gavagan	Lemke	Sanders, La.	Young
Gifford	Lewis, Colo.	Sanders, Tex.	Zioncheck
Gilchrist	Lewis, Md.	Schuetz

NAYS—84

Adair	Dobbins	Luce	Romjue
Andrews, N.Y.	Dockweiler	Ludlow	Ruffin
Arnold	Doughton	McClintic	Sandlin
Ayers, Mont.	Eltse, Calif.	McDuffie	Schaefer
Beedy	Faddis	McFadden	Shallenberger
Blanchard	Foulkes	McFarlane	Taber
Blanton	Fulmer	McGugin	Tarver
Boehne	Glover	Mansfield	Taylor, Colo.
Buchanan	Guyer	Mapes	Terrell, Tex.
Buckbee	Henney	Marshall	Thomason
Burke, Calif.	Hess	May	Thompson, Ill.
Cannon, Mo.	Hill, Ala.	Meeks	Tinkham
Carpenter, Nebr.	Howard	Miller	Turner
Christianson	Johnson, Tex.	Mitchell	Umstead
Colden	Jones	Morehead	Wallgren
Collins, Calif.	Kinzer	Murdock	Warren
Colmer	Kloeb	Parker	Whittington
Cooper, Tenn.	Kniffin	Parks	Williams
Cross, Tex.	Kurtz	Parsons	Wilson
Crowther	Lanham	Rich	Wolfenden
Dickinson	Lehr	Richardson	Wood, Ga.

NOT VOTING—99

Abernethy	Dickstein	Huddleston	Plumley
Allgood	Dies	James	Ransley
Auf der Heide	Dingell	Jeffers	Rayburn
Bacharach	Disney	Kramer	Reid, Ill.
Beck	Douglass	Kvale	Rogers, N.H.
Berlin	Doutrich	Lambertson	Schulte
Bolton	Duncan, Mo.	Lee, Mo.	Shannon
Brennan	Durgan, Ind.	Lesinski	Shoemaker
Brooks	Englebright	McLeod	Simpson
Browning	Fernandez	McMillan	Smith, W.Va.
Burch	Fish	McSwain	Snyder
Busby	Fitzgibbons	Marland	Spence
Carley, N.Y.	Flannagan	Martin, Oreg.	Stalker
Cartwright	Frey	Merritt	Stokes
Celler	Gambrill	Monaghan, Mont.	Sumners, Tex.
Chapman	Goss	Montet	Sweeney
Chase	Green	Mott	Taylor, S.C.
Chaves	Griffin	Muldowney	Taylor, Tenn.
Church	Griswold	Nesbit	Thompson, Tex.
Clark, N.C.	Hamilton	Norton	Thurston
Collins, Miss.	Hancock, N.C.	O'Malley	Waldron
Cooper, Ohio	Harter	Oliver, Ala.	Walter
Corning	Hartley	Patman	Wilcox
Darrow	Higgins	Peterson	Woodrum
DeRouen	Holdale	Pierce

So the resolution was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. Patman with Mr. Bacharach.
Mr. Fernandez with Mr. Muldowney.
Mr. Burch with Mr. Taylor of Tennessee.
Mr. Griffin with Mrs. Rogers of Massachusetts.
Mr. Griswold with Mr. Darrow.
Mr. Hancock of North Carolina with Mr. Bolton.
Mr. Celler with Mr. Cooper of Ohio.
Mr. Taylor of South Carolina with Mr. Merritt.
Mr. Huddleston with Mr. Ransley.
Mr. Woodrum with Mr. Hartley.
Mr. Collins of Mississippi with Mr. Fish.
Mr. Sumners of Texas with Mr. Thurston.
Mr. Cartwright with Mr. James.
Mr. Rayburn with Mr. Mott.
Mr. Douglass with Mr. Beck.
Mrs. Norton with Mr. Englebright.
Mr. Oliver of Alabama with Mr. Lambertson.
Mr. Lee of Missouri with Mr. Chase.
Mr. Clark of North Carolina with Mr. Plumley.
Mr. Rogers of New Hampshire with Mr. Stokes.
Mr. Gambrill with Mr. Goss.
Mr. Green with Mr. McLeod.
Mr. Chapman with Mr. Simpson.
Mr. McSwain with Mr. Waldron.
Mr. McMillan with Mr. Higgins.
Mr. Corning with Mr. Reid of Illinois.
Mr. Allgood with Mr. Kvale.
Mr. Berlin with Mr. Shoemaker.
Mr. Pierce with Mr. Hamilton.
Mr. Flannagan with Mr. Fitzgibbons.
Mr. Brennan with Mr. Holdale.
Mr. Spence with Mr. Thompson of Texas.
Mr. Chaves with Mr. Kramer.
Mr. De Rouen with Mr. Marland.
Mr. Dickstein with Mr. Monaghan of Montana.
Mr. Montet with Mr. Dies.
Mr. Smith of West Virginia with Mr. Carley of New York.
Mr. Bushy with Mr. Dingell.
Mr. Disney with Mr. Walter.
Mr. Wilcox with Mr. Duncan of Missouri.
Mr. Church with Mr. Peterson.
Mr. Snyder with Mr. Durgan of Indiana.
Mr. Lesinski with Mr. Brooks.
Mr. Shannon with Mr. Schulte.
Mr. O'Malley with Mr. Sweeney.
Mr. Harter with Mr. Browning.
Mr. Frey with Mr. Abernethy.
Mr. Jeffers with Mr. Auf der Heide.

Mr. LANHAM and Mr. FULMER changed their vote from "yea" to "nay."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The doors were opened.

On motion of Mr. SMITH of Virginia a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to make a brief announcement.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. McSWAIN], the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HARTLEY], and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DUNCAN] are absent attending hearings of a Subcommittee of the Committee on Military Affairs, and for this reason were unable to respond to the roll call.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, at today's session the House passed the bill (H.R. 9437) to amend an act of Congress approved February 9, 1893, entitled "An act to establish a Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes." At that time I understood I had asked unanimous consent to substitute a similar Senate bill for the House bill and understood the substitution had been made. I have since learned I was in error with reference to the matter.

Mr. Speaker, I now ask unanimous consent that the proceedings whereby the bill (H.R. 9437) was passed be vacated.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3524) to amend an act of Congress approved February 9, 1893, entitled "An act to establish a court of appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Senate bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the court established by the act of February 9, 1893 (27 Stat. 434), entitled "An act to establish a court of appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes", shall hereafter be known as the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

The bill was ordered to be read the third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider and a similar House bill (H.R. 9437) were laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA TO BORROW FROM PUBLIC WORKS ADMINISTRATION

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 3404) authorizing loans from the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works for the construction of certain municipal buildings in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill S. 3404, with Mr. RANKIN in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HARLAN].

Mr. HARLAN. Mr. Chairman, a few moments ago we heard what I thought was a very interesting discussion by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON]. I always like to hear his discussions, because they are so full of energy and mental activity. It seemed to me today, however, that the gentleman's discussion was a little bit off the issue that we have to decide.

We are sitting here as governors of the District of Columbia. The people of the District have no way of letting us know their wishes and desires except through their appointed Commissioners. Their appointed Commissioners and officers have at different times expressed a desire for certain improvements in the District. Many of these improvements are embraced in this contemplated program. The Committee on Appropriations at different times have rejected similar requests in whole or in part. So now the citizens of the District, through the only agency they have, are coming here asking to borrow money with which to carry out these improvements which they feel they need.

It may be said that the citizens do not want these improvements; I have heard these statements made; but there is no proof to this effect upon which we can rely; their officials have asked for them. They have said to our Committee on Appropriations that their municipal court is a disgrace to the city; that the health situation of the city demands a tuberculosis hospital; that the present conditions at the Lorton Reformatory are such they cannot retain their prisoners; that the pollution of the Potomac River is a menace to the entire community.

The Appropriations Committee has said that they cannot spend money raised by taxation for these things; so they have come and asked, as has every other subdivision of the country, to borrow money; and have said they would pay it back by taxation. What can be more fair than this? It is not a question, Mr. Chairman, of whether there is an inheritance tax in the District of Columbia.

It is not a question of what will they pay for their water; it is not a question of what they pay for their sewer or their bridges. They have paid for everything that we directed them to pay for, and they have not paid for anything we have not permitted them to pay for. The only question that is before this body this afternoon is, Does the District of Columbia need these improvements? And that is all there is to the matter.

Mr. MURDOCK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARLAN. I yield to the gentleman from Utah.

Mr. MURDOCK. Is the gentleman forgetting entirely the purpose for which the Public Works money was appropriated? It was appropriated not to municipal needs in the way of improvements but in order to put men back to work. They have spent more money in the District of Columbia than in any other part of the country.

Mr. HARLAN. The same amount spent in the District of Columbia for the same kind of improvements will put the same number of men to work in the District of Columbia as in Utah, Ohio, or anywhere else.

These great monumental buildings that have been referred to, which the Federal Government has put into the District of Columbia have not been requested by the people of the District. They have not asked for these buildings. We have not put them here as a gift to the people of the District. We have put them here because we wanted them here, and because we wanted to make this the most beautiful Capital in the world. May I say that if you will just go into the Municipal Building down here where the juvenile court is situated, where the municipal court is situated, and where the police court is situated, you will hang your heads in shame. We, in Congress, have put buildings here for monumental purposes. It is like putting a red coat of paint on the front of the store because it will bring credit to us. The people of the District want these things provided in this bill for their health. They want to educate their children in schools and are willing to pay for them. Incidentally, may I say that the schools are tremendously overcrowded, too.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I knew when I took the floor against the rule that makes this bill in order that I would thereby make myself the target of every person who is trying to put this bill over. I am able to stand their darts. I am able to withstand all of their thrusts beneath the belt, because I know what I am talking about and am armed with the facts, and some who will try to get rid of the facts by an ignorant wave of the hand will be those who know as little about the business affairs of this District as they do about most of the legislation that comes on this floor.

There may be some who will attack because some neighbor has made to them this complaint about some school, or about some playground, or about some hospital, or about water pollution in the great Potomac, which is now just what it has been for the past 50 years, and they will accuse me of being prejudiced, and they will say that my statements are not accurate, when they do not have any personal knowledge whatever about the subject.

Regardless of what the newspapers may say, and regardless of what critics on this floor may say, I do know what I am talking about, and every statement I have already made here today about this bill, and this District, is 100 percent true and correct, and every posted man in this House—men like TABER, CANNON of Missouri, BUCHANAN, of Texas, COX, of Georgia—know that I have given you all a true picture of the facts here in Washington.

The investigation and report of Ben Johnson, the investigation and report of the Mapes committee, and every other honest investigation, will show that I have given you the facts as they exist, and these facts cannot be wiped away by the wave of the hand.

The following, quoted from the official committee report, shows that for the present fiscal year there was appropriated for the District of Columbia's expenses $30,375,834, and that the President's estimates for 1935, the next fiscal year beginning July 1, 1934, as sent to us by the President's Budget, was $33,454,843.94, to wit:

	Appropriations, 1934	Budget estimates, 1935
Payable from gasoline-tax fund	[1] $1,237,400	$2,296,550.00
Payable from water revenues	[2] 1,027,000	1,511,347.00
Payable from District revenues derived from taxes on real estate, tangible and intangible property, public utilities, banks, etc., and from miscellaneous sources	22,411,434	23,946,946.94
Payable from U.S. Treasury	5,700,000	5,700,000.00
Total, regular annual	[3] 30,375,834	33,454,843.94

[1] And indefinite appropriation not exceeding $1,500,000.
[2] And indefinite appropriation not exceeding $635,000.
[3] And indefinite appropriation not exceeding $2,135,000.

And to show, Mr. Chairman, what the District of Columbia received from the P.W.A. and the C.W.A., after Congress had given it $30,375,834 for this fiscal year, I quote the following from the official committee report from page 15, to wit:

The following tabulation shows the amounts authorized to be expended for relief work from all sources since the first appropriation was made available in the fiscal year 1933, including Public Works and Civil Works allocations:

[Statement prepared Apr. 5, 1934]

	Fiscal year 1933	Fiscal year 1934
District of Columbia appropriations	$1,150,000	$1,300,000
Community chest appropriation	100,000
F.E.R.A.	140,767	1,864,914
F.E.R.A. (value of surplus commodities, foodstuffs, and coal)		375,960
		3,540,874
Transient relief		185,500
C.W.A. projects		4,176,000
Virginia C.W.A., construction of buildings, District of Columbia Reformatory, Lorton, Va.		136,000
	1,390,767	8,038,374
Total, 1933 and 1934, as above		9,429,141
Section 202, N.I.R.A., sewers		1,759,500
Section 204, N.I.R.A., streets and bridges		1,918,469
Section 202, N.I.R.A., National Capital parks		748,650
Total for all purposes through Apr. 5, 1934		13,855,760

Surely, Mr. Chairman, no youngster here, and no humorist, will claim that any of the Washington newspapers will misrepresent any facts against their own interest. I quote from them to show just what relief Washington has gotten from Hon. Harry Hopkins, Relief Administrator, as a pure gift from the United States Government, for the months of April, May, and June 1934. The following is from the Washington News of April 27, 1934:

The original April allotment for District relief was $800,000 but this fund was exhausted last week and yesterday Commissioner George E. Allen asked for and received an additional $200,000 for the balance of the month, making a $1,000,000 total for relief activities.

The above shows that the city of Washington got for the month of April 1934, first the sum of $800,000, then an additional $200,000, or the total of $1,000,000 for relief during April 1934.

I quote the following from the Washington Post for April 29, 1934:

District officials have asked approximately $900,000 for May. This is $100,000 less than granted for April. In addition to the $400,000 allotted yesterday for the first half of May, other grants were $71,432 for transient and $5,780 for student aid.

After the above, Harry Hopkins gave Washington another $400,000 for May, which made over $800,000 relief money this Government gave to Washington for May 1934.

In the said Washington Post for April 29, 1934, I quote the following:

The statement of Gotwals came as Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, who has ordered an investigation of heavy relief expenditures here, issued a grant of $400,000 to pay for direct and work relief during the first 2 weeks of May.

Gotwals is of the opinion that there are 8,000 families receiving aid who are not entitled to it. The average budgetary allowance is $30 a month, which totals $240,000.

4,000 JOBS OPEN

In spite of the heavy demands for direct relief, the E.W.A. is 4,000 men short of the number necessary to carry on the approved projects. Unofficially, those in administrative positions on the E.W.A. have expressed the opinion that many persons prefer to receive direct aid rather than work for their allowance.

From the Washington Herald of June 5, 1934, I quote the following:

DISTRICT GIVEN $710,052 FOR RELIEF—SUM ALLOTTED BY HOPKINS IS $15,000 LESS THAN BUDGET REQUEST

A total of $710,052 was granted the District for relief today by Harry L. Hopkins, P.W.A. Administrator, the figure representing about $15,000 less than was asked by the District Commissioners.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN], one of our most delightful companions, and he is one of my chums, made the best argument against this bill that has been made on this floor when he was speaking in behalf of the bill. He told you unequivocally, and it therefore must be so, that the people of the District of Columbia pay to the Government in income tax more than the people of 24 States. Is that not a terrible indictment to place against this Congress? It is just such bills as this that have made the people of the District of Columbia as a whole the richest people in the United States. I know a man located here who 30 years ago paid $100 apiece for two lots. This was $200 for the two lots. By reason of what the Federal Government has done here his lots today are worth $250,000. That is an example of what the Government has done for the people of Washington.

Take this $17,000,000 Commerce Building down here. They tore down fine buildings that were worth millions of dollars in cash in order to get the ground on which to put this $17,000,000 building. Take this magnificant Post Office Building down here about which we read so much in reference to the elegance of some of the offices. It has just been built. Take all these other fine buildings down here along Constitution Avenue. Take the $15,000,000 Memorial Bridge across to Arlington. Take this splendid, almost $10,000,000, Supreme Court Building and grounds that it will take an army of people to man every day when they occupy it. All this has been for the Nation's Capital, and has been helpful financially to every person who lives in the city of Washington.

May I tell you something that I mentioned before? There was a bill here once to appropriate over $600,000 to buy some park ends. I thought I would go down and look those park ends over. I secured the services of a photographer and took him in my car and went down there. They were some little cut-over corners from which the timber had been removed. I had a picture taken of them. They were worth about $5,000. I looked up on the hill and I saw a magnificent white dwelling up there. I called a policeman and I said, "Officer, who owns that dwelling up yonder." He said, "Why, that belongs to the multimillionaire Senator from ———", who was then here in the Senate. I said, "Why, he is the man who introduced this bill." The officer says, "He is putting an addition up there around his residence."

That is what was the matter. There were too many fine residences owned by people at this end and the other end of the Capitol. Some of these days the people back home are going to stop, pause, reflect, and hold us accountable for what we do here.

Of course, the people of Washington pay more income taxes, as the gentleman from Missouri said, than the people of 24 States. How much did your city of 500,000 people get in April for relief? Washington, for April, a month in which you could sleep in the parks if necessary, received from Harry Hopkins and his relief agency $1,000,000. That was for April for relief in Washington. What did they get for May? This was also a month of warm weather. They received $800,000 for May from the relief fund. What are they getting in this month, June? They are getting $700,000 for June. Your people back home are furnishing the money.

We have in this body a former great labor commissioner from Missouri, a splendid man, one who has rendered a great, splendid service to his people back in the State of Missouri for 20 years [Mr. WOOD]. I take my hat off to him because he is a worthy labor leader.

But because I have voted against certain bad bills here, a dirty little sneak here in Washington, a Judas Iscariot in the Democratic Party, Edward Keating, in his labor paper here today, issue of June 5, 1934, made an attack upon me, wholly unjustified. I remember the time when Edward Keating served in this House. I served with him. This was in the Woodrow Wilson war Congress and I want my friend here, the gentleman from Missouri, to know that Edward Keating was a renegade to his Democratic Party. He was a thorn in the side of the great Woodrow Wilson. He was wholly without any influence in this Congress. He did not do one thing here that was worth one penny to the people of the country. He was a worthless parasite on the body politic of America. He was a lazy, indifferent, worthless cuss.

Everything that the President of the United States during that crucial war period wanted done, Edward Keating was against. He would not support his Commander in Chief on anything. Democrats in Colorado were ashamed of him. And what the people of Colorado did to him when election time came was a plenty. They kicked him out of office, lock, stock, and barrel. They repudiated him completely. And they were so ashamed of him that it took us a dozen years to get a good Democrat elected from his District in Colorado.

Edward Keating had a 100-percent record of voting against Woodrow Wilson and his war policies, and he was a dirty renegade and traitor to his Democratic Party. His constituents banished him from the State of Colorado, and he cannot even go back to Colorado. He is worse than Napoleon on St. Helena—a dirty, little scamp, jumping on me. [Laughter and applause.] Tell him about it, boys—a dirty, cowardly, little scamp. What has he done for the people of the country? Nothing. For two-thirds of his natural life he has been a parasite on the splendid men who labor. He has never done a thing that has been worth mentioning in his whole natural life. After reading his vicious, baseless attack, I had to get it off my system.

Mr. WITHROW. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. No; I am going to get back to this bill.

How much more are we going to do for the people of Washington? Have we not done enough? Are we not still doing everything for them? I will tell you what Chicago or St. Louis or the great metropolis of New York or Philadelphia would gladly do. If you could move the splendid Government plant of the United States from Washington to any of those cities, they would sign a bond to free us from paying any tax for all time until eternity.

Yet, Mr. Chairman, there are some people in Washington, who, if we would let them, would tax this Government for all of its property holdings here in its own seat of government, its own District of Columbia, at the same rate that private property here is taxed. I quote the following from the Washington Herald of April 27, 1934:

The estimated value of the land and buildings used for Federal purposes, exclusive of parks, in the District is $500,000,000. The present tax rate is $1.50 on each $100 of valuation.

On this basis, Uncle Sam, figuratively, should pay an annual tax of $7,500,000 to the District government.

And the Washington News for Thursday, April 26, 1934, had the following:

SENATOR THOMAS ADVISES CUT IN ASSESSMENTS AND TAX RATE BOOST—DISTRICT RESIDENTS WOULD PAY NO MORE AND RATE WOULD BE COMPARABLE, SENATOR SAYS

By Ray Moulden

Larger annual Federal contributions to District expenses are contemplated in a plan outlined to the Commissioners yesterday by Chairman THOMAS (Democrat, Oklahoma) of the Senate District Appropriations Committee.

Thomas' plan would provide for a reassessment of property for tax purposes on a lower scale.

BILL NO HIGHER

This would mean that in the case of property now valued at $100, on which $1.50 in taxes is paid, the property might be assessed at $50 and the tax rate increased to $3.

Thus, District residents would pay the same sum in taxes, but would pay a larger tax rate on a smaller assessment.

Thomas' idea is to end the criticism of those unfriendly to the District who contend that the National Capital has the lowest tax rate in the country and therefore needs no Federal contribution.

In other words, Mr. Chairman, notwithstanding the assessed valuations have been decreased $80,000,000 for this fiscal year, and will be decreased another $50,000,000 after July 1, it is to be proposed that the values as then remaining be cut in half, and the rate doubled, so it won't appear to outsiders that the taxes are low here in Washington.

I wonder if the people of Oklahoma are going to obtain that kind of a system, as they need it, for the tax rate in some cities in Oklahoma is about five times what it is in Washington.

These newspapers in Washington have the audacity and the effrontery and the gall to come here to Congress and say that one of these days they are going to tax the United States for every bit of property the Government has in its own District of Columbia—going to tax us for Government property when they are here on sufferance. They are here because we permit them to live here. This is not theirs, this is the Government's—the Nation's Capital, and if Mr. Theodore Noyes, and when I say this I am talking about one of the greatest editors of one of the greatest newspapers in the United States, the Washington Star; it is one of the most reliable ones in the Nation; it is about the only absolutely reliable paper that I know of in the East, the Washington Star—Theodore Noyes thinks that this Congress is not going to hold control of Washington, he has another guess coming. Just because he controls the Associated Press is no reason why we are going to let him bunco us. We represent the people back home, and it is their interests we speak for here.

When we give the District $30,375,000 for its expenses during the present fiscal year and it has gone to the C.W.A. and P.W.A. and gotten $11,000,000 as a pure gift and $2,000,000 more as a loan, is not that enough for this fiscal year?

We are going to open next month, on July 1, a $640,000 tuberculosis hospital here, and when we have given the District every bit of money it has justified before the Budget, why should we pass this bill and let them put their nose under the tent like a camel, and pretty soon get in debt to the various institutions in the country, so that this Government will be forced to come in afterward and pay it off.

I am glad to see there were eighty-odd Members of Congress who voted against the rule. We will gain votes against this bill. By these votes you are going to place the responsibility. You cannot get away from it. This CONGRESSIONAL RECORD goes into the 48 States of this Nation. It goes into every congressional district. The people back home are going to find out by your votes who is standing behind Washington and who gets up and speaks for these things and votes for these things, and who has the courage to vote against them. That is what you are going to show by your votes. I am not criticizing you for your votes. You have a right to vote just as you please, the same as I vote as I please. I do not take any directions from back-seat drivers when I drive my automobile. I drive it just like you do, but I want to appeal to you in the interest of the people of the United States back home who are hard up, who did not get $1,000,000 for April, and $800,000 for May, and who have not received $700,000 from the Government for relief during June, like Washington—I am asking you to hold them down to what the Congress has given them and not let them borrow this $10,375,000 more, and start a system that is going to cause us trouble in the future.

Oh, I know we all like our colleague [Mr. SMITH]. He is a darned good fellow and a good scout. He is our esteemed colleague. He lives over in Virginia and every time he gets a hand-out it helps him. We all like our good friend [Mr. PALMISANO] over here in Baltimore. We would like to help him. Maryland and Virginia are for everything in the world to spend money anywhere close to Maryland and Virginia. Every time you spend money in Washington it helps them. They get a little trickling from it. Every time you give a hand-out over at Lorton you help Virginia, and every time you give a hand-out over in Maryland you help Baltimore and PALMISANO; but because we like them, are we going to vote for this kind of a $10,375,000 proposition? Is it right, is it proper, is it just?

When I shall have concluded these few remarks, and when I vote against the bill, and when I voted against the rule, as I did, I have done my duty—my conscientious duty in doing what I think is right, and then it is up to you. You will outvote me, probably, but I shall not complain. I have done all one man could do to stop it.

Let me tell you, I have found out in my service here some things. Way back yonder only about seven of us voted against the Muscle Shoals bill 10 or 12 years ago, and while we lost here in the House that fight eventually stopped the bill and we saved Muscle Shoals for the people of the United States. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BLACK].

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Committee, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] has again demonstrated that he is the pastmaster of the incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant.

We are not concerned at all about the benefits that the people of Washington have received. We are concerned about the Public Works program. His speech against the bill is probably the best argument in its favor. He says that Washington has no debt, that Washington has a $5,000,000 surplus, and by a slight tax increase can pay its debt to the Nation. Are there any cities in the Nation so well able to pay the Government as Washington is? That is what we should be concerned about, except that we should be concerned to give work to the people, and this bill gives $20,000,000 worth of work. That is the important thing, and that is the reason for the Public Works program. Why should not we be willing to give it to a community able to pay it back?

There is nothing else in the bill except the public-works feature. All the other stuff that he mentioned is inconsequential.

All we are doing is to say that they can borrow this money if they can get it. We say go ahead and borrow it, and you can pay it back. It is simply a loan proposition. We are not concerned about the District finances, except, as the gentleman says, it is in a good financial condition and can repay the loan. What other community is in such a situation?

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time. [Applause.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes. If your town were going to buy a piece of fire apparatus, the only thing necessary would be for the city council to determine upon the necessity for such a piece of equipment, then to make proper provision in the levy and appropriation ordinance for the municipality, and then proceed with the purchase. If your town wants to install a sewerage system or a sewage-disposal plant, all it needs to do is to go before a meeting of the board of local improvements, determine upon the necessity for the plant, hold hearings, prepare plans, and then upon referendum authorize the issuance of bonds in order to carry on that project. If your town wants to install a piece of paving, it goes through the same procedure, but that sort of thing cannot be done in Washington in the District of Columbia. They have no rights in that respect. Under the law, as pointed out by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON], passed in 1878, they can authorize no bond issue, they can do nothing that involves the expenditure of money until they first come before the Congress of the United States and receive not only authority from the District of Columbia Committee, but also approval of the Committee on Appropriations. They are virtually helpless, so they come before the Congress and ask for what? Not $20,000,000, not $10,750,000, but they come for authority to borrow $10,750,000 from the P.W.A. and for the privilege of paying back 70 percent, and of enjoying the same rights that all other municipalities and counties and States and political subdivisions in the country at the present time enjoy under the P.W.A.—a 30-percent grant.

Getting away from the misinformation that has been distilled here this afternoon on this bill, let us strip it of all nonessentials and get down to brass tacks. They want, first of all, to build a sewage-disposal system; and why? Because the raw sewage at the present time goes into the Potomac River. I would invite those gentlemen who think the District does not need such a plant or should not have such a plant to walk along the corridor to the office of the clerk of the Supreme Court and there procure a copy of the decree that was rendered within the last year against the Sanitary District of Chicago. What does that provide? That suit instituted at the instance of riparian States along the Great Lakes asked that the Sanitary District of Chicago, a quasi-municipal corporation, be compelled, by 1938, to stop putting raw sewage into the Illinois River. The Sanitary District, in a dilatory plea, said, "Our bonding power is exhausted, we cannot finish those plants", but the Supreme Court issues a decree, in so much language virtually saying, "We demand that the Legislature and the Governor of the State of Illinois take such steps as will provide the funds with which to complete those treatments and stop contaminating the Illinois River." How strange, then, when that is the attitude of the Supreme Court, the attitude of the people in the riparian States along the Great Lakes area, that somebody here says that we must refuse $8,000,000 or thereabouts to build a sewage disposal plant to prevent the contamination of one of the finest rivers in the United States. It is rather singular, and there is a total inconsistency between the two attitudes. I pointed out in the discussion under the rule that it is not a question of whether they want $2,000,000 or $7,000,000 or $8,000,000. It is a question of the necessity for that project.

Here is a town of 487,000, where the raw effluent from stores and shops and dwellings is poured into that river producing an unsanitary condition that must be cured. The P.W.A. advanced $40,000 to hire three of the most competent sanitation engineers in the country to pass on the matter. Those engineers recommended the building of a plant. I am not going to put myself in the position of refusing to go along with that recommendation simply because I am afraid of prejudice on the part of my people back home. If I were the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] I would have been ashamed to come into the well of this House and confess that because we are going to spend some money in the District of Columbia he is afraid of what his people might say if he votes for it. I know the temper of my people at home, and I am not afraid of their judgment on this matter. If I should go back to them and make a report on a vote for this bill and say to them, "Folks, they have a hospital in Washington built for 500 beds and they have 700 people in that hospital right now, but I was one of those who by vote refused to make it possible to expand the hospital facilities." What would my people say to that? I might go to them and say, "Folks, they need a sewage-disposal plant to stop contaminating the Potomac River, one of the finest rivers in the Nation. You live here along the Illinois River in this lush and beautiful valley, and you staged a fight for the last 20 years to stop contamination of that river, yet I voted against the proposal to stop contaminating a river down there along the Atlantic seaboard." And what would they have to say to that? Suppose I said to them, "Folks, they have a jail down there in Lorton which was built for 800 prisoners and they have 1,200 prisoners there now. They mix up the hardened along with the first offenders. It is a great jumble.

"There has been prison trouble down there before, and they need to build additional facilities with which to segregate the hardened offenders from the first offenders and to properly look after the penal care of the people who are committed to that institution, built for 800; and all I can say is that by my vote I helped to stop an appropriation that would correct that kind of evil. By my vote I made future prison outbreaks possible." What would they say to that?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. O'CONNOR. As to Lorton, they have to build a wall around it so that the prisoners will not be coming up here paying us a visit some day.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I presume that is right. So I am not particularly concerned about an unpopular reaction back home, because I am satisfied that when they are properly and adequately informed as to all the facts in connection with this bill they will give whole-hearted approval.

Mr. TERRELL of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. TERRELL of Texas. If these conditions are so bad, why have not the Commissioners of the District come here and asked Congress to let them tax themselves to correct them before this time?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I can say to the gentleman from Texas that in spite of the fact that I am a first-term Member of Congress, I believe they probably have had the same difficulty with other Congresses that is apparent here at the present time.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. O'CONNOR. It was presented to the Rules Committee that they have for years asked the Committee on Appropriations to appropriate money to meet these projects. They have been unsuccessful with the Appropriations Committee, and this is the only method they have to raise the money.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That is precisely correct.

Mr. TERRELL of Texas. Well, why would not Congress let them tax themselves? The trouble is they wanted to get the money out of the Federal Treasury.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. Why did they not present these projects to the President's Budget? Congress gave this District every single thing that the President's Budget recommended. The Budget did not recommend any of these projects. The Budget did not recommend this sewer-pollution business. It did not recommend these other things. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] and his committee gave them everything the President's Budget said ought to be given.

Mr. DIRKSEN. And yet in all the discussion which the gentleman from Texas carried on, 17 minutes under the rule and 15 minutes under general debate, the gentleman never once referred to the fact that these projects might be necessary and are necessary. The gentleman never once in all of his discussion pointed out that these things were necessary. He merely begged the whole question.

Mr. BLANTON. I did not beg the question. They are not necessary now because the Budget did not say so. We go by the President's Budget. These projects go beyond the President's Budget.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] has expired.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. MAY. I should like to get some information so I will know how to vote. It has been said by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] that there was given for the month of April, $800,000; for the month of May, $800,000; and for the month of June, there would be $700,000. If that condition of unemployment exists in the District of Columbia, can the gentleman state why it is that two and a half million which has been given as a dole should not have been used in employing these people and putting them to work on these projects instead of giving the money away?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I will say to the gentleman that I do not know anything about it, but I will say also that references have been made to people getting relief who were not entitled to it. It was not stated why they were not entitled to relief, whether they were wealthy and had means or whether they were floaters who came into Washington, or what. If they were floaters, I am going to say this: The fact that they may have floated in from Maryland or Virginia or Pennsylvania to find work here is all beside the point, because they are citizens of the United States, and I do not care whether they are in Washington or Peoria or Baltimore, they have to have something to eat and be provided for. It does not make any difference whether they are provided for here or elsewhere, assuming that their needs are bona fide.

Mr. O'CONNOR. In the city of New York in every bread line and every soup kitchen—and it has been checked up—from 70 to 80 percent of the people in those lines are from outside the city of New York, and we take care of them without any reluctance.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That is undobutedly true.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield further for a question?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. MAY. I do not believe the gentleman has answered my question; that is, why it is that $2,300,000 has been given away for relief, instead of using it to pay for work on these projects?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I will say that I do not know whether that is true, and I do not know why it is true, if it is true.

Mr. MAY. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] just made that statement.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That may be true.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, there is no doubt about it. They got $800,000 in April, $800,000 in May, and they will get $700,000 in June.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I will say that I do not know anything about it, but I want to complete my remarks by saying that they are asking to borrow $10,700,000. They want to build a tuberculosis hospital, because they have one of the highest death rates of any city in the United States from that cause.

They want to improve conditions at Lorton Penitentiary, and these improvements are urgently needed. They want to build an addition to Gallinger Hospital to take care of people who are now on cots in the corridors, and then they want to build this sewage-disposal plant. They are asking altogether $10,750,000. They will raise the tax rate and repay all except 30 percent.

It has been said a time or two that the District of Columbia is not entitled to a grant of 30 percent. Why are not the people of Washington entitled to the same privileges as the people of the other municipalities of the country? Here, for instance, is the report of the Public Works Administration, rendered to the United States Senate. I commend it to the study of the gentleman from Texas, for in it the gentleman will find applications from Texas for all kinds of projects that exceed in number those from Illinois, Pennsylvania, and New York put together, projects running as high as $5,500,000 and as low as $5,000. They want to build hospitals and schools down there; install sewers and water; build parks and colleges, dormitories, and city buildings. Every kind of project is included. They are asking for loans, they are asking for grants, and they want 30 percent as an outright gift. The people of Washington subscribe to the same laws and to the same Constitution as do the people of Texas and the rest of the country. Why are not the people of the District of Columbia entitled to precisely the same benefits as the people from Texas? I should like to know why there is this discrimination.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. Washington has gotten three times as much as my district, with 400,000 people in it.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I doubt it very much.

Mr. BLANTON. I have the figures to prove it.

Mr. DIRKSEN. The gentleman from Texas possibly complains about the millions that are expended here. Permit me to say to the gentleman from Texas, Mr. Chairman, that every time Uncle Sam expends $1,000,000 for a building in the District of Columbia the erection of that building takes out of circulation a certain amount of assessable property and deprives the District of Columbia of that much tax revenue. Does the gentleman think that is of particular benefit to the District?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes; because it stands as an additional attraction to bring hundreds of thousands of people to Washington to spend their money, which is a bonanza for the Washington people.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Finally, Mr. Chairman, I am interested in seeing that we maintain a modern, beautiful Capital even if it does cost a little bit more, that the people from all over the country may not be disappointed when they come here for the purpose of inspecting the beauties of the city.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Is there a provision in this bill for an enlargement of the physiotherapy facilities at the Children's Hospital? They are inadequate and overcrowded at the present time.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I doubt it very much. I think the gentleman from Texas can answer that. There was a provision in the legislative bill for the Children's Hospital.

Mr. BLANTON. We gave them everything they asked for when we had the recent conference with the Senate.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. So these facilities will be supplied, that the children may have adequate care?

Mr. BLANTON. The President of the Tuberculosis Association of Washington got everything she asked for; we gave Mrs. Grant everything she asked for, and she was satisfied, and I have her letter thanking me.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I am speaking of the facilities at the Children's Hospital.

Mr. BLANTON. For the tuberculosis problem here we gave everything Mrs. Grant, the president in charge here, asked for, and she is satisfied.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. KENNEY].

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. Chairman, this bill provides for a loan involving a 30-percent grant. This, however, resolves itself into a net grant of 25 percent, because the 30-percent grant is based upon the cost of material and labor only. So the outright grant is only 25 percent.

I notice that this money is asked for worthy purposes. The first item on the bill is for a tuberculosis hospital. I am wondering why in a Nation like this when an amount is asked for charitable and worthy, humane purposes that must be paid by the taxpayers of the country, and particularly by those taxpayers in the section where I live, why it has never occurred to those asking for funds for such purpose and why it was not brought home to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to do what the enlightened people of Puerto Rico did only a few weeks ago to provide needed improvements in that island caring for the tubercular? What did Puerto Rico do? The people of the island had the government enact a law authorizing a government lottery to provide the funds. The bill was passed and finally signed by the Governor of Puerto Rico, Governor Winship, a former United States Army Officer, who approved the lottery for the purposes mentioned, and thereby established under the American flag and under the jurisdiction of the United States a governmentally operated and conducted lottery which will go into effect July 1 next to raise money for public charitable purposes. The Philippines, too, has a lottery. We have been contributing our moneys by this medium to the Philippines and our lottery money flows abroad generously to foreign countries in startling amounts and we are probably the greatest contributors to the hospitals of other countries.

Mr. Chairman, the President has just sent to Congress a message relating to the war debts—obligations owing to us by other governments. We are insisting upon payment. It is our desire to bring back to this country moneys which have gone out of it. Is it not problematical whether we shall ever be paid a substantial part of the war debts? There will be defaulting nations. It is expected because the political features of Europe are not conducive to payment whether or not the ability to pay exists. Our wise Congress, to meet the situation, has passed a law banning further loans to defaulting nations. We do not want other moneys of ours to go out of the country never to return.

Nevertheless, we yearly are permitting a regular flow of tremendous amounts of lottery money to go abroad into foreign channels. It is peculiarly fitting that I speak of the matter at this time, for at this very moment in another country officials are meeting to check the receipts and to draw the prizes of the great Irish sweepstakes of the English Derby to take place at Epsom Downs on Wednesday. Perhaps the greater part of the moneys collected will have been contributed by the United States through countless of her people—citizens who are anticipating with enthusiasm and with thrilled emotion the results of the drawing made possible by their contributions. New York City alone has been known to send abroad for such occasions between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000. The country will be the poorer by millions; and, according to reliable estimates, the yearly contribution of the United States to foreign lotteries is upward of $200,000,000. Are we really keeping our money from going abroad? We will not loan it, yet we will give it away by the hundreds of millions.

Why will Congress not consider speedily the bill now pending in the House authorizing the raising of funds by lottery to defray in part the expenses of the Government, including expenditures for veterans and their dependents, and for other purposes?

Is the answer, "It is gambling"? There is a distinction in lotteries. The Encyclopedia Britannica is authority for this:

The word "lottery"—

It reads—

has no very definite significance. It may be applied to any process of determining prizes by lot, whether the object be amusement or gambling or public profit.

I am advocating a lottery for public profit as provided by my bill. We will eventually have to go to the country for the maintenance of our financial stability, and the most available and effective means is by way of the lottery. Through this medium every patriotic citizen of the country will respond with a small contribution as a gift to the Government. We do need the money.

There is an authorized lottery in the Philippines, and Puerto Rico has just passed a bill, signed by the Governor, for aid in the drive against tuberculosis. The lottery is legally conducted again under the American flag as it was in the days of Washington. A Federally operated and conducted lottery would not only provide a vast amount of needed revenue, but would tend to wipe out dishonest and illegally conducted rackets. What the country needs, and needs now, is an honest lottery.

The cost of Government is steadily mounting; we are preaching thrift, we passed an Economy Act, but we keep on spending. If we cannot trim expenditures, then certainly we ought to consider increasing our income. We sometimes seem to forget there are two sides to the ledger; 1934 will supply a new high record of expenditures. The total of Government costs—local, State, and National—will be upward of $21,000,000,000. That means over five billions more than the previous year. Of the latter amount, four and one-half billions represent Federal appropriations to speed national recovery. The national income, not of the Government, but the whole Nation's income for 1934, is estimated at slightly over $46,000,000,000. As pointed out just now, the Government costs to be raised by taxation will be twenty-one billions. Therefore, over 45 cents of every dollar of income from every source to our people will be paid over to our governments in taxation. And yet we forget to remember the good old-fashioned collection by lottery as a means of great efficacy in exigencies. The lottery is the aristocrat of emergency measures. It is employed by more than 30 countries as a method of raising revenue. We have kept the liquor dollar from going out of our borders, we are bent on preventing dollar loans to defaulting debtor nations, but we are so short-sighted that the lottery dollars are running away from us by the hundreds of millions. The rate at which our money is going out will drain us before we know it, if other countries insist upon separating us from our money, once they have received it.

When shall we stop this leak?

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 9½ minutes.

Mr. Chairman, it is very amusing at times to listen to the gentleman from Texas, always in the position of taking away something from the people of the District. When someone happens to take the floor to seek justice for the District, the charge is made that they want to get their names or their pictures in the newspaper. I do not believe there is a man in this House who has his name on the front page more than does the gentleman from Texas. Why, the only way to get your picture in the paper is by criticism. Whenever anything of that kind arises, we see the face of the gentleman from Texas right on the front page.

He stated awhile ago that the gentleman from Maryland likes to give the District everything it seeks; but he does not recall the inconsistency of his remarks in reference to the District. In the first place, he criticized the District Commissioners and the people of the District because they paid no taxes. In other words, they paid no income tax. Then when his attention was called to the error by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN] the gentleman from Texas stated, "Yes; the District pays more taxes than 24 States of the Union. That is the reason you ought not to give them anything. Why, they are in position to pay." Then he says, "Why do they not raise the tax rate to $1.55?" Why, the gentleman from Texas was the very man that took the floor here when we were considering an appropriation bill sometime ago and tried to reduce the tax rate to $1.20. Why the inconsistency? He says, "$1.50 is too high. Cut it down to $1.20." When we ask the Members of the House to permit the people of the District to make improvements, the gentleman from Texas says, "Why do they not raise the tax rate to $1.55?"

What does this bill provide? Under what conditions has the Rules Committee reported this bill? They have reported this bill under the condition that 10 cents of every dollar will be set aside for the purpose of paying anything that the District Commissioners may borrow from the Government.

Mrs. KAHN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield to the gentlewoman from California.

Mrs. KAHN. Will the gentleman kindly explain why there is no money put aside for schools? Some of the school buildings here in Washington are a disgrace to any city. Why is it that no money is to be provided to be set aside for the schools of the District?

Mr. PALMISANO. I wish I could answer the gentlewoman from California, but I really do not know.

Mrs. KAHN. Does not the gentleman think there ought to be something provided for school buildings?

Mr. PALMISANO. I think so. But that is a question to be taken up with the Commissioners.

Mr. GREENWOOD. If the gentleman will yield, I might be able to answer the gentlewoman's question. The sum of $20,000,000 was in the original bill but was marked out in the Rules Committee. It is now brought in on the theory that the schools will be taken care of in the regular appropriation. Personally I favored the whole $20,000,000, so that the District would be able to build such school buildings as they needed. The committee, however, thought that was too large a loan, and that under the circumstances probably all the projects would be defeated. It is in the Senate bill, but it was cut out of the House bill.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield to the gentleman from Texas just for a question, not a speech.

Mr. BLANTON. I may state to the gentleman from Maryland that the District does not pay a local income or inheritance tax like Maryland and other States do. The District pays one to the Government and so does Maryland and other States, but they also pay a State tax. The reason I wanted to reduce the tax rate to $1.20 was in order to utilize this surplus of $5,000,000 on hand in cash, in the interest of the taxpayers here, and not let it be wasted, frittered away. And it will be wasted, while, with it used to lower taxes, it would have benefited the people.

Mr. PALMISANO. That is not an answer. The gentleman demanded that they raise the tax rate to $1.55. Last week the gentleman demanded that they cut it down to $1.20. If the gentleman's argument was right then he ought to ask for a reduction now or else ask for the extra 30 cents to go toward payment of this loan.

The gentleman from Texas was a member of the District Committee in the Seventieth Congress. I am not trying to give the people of the District anything to which they are not entitled, and, as I stated before, the first time that a bill came up permitting the Commissioners or any agency of this District government to buy or to condemn property, I placed a limitation that they were unable to buy or condemn any property for the cleaning up of the District at more than 30 percent over its assessed value.

I remember the late Speaker, Nicholas Longworth, took the floor and condemned some of the methods employed in the District. I tried to correct it, and I did correct the situation. There was the alley bill, which provides that they are unable to condemn property at more than 30 percent of its assessed value. When they attempt to sell to the city under this provision or the city attempts to condemn property under its provisions, they will not be able to sell to the District Commissioners at more than 30 percent above the assessed value, and they could not lose by that.

Mr. Chairman, I say that this is a fair proposition. The District is going to pay for it in the final analysis. They are going to set aside 10 cents of every $1 of taxes collected on District property in order to pay off whatever money the Public Works Administrator may lend in order to make these improvements. I hope at the proper time, when the amendment will be offered to correct or reduce the sum from $20,000,000 to $10,750,000, that there will be no objection, and that this bill will be passed, in order that the District may make proper and necessary improvements.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia, Mr. RANDOLPH.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Chairman, I believe that this afternoon there is in the minds of some Members on the floor the feeling that this will be an outright grant to the District of Columbia. It will be only a 30 percent grant in order that the District may be under the same jurisdiction as any subdivision of the United States. Seventy percent will simply be a loan, which will be repaid to the Federal Government under the provisions of the Recovery Act. I believe that the gentleman from Texas should join with the gentleman from the other States in giving to the District of Columbia its share of the public works money of this country, and I believe also that he wants to take a rightful pride, as do the other Members of this Congress, in the National Capital. They are asking nothing more or less than is given to the other subdivisions of the United States by passing this measure.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BLANTON. Has the gentleman's district received $11,000,000 from the P.W.A. or the C.W.A.? Check it up. The city of Washington has already received $11,000,000 from the Federal Government during the past year as a gift, and that is additional to the $5,700,000 contribution made for this fiscal year's expenses, and besides, Washington has received a $2,000,000 loan. That is enough.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I would simply say in reply to the gentleman from Texas that whether my district has got it or not will not influence my vote on this bill today.

Mr. BLANTON. Does not the gentleman think that his district in West Virginia and the other West Virginia districts are entitled to as much as a city of 500,000 people here? The people of Washington get the cream of everything. I know that my friend believes in giving a square deal to the people in the 48 States. He surely does not want Washington to receive more than our districts back home.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I am glad to say that I believe in that principle to a certain degree. I am pleased to say also that my district has been receiving a great amount of help.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes; I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Of course, Hawaii and the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico can get this.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes, absolutely; and we are simply acting as a council here today in giving this right to the Commissioners.

Mr. GREENWOOD. And any municipality in the gentleman's district that can put up good security can get the same consideration?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes; that is true, and I thank the gentleman from Indiana for his observation.

Mr. GREENWOOD. And that is all the people of the District of Columbia are asking.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Yes; and when I speak here I speak not alone for my district back home, because there are also some two or three thousand men and women whose legal residence is in my district, but who live here in the District of Columbia.

Mr. BLANTON. That is a good reason. The gentleman will certainly get those two or three thousand votes to start with when election time comes.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, it may perhaps be necessary to repeat something I said on the rule, because I know there are a good many Members here now who were not present when we discussed the matter during the consideration of the resolution.

I want to talk just briefly upon the merits of the bill and the facts about the bill itself, because I am sure there are many Members of the House who do not understand just what this bill does.

Under the original Public Works Act, from which this money will come, if it comes at all, it was provided that the provisions of the law should apply not only to the States of the Union but to Hawaii, the Canal Zone, the Philippine Islands, and the District of Columbia.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Is the gentleman sure it applied to the Philippine Islands?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Yes.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. It applied to Alaska and Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I am reading from the Public Works Act, which says that the provisions of this section and section 202, which is the section authorizing bonds, shall extend to public works in the several States—I beg the gentleman's pardon; the gentleman is right. It refers to Hawaii, Alaska, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, and the Virgin Islands. The Philippine Islands are not in the same category as Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

All this bill seeks to do is to give your Capital, the Capital of the Nation, the same right you give to the Virgin Islands and Hawaii and the Canal Zone, to go to the Public Works Administrator and say, "We should like to borrow some money and here is the reason."

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. I understood the gentleman to read that the District of Columbia is included in this act. Why cannot they borrow the money under the provisions of that act?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I may explain that it is because the District of Columbia differs from any other municipality in that Congress is its town council and they cannot go and ask Mr. Ickes to lend them any money until the Congress of the United States gives the District Commissioners the authority to go there and ask them to make such a loan, and that is all this bill does.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Virginia yield for a question?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. BANKHEAD. There is another unusual provision, I understand, that will be offered as an amendment, which provides that a separate assessment of taxes shall be set aside for the purpose of paying off this obligation. That is not in the general law, as I understand it.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Such an amendment will be offered, and I may say that in the Rules Committee the chairman of the committee wondered how this money was going to be paid back and whether it was going to be paid, and thereupon the District Committee prepared this amendment, which is a wise and a proper amendment, an amendment that should go into the bill, and it provides that 10 cents of every $100 levied upon the property of private persons in the District of Columbia shall be paid into the United States Treasury until this loan is amortized. This will amount to about $1,300,000 a year, and this will be over and above any other taxes levied by the Commissioners upon the people of the District.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Will the gentleman tell the Congress what is going to be done with this $20,000,000?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. The amount has been cut down to $10,750,000 and I have already explained that, and I do not know whether I shall have time to do it again or not.

Eight million dollars goes for a sewage-disposal plant to clean up the Potomac River, which, as I said before, is contaminated from the north end of the District line to 20 miles below Washington, and is a menace to your health and to the health of the 500,000 citizens of the United States who live here in the Capital.

Five hundred thousand dollars goes to build a wall around the prisoners at Lorton and to build the necessary cells for them.

Seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars goes to Gallinger Municipal Hospital—I have not time to discuss the merits of each of these proposals—and $1,500,000 goes to complete the tuberculosis hospital, the condition of which is such that it is now disclosed that Washington is about the third city in the United States in its death rate from tuberculosis.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized to borrow for the District of Columbia from the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, created by the National Industrial Recovery Act, and said Administration is authorized to lend to said Commissioners, the sum of $20,000,000, or any part thereof, out of funds heretofore authorized by law for said Administration, for the acquisition, purchase, construction, establishment, and development of a tuberculosis hospital, a sewage-disposal plant, a municipal center or any unit thereof (under and in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide for the establishment of a municipal center in the District of Columbia", approved Feb. 26, 1929 (45 Stat. 1408)), an extension of or addition to Gallinger Municipal Hospital, a jail or other enclosure for prisoners at Lorton, Va., parks, parkways, and playgrounds (to be acquired and improved in accordance with existing law, said improvement to be on lands acquired by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission), and public schools, or any one or more of said projects as the said Commissioners may determine.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 1, line 8, strike out the figures "$20,000,000" and insert "$10,750,000."

On page 1, line 9, strike out the word "heretofore."

Mr. BACON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. I believe that we should pass this bill as it came from the Senate. If we do pass it as it came from the Senate we will be able to take care of the school buildings in the District of Columbia. By adopting the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maryland in trying to amend the Senate bill, you are simply cutting out the school-building program. If you believe that the District of Columbia needs the school buildings, as I think it does, you should vote down the amendment and adopt the bill as it came from the Senate.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, personally I am in favor of the school provision, but the District Committee said to the Rules Committee that it would recommend this very amendment. I ask that the Members support the amendment as agreed upon by the District Committee and the Rules Committee.

Mr. BACON. The gentleman from Maryland is keeping faith with the Rules Committee, as I expected he would, but his action is not binding on the rest of the Members.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. This speech of the gentleman from New York clearly demonstrates how things are manipulated. The Rules Committee refused to grant a rule on the $20,000,000 bill. Only by an agreement to amend the bill by the District Committee, reducing it from $20,000,000 to $10,750,000, was the rule reported out.

I told you at the beginning of this argument that before the bill gets through it would be a $20,000,000 bill. There is this sentiment here just expressed to ignore that agreement. What is an agreement worth that is solemnly entered into between the District Committee and the Rules Committee? That sentiment just expressed means, "We will get it out on the floor by such an agreement, and then we can change it." Is that what the gentleman from New York wants done. If they do not keep faith with the committee, what is the use of having agreements in the House of Representatives? [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maryland.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, lines 6 to 12, both inclusive, strike out the following: "parks, parkways, and playgrounds (to be acquired and improved in accordance with existing law, said improvement to be on lands acquired by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission), and public schools."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PALMISANO: Page 2, lines 2 to 6 inclusive, strike out the following: "A municipal center or any unit thereof (under and in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide for the establishment of a municipal center in the District of Columbia", approved February 28, 1929 (45 Stat. 1408).

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. That from the sum authorized to be borrowed by section 1 of this act the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall transfer to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission the sum of $2,000,000, to be available to said Commission for the acquisition of land for parks, parkways, and playgrounds in the District of Columbia in accordance with the terms of section 4 of Public Act No. 284, Seventy-first Congress, entitled "An act for the acquisition, establishment, and development of the George Washington Memorial Parkway, and so forth", approved May 29, 1930: Provided, That said sum of $2,000,000 shall be deemed to be in lieu of the appropriation of an equal amount of the sums authorized to be appropriated by the aforesaid section of the aforesaid act.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PALMISANO: Page 2, lines 14 to 25, inclusive, and page 3, lines 1 and 2, strike out all of section 2.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in favor of the amendment. I am glad to be in accord with the committee on one proposition. I am heartily in accord with this amendment. The National Capital Park and Planning Commission thought itself awfully shrewd. It had an agreement with Secretary Ickes and with the District Commissioners that they were going to get this $2,000,000, and I shall show you how they were going to spend part of it. I called your attention the other day to the fact that back in 1925 in Colorado a young fellow named Finnan was drawing $90 a month in the Park Service. He was promoted on up. For some time he got $1,800 per year, and then he was promoted on up to $3,200, and finally he got $3,800 on up to last fall.

Last November they brought him here from Colorado and overnight raised his salary from $3,800 to $5,600, and with part of this $2,000,000 they were going to take over this Klingle Valley house out here in the park, which has been occupied for 15 years by a good Democratic family from Ohio, in charge of the park, and they were going to renovate it and put in a lot of new bathrooms, and they put this fellow Finnan's furniture in the basement, and they have had architects and artisans out there estimating for the renovation of it to put in some new fixtures, furnishings, and bathrooms, and fixing it up generally, and they have an estimate of $11,000 to spend on that Klingle Valley house, to be occupied by this Mr. Finnan, who happens to be a Republican, but a good friend of Mr. Secretary Ickes. That is the way they were going to waste some of this $2,000,000.

Let me quote a little from the testimony of this Mr. Finnan from the hearings before our committee:

Mr. FINNAN. I started to work for Mesa Verde as a ranger in the national park in 1925, at a salary as I recall it of $95 a month; I am not sure whether it was $90 or $95.

Mr. BLANTON. Just give us the mutations.

Mr. FINNAN. Then I was promoted to a ranger at a salary of $125 per month; later I was made chief ranger at a salary of approximately $150 a month.

Mr. BLANTON. Until when?

Mr. FINNAN. 1929; I was made acting superintendent without any increase.

Mr. BLANTON. How long did it remain $1,800?

Mr. FINNAN. I remained as acting superintendent about a year and then my salary was increased to $3,200. Then there was a reclassification, I was put into a $3,800 grade.

Mr. BLANTON. That was done when?

Mr. FINNAN. That was done, as I recall, in May of 1931.

Mr. BLANTON. Your salary now is $5,600?

Mr. FINNAN. It has been $5,600 since last November, when I took office here.

Mr. BLANTON. Is there any movement on foot for you to take charge of what is known as the old Klingle House out here in Rock Creek Park?

Mr. FINNAN. Yes, sir; there is. We are submitting an estimate now, Mr. BLANTON, to the Public Works Administration, to give us enough money to restore the house.

Mr. BLANTON. When you first came here, you paid $100 rent out in Chevy Chase, did you not?

Mr. FINNAN. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Mr. BLANTON. Now, you are living at the Ontario, are you not?

Mr. FINNAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. And you are paying what?

Mr. FINNAN. $62.50.

Mr. BLANTON. You never paid that before since you first came into the Service, did you?

Mr. FINNAN. No, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. Well, you have had architects and other people to go out there and look this house over and measure it for purposes of renovation?

Mr. FINNAN. For restoration.

Mr. BLANTON. And to arrange about putting in more bathrooms and things of that kind?

Mr. FINNAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. And you are going to spend $8,000 on it, are you not?

Mr. FINNAN. If the present plans, Mr. BLANTON, are carried out, it would be $11,000.

Mr. BLANTON. You know that there has been an arrangement made between the Parks Service and the District Commissioners to the effect that if they get the $20,000,000 they are going to turn $2,000,000 of it over to the Parks Service? You know that, do you not?

Mr. FINNAN. Yes, sir; for the purchase of land. Mr. BLANTON, I have read about you in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD out in the wilds of Colorado for the last 10 years. I know that when you investigate something——

Mr. BLANTON. I go to the bottom of it, do I not?

Mr. FINNAN. You investigate it.

Mr. BLANTON. What is the man's name who lives in that house now?

Mr. FINNAN. Quinn.

Mr. BLANTON. You told him you were going to move in?

Mr. FINNAN. I wanted to be perfectly fair with Quinn. When I first came here—as I recall, it was in December—I told him of the plans, so that he would have ample time.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Finnan, you have some of your things stored away in the basement of that house right now, have you not?

Mr. FINNAN. We have some surplus furniture, because we are in a small apartment.

Mr. BLANTON. You have some furniture stored in the basement of that house right now, have you not?

Mr. FINNAN. In an unoccupied room; yes.

Then, Mr. Chairman, on that same day, May 5, 1934, in this hearing before our committee, we interrogated Mr. Joseph J. Quinn, who for years has been maintenance man for the Parks Service here, from which I quote:

Mr. BLANTON. How long have you and your family lived in that house?

Mr. QUINN. Since March 15, 1926.

Mr. BLANTON. You and your wife are Ohio Democrats, are you not?

Mr. QUINN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. There is a move on foot to have that house renovated, is there not?

Mr. QUINN. That is my understanding; yes, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. It is understood that Mr. Finnan is to move into it after it is fixed up, and you are going to give it up?

Mr. QUINN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. And he has some of his family furniture stored in the basement of that house now, in a room in the house; is that right?

Mr. QUINN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. Have you made any demand on Mr. Cammerer or on Secretary Ickes that they spend $11,000 on that house to put in new bathrooms and renovate it?

Mr. QUINN. No, sir.

But, Mr. Chairman, the plans did not materialize. By passing this amendment and striking out this $2,000,000 this Park Service will not be able to spend this money wastefully, here and there, with $11,000 to put in a lot of new bathrooms and renovate this Klingle house, and take it away from this good Ohio family of Democrats, the Quinns, who were paying the Government $15 per month for it as it is, and turn it over free to this Republican friend of ours, Mr. Finnan, of Colorado, who in 1925 was getting $90 per month in a park out there, but since last November has been brought here to Washington, and now receives $5,600 per year, and must have a special mansion prepared for him to live in, all at Government expense. We have accomplished some good anyway.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maryland.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 3. The sum authorized by section 1 hereof, or any part thereof (except such sums as may be transferred by them as provided in sec. 2), shall, when borrowed, be available to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia for the acquisition by dedication, purchase, or condemnation of the fee simple title to land, or rights or easements in land, for the public uses authorized by this act, and for the preparation of plans, designs, estimates, models, and contracts, for architectural and other necessary professional services, without reference to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, and section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, for the construction of buildings, including materials and labor, heating, lighting, elevators, plumbing, landscaping, and all other appurtenances, and the purchase and installation of machinery, apparatus, and any and all other expenditures necessary for or incident to the complete construction of the aforesaid buildings and plants. All contracts, agreements, and proceedings in court for condemnation or otherwise, pursuant to this act shall be had and made in accordance with existing provisions of law, except as otherwise herein provided.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendments, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. PALMISANO: Page 3, line 3, strike out the figure "3", following the abbreviation "Sec.", and insert in lieu thereof the figure "2."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PALMISANO: Page 3, lines 4 and 5, strike out the following: "(except such sums as may be transferred by them as provided in sec. 2)."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 4. That 70 percent of so much of said sum authorized by section 1 of this act as may be expended as therein provided shall be reimbursed to the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works from any funds in the Treasury to the credit of the District of Columbia, as follows, to wit: Not less than $1,000,000 on the 30th day of June each year after such sum shall have been advanced to said District until the full amount expended hereunder is reimbursed, without interest for the first 3 years after any such advances and with interest at not exceeding 4 percent per year thereafter on annual balances as of each June 30: Provided, That whenever the District of Columbia is under obligation by virtue of the provisions of section 4 of Public Act No. 284, Seventy-first Congress, entitled "An act for the acquisition, establishment, and development of the George Washington Memorial Parkway, etc.", approved May 29, 1930, to reimburse the United States for sums appropriated by the Congress under that act, the total reimbursement required under both that act and this act shall be not less nor more than $1,300,000 in any one fiscal year: Provided, That the Commissioners may, in their discretion, repay more than said amount: And provided further, That the Commissioners may, in their discretion, allocate any reimbursement as between the sums due by them to the United States under the aforesaid act and the sums due by them to the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works under this act: Provided, That such sums as may be necessary for the reimbursement herein required of or permitted by the District of Columbia, and for the payment of interest, shall be included in the annual estimates of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, the first reimbursement to be made on June 30, 1936.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PALMISANO: Page 3, line 24, strike out the figure "4" following the abbreviation "Sec." and insert "3."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PALMISANO: Page 5, line 5, at the end of the sentence add the following: "Until 70 percent or so much of said sum authorized by section 1 of this act as may be expended as therein provided shall be reimbursed to the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, with interest as provided in this section, 10 cents of the tax levied and collected upon each $100 of the assessed valuation of all real and tangible personal property subject to taxation in the District of Columbia shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of a special account for such reimbursement to the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works and shall not be available for any other purpose. The Commissioners may, in their discretion, anticipate from said special account the payments required by this act."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. It seems to me that this bill is getting us into a situation where we are getting the District of Columbia back into debt, where it was before the Congress took over the management of the District. At that time, as I understand it, the Federal Government had to absorb some of the debts. I hate to see that situation arise again, and I think we ought not to pass this bill to get somebody else into debt. I think they ought to raise the money they need, with the lowest tax rate in the United States, right out of their tax levy and take care of their relief propositions. The mayor of the city of New York has started an agitation in his own home town to raise all the money they are going to use for relief out of their current tax budget, and until we in Congress for the Federal relief and for District relief take care of it currently, we are not going to see the light of day.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman noticed the last section that was passed. Out of this $10,750,000, 30 percent is to be a pure gift to Washington people by the United States Government. The other 70 percent of it is to be loaned to the District of Columbia by the Government for the first 3 years without any interest at all. No such loans without interest are made to any of the States. No such loans without interest are made to any other cities. No such loans of $10,750,000 are made to any other municipalities for 3 years without interest.

And in such connection, keep in mind the fact that for the present fiscal year Congress appropriated for the District $30,375,000, of which $5,700,000 was a pure gift, and then in addition the District of Columbia got from P.W.A. and C.W.A. $11,000,000 more, it being a pure gift, and then P.W.A. loaned the District $2,000,000 more with the understanding that 70 percent was to be paid back, and when this House asked it to pay the 70 percent back the District got the Senate to strike out this provision, and the House of Representatives had to engage in a fight to make the District pay back the 70 percent of said $2,000,000 loan, but we stood pat and made them pay it back out of the last $5,700,000 the District got from this Government. And now it is proposed to loan the District $10,750,000 more, only 70 percent to be paid back, and no interest is to be charged for 3 years. Why? Why?

Mr. TABER. Just another bit of discrimination in favor of the District and against the taxpayers of the country.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The gentleman mentioned this was money for relief. It is not for relief. It is for public-building projects. The gentleman also mentioned the city of New York. The city of New York is going to borrow $100,000,000 for public-works projects, and is going to receive $30,000,000 as a grant from the Federal Government.

Mr. TABER. The 30-percent grant is a different proposition from a loan of 70 percent without any interest.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Oh, it is on the same terms. They only get a $3,000,000 grant here. We ourselves will get $30,000,000.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. But the city of New York has 7,000,000 people, and New York does not get $70,000,000 for 3 years without any interest, like the District will get its $10,750,000 for 3 years without interest.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Well, I do not know and I do not know that the gentleman knows that detail.

Mr. TABER. I do not think we ought to pass this bill.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman from New York does know that the District will get its $10,750,000 for 3 years without any interest, because he helped to report out the rule for this bill.

Mr. O'CONNOR. And I understand that is similar to the other grants.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. PALMISANO].

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 5. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall submit with their annual estimates to the Senate and the House of Representatives a report of their activities and expenditures under section 1 of this act.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PALMISANO: On page 5, line 6, strike out the figure "5" after the abbreviation "Sec." and insert the figure "4."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the resolution the Committee will rise.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. RANKIN, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee had had under consideration the bill (S. 3404) authorizing loans from the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works for the construction of certain municipal buildings in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, and pursuant to House Resolution No. 368, he reported the bill back to the House with sundry amendments adopted in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment? If not, the Chair will put them en grosse.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The bill was ordered to be read the third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. TABER) there were—ayes 73, noes 36.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote because it shows there is no quorum present, and I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. There is evidently no quorum present.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absentees, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 198, nays 139, not voting 93, as follows:

[Roll No. 174]

YEAS—198

Adams	Doughton	Kenney	Robinson
Andrew, Mass.	Dowell	Kerr	Rogers, Mass.
Andrews, N.Y.	Drewry	Knutson	Rudd
Arens	Driver	Kocialkowski	Sabath
Ayres, Kans.	Duffey	Lanzetta	Schuetz
Bacon	Dunn	Larrabee	Sears
Bakewell	Durgan, Ind.	Lea, Calif.	Secrest
Bankhead	Eaton	Lehlbach	Seger
Beam	Edmiston	Lemke	Sinclair
Beiter	Edmonds	Lewis, Colo.	Sirovich
Black	Ellenbogen	Lewis, Md.	Sisson
Bland	Englebright	Lindsay	Smith, Va.
Bloom	Farley	Lozier	Smith, Wash.
Bolleau	Fitzgibbons	Lundeen	Snell
Boland	Fitzpatrick	McCarthy	Somers, N.Y.
Boylan	Focht	McGrath	Spence
Britten	Ford	McKeown	Steagall
Brown, Ky.	Foss	McLean	Stokes
Brown, Mich.	Frear	McReynolds	Strong, Pa.
Brunner	Gasque	Maloney, Conn.	Strong, Tex.
Buck	Gavagan	Martin, Colo.	Stubbs
Bulwinkle	Gilchrist	Martin, Mass.	Studley
Burke, Nebr.	Goldsborough	Mead	Sullivan
Burnham	Goodwin	Merritt	Sutphin
Byrns	Granfield	Millard	Taylor, Tenn.
Cady	Greenway	Milligan	Terry, Ark.
Carden, Ky.	Greenwood	Monaghan, Mont.	Thom
Carmichael	Gregory	Montague	Thomas
Carpenter, Kans.	Griffin	Moran	Traeger
Carter, Calif.	Griswold	Mott	Utterback
Carter, Wyo.	Haines	O'Brien	Vinson, Ga.
Cavicchia	Hancock, N.Y.	O'Connell	Vinson, Ky.
Claiborne	Harlan	O'Connor	Wadsworth
Clarke, N.Y.	Healey	Oliver, Ala.	Weaver
Cochran, Mo.	Hildebrandt	Oliver, N.Y.	Welch
Cochran, Pa.	Hill, Knute	Palmisano	Werner
Cole	Hill, Samuel B.	Parks	West, Ohio
Collins, Calif.	Hoeppel	Peavey	West, Tex.
Condon	Hollister	Perkins	White
Connery	Holmes	Pettengill	Whitley
Crosby	Hope	Peyser	Wigglesworth
Crosser, Ohio	Jenckes, Ind.	Powers	Williford
Cullen	Johnson, Minn.	Prall	Withrow
Darden	Kahn	Ramsay	Wolcott
Delaney	Kee	Ramspeck	Wolfenden
De Priest	Keller	Randolph	Wolverton
Dingell	Kelly, Ill.	Reece	Wood, Mo.
Dirksen	Kelly, Pa.	Reed, N.Y.	Woodruff
Ditter	Kennedy, Md.	Reilly
Dockweiler	Kennedy, N.Y.	Robertson

NAYS—139

Adair	Cross, Tex.	Hancock, N.C.	Luce
Allen	Crowe	Hart	Ludlow
Arnold	Crowther	Hastings	McClintic
Ayers, Mont.	Crump	Henney	McDuffie
Bailey	Cummings	Hess	McFadden
Biermann	Dear	Howard	McFarlane
Blanchard	Deen	Hughes	McGugin
Blanton	Dickinson	Imhoff	Maloney, La.
Brown, Ga.	Dobbins	Jacobsen	Mapes
Buchanan	Dondero	Jenkins, Ohio	Marshall
Buckbee	Doxey	Johnson, Okla.	Martin, Oreg.
Busby	Eicher	Johnson, Tex.	May
Caldwell	Elizey, Miss.	Johnson, W.Va.	Meeks
Cannon, Wis.	Eltse, Calif.	Jones	Miller
Cartwright	Faddis	Kinzer	Mitchell
Castellow	Fiesinger	Kloeb	Morehead
Chavez	Fletcher	Kniffin	Murdock
Christianson	Foulkes	Kurtz	Musselwhite
Coffin	Fuller	Lambertson	Nesbit
Colden	Gillespie	Lambeth	Owen
Colmer	Gillette	Lamneck	Parker
Cooper, Tenn.	Glover	Lanham	Parsons
Cox.	Gray	Lehr	Patman
Cravens	Guyer	Lesinski	Pierce

Folk	Sandlin	Tarver	Umstead
Rankin	Schaefer	Taylor, Colo.	Underwood
Rayburn	Schulte	Terrell, Tex.	Wallgren
Rich	Scrugham	Thomason	Warren
Richards	Shallenberger	Thompson, Ill.	Wearin
Richardson	Snyder	Thompson, Tex.	Whittington
Rogers, Okla.	Sumners, Tex.	Tinkham	Williams
Romjue	Swank	Treadway	Wilson
Ruffin	Sweeney	Truax	Young
Sanders, La.	Swick	Turner	Zioncheck
Sanders, Tex.	Taber	Turpin

NOT VOTING—93

Abernethy	Connolly	Harter	O'Malley
Allgood	Cooper, Ohio	Hartley	Peterson
Auf der Heide	Corning	Higgins	Plumley
Bacharach	Culkin	Hill, Ala.	Ransley
Beck	Darrow	Hoidale	Reid, Ill.
Beedy	DeRouen	Huddleston	Rogers, N.H.
Berlin	Dickstein	James	Sadowski
Boehne	Dies	Jeffers	Shannon
Bolton	Disney	Kleberg	Shoemaker
Brennan	Douglass	Kopplemann	Simpson
Brooks	Doutrich	Kramer	Smith, W.Va.
Browning	Duncan, Mo.	Kvale	Stalker
Burch	Eagle	Lee, Mo.	Taylor, S.C.
Burke, Calif.	Evans	Lloyd	Thurston
Cannon, Mo.	Fernandez	McCormack	Tobey
Carley, N.Y.	Fish	McLeod	Waldron
Carpenter, Nebr.	Flannagan	McMillan	Walter
Cary	Frey	McSwain	Weideman
Celler	Fulmer	Mansfield	Wilcox
Chapman	Gambrill	Marland	Wood, Ga.
Chase	Gifford	Montet	Woodrum
Church	Goss	Moynihan, Ill.
Clark, N.C.	Green	Muldowney
Collins, Miss.	Hamilton	Norton

So the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

General pairs:

Mr. Corning with Mr. Bacharach.
Mr. McMillan with Mr. Thurston.
Mr. Burch with Mr. Fish.
Mr. Hill of Alabama with Mr. Darrow.
Mr. Woodrum with Mr. Bolton.
Mr. Kopplemann with Mr. Muldowney.
Mr. Celler with Mr. Connolly.
Mr. McCormack with Mr. McLeod.
Mr. Collins of Mississippi with Mr. Evans.
Mr. Wood of Georgia with Mr. Beck.
Mr. Browning with Mr. Higgins.
Mr. Harter with Mr. Ransley.
Mr. Chapman with Mr. Doutrich.
Mr. Lee of Missouri with Mr. Plumley.
Mr. Clark of North Carolina with Mr. Gifford.
Mr. McSwain with Mr. Waldron.
Mr. Mansfield with Mr. Goss.
Mr. Dickstein with Mr. Simpson.
Mrs. Norton with Mr. James.
Mr. Douglass with Mr. Cooper of Ohio.
Mr. Eagle with Mr. Chase.
Mr. Kleberg with Mr. Reid of Illinois.
Mr. Huddleston with Mr. Stalker.
Mr. Boehne with Mr. Moynihan of Illinois.
Mr. Flannagan with Mr. Beedy.
Mr. Montet with Mr. Hartley.
Mr. Green with Mr. Tobey.
Mr. Taylor of South Carolina with Mr. Kvale.
Mr. Gambrill with Mr. Shoemaker.
Mr. Kramer with Mr. Weideman.
Mr. Cary with Mr. Wilcox.
Mr. DeRouen with Mr. Rogers of New Hampshire.
Mr. Disney with Mr. O'Malley.
Mr. Peterson with Mr. Duncan of Missouri.
Mr. Church with Mr. Lloyd.
Mr. Brooks with Mr. Hamilton.
Mr. Fulmer with Mr. Ayers of Montana.
Mr. Smith of West Virginia with Mr. Sadowski.
Mr. Shannon with Mr. Auf der Heide.
Mr. Allgood with Mr. Frey.
Mr. Walter with Mr. Brennan.
Mr. Carley of New York with Mr. Hoidale.
Mr. Dies with Mr. Carpenter of Nebraska.
Mr. Burke of California with Mr. Marland.
Mr. Fernandez with Mr. Abernethy.

Mr. RANKIN changed from "aye" to "no."

Mr. DOCKWEILER changed from "no" to "aye."

Mr. LARRABEE changed from "no" to "aye."

Mr. SEARS changed from "no" to "aye."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

BILLS FROM COMMITTEE ON CLAIMS

Mr. BANKHEAD submitted the following privileged report from the Committee on Rules (H.Res. 421, Rept. No. 1887), for printing in the RECORD:

House Resolution 421

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order for the Speaker on any day during the remainder of this session of Congress, after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of matters on the Speaker's table, to recognize the Chairman of the Committee on Claims to call up bills favorably reported from the Committee on Claims and heretofore objected to. Said bills shall be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole House: Provided, however, That general debate on any bill called up shall be limited to 20 minutes, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Claims. At the conclusion of the general debate the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule, and at the conclusion of such reading the previous question shall be considered as ordered without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

CAMPAIGN EXPENDITURES OF CANDIDATES FOR HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. BANKHEAD, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following privileged report from that committee (H.Res. 336, Rept. No. 1889) for printing in the RECORD:

House Resolution 336

Resolved, That a special committee of five be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives to investigate and report to the House not later than April 1, 1935, the campaign expenditures of the various candidates for the House of Representatives in both parties, or candidates of parties other than or independent of the Democratic or Republican Parties, the names of persons, firms, associations, or corporations subscribing, the amount contributed, the methods of collections and expenditures of such sums, and all facts in relation thereto, not only as to subscriptions of money and expenditures thereof but as to the use of any other means or influences, including the promise or use of patronage, and all other facts in relation thereto that would not only be of public interest but would aid the Congress in necessary legislation or in deciding any contests which might be instituted involving the right to a seat in the House of Representatives.

The investigation hereby provided for in all the respects above enumerated shall apply to candidates and contests before primaries, conventions, and the contests and campaigns of the general election in November of 1934, or any special election held prior to January 1, 1935. Said committee is hereby authorized to act upon its own initiative and upon such information which in its judgment may be reasonable and reliable. Upon complaint being made before such committee, under oath, by any person, persons, candidates, or political committee setting forth allegations as to facts which, under this resolution, it would be the duty of said committee to investigate, said committee shall investigate such charges as fully as though it were acting upon its own motion, unless, after hearings on such complaints, the committee shall find that such allegations in said complaints are immaterial or untrue.

That said special committee or any subcommittee thereof is authorized to sit and act during the adjournment of Congress, and that said committee or any subcommittee thereof is hereby empowered to sit and act at such time and place as it may deem necessary; to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of witnesses, the production of books, papers, and documents; to employ stenographers at a cost of not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words. The chairman of the committee or any member thereof may administer oaths to witnesses. Subpenas for witnesses shall be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee or subcommittee thereof. Every person who, having been summoned as a witness by authority of said committee or any subcommittee thereof, willfully makes default, or who, having appeared, refuses to answer any question pertinent to the investigation heretofore authorized, shall be held to the penalties as prescribed by law.

Said committee is authorized to make such expenditures as it deems necessary, and such expenses thereof shall be paid on vouchers ordered by said committee and approved by the chairman thereof.

WAR MINERALS RELIEF STATUTES

Mr. COX, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following privileged report from that committee (H.Res. 395, Report No. 1888), for printing in the RECORD:

House Resolution 395

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H.R. 7984, a bill to amend section 5 of the act of March 2, 1919, generally known as the "War Minerals Relief Statutes", and all points of order against said bill are hereby waived. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Mines and Mining, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and the amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

TARIFF BILL

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to give notice that tomorrow morning, after the disposition of matters on the Speaker's table, I shall ask unanimous consent to take up H.R. 8687, the tariff bill, and move to concur in the Senate amendments.

FOREIGN-TRADE ZONES

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 9322) to provide for the establishment, operation, and maintenance of foreign-trade zones in ports of entry of the United States, to expedite and encourage foreign commerce, and for other purposes, and to ask that the report be read.

The Clerk read the conference report.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 9322) to provide for the establishment, operation, and maintenance of foreign-trade zones in ports of entry of the United States, to expedite and encourage foreign commerce, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with amendments as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment, restore the matter proposed to be stricken out by the Senate amendment; and on page 2 of the House bill, strike out lines 7 to 10, inclusive, and insert the following:

"(e) The term 'public corporation' means a State, political subdivision thereof, a municipality, a public agency of a State, political subdivision thereof, or municipality, or a corporate municipal instrumentality of one or more States; "

And on page 12, line 5, of the House bill, after "repeated", insert "willful."

And the Senate agree to the same.

THOS. H. CULLEN,
JOHN MCCORMACK,
FRED M. VINSON,
ALLEN T. TREADWAY,
I. BACHARACH,
Managers on the part of the House.

H. D. STEPHENS,
CHAS. L. MCNARY,
ROYAL S. COPELAND,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H.R. 9322) to provide for the establishment, operation, and maintenance of foreign-trade zones in ports of entry of the United States, to expedite and encourage foreign commerce, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

The House bill vested the administration of the act in a board consisting of the Secretary of Commerce, who was to be chairman and executive officer, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of War. The Senate amendment vests the administration in the Secretary of Commerce. The conference agreement adopts the House provision.

The Senate amendment specifically includes corporate municipal instrumentalities of one or more States among the organizations included within the definition of public corporations. The conference agreement adopts the provision contained in the House bill with the addition of the specific provision contained in the Senate amendment which includes corporate municipal instrumentalities of one or more States.

The House bill limited the organizations (other than public corporations) which might operate zones to corporations chartered under special act enacted after the date of this act of the State or States within which the zone was to be operated. The Senate amendment broadens the class of operators to include partnerships and associations and removes the requirement with respect to special charter in the case of corporations. The Senate amendment also includes organizations existing under or authorized by the laws of the United States. The conference agreement adopts the House provision.

The House bill provided that each port of entry was entitled to at least one zone. There is no comparable provision in the Senate amendment. The House bill also provided that when two cities separated by water are embraced in one port of entry, a zone may be authorized in each city or in territory adjacent thereto. There is no comparable provision in the Senate amendment. The House bill grants power to the board to permit zones in a port in addition to those to which a port of entry is entitled. The Senate amendment contains no such authority. The House bill specifically provides that preference shall be given to public corporations. There is no comparable provision in the Senate amendment. The conference agreement adopts the provisions of the House bill on these matters.

The House bill prohibits, and the Senate amendment permits, exhibition within the zone of merchandise brought into the zone. The House bill specifically prohibits manufacturing in the zone which is not expressly permitted by the Senate amendment. The House bill does not authorize refining in the zone which is permitted by the Senate amendment. The conference agreement adopts the provisions of the House bill on these matters.

Under the House bill repeated violations of the act are made grounds for revocation of the grant. Under the Senate amendment, such violations must be willful. The conference agreement adopts the provisions of the Senate amendment.

Under the Senate amendment, upon refusal by the Secretary of Commerce of an application to establish a zone, an appeal may be taken to a board consisting of the Secretary of Commerce, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of War. Since under the House bill the administration of the act is delegated to a board consisting of the same officers, a provision in that bill for such an appeal is not necessary. The conference agreement adopts the House provision.

The House bill specifically provides that an order of the board revoking the grant, for violations, shall be stayed pending judicial appeal. There is no comparable provision in the Senate amendment. The conference agreement adopts the House provision.

The Senate amendment specifically provides that on appeal from an order revoking a grant under the act, the court shall review the proceedings before the Secretaries, and if the decision before them is supported by evidence, the court shall only make decisions on errors of law. There is no comparable provision in the House bill. The conference agreement adopts the House provision.

THOS. H. CULLEN,
JOHN MCCORMACK,
FRED M. VINSON,
ALLEN T. TREADWAY,
I. BACHARACH,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, I shall make but a brief statement in connection with this report. Your conferees have brought the House bill back again with a clarifying amendment and another minor amendment with a unanimous agreement with the Senate conferees, both Republican and Democratic. So we are in complete accord as far as the conference was concerned.

Does the gentleman from Massachusetts desire any time?

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I should like sufficient time to make a short statement.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY], such time as he may need.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I have opposed this so-called "foreign-trade zone bill" for many years. It first came up in the Ways and Means Committee a number of years ago. I never have seen any advantage to be gained for our citizens by its passage, but it was passed by the House a week or ten days ago and has now come back from the Senate in conference.

The Senate substituted a Senate bill for the House bill, but I am glad to say that for once in my experience as a conferee the House came out ahead on the conference. It is not very often we see this peculiar situation develop, for as a rule the members of the Ways and Means Committee in conference seem to get the small end of the trade.

To say just a word about the difference between the bills of the two branches, Mr. Speaker, the Senate provision permitting the setting up of private corporations in order to operate the trade-zone system seemed to me to be a very serious blunder. Moreover, it did not require the approval of a legislature of the State to allow the trade zone to be set up by a private corporation. The House bill required that an act of the legislature should be passed to permit a corporation to operate one of these foreign trade zones, and limited the form of the corporation to one composed of municipal groups, a very much more limited form, and one that showed the intention of the House to have this measure afford not so much an opportunity to carry on private business as an opportunity to transact what seemed to the majority a fairer way, or an easier way, of receiving imported goods. Another marked difference was that the House bill did not allow the exhibition or manufacture of goods in the trade zone.

So I congratulate the majority of the conferees who handled the conference; and I am sure that the efforts the chairman of that committee, the gentleman from New York [Mr. CULLEN] exerted from the very start to secure the enactment of this bill is a personal compliment to him. I for one would be disposed to oppose this proposition to the last fall of the hat, but I am the type of man who knows when his side is beaten; and I must say in all fairness to the gentleman from New York and to the majority that the conference report is a very material improvement over the Senate bill, and it is a House report in this case rather than a Senate report. I for one, therefore, shall vote for the conference report, although I am still opposed to the idea of making easier foreign competition with home products. [Applause.]

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the adoption of the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was adopted.

On motion of Mr. CULLEN, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the conference report was adopted was laid on the table.

MEASUREMENT OF VESSELS USING PANAMA CANAL

Mr. LEA of California. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 7667) to provide for the measurement of vessels using the Panama Canal, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the first five sentences of the third paragraph of section 5 of the act of August 24, 1912 (37 Stat. 560, 569), as amended by the act of June 15, 1914 (38 Stat. 385), are hereby amended so as to read as follows: "Tolls on merchant vessels, Army and Navy transports, colliers, hospital ships, supply ships, and yachts shall be based on net vessel-tons of actual earning capacity, determined in accordance with the 'Rules for the Measurement of Vessels for the Panama Canal' prescribed by proclamation of the President, November 21, 1913, as amended from time to time by order of the President, and shall not exceed $1 per net vessel-ton so determined, nor be less than 60 cents per net vessel-ton so determined, on laden vessels, and on vessels in ballast without passengers or cargo shall be less than the rate of tolls for vessels with passengers or cargo: Provided, That no charge shall be made for deck load, which is defined, for the purposes of this act, as cargo situated in a space which is at all times exposed to the weather and the sea and which space is not included in the net tonnage determined under the said 'Rules for the Measurement of Vessels for the Panama Canal.' Tolls on other floating craft shall be levied on displacement tonnage at rates to be prescribed by the President. In addition to the tolls based on measurement or displacement tonnage, tolls may be levied on passengers at rates prescribed by the President but not to exceed $1.50 for each passenger. The levy of tolls is subject to the provisions of article XIX of the convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Panama, entered into November 18, 1903, and of article I of the treaty between the United States of America and the Republic of Colombia, proclaimed March 30, 1922."

SEC. 2. That this act shall take effect and be enforced on and after January 1, 1936.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second, more as a matter of formality than anything else, to have the gentleman from California explain the bill.

Mr. LEA of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

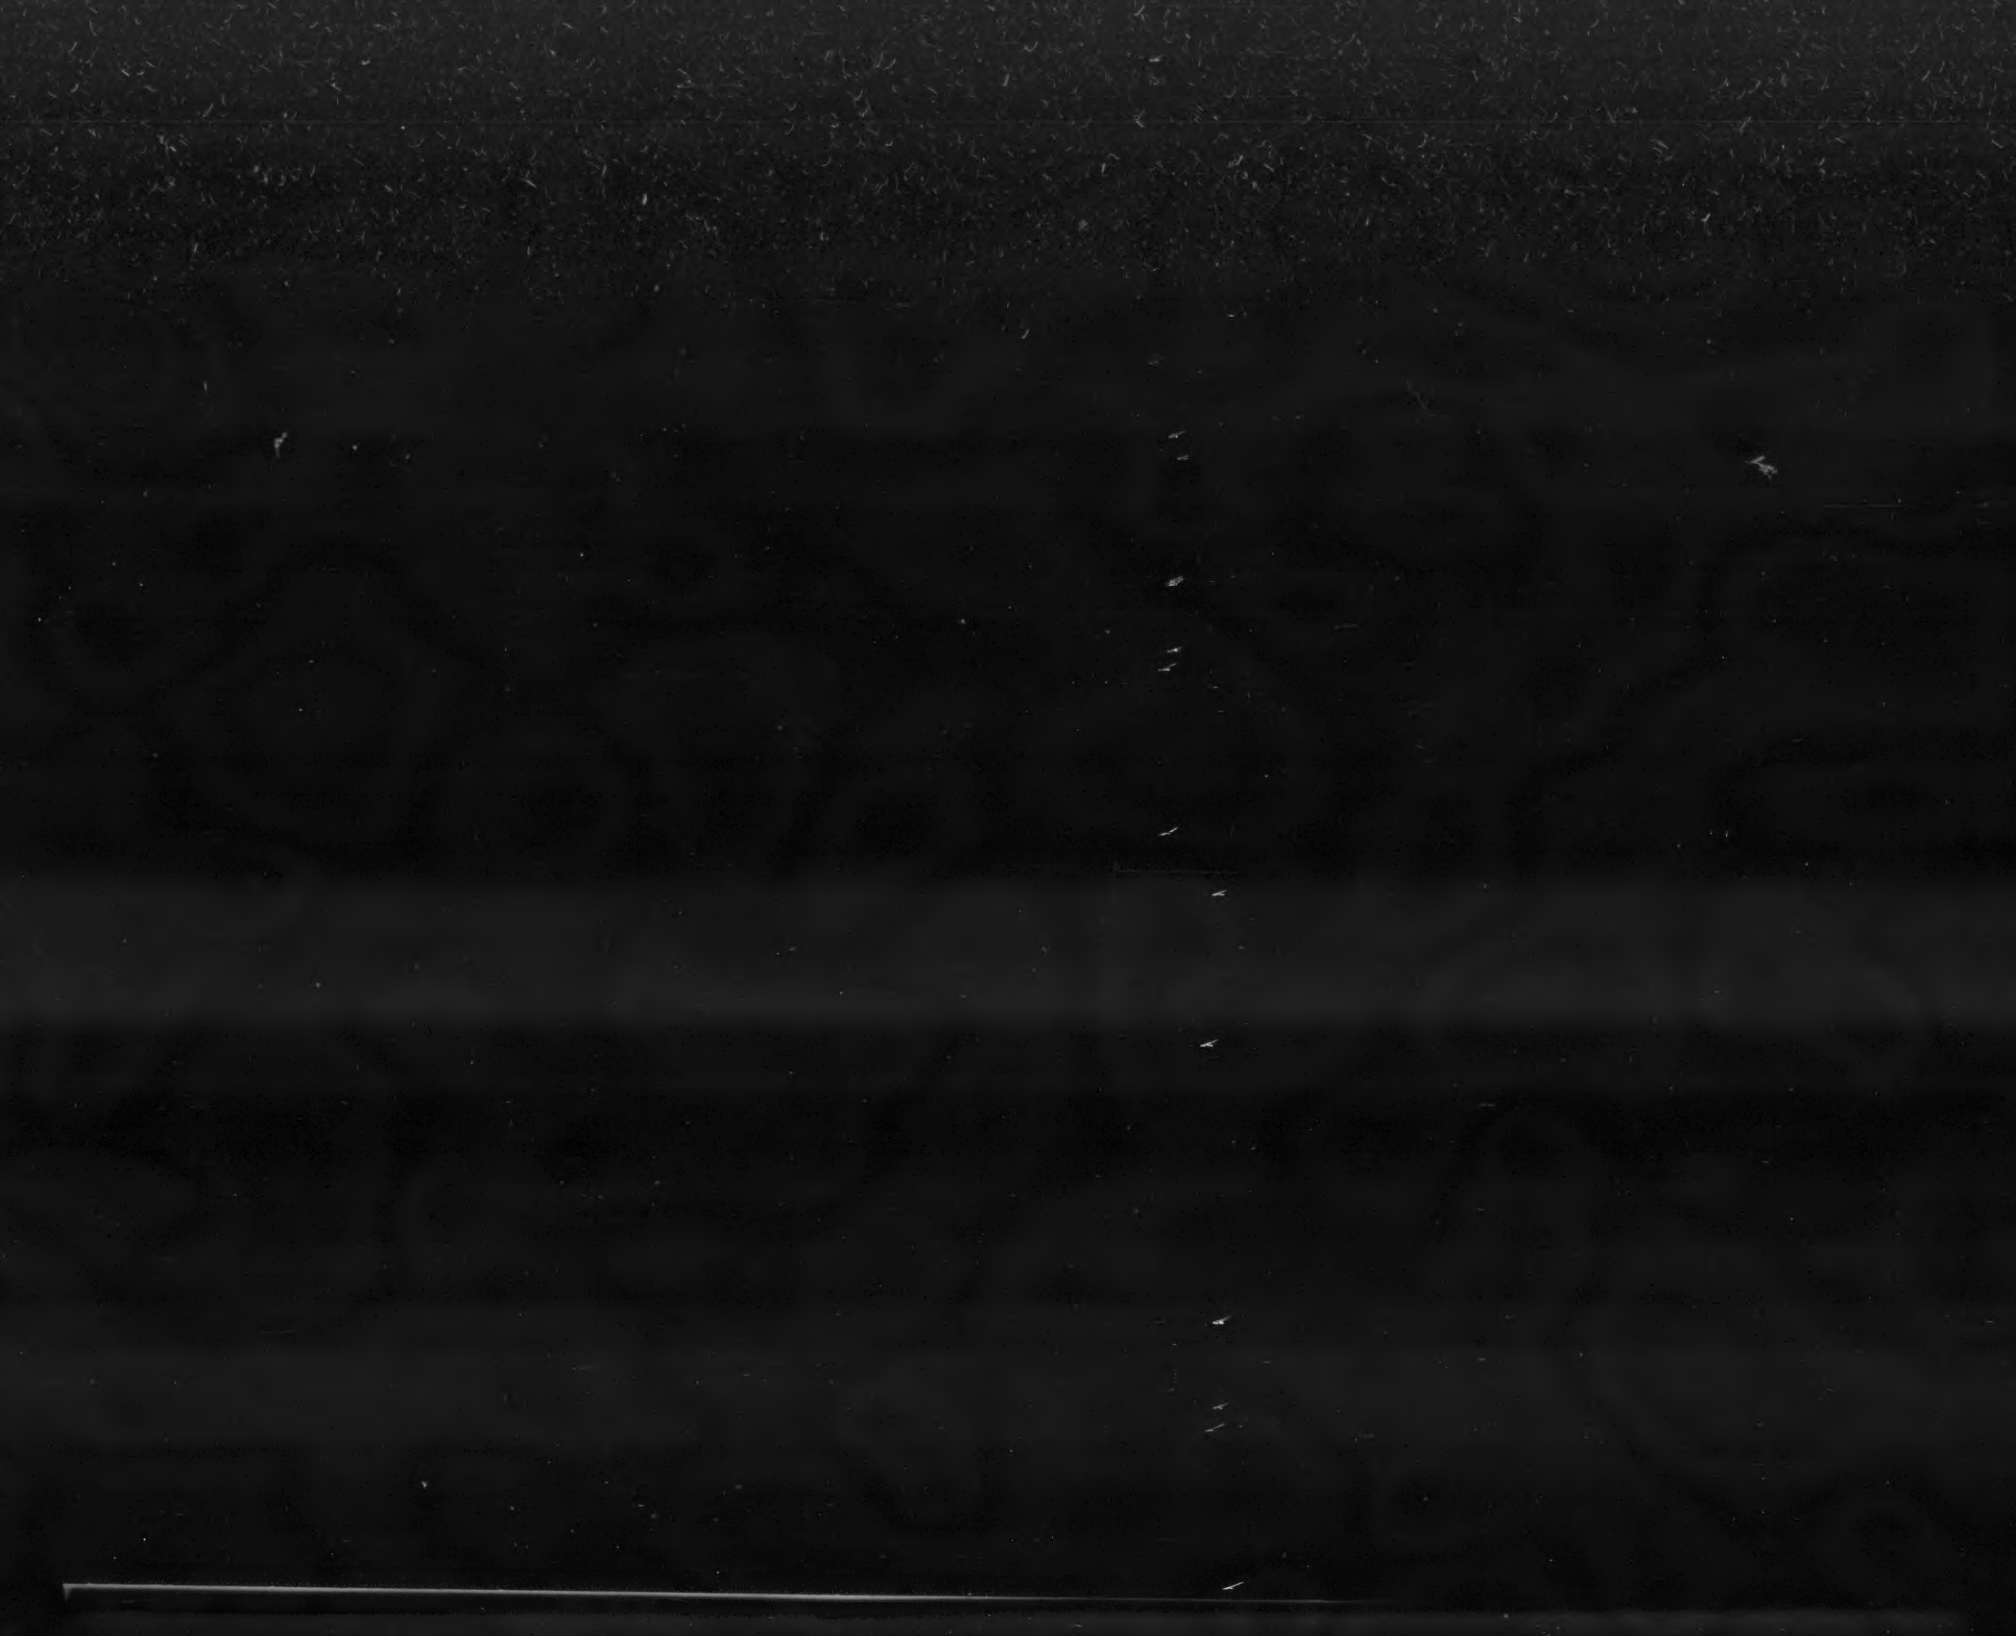
There was no objection.

Mr. LEA of California. Mr. Speaker, a bill similar to this one has been approved by every administration since 1914. It has passed the House three times, once by unanimous consent, and in the Seventy-first Congress practically by unanimous consent, although not on the Unanimous Consent Calendar. The President and the Secretary of War urge its passage.

Twenty-two years ago Congress, in anticipation of the completion of the Panama Canal, passed an act which gave the President power to regulate tolls and the method of measuring ships using the Panama Canal. There was only one similar example in the world to follow at that time, and that was the Suez Canal. Ordinary registration of ship tonnage was not designed for toll purposes. The general purpose at the time was to adopt a single unified plan for the measurement of vessels similar to that in use on the Suez Canal.

That act provided in substance that the toll should not exceed the equivalent of $1.25 per net registered ton. This language was subsequently interpreted as meaning net registered tons under the United States rules instead of under the Panama Canal rules. The effect of this ruling was to establish a dual toll system. The space subject to tolls under the Canal rules was thereafter limited by the spaces exempt under the United States rules and the result was a material reduction in the space subject to measurement for the purpose of assessing tolls.

Subsequently a further interpretation was placed upon the law to the effect that compartments of the ship which have tonnage openings not closed by methods permanently attached to the ship, should be exempt from tolls. This enabled shipowners, by minor structural changes, to exempt large portions of their ships from the payment of tolls. This practice has continuously increased, with the result that structural changes in ships have reduced their pay space by more than 9 percent of the total pay tonnage of the Canal. This practice has been progressive, is going on at the present time, and today the ships of the United States are paying more per ton on cargo space for the use of the Panama Canal than any other ships in the world except those of Japan.



At this time Japanese shipowners are planning to make changes in their ships in order to reduce the tonnage charges. If the present ratio continues, within a short time the United States shipowners will be paying more toll per ton than the shipowners of any other nation in the world. We cannot blame the shipowners for availing themselves of the opportunity the law permits. We should correct the situation by changing the law. This bill is designed to correct this situation and to give equal measurement to all ships of the world according to their cargo capacity.

The Secretary of War has sent me a letter in reference to what is proposed in case this legislation goes into effect, and I will ask the Clerk to read the letter.

Mr. CARTER of California. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEA of California. I yield to my colleague from California.

Mr. CARTER of California. I have received communications from a number of shipping interests on the Pacific coast, all of which are opposed to this legislation. The chief complaint, as I recall, is that it would tend to increase their tolls through the Panama Canal and the shipping industry, struggling along as it is and as other industries are, can ill afford to bear this added burden.

Mr. LEA of California. The committee was entirely sympathetic with the concern of the shipping companies. The committee invited all the shipping companies to make any constructive suggestions they had with a view to equalizing the tolls with the least possible hardship. The Governor of the Panama Canal, preceding favorable action on a similar bill in the Seventy-first Congress, stated if the bill became a law he would recommend a toll of $1 per ton.

The hearing on this bill proceeded on the theory that if it became a law a toll of $1 per ton would be collected. The shipowners vigorously protested.

After a careful study of the matter, the committee concluded a $1 toll is not warranted, particularly at this time. A charge of $1 under a just and equitable system of measurement would raise more money than the charge of $1.20 per ton under the present dual system.

The committee concluded that the equalization of tolls and not the increase of the aggregate amount to be collected is the just reason for the enactment of this bill. The committee presented its conclusions to this effect in its report.

After this bill reached its present stage, the Secretary of War considered this problem and wrote the letter which will shortly be read, in which he proposes to recommend that the toll be placed at 90 cents. Under this proposal the aggregate tolls collected will be slightly less than under the present system.

It is true that some ships will pay more, but it will only be such a change in rates as is necessary to do equal justice to those who are using the Canal.

It will also be observed from the letter of the Secretary that if this bill becomes a law the Panama Canal rules will be reconsidered and a revision thereof recommended to the President so far as necessary to do equal justice to all shipowners. Ship construction as well as operation practices have changed since the original rules were adopted. There is little doubt that such a revision of the rules will benefit any ship that might otherwise be subjected to unwarranted charges for undue cargo space.

The committee has endeavored to guard against every legitimate complaint that can be made against changing the toll rules to a more just and businesslike basis.

Mr. CARTER of California. Did the shipping interests appear before the committee in favor of this bill?

Mr. LEA of California. No; they did not. They appeared before our committee and opposed any change that would cause a higher charge to be made against any one of their vessels. It was following that statement of the shipping interests that the committee carefully examined the merits of their opposition and gave them every opportunity to cooperate in working out a constructive solution.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEA of California. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. McDUFFIE. The gentleman from California has very properly said that the shipping interests of this country today are having a terrible struggle in their effort to make ends meet. The communications I have received from those on the Gulf Coast who are operating a line of steamers through the canal are to the effect that this will be very hurtful. The gentleman has stated that on some ships this toll would be less. May I inquire the type of ships on which the toll will be less, and the type of ship on which the toll will be greater?

Mr. LEA of California. The change will be due entirely to ships having evaded the payment of their just proportion of the tolls by structural changes. There may be no less toll on the ships as measured by space but there will be a less charge per ton. Certain ships have been evading payments that should have been made in justice to other ships which made no such changes. When those ships pay their just proportion of the aggregate tolls collected it will permit some other ships to pay a little less than they now pay. The actual total amount collected will be a little less than it is today. At the present time, the aggregate amount of tolls evaded by structural changes is much greater in favor of foreign than American ships.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Is the Canal losing money?

Mr. LEA of California. The Canal is not losing money, but the foreign ships are getting the advantage of these changes over American ships. There is an inequality in the tolls collected from different ships. The present operation permits shipowners to reduce their own tolls.

Mr. McDUFFIE. If it is going to be hurtful to our own ships, and the Canal is not losing money, I am wondering what the necessity is for putting an additional burden on our own steamship operation.

Mr. LEA of California. There is no additional aggregate burden put on our own tonnage. The burden on our own tonnage for this year would be over $200,000 less under this proposed bill than it is today.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Did the gentleman learn what type of ship would benefit as a result of this legislation?

Mr. LEA of California. The ship that is not evading the law today will not have to pay as much after this law goes into effect as it is paying now, but the ship that has been evading these tonnage charges on account of changing the structure of the ship without affecting tonnage will have to pay a little more. So in equalizing the matter one will pay a little more and the other a little less, but the aggregate burden will be actually less on American ships under this plan than it is today.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Did the committee call in the American shipowner and operator, who is vitally interested in this bill, and find out the effects of this legislation?

Mr. LEA of California. The gentleman is in error if he thinks we did not do just that.

Mr. McDUFFIE. I thought the gentleman said his committee had not called them in.

Mr. LEA of California. We did. We gave them every opportunity; in fact we invited them, and we delayed the hearings to get every suggestion that they had to make. We heard them at much greater length than we did those in favor of the legislation.

Mr. McDUFFIE. I misunderstood the gentleman. I thought you told the gentleman from California that they had not appeared.

Mr. LEA of California. They appeared at length. They were heard fully.

Mr. CARTER of California. They were not in favor of the bill.

Mr. McDUFFIE. They appeared to oppose the legislation.

Mr. LEA of California. The shipping interests appeared and opposed the bill on the theory that the charge was going to be $1, but under the plan as proposed it is going to be only 90 cents, which minimizes what they complained against.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Is the proposed charge based on the net registered tonnage of the vessel?

Mr. LEA of California. Under this rule it would be based on the cargo capacity as measured by space. Of course, the measurements are on the cubic-foot basis, 100 cubic feet per ton.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Then it follows that the ship which is constructed to carry the largest cargo will bear the greatest burden?

Mr. LEA of California. They will pay in proportion to their cargo capacity.

Mr. CARTER of California. Will the gentleman state the necessity for this legislation?

Mr. LEA of California. It is in order to do justice as between all the ships which use the Panama Canal. It is not fair, on the whole, to the American shipping interests to charge them more than any other nation in the world except one. Tolls should be levied according to cargo capacity. The present system is unbusinesslike and unequal as between different ships. Some pay too little, others pay too much.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEA of California. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. May I answer the question that the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. McDUFFIE] asked a few moments ago? I know the gentleman has not had an exact explanation of this thing.

All ships are built alike, you might say, but the Panama Canal toll was charged against the space which carries freight and is completely closed up for all-weather purposes. As soon as shipping started through the Canal, the foreigners were the first to change their structures in this way. While they had one vast hold in the ship where freight could be stored and closed up, watertight, and that particular freight pay the toll, if they would leave the space not watertight but leave the door or the hatch up, or stow the stuff away on the deck or put it into the cabins with only boarding where it was all weather tight, as understood in the language of seamen, then there was no toll paid in going through the Canal.

I witnessed this myself in going through the Canal. One of the officers demonstrated this to me. The ship I was on was an American ship and whatever freight it carried, it carried in the regular weather-tight compartments and it paid the full toll for that capacity. The ship behind me was a foreign ship. It was carrying its freight on the deck. It was carrying it in cabins and instead of having passengers in the cabins they put freight in the cabins and just put up ordinary boarding at the windows and paid no toll for this freight it was carrying through the Canal.

So this law, while it may temporarily increase the rates, on the average, on American shipping, yet so soon as the President gets this law, he promises to reduce the general rate to, say, 90 cents or $1 a ton, and the American shipping will be less affected and it will be cheaper for American shipping to go through the Canal when this rate becomes operative.

Mr. CARTER of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOCKWEILER. I yield.

Mr. CARTER of California. How can the gentleman explain the fact that representatives of American shipping appeared before the committee in opposition to this bill, when, according to the gentleman's statement, it is going to be a great benefit to American shipping?

Mr. DOCKWEILER. No; I think you have to take a long-range view of the matter. Temporarily they will have to pay a little more, but over a long range of time we will be able to collect more from the foreign shippers, and in that way the toll will be reduced to everybody concerned, including the American shipping.

Mr. LEA of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the Clerk read the letter of the Secretary of War.

The Clerk read as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, May 26, 1934.

Hon. CLARENCE F. LEA,
Chairman Subcommittee on Panama Canal Matters,
Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce,
House of Representatives, Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. LEA: Referring to my telephone conversation with you in regard to bill H.R. 7667, to provide for the measurement of vessels using the Panama Canal, it seems advisable to give you the following information as to the course which will be followed should the bill become law at this session of Congress.

After a full study of the situation, and especially after consideration of the objections which have been raised by steamship interests, I have determined that I will recommend to the President, after the enactment of the legislation with the proposed maximum rate of $1 per ton as now provided in the bill, the adoption of a tolls rate on laden vessels of not more than 90 cents. This rate on the 1933 tonnage would have produced approximately the same aggregate total as was collected in 1933 under the existing system. In addition, I will direct that a study be made of Panama Canal rules for the purpose of changing them so as to secure equitable treatment for all vessels.

I hope that these assurances will assist you in answering objections to the passage of a bill which is essential to remove the existing inequalities in the treatment of shipping now passing through the Panama Canal and to prevent further reductions in tolls charges by structural changes in vessels that reduce tonnages but have practically no effect on the cargo-carrying capacities of vessels.

Sincerely yours,

GEO. H. DERN,
Secretary of War.

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEA of California. Yes.

Mr. WELCH. On what date was the change from $1 to 90 cents made?

Mr. LEA of California. It has not been made, but the Secretary of War says he will recommend it if this legislation passes.

Mr. WELCH. I have a telegram here that I would like to send to the desk and have read for the RECORD.

Mr. LEA of California. It was probably sent without knowledge of this letter.

Mr. WELCH. It is under date of May 19.

Mr. LEA of California. The letter is dated May 26. Evidently your wire was sent without knowledge of the letter of the Secretary of War.

Mr. McGUGIN. Can the gentleman from California tell us, briefly, whether or not this bill increases or decreases the toll which will be paid by ships going through the Canal?

Mr. LEA of California. It will slightly decrease the amount of tolls that will be collected and the Americans will get two-thirds of what little reduction there is.

Mr. WELCH. May I ask if the American Steamship Owners' Association is satisfied with the bill at the present time?

Mr. LEA of California. I have no knowledge that they are.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Is the bill before us being considered under suspension of the rules?

The SPEAKER. Yes.

Mr. LEHLBACH. How much time has been taken by the proponents of the bill?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California has consumed 16 minutes.

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have read from the Clerk's desk a telegram which I have received from the American Steamship Owners' Association.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman withhold that a moment?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. LEHLBACH].

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker, because some of the shipping interests thought the Committee on Merchant Marine, Radio, and Fisheries was considering this question, information concerning this proposed legislation has come to the members of that committee.

I know of no shipping interest in the United States that is not opposed to this legislation. I have received letters from the American Steamship Owners Association, from various intercoastal lines, and so forth. I have also received information that this bill would cost one line alone $125,000 more in Panama Canal tolls.

Members who are interested in shipping matters, who are living along the coast, know that our merchant marine is engaged in a life and death struggle. It is on the point of a crash at this time. To allow a bill which does not go into effect until January 1936 to be brought here with no consideration which so important a measure should receive, ought not to be passed in this manner. There is no rush or hurry, the bill has been kicking around Congress for 15 years, and there is no reason for passing it now.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. WELCH].

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the telegram I send to the desk be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 19, 1934.

Hon. RICHARD J. WELCH:

We understand H.R. 7667, relating to Panama Canal tolls, will come before the House Monday under suspension of rules.

If enacted this legislation will impose serious financial hardships on general cargo and passenger ships using Canal in both domestic and foreign trades. Bill is not to become effective until January 1, 1936, therefore there seems to be no necessity of immediate action. Companies cannot stand additional financial burdens, many of whom are now heavily indebted to Government. Subject of interest not only to shipowners, but to shippers and consumers on both Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We hope bill will not be passed.

AMERICAN STEAMSHIP OWNERS ASSOCIATION,
R. J. BAKER, President.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the lady from California [Mrs. KAHN].

Mrs. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me the time is most inopportune to put an additional burden on American ships. They have struggles enough and hardships enough now; they are up against it in every way, shape, and manner.

Now, when everything else looks black and dark, when everybody is having a hard time, when everyone is suffering under extra burdens, it seems to me that if we could postpone this bill for the next 2 years it may be by that time they could stand it. But this being an extra burden, it does seem to me that this is not the time to pass the bill. [Applause.]

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. ELTSE].

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, I have received numerous telegrams and letters from Pacific coast shipping interests, and they are all opposed to the passage of this bill. In view of the foregoing, I do not understand how the gentleman from California can say that the steamship interests are not opposed to the passage of this bill. If these people thought that the tolls would be reduced, they would be for the passage of the bill. I want to add my opposition to the bill for these reasons.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from California to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. CARTER of California) there were—ayes 99, noes 47.

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

UNITED STATES BUILDINGS, ETC., IN HAITI (S.DOC. NO. 396)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

Next October our marine and naval forces will be withdrawn from the Republic of Haiti. During a period of almost 20 years in which they have been stationed in Haiti they have rendered valuable assistance to the Haitian Government and people in training the Haitian constabulary. This constabulary, known as the "garde", has been using certain equipment and material loaned to them by our marine and naval forces, and the Haitian Government would welcome the opportunity of retaining this equipment and material. Also, there are various buildings, barracks, garages, and workshops which our marine and naval forces have constructed and which would be of practical use to the Haitian Government. It would seem to me a fitting climax to the close of the period of special relationship which has existed between Haiti and the United States if our Government were to make a gift of these buildings and of a portion of this material and equipment to the Haitian Government. In the joint statement which the President of Haiti and I issued on April 17 following our conversations during President Vincent's visit to Washington, I expressed my intention of seeking the necessary authorization from the Congress of the United States in order to make such a gift.

With the foregoing in mind, therefore, I recommend the enactment of legislation authorizing me in my discretion to convey to the Government of Haiti, without cost to that Government, such buildings, material, and equipment now in Haiti owned by our Government as may appear to me to be appropriate.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, June 5, 1934.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. BROOKS, for 3 days, on account of illness.

To Mr. KOPPLEMANN, for tomorrow, on account of important official business.

To Mr. GRIFFIN, indefinitely, on account of death of his brother.

SENATE ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 1077. An act for the relief of Lueco R. Gooch;

S. 1126. An act for the relief of M. M. Twichel;

S. 1191. An act for the relief of the Sultzbach Clothing Co.;

S. 1401. An act to pay a gratuity to Emma Ferguson Starrett;

S. 1516. An act for the relief of Michael Bello;

S. 2023. An act for the relief of Claudia L. Polski; and

S. 2636. An act for the relief of James Slevin.

RECESS

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, in the hope that we may possibly reach the Consent Calendar tomorrow I move that the House do now stand in recess until 11 o'clock tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee that the House stand in recess until 11 o'clock tomorrow.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio demands the yeas and nays. As many as favor taking the vote by yeas and nays will rise and stand until counted. [After counting.] Fifteen gentlemen have risen, not a sufficient number and the yeas and nays are refused. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee that the House stand in recess until 11 o'clock tomorrow.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MCGUGIN) there were—ayes 129, noes 23.

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote upon the ground that there is no quorum present and I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and ninety Members present, not a quorum. The roll call is automatic. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee that the House stand in recess until 11 o'clock tomorrow.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 230, nays 81, not voting 119, as follows:

[Roll No. 175]

YEAS—230

Adair	Byrns	Deen	Fletcher
Adams	Caldwell	Delaney	Ford
Arnold	Cannon, Mo.	De Priest	Foss
Ayres, Kans.	Carden, Ky.	Dickinson	Frey
Bacon	Carmichael	Dingell	Fuller
Bailey	Carter, Calif.	Dirksen	Gasque
Beam	Cary	Dobbins	Gavagan
Biermann	Castellow	Dockweiler	Gillespie
Black	Cavicchia	Doughton	Glover
Bland	Chavez	Doxey	Goodwin
Blanton	Claiborne	Drewry	Granfield
Bloom	Clarke, N.Y.	Driver	Greenwood
Boehne	Cochran, Mo.	Duffey	Gregory
Boland	Colden	Durgan, Ind.	Griswold
Boylan	Cole	Eagle	Haines
Brown, Ga.	Colmer	Eaton	Hancock, N.Y.
Brown, Ky.	Cooper, Tenn.	Edmiston	Hancock, N.C.
Brown, Mich.	Cravens	Edmonds	Harlan
Brunner	Crosby	Eicher	Hart
Buchanan	Cross, Tex.	Ellenbogen	Hastings
Buck	Crosser, Ohio	Ellzey, Miss.	Healey
Bulwinkle	Crowe	Eltse, Calif.	Henney
Burch	Crump	Faddis	Hill, Samuel B.
Burke, Nebr.	Cullen	Farley	Holmes
Burnham	Darden	Fiesinger	Imhoff
Busby	Dear	Flannagan	Jacobsen

Jenckes, Ind.	McKeown	Rankin	Swank
Johnson, Okla.	McReynolds	Rayburn	Tarver
Johnson, Tex.	McSwain	Reilly	Taylor, Colo.
Johnson, W.Va.	Maloney, La.	Rich	Terrell, Tex.
Jones	Mansfield	Richardson	Terry, Ark.
Kahn	Martin, Colo.	Robertson	Thom
Kee	Martin, Oreg.	Robinson	Thomas
Keller	May	Romjue	Thomason
Kennedy, Md.	Mead	Rudd	Thompson, Ill.
Kennedy, N.Y.	Merritt	Ruffin	Thompson, Tex.
Kenney	Millard	Sabath	Tinkham
Kerr	Milligan	Sadowski	Turner
Kinzer	Mitchell	Sanders, La.	Umstead
Kloeb	Moran	Sanders, Tex.	Underwood
Kniffin	Morehead	Sandlin	Utterback
Kocialkowski	Musselwhite	Schaefer	Vinson, Ga.
Lambeth	O'Brien	Schuetz	Vinson, Ky.
Lamneck	O'Connell	Schulte	Warren
Lanham	O'Connor	Sears	Wearin
Larrabee	Oliver, Ala.	Secrest	Weaver
Lea, Calif.	Oliver, N.Y.	Shallenberger	Werner
Lehr	Owen	Sirovich	West, Ohio
Lesinski	Palmisano	Smith, Va.	West, Tex.
Lewis, Colo.	Parker	Snyder	Whittington
Lewis, Md.	Parks	Somers, N.Y.	Williford
Lindsay	Parsons	Spence	Williams
Lozier	Patman	Steagall	Wilson
Ludlow	Pettengill	Strong, Tex.	Withrow
McClintic	Peyser	Stubbs	Wood, Ga.
McCormack	Polk	Studley	Young
McDuffie	Ramsay	Sullivan
McGrath	Ramspeck	Sutphin

NAYS—81

Andrew, Mass.	Foulkes	McCarthy	Seger
Arens	Gilchrist	McFadden	Sinclair
Ayers, Mont.	Goss	McFarlane	Smith, Wash.
Blanchard	Gray	McGugin	Strong, Pa.
Boileau	Greenway	McLean	Sweeney
Buckbee	Guyer	Maloney, Conn.	Swick
Cannon, Wis.	Hess	Mapes	Taber
Carpenter, Kans.	Hildebrandt	Marshall	Taylor, Tenn.
Carter, Wyo.	Hill, Knute	Martin, Mass.	Traeger
Cartwright	Hope	Meeks	Truax
Christianson	Howard	Miller	Weideman
Cochran, Pa.	Hughes	Monaghan, Mont.	Welch
Collins, Calif.	Jenkins, Ohio	Mott	White
Condon	Johnson, Minn.	Peavey	Wigglesworth
Connery	Kelly, Pa.	Perkins	Wolcott
Ditter	Knutson	Powers	Wolfenden
Dondero	Kurtz	Randolph	Wolverton
Dowell	Lambertson	Reece	Zioncheck
Dunn	Lanzetta	Rogers, Mass.
Englebright	Lemke	Rogers, Okla.
Focht	Lundeen	Scrugham

NOT VOTING—119

Abernethy	Corning	Hill, Ala.	Prall
Allen	Cox	Hoeppel	Ransley
Allgood	Crowther	Hoidale	Reed, N.Y.
Andrews, N.Y.	Culkin	Hollister	Reid, Ill.
Auf der Heide	Cummings	Huddleston	Richards
Bacharach	Darrow	James	Rogers, N.H.
Bakewell	DeRouen	Jeffers	Shannon
Bankhead	Dickstein	Kelly, Ill.	Shoemaker
Beck	Dies	Kleberg	Simpson
Beedy	Disney	Koppelmann	Sisson
Beiter	Douglass	Kramer	Smith, W.Va.
Berlin	Doutrich	Kvale	Snell
Bolton	Duncan, Mo.	Lee, Mo.	Stalker
Brennan	Evans	Lehlbach	Stokes
Britten	Fernandez	Lloyd	Sumners, Tex.
Brooks	Fish	Luce	Taylor, S.C.
Browning	Fitzgibbons	McLeod	Thurston
Burke, Calif.	Fitzpatrick	McMillan	Tobey
Cady	Frear	Marland	Treadway
Carley, N.Y.	Fulmer	Montague	Turpin
Carpenter, Nebr.	Gambrill	Montet	Wadsworth
Celler	Gifford	Moynihan, Ill.	Waldron
Chapman	Gillette	Muldowney	Wallgren
Chase	Goldsborough	Murdock	Walter
Church	Green	Nesbit	Whitley
Clark, N.C.	Griffin	Norton	Wilcox
Coffin	Hamilton	O'Malley	Wood, Mo.
Collins, Miss.	Harter	Peterson	Woodruff
Connolly	Hartley	Pierce	Woodrum
Cooper, Ohio	Higgins	Plumley

So the motion was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

General pairs:

Mr. Gambrill with Mr. Allen.
Mr. Fitzpatrick with Mr. McLeod.
Mr. Corning with Mr. Bacharach.
Mr. Douglass with Mr. Woodruff.
Mr. Griffin with Mr. Bakewell.
Mr. Bankhead with Mr. Whitley.
Mr. Rogers of New Hampshire with Mr. Connolly.
Mr. Browning with Mr. Muldowney.
Mr. Murdock with Mr. Tobey.
Mr. Fitzgibbons with Mr. Crowther.
Mrs. Norton with Mr. Reed of New York.
Mr. Celler with Mr. Turpin.
Mr. Smith of West Virginia with Mr. Bolton.
Mr. Beiter with Mr. Plumley.
Mr. Shannon with Mr. Thurston.
Mr. Walter with Mr. Beck.
Mr. Cartwright with Mr. Andrews of New York.
Mr. Woodrum with Mr. Moynihan of Illinois.
Mr. Kopplemann with Mr. Britten.
Mr. Goldsborough with Mr. Ransley
Mr. Prall with Mr. Beedy.
Mr. Montague with Mr. Hartley.
Mr. Disney with Mr. Wadsworth.
Mr. Allgood with Mr. Treadway.
Mr. Fulmer with Mr. Chase.
Mr. Chapman with Mr. Frear.
Mr. Clark of North Carolina with Mr. Cooper of Ohio.
Mr. Huddleston with Mr. Waldron.
Mr. Sumners of Texas with Mr. Fish.
Mr. Church with Mr. James.
Mr. Collins of Mississippi with Mr. Lehlbach.
Mr. Kelly of Illinois with Mr. Doutrich.
Mr. Fernandez with Mr. Stokes.
Mr. Montet with Mr. Darrow.
Mr. Marland with Mr. Luce.
Mr. Brennan with Mr. Hollister.
Mr. DeRouen with Mr. Culkin.
Mr. Kramer with Mr. Higgins.
Mr. Dickstein with Mr. Simpson.
Mr. McMillan with Mr. Gifford.
Mr. Kleberg with Mr. Stalker.
Mr. Sisson with Mr. Evans.
Mr. Green with Mr. Reid of Illinois.
Mr. Taylor of South Carolina with Mr. Kvale.
Mr. Dies with Mr. Shoemaker.
Mr. Burke of California with Mr. Pierce.
Mr. Berlin with Mr. Auf der Heide.
Mr. Harter with Mr. Brooks.
Mr. Cox with Mr. Hoidale.
Mr. Carley of New York with Mr. Carpenter of Nebraska.
Mr. Gillette with Mr. O'Malley.
Mr. Wallgren with Mr. Richards.
Mr. Cady with Mr. Coffin.
Mr. Wilcox with Mr. Lee of Missouri.
Mr. Hill of Alabama with Mr. Wood of Missouri.
Mr. Lloyd with Mr. Hamilton.
Mr. Cummings with Mr. Nesbit.
Mr. Abernethy with Mr. Peterson.
Mr. Hoeppel with Mr. Duncan of Missouri.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Accordingly the House (at 5 o'clock and 47 minutes p.m.) stood in recess until tomorrow, Wednesday, June 6, 1934, at 11 o'clock a.m.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

(Wednesday, June 6, 10 a.m.)

Continuation of the hearings on the oil bill (H.R. 9676).

COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS

(Wednesday, June 6, 10 a.m.)

Various bills. Room 328, House Office Building.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII.

Mr. THOMASON: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 1286. An act to increase the efficiency of the Veterinary Corps of the Regular Army; without amendment (Rept. No. 1885). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BROWN of Michigan: A bill (H.R. 9846) to authorize a preliminary examination and survey of Waiska River, Mich.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. McREYNOLDS: A bill (H.R. 9847) to authorize the President to transfer to the Government of Haiti without charge to that Government certain property of the United States in Haiti; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. ROBINSON: A bill (H.R. 9848) authorizing the Secretary of War to permit the inhabitants of the town of Sunset, Utah, to use water for culinary purposes from the water supply of the Ogden Ordnance Reserve Depot; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CLARK of North Carolina: Resolution (H.Res. 420) for the consideration of H.R. 9690, a bill to place the tobacco-growing industry on a sound financial and economic basis, to prevent unfair competition and practices in the production and marketing of tobacco entering into the channels of interstate and foreign commerce, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. BANKHEAD: Resolution (H.Res. 421) allowing the Chairman of the Committee on Claims to call up bills favorably reported from the Committee on Claims and heretofore objected to, said bills to be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole House, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Rules.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BROWN of Kentucky: A bill (H.R. 9849) granting a pension to William F. Hunter; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CELLER: A bill (H.R. 9850) for the relief of Mildred E. Cameron; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. LAMNECK: A bill (H.R. 9851) granting a pension to Emma Fishinger; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MONAGHAN of Montana: A bill (H.R. 9852) for the relief of Mike Chetkovich; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. RAMSAY: A bill (H.R. 9854) to restore to the Neill Grocery Co., of Wheeling, W.Va., the sum of $900, the amount of counsel fee paid by said Neill Grocery Co. in an action brought against them August 10, 1917; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WHITTINGTON: A bill (H.R. 9854) granting a pension to William O. Mabry; to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

4973. By Mr. ANDREW of Massachusetts: Petition of the Society for Propagating the Gospel among the Indians and Others in North America, urging that action be deferred on the Wheeler-Howard bill; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

4974. By Mr. GLOVER: Resolution of the Desha County Democrat, Dumas, Ark; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4975. By Mr. GOODWIN: Petition of R. A. Ditmar, of Hudson, N.Y., opposing the National Industrial Adjustment Act; to the Committee on Labor.

4976. Also, petition of Dwight Divine & Sons, Inc., Ellenville, N.Y., opposing the National Industrial Adjustment Act; to the Committee on Labor.

4977. Also, petition of the Terry Bros. Co., Kingston, N.Y., opposing the National Industrial Adjustment Act; to the Committee on Labor.

4978. Also, petition of the Universal Road Machinery Co., Kingston, N.Y., opposing the National Industrial Adjustment Act; to the Committee on Labor.

4979. By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of the Metal Hose & Tubing Co., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the amended Wagner bill and urging its defeat; to the Committee on Labor.

4980. Also, petition of the Industrial Home for the Blind, Brooklyn, N.Y., urging the passage of House bill 9404; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4981. Also, petition of the Brooklyn Eastern District Terminal, New York City, opposing the Wagner amended labor-disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

4982. Also, telegram from the Texas Gasoline Consumers' League, Kilgore, Tex., opposing the Thomas-Disney bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4983. By Mr. LUNDEEN: Petition of the Kabetogama Forest American Legion Post, No. 480, protesting against the nationalization of the Kabetogama State forest; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4984. Also, petition of the farmers and citizens of Hoffman, Minn., urging Federal relief for drought-stricken area; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4985. Also, petition of the Independent Bankers Association, protesting against the policy of the Farm Credit Administration in making loans through its coordinate banks to have creditors of the borrowers discount their claims as a condition making these loans; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4986. Also, petition of the Lincoln County, Minn., citizens, urging that an emergency moratorium be proclaimed, prohibiting all foreclosures in federally designated drought areas; to the Committee on Agriculture.

4987. By Mr. MILLARD: Resolution adopted by the St. Augustine's Branch, Holy Name Society of Ossining, N.Y., urging relief for radio broadcasting Station WLWL; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

4988. By Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts: Petition of the Society for Propagating the Gospel among the Indians and others in North America, asking that action be deferred on the Wheeler-Howard bill; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

4989. By Mr. RUDD: Petition of Abraham & Straus, Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the new Wagner disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

4990. Also, petition of Benisch Bros., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the new Wagner disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

4991. Also, petition of Moeller Instrument Co., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the new Wagner disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

4992. Also, petition of the Industrial Home for the Blind, favoring the passage of House bill 9404; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4993. Also, petition of the Metal Hose & Tubing Co., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the amended Wagner disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

4994. Also, petition of the Texas Gasoline Consumers League, Kilgore, Tex., favoring the passage of the Disney bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 6, 1934

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, in whom the souls of nations live, who turnest not Thy face away from those who work Thy will: Be Thou the guardian of Thy people, and remember now no more the wavering will, the base material pride that in our lives have only brought us days of shame.

Give us the courage of those spirits humbly brave, who in the past have wrought such wondrous things, striving through years of faith to lead this Nation into paths of righteousness, equity, and truth that we may spend ourselves and never count the cost of consecrated service for our country's weal. Send now Thy strength on hearts that pray for strength to serve Thee still. We ask it in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Tuesday, June 5, when, on motion of Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed without amendment the following bills of the Senate:

S. 3524. An act to amend an act of Congress approved February 9, 1893, entitled "An act to establish a court of appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes"; and

S. 3586. An act for the relief of George A. Fox.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 3404) authorizing loans from the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works for the construction of certain municipal buildings in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 9322) to provide for the establishment, operation, and maintenance of foreign-trade zones in ports of entry of the United States, to expedite and encourage foreign commerce, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3032) for the relief of Paul Jelna, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. HILL of Alabama, Mr. COFFIN, and Mr. GOSS were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message further announced that the House had passed a bill (H.R. 7667) to provide for the measurement of vessels using the Panama Canal, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ORDER AS TO THE CONSIDERATION OF THE CALENDAR

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, yesterday an order was entered, at my request, that at the close of morning business this morning the Senate proceed to the consideration of unobjected bills on the calendar. It has been pointed out to me by a number of Senators that on the occasion when the calendar was last called the call was discontinued at Calendar No. 1047, and that the greater number of the bills preceding that number on the calendar have been repeatedly called and objected to. I have been asked to request that the consideration of the calendar this morning begin with Order of Business No. 1047.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I am not going to object to the request, but I wish to say to the Senator that, if it is practicable, I should like to have an opportunity for an hour some day to present Calendar No. 420, being the bill (S. 2018) relative to Members of Congress acting as attorneys in matters where the United States has an interest. I know the bill will always be objected to under the order of the call of the calendar. I am not going to object, as I have said, to beginning the consideration of the calendar this morning at Order of Business No. 1047, but I should like to ask the Senator to consider giving me an opportunity to present the bill to which I have referred, at least for an hour or so, before the final conclusion of the session.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, of course any request the Senator from Idaho makes commands my respectful consideration, and I shall be very glad to advise with him about the matter.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Arkansas is there any probability that the Senate may have a chance to recur to the beginning of the calendar this morning?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; it is my thought if we conclude the consideration of the calendar, which is a very long one, under the present order, that any Senator may ask to go back to a previous number if time shall be afforded; but, frankly, if the modification of the request is going to take very much time, I think we had better proceed under the order that has already been entered rather than to attempt to modify it.

Mr. McNARY. What I have in mind is our recurring to the beginning of the calendar. The request of the Senator from Arkansas is proper and conforms to the practice of the Senate, but if there should be any time remaining after going through the calendar. I should like to have it understood that we shall commence with the first order and proceed until 2 o'clock.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Very well; I will modify the request and ask that the Senate proceed with the consideration of the calendar, commencing with Order of Business No. 1047, and if before the conclusion of the morning hour that procedure shall be finished that we recur to the beginning of the calendar. Is that satisfactory to the Senator?

Mr. McNARY. Yes.

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, I have a bill on the calendar, being Order of Business No. 617, Senate bill 2334, which I am very anxious to have considered, and I think there will be no objection to it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

SUPPLEMENTAL ESTIMATE OF APPROPRIATION, EXPENSE OF PETROLEUM ADMINISTRATION (S.DOC. NO. 190)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for salaries and expenses of the Petroleum Administration for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935, amounting to $2,096,000, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

SUPPLEMENTAL ESTIMATE OF APPROPRIATION, CONTROL OF CHINCH BUGS (S.DOC. NO. 191)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the fiscal year 1934, to remain available until December 31, 1934, for the Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Entomology, for the control of chinch bugs, amounting to $1,000,000, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

PETITION

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas presented a resolution adopted by the Craighead County (Ark.) Oil Dealers' Association, favoring the prompt enactment of legislation repealing the Federal gasoline tax, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. HARRISON, from the Committee on Finance, to which was referred the bill (H.R. 1) to provide for controlled expansion of the currency and the immediate payment to veterans of the face value of their adjusted-service certificates, reported it adversely and submitted an adverse report (No. 1258) thereon.

Mr. NORBECK, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H.R. 7121) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay Dr. A. W. Pearson, of Peever, S.Dak., and the Peabody Hospital, at Webster, S.Dak., for medical services and supplies furnished to Indians, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1259) thereon.

Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 3739) authorizing the President to convey certain buildings, material, and equipment to the Government of the Republic of Haiti, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1261) thereon.

Mr. CAPPER, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H.R. 2419) for the relief of W. B. Ford, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1262) thereon.

Mr. WHITE, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 2489. An act for the relief of Harold E. Seavey (Rept. No. 1263); and

H.R. 4838. An act for the relief of the Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Massachusetts (Rept. No. 1264).

Mr. GIBSON, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H.R. 2416) for the relief of Mrs. George Logan and her minor children, Lewis and Barbara Logan, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1265) thereon.

Mr. BAILEY, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 3469. An act for the relief of the Yellow Drivurself Co. (Rept. No. 1266);

H.R. 6696. An act for the relief of William T. Roche (Rept. No. 1267);

H.R. 7230. An act for the relief of J. B. Hudson (Rept. No. 1268);

H.R. 7272. An act for the relief of John W. Adair (Rept. No. 1269); and

H.R. 7953. An act for the relief of the Dallas County Chapter of the American Red Cross (Rept. No. 1270).

Mr. CONNALLY, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the bill (H.R. 2326) for the relief of Emma R. H. Taggart, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1271) thereon.

RENTAL AND HOUSING CONDITIONS IN THE DISTRICT

Mr. KING, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred a letter from the Chairman of the Public Utilities Commission of the District of Columbia, transmitting a supplementary report of an investigation relating to the cost and character of housing in rented premises in the District of Columbia, with the accompanying papers, reported thereon, and moved that the material be referred to the Committee on Printing, with a view to its being printed as a document, which motion was agreed to.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on the 5th instant that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S.176. An act for the relief of Harry Harsin;

S. 254. An act for the relief of Fred H. Cotter;

S. 1077. An act for the relief of Lueco R. Gooch;

S. 1078. An act for the relief of Mrs. Asa Caswell Hawkins;

S. 1126. An act for the relief of M. M. Twichel;

S. 1191. An act for the relief of the Sultzbach Clothing Co.;

S. 1401. An act to pay a gratuity to Emma Ferguson Starrett;

S. 1516. An act for the relief of Michael Bello;

S. 1780. An act to provide for the discontinuance of the use as dwellings of buildings situated in alleys in the District of Columbia, and for the replatting and development of squares containing inhabited alleys, in the interest of public health, comfort, morals, safety, and welfare, and for other purposes;

S. 1994. An act for the relief of Estelle Johnson;

S. 2023. An act for the relief of Claudia L. Polski;

S. 2636. An act for the relief of James Slevin;

S. 2696. An act to amend an act entitled "An act granting a charter to the General Federation of Women's Clubs";

S. 2714. An act to amend section 895 of the Code of Law of the District of Columbia;

S. 2750. An act for the relief of Claude A. Brown and Ruth McCurry Brown, natural guaradians of Mamie Ruth Brown;

S. 2790. An act for the relief of the Charlestown Sand & Stone Co., of Elkton, Md.;

S. 2918. An act for the relief of N. Lester Troast;

S. 2973. An act for the relief of First Lt. Walter T. Wilsey;

S. 3026. An act for the relief of Lucy Cobb Stewart;

S. 3117. An act authorizing and directing the Court of Claims, in the event of judgment or judgments in favor of the Cherokee Indians, or any of them, in suits by them against the United States under the acts of March 19, 1924, and April 25, 1932, to include in its decrees allowances to Frank J. Boudinot, not exceeding 5 percent of such recoveries, and for other purposes; and

S. 3380. An act providing for the appointment of Richmond Pearson Hobson, formerly a captain in the United States Navy, as a rear admiral in the Navy, and his retirement in that grade.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred, as follows:

By Mr. DAVIS (for Mr. REED):

A bill (S. 3743) for the relief of Joseph M. McAleer; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CUTTING:

A bill (S. 3744) to regulate the value of money in pursuance of article I, section 8, paragraph 5, of the Constitution of the United States; to create a Federal Monetary Authority; to provide an adequate and stable monetary system; to prevent bank failures; to prevent uncontrolled inflation; to prevent depressions; to provide a system to control the price of commodities and the purchasing power of money; to restore normal prosperity and assure its continuance; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. COPELAND:

A bill (S. 3745) to authorize the President to present, in the name of Congress, a gold medal to Gen. Italo Balbo, of Italy; and

A bill (S. 3746) to authorize the President to present, but not in the name of Congress, Distinguished-Flying Medals to certain citizens of foreign countries; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. PATTERSON (by request):

A bill (S. 3747) to amend section 7 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations to provide for the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, and for other purposes", approved July 1, 1902, as amended; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

(Mr. BULKLEY introduced Senate bill 3748, which appears under a separate heading.)

By Mr. NORBECK:

A bill (S. 3749) for the relief of Mary Sky Necklace; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. WHEELER:

A bill (S. 3750) to credit the Fort Belknap Indian tribal funds with certain amounts heretofore expended from tribal funds on irrigation works of the Fort Belknap Reservation, Mont.; and

A bill (S. 3751) to credit the Crow Indian tribal funds with certain amounts heretofore expended from tribal funds on irrigation works of the Crow Reservation, Mont.; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas:

A joint resolution (S.J.Res. 131) providing for membership of the United States in the International Labor Organization; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

(Mr. TYDINGS introduced Senate Joint Resolutions Nos. 132 and 133, which appear under a separate heading.)

By Mr. McKELLAR:

A joint resolution (S.J.Res. 134) to simplify the administration of air-mail routes and contracts; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

AMENDMENT OF BANKING ACT OF 1933

Mr. BULKLEY introduced a bill (S. 3748) to amend certain sections of the Banking Act of 1933 and the Federal Reserve Act, and for other purposes, which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. BULKLEY subsequently, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, to which was referred Senate bill 3748, reported it with an amendment to the title and submitted a report (No. 1260) thereon.

SETTLEMENT OF INTERGOVERNMENTAL OBLIGATIONS AND REDUCTION OF ARMAMENTS

Mr. TYDINGS. I introduce two joint resolutions, which I send to the desk. I do not wish to comment on them, but I should like to have them read. They are not long.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the resolutions will be read.

The joint resolution (S.J.Res. 132) authorizing settlement of intergovernmental obligations with the United States on a lump-sum and final basis was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

[S.J.Res. 132, 73d Cong., 2d sess.]

Joint resolution authorizing settlement of intergovernmental obligations with the United States on a lump-sum and final basis

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized, empowered, and directed to enter into negotiations on behalf of the United States of America with those governments owing to the United States of America obligations contracted during or immediately after the World War for the purpose of accomplishing a settlement of such intergovernmental obligations with the United States on a lump sum and final basis. In such negotiations the President is authorized, empowered, and directed to take into consideration the ability of each nation to pay to the United States the sums owing:

(a) In gold; (b) in goods and service in accordance with existing laws of the United States affecting trade and service; (c) the amount of actual gold or money transferred from the United States to each of said debtor nations; (d) the amount of money borrowed from the United States which was expended in the United States by said debtor nations for war supplies after April 6, 1917; (e) the losses on land and sea and in the air of said debtor nations during the World War and after April 6, 1917, the date upon which the United States entered the World War, as compared with the losses of the United States on land, sea, and in the air, and such other elements as may properly, honestly, and fairly be considered in connection with said debts owing to the United States.

And the President is hereby authorized, empowered, and directed to submit to the Congress of the United States as speedily as such negotiations looking to lump-sum settlements may be effected the result of such negotiations for the final approval or disapproval of the proposed settlement by the Congress of the United States.

The joint resolution (S.J.Res. 133) authorizing the President to effect, in conjunction with the heads of foreign governments, an agreement of disarmament to a peace-time scale was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President is hereby authorized, empowered, and directed to deal directly with the heads of other governments of the world to effect in conjunction with them an agreement of disarmament to a peace-time scale on land, on sea, and in the air; the number of soldiers, planes, and ships to be maintained by any country to be predicated upon population of said country in units of 500,000 population and to proceed in a descending ratio and proportion for said soldiers, planes, and ships as said population exceeds 500,000 and each succeeding multiple thereof.

Mr. TYDINGS. I ask that the joint resolutions lie upon the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

MEASUREMENT OF VESSELS USING THE PANAMA CANAL

The bill (H.R. 7667) to provide for the measurement of vessels using the Panama Canal, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I ask to substitute on the calendar House bill 7667, to provide for the measurement of vessels using the Panama Canal, and for other purposes, for Senate bill 2517, being Order of Business 1344.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GORE. I ask unanimous consent that Senate bill 2517 be indefinitely postpcned.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, that order will be made.

AMENDMENT TO EMERGENCY APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. KEYES submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to House bill 9830, the first deficiency and emergency appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed, as follows:

On page 21, line 25 (in the item for forest-fire cooperation), to strike out the figures "$152,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$225,000."

INDEMNITY BONDS FOR NATIONAL BANKS—AMENDMENT

Mr. NEELY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2915) requiring national banks to obtain indemnity bonds from State-qualified bonding companies, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS—THEOPHILUS STEELE

On motion of Mr. SHEPPARD, it was Ordered, That the papers filed with the bill (S. 107) for the relief of Theophilus Steele, Seventy-third Congress, first session, be withdrawn from files of the Senate, no adverse report having been made thereon.

COUNCIL OF NATIONAL DEFENSE

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas submitted the following resolution (S.Res. 261), which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved, That the manuscript containing a digest of the proceedings during the World War of the Council of National Defense and the Advisory Commission, prepared by Dr. Franklin H. Martin, be printed as a document, in such style and form as may be directed by the Joint Committee on Printing, and that 2,000 additional copies be printed for the use of the Council of National Defense.

INVESTIGATION OF FEDERAL RADIO COMMISSION

Mr. LONG. I send a resolution to the desk and ask that it be read, and, if there is no objection, I also ask for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution (S.Res. 260), as follows:

Whereas, on the floor of the United States Senate, the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON] has declared to the effect that the Federal Radio Commission in dealing with the New Orleans-Shreveport radio controversy, had changed and rechanged, reversed and re-reversed its opinion, findings, and orders by reason of pressure exerted from the White House; and

Whereas, if untrue, the same should be made to immediately appear: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the said charges as made by the said Senator from Iowa be investigated by a special committee composed of five persons, not more than three of whom should be a member of any one political party, to investigate into the subject matter covered by the charges of the said Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON] on the floor of the Senate on Tuesday, June 5, 1934, and to make report thereon at the earliest possible date; and be it further

Resolved, That the said committee shall have the authority to subpena witnesses, compel the production of books and papers, and take testimony under oath, to the end that full and complete disclosure may be made relative to said charges.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. COUZENS. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Michigan objects.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I understand objection was made to the consideration of my resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection was made by the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LONG. I want to ask, Mr. President, as there is objection, that the resolution lie over for a day on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie over under the rule.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, if I may say just a word——

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, regular order.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, if I may inject a word at the moment, I think that the resolution ought to be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce to be considered before action upon it. Similar matters have been considered by the Interstate Commerce Committee, and I think the resolution of the Senator from Louisiana ought to be referred to that committee, as others have been.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I shall have to call for the regular order, because we have a special order set for this morning.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order is resolutions coming over from a preceding day.

Mr. LONG. Very well.

RECIPROCAL-TRADE AGREEMENT WITH COLOMBIA

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution (S.Res. 247) submitted by Mr. HATFIELD on the calendar day, May 22, 1924, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State is requested to transmit immediately to the Senate a copy of the reciprocal trade agreement between the Governments of the United States and Colombia, agreed upon and signed on December 15, 1933, relating to certain import duties, excise taxes, and prohibitions on importation affecting specified products of such countries.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I ask that the resolution go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the resolution will go over.

PAUL JELNA

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3032) for the relief of Paul Jelna, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I move that the Senate insist on its amendment, request a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the conferees on the part of the Senate be appointed by the Chair.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. SHEPPARD, Mr. LOGAN, and Mr. CAREY conferees on the part of the Senate.

CATHERINE WRIGHT

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 620) for the relief of Catherine Wright, which was, on page 1, line 10, after the name "Sullivan" to insert:

Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

Mr. JOHNSON. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

M. THOMAS PETROY

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1430) for the relief of M. Thomas Petroy, which was, on page 1, line 11, after "1925", to insert:

Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

Mr. JOHNSON. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL ADJUSTMENT ACT—ADDRESS BY SENATOR WALSH

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a very able and instructive address by the distinguished senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH], delivered over the radio on June 5, on the subject of the National Industrial Adjustment Act.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

That labor disputes leading to strikes and lockouts are occurring altogether too frequently cannot be denied. That they are likely to continue in increasing number and intensity during coming months is feared.

What, if anything, can the Government do to check this economic waste—these conflicts between employers and employees that invariably disturb the tranquillity of a community, impede industrial recovery, and frequently result in violence and loss of life? There is ample law to punish all acts of violence to person and property whenever they occur. But cannot some law be enacted that will force a peaceful solution of labor differences before a strike is declared, or at least before the punishable acts of violence occur? The answer to this question has not yet been completely found.

And what is the reason? Two words—"freedom" and "democracy." The solutions, invariably proposed, substitute servitude and autocracy.

It is a generally accepted right in all democracies that no law should require any person to render labor or services for another without his consent. This is the inalienable right of freemen. Consent to work includes, of course, consent not to work. A strike is a refusal (by employees collectively) to render labor or services.

SOCIAL JUSTICE

Again I press the question, How can we prevent strikes? The application by employees and their labor leaders and employers and their representatives of the Christian principles of social justice would solve this problem, but this seems impossible under existing conditions of selfishness and greed, of distrust and suspicion, of irreligion and materialism.

But can a statutory enactment compel the execution by employees and employers of the principle of social justice? Certainly not, the law cannot attune men's consciences to the natural laws of justice. The law, however, can point out what acts are in conflict with justice, forbid them, and punish those who commit them. This is exactly what the bill pending before Congress, which we are now to analyze, proposed to do.

When introduced by Senator WAGNER, whose keen interest in social welfare and labor legislation is nationally recognized, the bill was called the "Labor Disputes Act." The bill, after extensive hearings and study by the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, has been reported favorably to the Senate for its action as a substitute bill and is now called because of the necessity of distinguishing this proposed legislation from the Department of Labor and the National Adjustment Act dealing with railroad labor problems, "The National Industrial Adjustment Act." The general philosophy and most of the fundamental purposes of the original Wagner bill have been retained. As stated, this bill defines just what acts in our industrial life are in conflict with the rights that I believe all concede should be enjoyed by employees, by those who work and toil for wages in our industrial life.

You inquire, Why is there need of specifying acts that impair the rights of workers? Are not employers' and employees' rights self-evident? But it must be recognized that a declaration or a statute that merely asserts that the press shall be free, that religion shall be free, is not effective unless and until those acts which deny freedom to the press and deny religious freedom are defined, forbidden, and punished.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY ACT

When last year the Congress passed, at the suggestion of President Roosevelt, as one of the important objectives in his recovery program, the National Industrial Recovery Act, certain rights or, rather privileges (because these rights had been heretofore denied), were granted to the owners and operators in industry and commerce. They were granted the right to organize and engage in certain practices relating to management and operation of their businesses, relating to the prices which they might charge the public, and the elimination of competition—all of which they were estopped from doing in ordinary times.

In that same law, the National Industrial Recovery Act, and in that part of it known as "section 7a", certain rights were declared in favor of employees. These rights, briefly stated, relate to freedom on the part of employees to organize and bargain collectively. A provision was made for the incorporation of these rights in the various codes. The President later established a Labor Board by Executive order which was entrusted with the duty of trying to adjust labor disputes arising out of and as a result of the enactment of the National Industrial Recovery Act. This Board soon discovered that the rights, stated more or less in general terms, were ambiguous and misleading, both to employers and employees, as to their exact rights under the law.

At times different groups of employees representing different labor organizations in the same industry claimed the right to represent the employees in their particular plant in dealing with their employers.

Some employers discriminated in favor of one group against another, or one organization against another.

Some employers assume a hostile attitude against all attempts to organize their employees. These differences and, in some cases, rivalries between employees (and a confused and suspicious state of mind on the part of some employers) have resulted in strikes and in numerous labor disputes we have been experiencing.

THE PRESIDENT'S LABOR BOARD

All the members of the President's Labor Board, including those representing labor and those representing the employers, reached the conclusion that the general declaration in section 7A of the National Industrial Recovery Act tend to make for misunderstandings. They found that absence of a clear and unmistakable definition of the rights of employers and employees, handicapped the Board's activities to promote peace and maintain the rights of the parties to these disputes. The absence of defined power and authority in the Board itself, and of proper enforcement provisions has added to the confusion. Mark you, the Board has no statutory existence, but is merely a temporary organization created by the President. Whatever authority the Board possesses will end next July when the National Industrial Recovery Act expires.

Employers, standing strictly on their legal rights, have questioned and, in some cases, defied the authority of this Board.

With this background we can well understand why practically all the members of this Board, representing employees and employers (most of the employers, however, being of the liberal-minded school) have requested some legislation. The original Wagner labor disputes bill was the consequence of these experiences.

WHAT THE BILL DOES NOT DO

Let us now analyze the bill as revamped and which is now before the Senate and which is entitled "A bill to create a National Industrial Adjustment Board." Let me add, the bill is greatly misunderstood and much misrepresented.

The board created in the bill is not going to be empowered to settle all labor disputes. Indeed, we can perhaps best understand the limited but important provisions of this bill by reciting, first, what aspects of the employers' relationship with employees the bill does not deal with.

Nothing in this bill allows the Federal Government or any agency to fix wages, to regulate rates of pay, to limit hours of work, or to effect or govern any working condition in any establishment or place of employment.

Nothing in this bill requires any employee to join any form of labor organization.

Nothing in this bill requires the employees in any industry to organize.

Nothing in this bill requires an employer to compel his employees to organize. All employees are free to choose to organize or not to organize, to join any or whatever labor organization or union they choose. If employees choose to organize a shop committee or a union for a particular plant or company, they may do so. If employees choose to form a union affiliated with any national or international organization, they may do so. There is nothing in this bill that compels any employer to make any agreement about wages, hours of employment, or working conditions with his employees.

WHAT THE BILL DOES

The bill does provide the means and manner in which employees may approach their employers to discuss grievances and permit the board to ascertain and certify the persons or organization favored by a majority of the employees to represent them in collective bargaining, when the question of that representation is in doubt or dispute. Beyond this the bill does not go.

A crude illustration is this: The bill indicates the method and manner in which employees may organize, the method and manner of selecting their representatives or spokesmen, and leads them to the office door of their employer with the legal authority to negotiate for their fellow employees. The bill does not go beyond the office door. It leaves the discussion between the employer and the employee, and the agreements which they may or may not make, voluntary and with that sacredness and solemnity to a voluntary agreement with which both parties to an agreement should be enshrouded.

UNFAIR PRACTICES LISTED

Having, I hope, removed some of the misconceptions of the bill, let me state in more detail just what the bill does. It lists certain practices in which some employers (I regret to say) are prone to indulge, and which are specifically declared to be unfair. These unfair labor practices are as follows:

The first unfair labor practices is for an employer to interfere or coerce the exercise by employees of certain rights which are admitted everywhere to be the basis of industrial no less than political democracy, namely the right to be free to form or join organizations, to designate representatives, and to engage in concerted activities for their mutual welfare. Up to the present time I have never met any requtable employer or anyone else who is willing to deny publicly this right to employees.

As defined in the original Wagner bill, the employer was to be restrained from influencing, as well as interfering or coercing, his employees with respect to forming or joining a labor organization. Our Senate committee, in redrafting the bill, eliminates the word "influencing", for we believed that both employees and employers ought to enjoy the right of peaceful persuasion with respect to joining or not joining a labor organization. This unfair practice, therefore, does restrain an employer from interfering or coercing in this matter.

The second unfair labor practice is directed against the employees. It is the only one relating to restriction on employees. It prevents employees from interfering or coercing employers in the exercise of the latter's right to join or to form organizations and to designate representatives of their own choosing for the purpose of collective bargaining. Employers are inclined to make light of this restraint upon employees, for they assert that this is not of any benefit to them and there is no necessity of such inhibition. Evidence before our committee was, however, that on occasions labor organizations have attempted to coerce employers from joining trade organizations that were in disfavor with labor organizations.

The third unfair labor practice that is prohibited prevents an employer from interfering with or dominating the administration of any labor organization or contributing financial support to it. All employers unhesitatingly approved of this clause if the words "or contribute financial support to it" were eliminated. The reason that employers urge the elimination of these words is because it has been and is the practice of employers to render financial assistance to so-called "company union" or the "individual shop union" that is organized independently of the national trade unions.

The committee considered this question with much care. We found that the claim made by the leaders of the national labor organizations was to the effect that many company unions, because of the financial contributions by empoyers, were subsidized organizations; that in many instances the employer dictated the text of the constitution and bylaws to these organizations, paid the expense of holding meetings and elections of the organizations, extended special benefits that attracted their employees to membership in the company union and sometimes made financial contributions to one or several rival labor organizations. We reached the conclusion that financial support in some instances was an abuse and did deny that freedom and independence which the employees in organizing for their mutual welfare should enjoy. We reached the conclusion that we ought not to prevent or deny the right of employees, if they chose to do so, to organize a company union, but we believed that it was important that they should not be subsidized organizations.

The result was that we added a provision which, while forbidding general financial support to any organization, trade union, or company organization, permitted the employer to compensate the representatives of his employees who conferred together, or with the management, during working hours with reference to grievances, and not only permitted the employees to use working hours for this purpose, but also permitted them to do so without loss of time; that is, by paying him what he would earn during those hours at his regular work. We subjected this privilege by prescribing rules and regulations with respect to it tending to prevent domination. In a word, this third unfair labor practice seeks to remove from the industrial scene unfair pressure by the employer upon any labor organization that his workers may choose, yet leaves fair discussion unhampered.

It should be stated at this point that the Railway Labor Act now pending before the Senate and which deals with the labor problems of employees in the railway service contains a similar provision restricting financial support by the employers. National trade unions do not seek financial support from employers. They rely upon the dues paid by their own members to maintain their organizations and cover the expenses of administration, and this is one of their reasons for opposing financial aid from employers.

The fourth unfair labor practice is a corollary of the first unfair labor practice. The employer is forbidden to discharge or refuse to employ or promote merely because the employee joins a labor organization. In brief, it makes it illegal for an employer to discriminate against employees by encouraging or by discouraging an employee from membership in any labor organization. We must not misunderstand this fourth unfair labor practice. An employer is not prevented from discharging any employee who lacks skill or ability, nor is he required to hire any incompetent man. The employer is merely prevented from using his right of nonemploying or discharging, or promoting or discriminating against an employee merely because he joins an organization or refuses to join a labor organization. Neither does the fourth unfair labor practice prevent an employer, if he chooses to do so, from negotiating a voluntary agreement with the representatives of his employees which conditions employment on membership in any particular labor organization, if his employees or their representatives desire it, and he consents.

ADMINISTRATION AND ENFORCEMENT

Having considered the unfair labor practices that are forbidden, the next question that naturally arises is how are these provisions of law to be administered and what is the procedure of enforcement where the claim is made that unfair labor practices exist. For this purpose the board creates the National Industrial Adjustment Board, consisting of 3 persons representing the general public and 1 person representing employers and 1 person representing employees. There term of office is 5 years. The salary $10,000.

This board is given the power to prevent any unfair labor practices and to take proper steps to enforce its findings. Complaints may be made to the board, hearings held, and a decision rendered. But it is assumed these alleged unfair practices may often be peacefully adjudicated, for the board is empowered to take jurisdiction over alleged unfair labor practices only when these practices have led or threatened to lead to a labor dispute that might affect commerce or obstruct the free flow of commerce. The decision of the board may be appealed by any aggrieved party and reviewed by the circuit court of appeals in the district where the unfair practice is continuing.

These constitute the major provisions of the revised bill.

ELECTION OF EMPLOYEES' REPRESENTATIVES

One other important provision is that where a dispute takes place among employees as to who are the representatives to negotiate collective bargaining with their employer the board is authorized to take a secret ballot or use other suitable methods of determining what kind of an organization the majority of the employees desire and just who the majority of the employees desire to choose as their representatives.

There is nothing in this provision, or any other provision of the act, which prohibits an employer from discussing grievances with any employee or groups of employees at any time, irrespective of the duly chosen representatives of the majority. Thus an employer before agreeing or in agreeing to any settlement of grievances presented by the duly chosen representatives of a majority of his employees may receive the views of those representatives of the minority.

ARBITRATION FOR DISPUTES

Another aspect of the bill which we need not specially consider is that provision is made for parties to a dispute invoking the board to arbitrate voluntarily any and all differences which may arise in reference to labor disputes outside the scope of these defined unfair practices. It is to be noted that this is a provision that is entirely voluntary.

COERCION BY EMPLOYEES

Many employers have urged that the bill should contain a provision to the effect that it constituted an unfair labor practice for an employee or a group of employees to interfere or coerce an employee to join any particular labor organization.

They have indicated that the bill would be acceptable to them if such a provision was included in the bill, because they stated it would put both employees and employers in a like status so far as interference or coercion by employee or employer with respect to joining or refraining from joining a labor organization is concerned.

The committee carefully considered this proposal and reached the conclusion that such an adoption would be unwise and that this principle was founded upon a misconception of the bill.

An employee, like an employer, of course, has the right to discuss the merits of any organization. Indeed, Congress could not constitutionally pass a law abridging the freedom of speech.

On the other hand, an employee, like an employer, cannot lawfully use threats of physical violence, or inflict physical damage upon persons or tangible property. If he does so, the civil and in many cases the criminal laws of the several States could be invoked, and he could be fined or sent to jail.

The bill now under consideration does not enter into these realms of free speech or physical violence. It does not establish a police court. It does not deal with physical coercion, but with economic coercion. And economic coercion is a weapon that could be exercised by the man who hires and discharges, and not by a fellow employee. Only an employer has it within his power to use economic pressure.

The use of the clause suggested has another danger that is not immediately apparent, but against which it is necessary to guard. The Supreme Court of the United States in the Hitchman case and State courts in other cases have construed the word "coercion" to embrace strikes and picketing. Strikes and picketing are in many cases unjustifiable and unwise, but the purpose of this bill is not to outlaw all strikes and all pickets. Yet if Congress were to make it an unfair practice for an employee to coerce his fellow employees to join or to refrain from joining an organization, some court, relying on earlier decisions, and not adequately informed of the purpose of this bill, might conclude that strikes and pickets had been made unlawful.

CONCLUSION

I hope I have removed some of the prevailing misgivings and misrepresentations concerning this bill and retained respect for the purposes of this legislation. The bill is intended to provide a medium and method of peaceful settlement of disputes arising over employees' rights to organize and to assure employees protection against interference and coercion by their employers.

This is not intended to be a reflection upon the employers of this country. For most of them no such legislation is needed. For most people no statute is needed to prevent larceny; but because there is a statute forbidding larceny, there is no intention to reflect upon the honesty and law-abiding spirit of our people. This bill is intended to restrain that class of employers who have failed to realize the thing we call "social justice" as between employer and employee.

If employers accept the law in a friendly and cooperative way, and if employees realize that these rights are granted not for the purpose of arousing hostilities or misunderstandings between them and their employees but for the purpose of paving the way for cooperation and mutual progress, it should instill and promote better relations between all classes and groups in industry.

THE CALENDAR

The VICE PRESIDENT. Morning business is closed. Under the unanimous-consent agreement, the calendar is in order. The clerk will call the calendar, beginning, in pursuance of the agreement made earlier in the day, with Order of Business No. 1047.

BLACKFEET TRIBE OF INDIANS, MONTANA

The bill (S. 3463) to authorize the addition of certain names to the final rolls of the Blackfeet Tribe of Indians in the State of Montana was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to place on the final roll of the Blackfeet Indians, approved January 20, 1920, under the act of June 30, 1919 (41 Stat.L. 16), the names of the following persons, entitled to enrollment under the act but who were omitted from the roll through inadvertence: Dick Aloysius Afterbuffalo, Joseph Redfox, Richard Rideatthedoor, Jr., and Mary Yellowowl.

And the said Secretary is also authorized to place on the supplemental roll of the Blackfeet Tribe approved on September 9, 1932, under the act of March 3, 1931 (46 Stat.L. 1495), the names of the following persons omitted from said roll in like manner: Elizabeth M. Bouchie, Thomas Dogtakinggun, Jr., Ernest Dubray, Floyd Andrew Gervais, Dolores Marie Guardipee, Florence Hungry, Georgia Kipp, Charles Kipp, Freda Kipp, James Magee, Archie MacDonald, Vivian MacDonald, Diana Delores Morgan, Loretta Ann Smith, James Johnson Valle, Jr., Fannie Weaselhead, Thomas Weaselhead, Jr., Calvin Woodward, Forrest Richardson Morgan, Virginia Mae Jackson, Ronald Eugene Buchanan, and Audry Loraine Anderson.

USE OF LIQUOR AS MEDICINE FOR INDIAN PATIENTS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2892) to amend existing laws prohibiting the introduction of intoxicating liquors within the Indian country to permit its use as a medicine by practicing physicians for patients of Indian blood, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with an amendment, on page 1, line 10, after the word "patients", to insert "Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed as waiving or eliminating the necessity for druggists, physicians, hospitals, or others located within Indian country and filling such prescriptions, to comply with existing laws and requirements of obtaining permits for the introduction, possession, and so forth, of intoxicating liquors within the Indian country, including Indian reservations and other restricted Indian areas", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That any and all acts heretofore passed prohibiting the introduction of intoxicating liquors within the Indian country, be, and the same hereby are, amended so as to authorize and permit any practicing physician to prescribe such liquors as a medicine for patients of Indian blood in cases of emergency or sickness, if in the judgment of such attending physician its use is essential or necessary for the proper treatment of such patients: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed as waiving or eliminating the necessity for druggists, physicians, hospitals, or others located within Indian country and filling such prescriptions, to comply with existing laws and requirements of obtaining permits for the introduction, possession, and so forth, of intoxicating liquors within the Indian country, including Indian reservations and other restricted Indian areas.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

KIOWA, COMANCHE, AND APACHE INDIANS OF OKLAHOMA

The bill (S. 74) to authorize payment of expenses of formulating claims of the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache Indians of Oklahoma against the United States, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of the Kiowa Agency Hospital 4 percent fund, not to exceed the sum of $10,000, to pay the expenses of the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache tribal council in the formulation of any claims of said tribes against the United States. Such expenses shall include traveling and other expenses of members of the tribal council, or committees thereof, including visits to Washington, D.C., when duly authorized or approved by the Secretary of the Interior; costs of procuring the attendance of witnesses, and the expenses of attorneys employed under contract in accordance with existing law. All claims for expenses hereunder shall be presented and paid in conformity with existing regulations.

ENROLLMENT IN OMAHA TRIBE OF INDIANS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2557) to investigate the claims of and to enroll certain persons, if entitled, with the Omaha Tribe of Indians, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with an amendment, on page 3, line 6, after the word "enrolled", to insert "Provided, however, That enrollment of the persons named in this act shall not be permitted to disturb or affect the Omaha tribal land, nor the proceeds of the sale of the Omaha tribal land, nor shall such persons share in the distribution of any money now in the United States Treasury to the credit of such Omaha Tribe of Indians in Nebraska", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to investigate the claims of Antoine Barada,

Thomas Barada, Mitchell Barada, Warren Barada, Maggie E. Rockwell, Mary Peters Sailors, William Barada, Clestine Barada Kuhn, Margaret Kuhn, George F. Kuhn, Josephine Kuhn, N. Edward Kuhn, Mary Kuhn, Stella Kuhn James, Barbara Kuhn James, Ethel Kuhn Ruthledge, Fulton Peters, Frank A. Peters, Jacob Peters, Frank E. Peters, Ernest C. Peters, Ruth Barada Sandage, Josephine Peters Mitchell, Pine Barada Beck, John T. Barada, Blade Barada, Etta Mitchell Murphy, Nellie Barada Mott, Mary Barada Martin, Eva Barada Phillips, Ada Barber, Alice Barada, William Barada, Walter V. Peters, Jobe Barada, Phil Frost, Charles Frost, Frank Frost, Leonard Frost, Mary Frost, Artemisia Sloan Frost, Sarah McCreary, Benjamin Peters, Emiel Peters, Edgar Sailors, Garlie Sailors, Frank Sailors, Byron Sailors, Edward Tupan, Micheal Barada, Bell Dupue, Richard M. Barada, Joseph Barada, Rena Rockwell Wilkins, Walter Rockwell, and Euphrasia Peters (nee Barada), and their heirs, to enrollment and membership in the Omaha Tribe of Indians, and if such investigation shows the persons named and their heirs, or any of them, to possess Omaha Indian blood from a common Omaha Indian ancestor, the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to enroll the persons named and their heirs, or so many of them as possess Omaha Indian blood from a common Omaha Indian ancestor, with the Omaha Tribe of Indians, and to accord to such persons so enrolled all the rights and privileges of any enrolled member of the Omaha Tribe of Indians; and if such investigation should disclose that the persons named and their heirs, or any of them, are of a common Omaha Indian ancestor and that they and their heirs have been deprived of their rights as Omaha Indians because of their not being enrolled as Omaha Indians, that an appropriation be made, and the same is hereby authorized to be made, for the purpose of paying for the lands and payments made to the Omaha Tribe of which they have been deprived while not being enrolled: Provided, however, That enrollment of the persons named in this act shall not be permitted to disturb or affect the Omaha tribal land, nor the proceeds of the sale of the Omaha tribal land, nor shall such persons share in the distribution of any money now in the United States Treasury to the credit of such Omaha Tribe of Indians in Nebraska.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES W. CARMICHAEL

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2896) for the relief of James W. Carmichael, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment on page 1, line 7, after the name "Carmichael", to insert "deceased", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the pension laws or any laws conferring rights, privileges, or benefits upon the widows, children, and dependent relatives of persons honorably discharged from the United States Army James W. Carmichael, deceased, shall be held and considered to have served without desertion and to have been honorably discharged on October 9, 1864, as a private, Company C, First Regiment Florida Volunteer Cavalry: Provided, That no pension, bounty, back pay, or allowance shall be held to have accrued by reason of this act prior to its passage.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read "A bill for the relief of James W. Carmichael, deceased."

PRACTICE OF HEALING ART IN THE DISTRICT

The bill (S. 3479) to amend the act entitled "An act to regulate the practice of the healing art to protect the public health in the District of Columbia", approved February 27, 1929, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That sections 4 and 46 of the act to regulate the practice of the healing art to protect the public health in the District of Columbia, approved February 27, 1929, be, and the same are hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4. There is hereby created a commission on licensure to practice the healing art in the District of Columbia, consisting of the president of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, the United States Commissioner of Education, the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia, the superintendent of public schools of the District of Columbia, and the health officer of the District of Columbia, each ex officio. The commission shall elect a president and a vice president. The health officer shall be the secretary and treasurer of the commission. The commission shall make and from to time may alter such rules as it deems necessary for the conduct of its business, and for the execution and enforcement of the provisions of this act. It shall adopt a common seal, and from time to time alter the same as to it seems proper. The courts shall take judicial notice of such seal.

"SEC. 46. It shall be the duty of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia and of the major and superintendent of police of said District to enforce the provisions of this act. Criminal prosecution, except for perjury, and proceedings looking toward the suspension or revocation of licenses or registration and toward the issue of injunctions, under the provisions of this act, shall be conducted by the corporation counsel for the District of Columbia."

WINIFRED MEAGHER

The bill (S. 568) for the relief of Winifred Meagher was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will withhold his objection for a moment.

Mr. KING. Very well.

Mr. COPELAND. When the bill was introduced it provided for authorization of payment for the injury received, but the committee, after full hearing, thought the wise thing to do was to submit it to the court. The claimant was damaged in such a way that unquestionably it was the fault of the Government, but the committee did not see fit to recommend payment of the claim without a hearing before the court.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have hastily looked over the report. My recollection is that contention is made that if there is any liability it is on the part of the State and not the Federal Government.

Mr. COPELAND. No; the property is the property of the Federal Government. It was being used from time to time by the State commission, but it was the property of the Federal Government, and the obligation is apparently upon the Federal Government to keep the property in safe repair. The proposal of the committee is to submit it to the court in order that the court may determine whether there is liability.

Mr. KING. I find the report of the then Secretary of War, Mr. Hurley, reads as follows:

From the time the pillar was broken until the accident occurred, the camp was constantly occupied by and was in charge and under control of National Guards not in Federal service. Accordingly the War Department expresses the opinion that whatever liability, legal or moral, exists in this case is a State and not a Federal matter.

Mr. COPELAND. The Senator is no doubt familiar with the way these Federal properties are used. When one branch of the National Guard leaves, the property goes back to the hands of the Federal Government, which is responsible during the time of the training camps for the preservation of the property. The claimant's husband in this case, who happened to be a doctor and a friend of mine, was there on a day set apart for visitors. Visitors were invited onto the property, and certainly in this case it is only fair that the matter should be be referred to the court for consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK in the chair). Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

Be it enacted, etc., That jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the United States Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of Winifred Meagher for damages on account of the death of her husband, Dr. John F. W. Meagher, caused by and as a result of injuries sustained while a visitor at the military camp at Tobyhanna, Pa., on August 23, 1931: Provided, That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court: Provided further, That said suit shall be brought and commenced within 6 months of the date of the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 63) for the relief of Charles E. Wilson was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Over.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, may I say to the Senator from Tennessee that this man was discharged without honor on account of having eye trouble. The committee, after full investigation, found that he had that trouble before he was accepted for enlistment, and we therefore felt it was unjust to him to discharge him on that account or substantially on that account.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Department in its report said he was in the service for only a very short time and that he was discharged without honor. Under those circumstances it would make him eligible for a pension.

Mr. SHEPPARD. No; the bill does not make him eligible for a pension. It merely gives him an honorable discharge. It was not his fault that he was discharged.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On objection, the bill will go over.

The bill (S. 1573) to amend the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia in relation to providing assistance against old-age want was announced as next in order.

Mr. GORE. Let the bill go over.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will not the Senator from Oklahoma withhold his objection?

Mr. GORE. No; not at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahome declines to withhold his objection, and the bill will go over.

The bill (S. 2685) to provide for the conservation and settlement of estates of absentees and absconders in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] will tell us what the bill is.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, let the bill be passed over for the present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

AMERICAN LEGION PROPERTY, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The bill (S. 3483) to exempt from taxation certain property of the American Legion in the District of Columbia, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the property situated in square no. 185 in the city of Washington, D.C., described as lots 32 and 33, owned, occupied, and used by the American Legion, is hereby exempt from all taxation so long as the same is so owned, occupied, and used, subject to the provisions of section 8 of the act of March 3, 1877, as amended and supplemented (D.C. Code, title 20, sec. 712), providing for exemption of church and school property.

Mr. KING subsequently said: Mr. President, a moment ago the Senate passed the bill (S. 3483) to exempt from taxation certain property of the American Legion in the District of Columbia. The House has passed a bill textually the same being Calendar No. 1297, the bill (H.R. 9400) to exempt from taxation certain property of the American Legion in the District of Columbia. I ask that the House bill be substituted for the Senate bill and put upon its passage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the vote by which the Senate bill was passed will be reconsidered. Is there objection to the consideration of the House bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H.R. 9400) to exempt from taxation certain property of the American Legion in the District of Columbia was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 3483 will be indefinitely postponed.

AMENDMENT OF DISTRICT ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL ACT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 8525) to amend the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act to permit the issuance of retailers' licenses of classes A and B in residential districts, which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia, with an amendment, on page 1, line 6, after the word "classes", to strike out "A, B", and insert "B", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the first paragraph of section 15 of the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 15. No retailer's licenses except of classes B or E shall be issued for any business conducted in a residential-use district as defined in the zoning regulations and shown in the official atlases of the Zoning Commission, except for a restaurant or tavern conducted in a hotel, apartment house, or club, and then only when the entrance to such restaurant or tavern is entirely inside of the hotel, apartment house, or club, and no sign or display is visible from the outside of the building."

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to amend the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act to permit the issuance of retailers' licenses of class B in residential districts."

COLUMBUS UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON, D.C.

The bill (S. 3471) supplementary to and amendatory of the incorporation of Columbus University of Washington, D.C., organized under and by virtue of a certificate of incorporation pursuant to the incorporation laws of the District of Columbia as provided in subchapter 1 of chapter 18 of the Code of Laws of the District of Columbia was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the House has passed a bill textually the same, being Calendar No. 1296, House bill 9180. I ask that the House bill may be substituted for the Senate bill and be considered at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill (H.R. 9180) relating to the incorporation of Columbus University of Washington, D.C., organized under and by virtue of a certificate of incorporation pursuant to the incorporation laws of the District of Columbia as provided in subchapter 1 of chapter 18 of the Code of Laws of the District of Columbia was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the incorporation of the Columbus University of Washington, D.C., under chapter 18 of the Code of Laws of the District of Columbia, be, and the same is hereby, approved and confirmed, except as herein specifically altered.

SEC. 2. The number of trustees for the management of said corporation shall be not more than 14 and not less than 12 and at least 2 of whom shall be members of each existing council of the Knights of Columbus, each of whom shall be a member of the District of Columbia branch of the fraternal organization known and designated as the "Knights of Columbus"; that J. Fred Brady, John E. Burns, W. Francis Delaney, John P. Dunn, William G. Feely, G. E. Herring, George F. Howell, Harold Francis Jones, William E. Leahy, James P. McKeon, Walter I. Plant, T. J. Quirk, and M. J. Willcoxon shall constitute the original board of trustees under this act; that the board of trustees shall elect, from among themselves, 1 member to be president, 1 member to be vice president, 1 member to be treasurer, and 1 member to be secretary of said corporation; that the board of trustees shall elect, from among themselves, 1 member to be chairman, 1 member to be vice chairman, and 1 member to be secretary of the board of trustees; that at the first meeting of the board subsequent to the passage of this act the trustees shall be divided into three classes, the members of the first class to serve for a period of 3 years, the members of the second class to serve for a period of 4 years, and the members of the third class, which class shall include the president, vice president, treasurer, and secretary of the corporation, to serve for a period of 5 years; that the said trustees shall serve for the periods mentioned and/or until their successors are designated, the power and designation being in the board of trustees; that the number of professorships which may be established by said corporation shall be left to the discretion of the board of trustees, who shall have the power to establish ordinances and bylaws for the conduct of the business of the corporation or to alter, repeal, and amend the same, and also power to frame laws and regulations to govern the faculty and students in all departments thereof and to designate such professors and lecturers as they shall deem necessary, and with such salaries and duties as the said board of trustees shall deem proper: Provided, however, That no member of the board of trustees, except the president, shall serve in a teaching capacity in the university.

SEC. 3. The said corporation shall adopt a common seal, under and by which all deeds, diplomas, and acts of the said university or corporation shall pass and be authenticated, and the same seal at their pleasure to break and alter, or to devise a new one.

SEC. 4. Persons of every religious denomination shall be eligible to membership on the faculty and that no person shall be refused admittance to the university as a pupil or denied any of the privileges, immunities, or advantages thereof for or on account of his or her sentiments in matters of religion.

SEC. 5. The funds, moneys, and properties of the corporation shall be held in the name of Columbus University and that the funds or the income of the corporation, or any part thereof, shall be used for no purpose or object other than to promote and advance the best interests of Columbus University.

SEC. 6. No institution of learning hereafter incorporated in the District of Columbia shall use in or as its title, in whole or in part, the words "Columbus University."

SEC. 7. Nothing in this act contained shall be so construed as to prevent Congress from altering, amending, or repealing the same.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 3471, Calendar No. 1059, will be indefinitely postponed.

PROPERTY OF DAUGHTERS OF UNION VETERANS, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The bill (S. 3459) to exempt from taxation certain property of the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War in the District of Columbia, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the property situated in square no. 137 in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, described as lot 35, occupied and used by the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, is hereby exempt from all taxation so long as the same is so occupied and used, subject to the provisions of section 8 of the act of March 3, 1877, as amended and supplemented (D.C. Code, title 20, sec. 712), providing for exemptions of church and school property.

ADMISSION OF CERTAIN CHILDREN TO DISTRICT PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The bill (S. 3261) to permit the stepchildren of certain officers and employees of the United States to be admitted to the public schools of the District of Columbia without payment of tuition, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the ninth paragraph following the heading "furniture" under the caption "public schools" in section 1 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, and for other purposes", approved February 25, 1929, is amended to read as follows:

"The children and stepchildren of officers and men of the United States Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, and children and stepchildren of other employees of the United States stationed outside the District of Columbia shall be admitted to the public schools without payment of tuition."

JENNIE BRUCE GALLAHAN

The bill (S. 741) for the relief of Jennie Bruce Gallahan was announced as next in order.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Calendar No. 1295, being House bill 2035, for the relief of Jennie Bruce Callahan, be substituted for the Senate bill and considered at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill (H.R. 2035) for the relief of Jennie Bruce Gallahan was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 741 will be indefinitely postponed.

JOHN W. BECK

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1146) for the relief of John W. Beck, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to summon John W. Beck, a first lieutenant, United States Army, retired, before a retiring board, to inquire whether at the time of his retirement under section 24b, National Defense Act, as amended, he was incapacitated for active service, and whether such incapacity was a result of an incident of service, and if, as a result of such inquiry, it is found that he was so incapacitated, the President is authorized to nominate and appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, the said John W. Beck a first lieutenant, Regular Army, and place him immediately thereafter upon the retired list of the Army, with the same privileges and retired pay as are now or may hereafter be provided by law or regulation for officers of the Regular Army: Provided, That the said John W. Beck shall not be entitled to any back pay or allowances by the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EDWARD T. COSTELLO

The bill (S. 1177) for the relief of Edward T. Costello was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers Edward T. Costello, who was a member of Company M, Twenty-ninth Regiment United States Infantry, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States as a member of that organization on the 3d day of August 1914: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

WILLIAM H. CONNORS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 418) for the relief of William H. Connors, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, on page 1, line 5, after the word "Connors", to insert "alias John H. Connors, alias Michael W. H. Connors", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers William H. Connors, alias John H. Connors, alias Michael W. H. Connors, who was a member of Battery C, Sixth Regiment United States Field Artillery, Fort Bliss, Tex., shall hereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States as a private of that organization on the 14th day of October 1914: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of William H. Connors, alias John H. Connors, alias Michael W. H. Connors."

DECLARATORY JUDGMENTS

The bill (S. 588) to amend the Judicial Code by adding a new section to be numbered 274D was announced as next in order.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, this appears to be a very important bill. I should like to call upon the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] to explain the purpose in giving the United States courts jurisdiction—

Upon petition, declaration, complaint, or other appropriate pleadings, * * * to declare rights and other legal relations on request of any interested party for such declaration, whether or not further relief is or could be prayed, and such declaration shall have the force of a final judgment or decree and be reviewable as such.

That and other provisions of the bill are quite far-reaching. It provides for declaratory judgments.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, much could be said in behalf of this measure but under the rule I can only submit a few observations. The House passed a measure of this character upon three or four different occasions and the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate has reported this measure favorably. The bill is known as the "declaratory judgments statute."

Since 1919, 34 States and Territories have enacted the declaratory judgment statute. The movement in favor of this statute has been particularly active since the adoption in 1921 by the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws of the Uniform Declaratory Judgments Act. More than 1,200 cases have arisen under these statutes, including 200 each reported in New York and Pennsylvania covering almost every department of human activity. The fact is that the declaratory judgment in a limited form has been known to the common law or under statute for many years. The equitable actions for the removal of clouds from title, the action by a person in possession for the statutory period, against a person claiming under a record title to have the latter's title declared void, actions impressing a trust on the legal title, actions to declare written instruments null, and to construe wills, statutes authorizing judgments proving the tenor of lost instruments or proving the validity, when contested, of instruments to be recorded, and other illustrations that will readily occur to the lawyer, are all cases in which declaratory judgments are rendered under other names. In principle, therefore, there is nothing novel to the procedure.

The declaratory judgment has existed in Scotland for over 400 years and in England since 1852. It is in force in Canada and in practically all the British Dominions and colonies as well as in several of the countries in Latin America and in Germany, Austria, and other continental countries.

Hearings were had before the Committee on the Judiciary a number of years ago, before which Mr. Henry W. Taft, chairman of the committee on jurisprudence and law reform of the American Bar Association, as well as other eminent lawyers, appeared in support of the bill. Prof. Edwin M. Borchard, of the Yale Law School, has been an earnest advocate of this measure for some time. My recollection is that there were submitted to the subcommittee of which I was chairman letters from Chief Justice Cardozo, now of the Supreme Court of the United States, and Justice Von Moschzisker, of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and Judge Thomas W. Swan, of the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit, all of whom approved the declaratory judgment procedure as a result of their practical experience.

Repeating, the procedure under this measure enables parties in dispute over their rights over a contract, deed, lease, will, or any other written instrument to sue for a declaration of rights, without breach of the contract, and so forth, citing as defendants those who oppose their claims of right.

Judge MONTAGUE, of Virginia, a lawyer of ability, now a Representative in the House from Virginia, has given much consideration to this matter; and under his guidance the House, as I stated, acted favorably upon this measure upon several occasions.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I do not desire to object to the consideration of the bill. It is a very important measure, and quite radically changes the procedure in the Federal courts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments, on page 1, line 7, after the word "which", to insert "at any time"; on page 2, line 16, after the word "or", to strike out "not" and insert "not" with a period; and to strike out lines 17 to 20, inclusive, in the following words:

"(4) An action to obtain a declaratory judgment under this section shall, in matters of procedure, follow the forms and practice prescribed in the rules now prevailing for other actions in the courts of the United States."

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Judicial Code approved March 3, 1911, is hereby amended by adding after section 274C thereof a new section to be numbered 274D, as follows:

"SEC. 274D. (1) In cases of actual controversy in which at any time the courts of the United States have jurisdiction, the said courts, upon petition, declaration, complaint, or other appropriate pleadings, shall have power to declare rights and other legal relations on request of any interested party for such declaration, whether or not further relief is or could be prayed, and such declaration shall have the force of a final judgment or decree and be reviewable as such.

"(2) Further relief based on a declaratory judgment or decree may be granted whenever necessary or proper. The application shall be by petition to a court having jurisdiction to grant the relief. If the application be deemed sufficient, the court shall, on reasonable notice, require any adverse party, whose rights have been adjudicated by the declaration, to show cause why further relief should not be granted forthwith.

"(3) When a declaration of right or the granting of further relief based thereon shall involve the determination of issues of fact triable by a jury, such issues may be submitted to a jury in the form of interrogatories, with proper instructions by the court, whether a general verdict be required or not."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REFUNDMENT OF COUNTERVAILING DUTIES UPON LOGS

The bill (S. 339) for the refundment of certain countervailing customs duties collected upon logs imported from British Columbia was announced as next in order.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington [Mr. DILL], who introduced the bill, explain it?

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, this is a bill the passage of which is made necessary in order that those who would have received the same treatment that is now being received on shipments of logs had the decision of the Privy Council of Canada been made earlier, may have such treatment.

Shipments preceding the period referred to in the bill were ruled against, because a certain interpretation was placed on the Canadian law. In 1929 the supreme court of the Province held a different view, and made a different interpretation of the law. Since that time no charges have been made on these logs, but those who had shipped in their logs previously filed a protest and made claims, and have no way of getting a refund under the law which has since been interpreted in a manner that would have prevented the original charge.

Mr. FESS. How much is involved?

Mr. DILL. I am not sure of the exact amount. Can the Senator from Kentucky, who reported the bill, tell me?

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, the amount involved is not stated. The facts as detailed by the Senator from Washington are substantially correct.

These claimants paid a certain rate of duty on logs that were imported from Canada. Later the Supreme Court said that another rate should have been imposed. This bill does not allow anything except that they may file their claims for approval with the department having charge of the matter, probably the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Mr. FESS. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That claims for the refunding of any customs duties erroneously or illegally assessed or collected upon fir, spruce, cedar, or western hemlock, under the provisions of paragraph 401 of the Tariff Act of 1922, approved September 21, 1922 (42 Stat.L. 858, 889), because of the existence of the so-called "timber tax" embodied in subdivision 2 of section 58 of the land and forest act of the Province of British Columbia, may be presented to the Commissioner of Customs not later than 6 months after the passage of this act; and the Commissioner of Customs is hereby authorized and directed to receive, consider, and determine in accordance with law but without regard to any statute requiring protest, appeal, and the like, such claims as may have been presented heretofore by way of protest to the collectors of customs and not allowed, and such claims as may hereafter be presented within the period above named, where and when and only when it be found and determined that such duties were collected upon the erroneous interpretation of law passed upon and condemned by the United States Customs Court, first division, in decisions rendered in the cases of George S. Bush & Co., INC., and others against United States, and Siemons Lumber Co. against United States, on March 12, 1931, and reported in Fifty-ninth Treasury Decisions, at page 590: Provided, That no interest shall be allowed on any of these claims.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to such claimants as have presented or shall hereafter so present their claims, any amounts allowed in the determination of any claims so defined and which shall have been presented in accordance with this act.

ARTHUR W. ADAMS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2454) for the relief of Arthur W. Adams, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment to insert at the end of the bill a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the pension laws and laws conferring rights upon honorably discharged soldiers, their widows, and dependent relatives Arthur W. Adams shall hereafter be held and considered to have been in the military service of the United States as a private in Company F, One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Regiment United States Infantry, from June 4, 1917, and to have been honorably discharged May 22, 1919: Provided, That no back pay, compensation, benefit, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

APPREHENSION OF CRIMINALS

Mr. KING. Mr. President, what disposition was made of Order of Business 1070, House bill 9370, to authorize an appropriation of money to facilitate the apprehension of certain persons charged with crime?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that that bill was passed heretofore.

KLAMATH, MODOC, AND SNAKE INDIANS, OREGON

The bill (S. 3291) providing for a reimbursable loan to the Klamath and Modoc Tribe of Indians and the Yahooskin Band of Snake Indians, State of Oregon, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] to give us an explanation of that bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, is it not a fact that the Department reports against the bill?

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, the Interior Department reported favorably upon the bill.

Mr. COUZENS. The memorandum we have here says that the Department asked to have it indefinitely postponed.

Mr. STEIWER. No; that was the Bureau of the Budget. The Interior Department reported favorably upon it. The report of the committee sets out the favorable report signed by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. McKELLAR. He says, at the end of his letter:

The Director of the Bureau of the Budget has advised that this proposed legislation would not be in accord with the financial program of the President.

(Signed) HAROLD L. ICKES,
Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. STEIWER. That is true, Mr. President, and the committee considered that; but in view of the circumstances of the case, the committee thought the bill ought to be favorably reported.

Mr. McKELLAR. May I read further from what the Secretary says?

While some lasting benefits would undoubtedly be gained by some Indians who would share in this distribution, the precedent to be established and the present condition of the Federal Treasury would seem to warrant postponement of action on the bill.

Under the circumstances, I ask to have the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

CARL LINDOW

The bill (S. 2673) to correct the military record of Carl Lindow, alias Carl Lindo, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that go over. That seems to be a very doubtful case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his objection?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee withhold his objection?

Mr. McKELLAR. Certainly.

Mr. LOGAN. This bill was reported by the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS] and I promised him I would look after it for him.

I do not see just why the bill should not be passed. It is one that we thought was very deserving. The Adjutant General reports that he cannot correct military records, all of which is very true. The only way they can be corrected is by the Congress.

I do not find the report on this bill in my file, so I will let it go over until I can find the report.

Mr. KING. I ask to have it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

NAVAJO INDIAN RESERVATION, ARIZ.

The bill (S. 2499) to define the exterior boundaries of the Navajo Indian Reservation in Arizona, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This bill is the same as House bill 8927, Order of Business 1142.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I ask that the House bill be substituted for the Senate bill. The two measures are identical.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arizona?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 8927) to define the exterior boundaries of the Navajo Indian Reservation in Arizona, and for other purposes, which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 2499 will be indefinitely postponed.

MENOMINEE INDIANS OF WISCONSIN

The bill (H.R. 8541) to provide for the enrollment of members of the Menominee Indian Tribe of the State of Wisconsin was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This bill is the same as Senate bill 3514, Order of Business 1032.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to make an inquiry of my friend from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], in view of a letter or two which I have received from Indians protesting against these measures for reenrollment, as they call them in their letters. They contend that many injustices have resulted from measures of this kind, and that many will result; that persons will be placed upon the rolls who are not entitled to consideration. Will the Senator make an explanation of this measure, so that I may be advised, and answer those who are writing me?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, in the first place may I say that this bill applies, of course, only to the Menominees in Wisconsin. The advisory board representing the tribe, as well as the Secretary of the Interior, are in favor of the measure.

The bill does not contemplate what is commonly called a "final roll." What it does contemplate is a continual or current roll. I think the objections which the Senator is receiving are merely against those cases where final rolls have been established, which preclude the right of any other members of the tribe subsequently to be placed upon the rolls. No such procedure is in anticipation under the pending bill, if it shall become law. What is proposed, as I assert, is that there shall be a fluctuating roll. The Secretary of the Interior and the members of the advisory board of the tribe are very anxious to have the roll established.

Perhaps the Senator will remember that this is the tribe of Indians fortunate enough to have a very fine stand of timber in Wisconsin, and they have a mill which they are operating there. The advantage to the members of the tribe in having this fluctuating roll, based upon the procedure contemplated in the bill, is that it tends to retain the ownership of the property in the hands of the Indians, to prevent persons deriving benefit from it who are not entitled to it. Such investigation as I have been able to make of the situation convinces me that the Indians are unanimously in favor of the bill, it has received the approval of the Department, it has passed the House, and I think a good end will be served if the bill shall become a law.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, if I may make one observation, some of the specific charges made to me in regard to measures of this character are that when funds are about to be distributed, as there have been funds distributed from oil, or from the acquisition by the Federal Government of lands belonging to the Indians, Indians claim that they are members of the tribe, and, by fictitious affidavits and what not, their names are placed upon the rolls, and they become beneficiaries, when they ought not to be, of a distributive share of the funds appropriated by the Government.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I think such a situation will be prevented under the law contemplated by this bill, because only those may be added to the rolls who are at least one-quarter blood, and in the future those who have been born upon the reservation.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask that Senate bill 3514 be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Senate bill will be indefinitely postponed.

CARL LINDOW

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to Order of Business 1073, being the bill (S. 2673) to correct the military record of Carl Lindow, alias Carl Lindo.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I have no objection. I objected a while ago because I had not read the report, but since reading the report it seems to me this is a proper case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, on page 1, line 7, after the word "Lindo", to insert the word "deceased", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the administration of the pension laws or any laws conferring rights, privileges, or benefits upon the widows, children, and dependent relatives of persons honorably discharged from the United States Army, Carl Lindow, alias Carl Lindo, deceased, shall be held and considered to have served without desertion and to have been honorably discharged on August 9, 1864, as a corporal, Company H, One Hundred and Fifty-first Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry: Provided, That no pension, bounty, pay, or other emoluments shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of Carl Lindow, alias Carl Lindo, deceased."

TIMBER OPERATIONS ON THE MENOMINEE INDIAN RESERVATION

The bill (H.R. 7759) to amend the law relating to timber operations on the Menominee Indian Reservation in Wisconsin was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask unanimous consent that Senate bill 2515 be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Senate bill will be indefinitely postponed.

RETIREMENT OF RAILROAD EMPLOYEES

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 1035, Senate bill 3231, to provide a retirement system for railroad employees, to provide unemployment relief, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from New York that, under the unanimous-consent agreement entered into earlier today, the call of the calendar began with Order of Business 1047 this morning.

Mr. WAGNER. I ask unanimous consent that we consider the bill at this time. I do not think there is any opposition to it from anyone.

Mr. KING. Regular order!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is demanded.

ACQUISITION OF LAND IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The bill (S. 3569) to provide for the acquisition of land in the District of Columbia in excess of that required for public projects and improvements, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will not the Senator from Utah explain this bill?

Mr. KING. Just a word, Mr. President, in respect to this measure.

There have been some conflicts in the condemnation of land in the District where the land has been partly used by the Federal Government and partly used by the District of Columbia. This bill is for the purpose of avoiding such conflicts and providing for a proper adjustment and a proper allocation of the lands which are acquired in view of condemnations. The bill is approved by the District Commissioners and by the Park and Planning Commission.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with amendments.

The first amendment was, on page 3, line 14, before the word "excess", to insert the word "in", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 3. That whenever land is purchased, as provided in this act, in excess of that needed in connection with a particular project or improvement any and all appropriations available for the payment of the purchase price, costs, and expenses incident to such project or improvement are hereby authorized for use in the payment of the purchase price, costs, and expenses of any and all excess land purchased in connection with such project or improvement, as provided in this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 4, on page 4, line 2, after the word "or", to strike out "section 1608 and the following" and to insert "sections 1608 to 1610, inclusive"; on line 14, to strike out "section 1608 and the following" and to insert in lieu thereof "sections 1608 to 1610, inclusive"; on line 18, after the word "said", to strike out "section 1603 and the following" and to insert in lieu thereof "sections 1608 to 1610, inclusive", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 4. That whenever excess land is condemned by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, in accordance with the provisions of this act, the condemnation proceedings for the acquisition of such land shall be in accordance with chapter 15, subchapter 1 of chapter 15, and/or sections 1608 to 1610, inclusive, of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia: Provided, That any and all appropriations available for the payment of awards, damages, and costs in condemnation proceedings under chapter 15 of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia are hereby authorized for use in the payment of awards, damages, and costs in any and all condemnation proceedings under said chapter 15 for the acquisition of excess land, as provided in this act: Provided further, That any and all appropriations available for the payment of awards, damages, and costs in condemnation proceedings under subchapter 1 of chapter 15 and/or sections 1608 to 1610, inclusive, of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia are hereby authorized for use in the payment of awards, damages, and costs in any and all condemnation proceedings under said subchapter 1 of chapter 15 and/or said sections 1608 to 1610, inclusive, for the acquisition of excess land, as provided in this act: And provided further, That in any and all cases where such excess land is condemned, no assessments for benefits shall be levied by the jury in respect to the acquisition of said excess land.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, to strike out section 6, as follows:

SEC. 6. That for the purpose of economy and coordination in the acquisition of land by different agencies, whenever excess land is acquired by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia or agencies of the United States, as authorized in this act, the title to such land may be transferred upon prior agreement as between the District of Columbia and the United States or between agencies of the United States for authorized public purposes upon transfer of funds between agencies in an agreed proportion to the cost of acquiring the land and respective improvements thereon and such transfer of funds is hereby authorized from any funds appropriated for the purposes for which lands are to be used.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will renumber the sections so as to accord with the amendments made.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to promote the orderly and proper development of the seat of government of the United States the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, or agencies of the United States authorized by law to acquire real estate, be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered to acquire, in the public interest, by gift, dedication, exchange, purchase, or condemnation, fee simple title to land, or rights in or on land or easements or restrictions therein, within said District, for public uses, works, and improvements authorized by Congress, in excess of that actually needed for and essential to the usefulness of such public uses, works, and improvements, in order to preserve the view, appearance, light, and air and to enhance the usefulness of such public works and improvements, to prevent the use of private property adjacent to such public works and improvements in such a manner as to impair the public benefit derived from the construction thereof, or to prevent inequities or hardship to the owners of adjacent private property by depriving them of the beneficial use of their property.

SEC. 2. The Commissioners of the District of Columbia or agencies of the United States authorized by law to acquire real estate are further authorized, upon completion of public improvements, to subdivide and sell at public or private sale, or exchange, any such excess land, and to carry out such purpose or purposes, to convey any lands acquired in excess of that actually needed and which is not essential to the usefulness of such public works, with such reservations concerning the future use and occupation of such real estate as may in their discretion be necessary to protect such public improvements; and any and all moneys received from any sale or transfer of land in accordance with the provisions of this act shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States, and where the property sold was acquired under an appropriation authorized for the use of the District of Columbia, any and all moneys received from such sale shall be deposited in the Treasury to the credit of the revenues of the District of Columbia: Provided, however, That whenever the authorities of the United States or the District of Columbia having jurisdiction over such acquired land, or rights or easements, shall elect to retain any or all of the same for use of the United States or the District of Columbia, the said authorities are authorized to use said land, rights, or easements for park, playground, highway, or alley purposes, or for any other lawful purpose which the said authorities shall deem advantageous or in the public interest.

SEC. 3. That whenever land is purchased, as provided in this act, in excess of that needed in connection with a particular project or improvement, any and all appropriations available for the payment of the purchase price, costs, and expenses incident to such project or improvement are hereby authorized for use in the payment of the purchase price, costs, and expenses of any and all excess land purchased in connection with such project or improvement, as provided in this act.

SEC. 4. That whenever excess land is condemned by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, in accordance with the provisions of this act, the condemnation proceedings for the acquisition of such land shall be in accordance with chapter 15, subchapter 1 of chapter 15, and/or sections 1608 to 1610, inclusive, of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia: Provided, That any and all appropriations available for the payment of awards, damages, and costs in condemnation proceedings under chapter 15 of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia are hereby authorized for use in the payment of awards, damages, and costs in any and all condemnation proceedings under said chapter 15 for the acquisition of excess land, as provided in this act: Provided further, That any and all appropriations available for the payment of awards, damages, and costs in condemnation proceedings under subchapter 1 of chapter 15 and/or sections 1608 to 1610, inclusive, of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia are hereby authorized for use in the payment of awards, damages, and costs in any and all condemnation proceedings under said subchapter 1 of chapter 15 and/or said sections 1608 to 1610, inclusive, for the acquisition of excess land, as provided in this act: And provided further, That in any and all cases where such excess land is condemned, no assessments for benefits shall be levied by the jury in respect to the acquisition of said excess land.

SEC. 5. That whenever excess land is condemned by agencies of the United States, other than the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, as provided in this act, the condemnation proceedings for the acquisition of such land shall be in accordance with an act approved March 1, 1929, as amended, or any law or laws in effect at the time of such condemnation for the acquisition of land in the District of Columbia for use of the United States: Provided, That any and all appropriations available for the condemnation of land under said act approved March 1, 1929, as amended, are hereby authorized for use in the payments of awards, damages, and costs in any and all condemnation proceedings under said act, as amended, for the acquisition of excess land, as provided in this act.

SEC. 6. That the portion of the act approved February 25, 1907, entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a Code of Laws for the District of Columbia", regulating proceedings for condemnation of land for streets'" (34 Stat. 930; ch. 1195, sec. 491g), reading: "And where part of any lot, piece, parcel, or tract of land has been dedicated for the opening, extension, widening or straightening of the street, avenue, road, or highway, the jury, in determining whether the remainder of said lot, piece, parcel, or tract is to be assessed for benefits, and the amount of benefits, if any, to be assessed thereon, shall also take into consideration the fact of such dedication and the value of the land so dedicated" is hereby repealed.

SEC. 7. With the exception of section 6, none of the provisions of this act shall be construed as repealing any provisions of existing law pertaining to the condemnation or acquisition of streets, alleys, or land, or the law or laws relating to the subdividing of lands in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 8. If any provision of this act is held invalid, the remainder of the act shall not be affected thereby.

DEFENSE OF ALIBI IN CRIMINAL CASES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2255) to regulate the defense of alibi in criminal cases, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert the following:

That whenever testimony to establish an alibi on behalf of the defendant shall be offered in evidence in any criminal case in any court of the United States, and notice of the intention of the defendant to claim such alibi, which notice shall include specific information as to the place at which the defendant claims to have been at the time of the alleged offense, shall not have been served upon the prosecuting attorney at or before the time defendant is arraigned for trial, upon motion of the prosecuting attorney, the court may grant a postponement for such time as it may deem necessary to make an investigation of the facts in relation to such evidence.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 3517) authorizing the Court of Claims to hear, consider, adjudicate, and enter judgment upon the claims against the United States of J. A. Tippit, L. P. Hudson, Chester Howe, J. E. Arnold, Joseph W. Gillette, J. S. Bounds, W. N. Vernon, T. B. Sullivan, J. H. Neill, David C. McCallib, J. J. Beckham, and John Toles was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

LOANS TO OYSTER PLANTERS

The bill (S. 3541) to authorize production credit associations to make loans to oyster planters was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of this bill.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, this bill has been suggested and approved by the Production Credit Administration of the Agricultural Credit Bureau so that the oyster planters and growers, who will be the ones benefited under this bill, can be in the same category as is any agricultural group applying for a loan. These oyster planters have asked for a loan and need a loan, and the Department is perfectly willing to grant them proper financial assistance properly secured, but because of the fact that they are raisers of oysters and not agricultural products it was felt that the loan could not be granted because of the legal wording of the law.

These oyster planters are asking only what a farmer would ask for and would be accorded readily without any question at all if he had the proper security. There is nothing unusual about the proposed legislation and it would be manifestly unfair to exempt this particular group.

Mr. President, a similar case came to the fore in respect to a bill that was recently passed to assist the peach growers who found themselves in a situation similar to that in which the oyster planters find themselves in.

I am quite sure no unusual or unfair consideration is asked as far as these good people are concerned, and, moreover, the bill would not grant them anything in the first instance. It would simply give them the opportunity to turn to the Government for such financial assistance, which, after review, the Government may extend them, as it could do in the case of any farmer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, subject to the approval of the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration and under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Production Credit Commissioner, production credit associations organized under the Farm Credit Act of 1933 are authorized to make loans to oyster planters who are carrying on their operations under leases of oyster beds granted by any State or political subdivision thereof; to sell, discount, assign, or otherwise dispose of any loans made by them under the provisions of this act; and to do any and all other things necessary to carry these provisions into effect. With the approval of the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration and under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Intermediate Credit Commissioner, the Federal intermediate credit banks are authorized and empowered to discount for or purchase from any production credit association any note, draft, or other such obligation representing a loan or loans made under the provisions of this act; and to make loans or advances direct to any such organization secured by such obligations.

RETAIL LIQUOR DEALERS' STAMP TAX

The bill (H.R. 3768) to change the name of the retail liquor dealers' stamp tax in the case of retail drug stores or pharmacies was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LULA A. DENSMORE

The bill (H.R. 2692) for the relief of Lula A. Densmore was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I should like to have an explanation of this bill.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, this bill covers the following case: The husband of Lula A. Densmore was killed by a member of a posse. The attempt was made to arrest the husband of this claimant, without warrant and without cause, under circumstances where the arrest was clearly illegal. Mr. Densmore was going along the public road, where he had a right to be, committing no offense, committing no crime, and he was killed by a member of a posse. The Attorney General himself has expressed the opinion that there should be compensation paid to his widow.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, was no fund set up in the Prohibition Unit, in view of the notorious derelictions of duty upon the part of its employees, and their assaults unwarranted and their killings unjustifiable, to compensate those who were illegally and cruelly abused, terrorized, and often killed?

Mr. GEORGE. No fund was set up. Matters of this kind have always been covered by special relief bills.

Mr. KING. Many cases have been brought to the attention of the Senate where those in the Prohibition Unit acted in a manner that was condemned, and many innocent persons were assaulted, and a good many were killed.

Mr. GEORGE. That seems to be this case exactly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MOUNT M'KINLEY NATIONAL PARK

The bill (S. 2238) to provide for the payment of damages to certain residents of Alaska caused by reason of extending the boundaries of Mount McKinley National Park was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

YOSEMITE LUMBER CO.

The bill (H.R. 1405) for the relief of the Yosemite Lumber Co. was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of this bill?

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, this is a bill which allows, I think, about $1,000 to the Yosemite Lumber Co. for fighting a forest fire. It is approved by the Department of the Interior. There was a difference between Mr. McCarl and the claimants with respect to the amount of the bill that was presented and this is the only mode in which the company properly may be paid.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ED SYMES AND ELIZABETH SYMES

The bill (S. 2802) for the relief of Ed Symes and wife, Elizabeth Symes, and certain other citizens of the State of Texas, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like an explanation of that bill.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, this bill merely enables the claimants to go into court and have decided a claim which they think they have against the Government in the construction of a dam on the Brazos River in McLennan County, Tex., in 1919. It simply gives them the right to have the matter decided.

Mr. KING. May I ask the Senator whether the matter is to be determined in the Court of Claims or in the Federal court?

Mr. SHEPPARD. In the Federal district court.

Mr. CONNALLY. It provides that they are authorized to enter suit in the United States District Court for the Western District of Texas for the Waco division. It is a meritorious measure and ought to pass. I know all the parties interested and they are real citizens, and the claim is bona fide.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Ed Symes and wife, Elizabeth Symes; Wade Symes and wife, Pearl Symes; Mrs. Helen Symes Dodson and husband, D. S. Dodson; Howard Evans and wife, Mary Ann Evans; John L. Jones; and Leslie Stegall, all of McLennan County, Tex.; Mrs. Harry Loyd Lincoln, a widow who resides in the county of Carbon, Pa., and Albert Symes Hunter, of Panama, Canal Zone, all being the sole heirs at law of Albert Symes and wife, Mrs. Sally J. Symes, each deceased, their heirs, legal representatives, executors, administrators, and assigns, any statutes of limitation being waived, are hereby authorized to enter suit in the United States District Court for the Western District of Texas for the Waco Division for the amount alleged to be due said claimants from the United States by reason of the alleged neglect and alleged wrongdoing of the officials and engineers of the United States War Department in the location, erection, and construction of a lock and dam on the Brazos River, in McLennan County, Tex., in the year 1919.

SEC. 2. Jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon said United States District Court for the Western District of Texas to hear and determine all such claims. The action in said court may be presented by a single petition making the United States party defendant, and shall set forth all the facts on which the claimants base their claims, and the petition may be verified by the agent or attorney of said claimants, officials' letters, reports, and public records, or certified copies thereof may be used as evidence; and said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine said suit and to enter a judgment or decree for the amount of such damages and costs, if any, as may be found due from the United States to the said claimants, but in no event shall interest be allowed as part of any damages that may be awarded, by reason of the alleged negligence and erroneous construction of said lock and dam, upon the same principles and under the same measures of liability as in like cases between private parties, and the Government hereby waives its immunity from suit. And said claimants and the United States of America shall have all rights of appeal or writ of error or other remedy as in similar cases between private persons or corporations: Provided, That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of said court, and upon such notice it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States attorney in such district, or other representatives of the Department of Justice, to appear and defend for the United States: Provided further, That such suit shall be begun within 12 months of the date of the approval of this act.

SARAH SMOLEN

The bill (S. 3317) for the relief of Sarah Smolen was announced as next in order.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, the House has passed a bill textually the same, being Calendar 1324, House bill 7367. I ask that the House bill may be substituted for the Senate bill and placed upon its passage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill (H.R. 7367) for the relief of Sarah Smolen was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Sarah Smolen, of New York City, N.Y., not to exceed $5,000 in monthly installments of $50 each, to be disbursed through the United States Employees' Compensation Commission, in full settlement of all claims against the Government on account of the death of her husband, the late Joseph Smolen, who was a special employee of the New York City Office of the Bureau of Narcotics, Treasury Department, and who mysteriously disappeared and is believed to have been killed while engaged in official Government business on or about October 4, 1931: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senate bill 3317, Calendar No. 1086, will be indefinitely postponed.

C. B. DICKINSON

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1895) for the relief of C. B. Dickinson, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 7, after the word "aggregating", to strike out "$3,412.91" and to insert in lieu thereof "$3,402.39", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to allow credit in the accounts of C. B. Dickinson, former superintendent and special disbursing agent at the Pierre Indian School, Pierre, S.Dak., for payments aggregating $3,402.39, in making repairs to various buildings of the school plant.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like an explanation of the bill.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK] is not present, but I happen to know about this bill.

Mr. Dickinson was former Indian superintendent in North Dakota for several years, and then went to Pierre, S.Dak. While in the South Dakota office, there were some repairs made to an old Government building. It seems there was some misunderstanding in regard to the authorization of the expenditure of the money for these repairs, and when the bill went to the Comptroller General he objected because there was apparently no authorization. The Secretary of the Interior states in his report that the money was expended for the Government, the Government got the benefit of it, and the Department has no objection to paying it.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, should not the payment come from the tribal funds? Why should the payment come out of the Treasury of the United States?

Mr. FRAZIER. No; I do not think it should come out of the tribal funds. It was a payment for repairs to a school building. It should come out of a direct appropriation.

Mr. KING. Was not an appropriation made and carried in a general Indian appropriation bill to meet the expenditures authorized for school buildings?

Mr. FRAZIER. I think that is true, but for some reason or other the proper authorization was not given for this repair work. The superintendent thought he had the authorization, but when it finally came to the Comptroller General it was rejected because of some technicality.

Mr. KING. Improvements are not made in school buildings belonging to the Indians except through an authorization and an appropriation carried in the Indian appropriation bill. The point I am making is that the appropriation bill doubtless—if the Senator's statement is accurate, and I have no reason to doubt it—would carry the amount required for this appropriation. Was the amount used for some other purpose, or is it still available?

Mr. FRAZIER. I presume it was used for some other purpose. At least the Department seemed to think the only way the payment could be taken care of was by a special appropriation.

Mr. KING. There is no report, so I am utterly at sea as to the facts connected with the case. I reserve the right to move for reconsideration at a later time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOSE RAMON CORDOVA

The bill (H.R. 5636) for the relief of Jose Ramon Cordova was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EDWIN C. JENNEY

The bill (S. 3017) for the relief of Edwin C. Jenney, receiver of the First National Bank of Newton, Mass., was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Edwin C. Jenney, receiver of the First National Bank of Newton, Mass., the sum of $9,172.54, being interest which accrued under section 1090 of the Revised Statutes, on the judgment of the Court of Claims in favor of said bank for the period between the date of the filing of the transcript of judgment with the Secretary of the Treasury and the date when the order or mandate of the Supreme Court of the United States was issued to the Court of Claims upon the dismissal of the appeal in said case on motion of the United States, and payment of which amount is recommended by the Attorney General.

HEIRS OF BURTON S. ADAMS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3594) for the relief of the heirs of Burton S. Adams, deceased.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of this bill?

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, Mr. Adams was employed on the Illinois River, I believe, working for the Government, and in obedience to instructions and in the discharge of his duty he was drowned. The War Department has recommended the passage of this bill several times, as I recall, and has been rather insistent that some appropriation be made for the benefit of the heirs of the deceased. I know nothing about the claim other than the statement contained in the report of the War Department and the commission having charge of the particular work which this young man was doing. It is stated by all who know about it and those who are connected with the War Department that the bill ought to be passed.

Mr. KING. I should like to ask the Senator why the organization created by the Government which would have cognizance of such a case as this and authority to pay for injuries and the death of those who are injured or killed in the Government service rejected the claim.

Mr. LOGAN. I do not recall at this time the reason why, but I do know that it was rejected and the War Department has requested the passage of this bill. The parties do not even live in my State. I was requested by someone who was interested in the matter to introduce the bill, and I did so because I thought it was a very worthy case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in recognition of the fact that Burton Stearns Adams lost his life while in the performance of his duty as an employee of the Corps of Engineers, United States Army, and in recognition of the fact that his death resulted from overexertion in connection with the performance of official duties, the United States Employees' Compensation Commission is hereby authorized and directed to receive the claim of Emma E. Adams, widow of Burton Stearns Adams, and to grant compensation to the widow and dependent child in the amounts prescribed by the Federal Compensation Act of September 7, 1916, and amendatory acts, to be allowed in the case of an employee whose death occurred in line of duty.

CARLOS C. BEDSOLE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1707) for the relief of Carlos C. Bedsole, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, with an amendment, on page 2, line 2, after the word "land", to strike out "and in payment of such other losses sustained by the said Carlos C. Bedsole as are directly traceable to cancelation of his entry", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury, on certification by the Secretary of the Interior, be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Carlos C. Bedsole, of Natchitoches, La., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sum, not to exceed $1,000, as may be found by the Secretary of the Interior to be the fair and reasonable value of all improvements placed by said Bedsole upon lot 5, section 18, township 14 north, range 4 east, Louisiana meridian, prior to the date of final cancelation of his homestead entry, General Land Office serial no. 01229, which was allowed December 17, 1927, covering said land.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STILLAGUAMISH RIVER, WASH.

The bill (H.R. 3353) to provide a preliminary examination of Stillaguamish River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of its floods, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I find a large number of measures similar to this. I should like an explanation with respect to one, and I think it will then apply to six or seven other measures.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, there are five of these bills which passed the House—H.R. 3353 and the four succeeding bills on the calendar. They all merely provide that the War Department shall make a preliminary examination of certain rivers in western Washington which for a great many years past have been grievous offenders in the matter of floods. This last summer they almost washed the whole west side of Washington into the Pacific Ocean. These five bills are all alike, and if the bill now under consideration is approved, I shall ask that they all be approved en bloc. They carry no appropriation. The War Department has approved the measures. The Department has already made some preliminary surveys, and this is to provide for completing the work. I hope the bills will be passed, because they involve the expenditure of no money now, and the War Department desires to have the examinations under way.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? The Chair hears none.

The Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE] asks that the bills H.R. 3353, H.R. 3354, H.R. 3362, H.R. 3363, and H.R. 5175 be considered en bloc, and that all be considered as having been ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Washington?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I do not believe this is good practice. It does not afford an opportunity to consider the bills. It does save time, but I shall insist on bills being called separately.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard. The question is on the third reading of House bill 3353.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SNOHOMISH RIVER, WASH.

The bill (H.R. 3354) to provide a preliminary examination of the Snohomish River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of its floods, was announced as next in order.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, I understood the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE] to say that several of these bills on the calendar are similar. Is that true also of the other bills appearing later on the calendar? There are nearly two pages of the same kind of bills, apparently. They seem to be almost entirely alike. So far as the reading of the title is concerned, they seem to be alike. I should like to have an explanation of these bills. If they are all alike I should like to have an explanation of at least one of them to know what is the justification for the proposal.

Mr. BONE. Calendar 1096, being House bill 5175, is a typical bill. That involves the Green River, which is one of those typical mountain rivers in the State of Washington which are not very long. They rise in the Cascade Mountains and flow very rapidly to the sea through a rich farm country. I do not know that the Senator is aware of weather conditions in the State of Washington, but there are very heavy rains there, particularly in the wintertime, and those rivers have a habit of responding to the terrific rainfalls with vast freshets, and they flow down, tear out, and inundate all the farm country. Last fall and last winter in the State of Washington there was a terrifying loss not only of property but of lives. For a number of years that section of the State has sought to have the War Department make a move complete examination than had ever been made before concerning these rivers, with a view to handling them ultimately in a proper manner with respect to flood control.

If the Senator will look at Calendar No. 1096 he will see that the bill, which, as I have said, is typical of the other bills, is a very short bill, and authorizes the Secretary of War—

> To cause a preliminary examination to be made of the Green River, Wash., with a view to control of its floods, in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of an act entitled "An act to provide for control of the floods of the Mississippi River, and of the Sacramento River, Calif., and for other purposes", approved March 1, 1917, the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors.

This particular problem arises out of the floods of western Washington rivers. These rivers are found all the way from the Canadian line clear down through the State of Washington and into the State of Oregon. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY] is familiar with the damage caused in his State, much in the same fashion. The rivers are doing a vast amount of damage. The War Department has a certain amount of money which it can use in connection with its examination of flood problems. The matter has been fully presented at the Department before the Board of Army Engineers at least two or three times—a very complete presentation, I may say to the Senator from Ohio—as a result of which the War Department itself has sanctioned these bills. They involve no expenditure at this time; that is, no appropriation by Congress.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. BONE. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I may add, in behalf of the Senator's argument, that the Commerce Committee is equally unanimous in the belief that the bills should be passed.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I would be frank and state to the Senator if I knew of any real substantial reason why the bill should not be passed. We are not coming here and asking the Congress now for an appropriation, but it is highly desirable that that problem be met, and at the next session we certainly will have a flood-control measure here that will be a sort of omnibus bill.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. As I understand, the bill merely contemplates a survey with flood control in view?

Mr. BONE. That is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Washington has expired. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. FESS. As I understand, the bill simply authorizes a survey?

Mr. BONE. That is correct.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, in my time, I should like to make an inquiry of the Senator and the members of the Commerce Committee. I ask the question for information because of requests which have come from my State for flood-control relief with respect to mountain streams which perhaps find their way directly or indirectly into the Green and Colorado Rivers. The view has been taken, I am advised by some of the officers of the Government, that those streams are intrastate and not interstate, and that there is no obligation resting upon the Government to control those streams in order to prevent floods, not perhaps so large as the ones which the Senator from Washington has described. They have taken the position that, being intrastate streams, there is no obligation upon the Federal Government to afford protection. I should like to ask the Senator if the streams to which he refers may be denominated interstate or are they merely intrastate? If they are intrastate, I should be glad to be advised in order that I may take such necessary steps with the War Department or others to see that proper surveys shall be made in my State in those districts which have been subject to flood.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, may I reply to the Senator in respect to the attitude of the Commerce Committee? A survey may develop the precise fact that the Senator indicates and may thus show that there is no further Federal responsibility, in which event the survey, on the other hand, may give the State authorities amazingly helpful information in respect to the control of the rivers within their boundaries. The survey, therefore, seems to be essential in either event.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, may I say that the matter is not so simple as to say that a stream is an interstate or an intrastate river. It is just as necessary to control the flood waters on an intrastate river or stream that gathers flood volume and empties itself into an interstate river as it is on the intrastate river; in fact, it is impossible to control the flood waters in many cases on the interstate river without controlling those on the intrastate river.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, that is not the only feature involved. Many of these rivers drain national forest areas and areas which are being denuded by the Government itself in cutting timber. So there is another phase to this matter which it seems to me makes it important to have these surveys.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. The survey may be not only necessary but indispensable in devising an intelligent plan for flood control.

Mr. KING. I agree with my friend from Arkansas, but I was merely inquiring whether the rivers to which the Senator from Washington referred or the projects in mind might come within the category referred to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H.R. 3354) to provide a preliminary examination of Snohomish River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of its floods, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OF NOOKSACK RIVER, WASH.

The bill (H.R. 3362) to provide a preliminary examination of Nooksack River and its tributaries in the State of Washington with a view to the control of its floods, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OF SKAGIT RIVER, WASH.

The bill (H.R. 3363) to provide a preliminary examination of Skagit River and its tributaries in the State of Washington with a view to the control of its floods, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OF GREEN RIVER, WASH.

The bill (H.R. 5175) to provide a preliminary examination of the Green River, Wash., with a view to the control of its floods, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

YAQUINA BAY LIGHTHOUSE RESERVATION, OREG.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 7922) authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to dispose of a portion of the Yaquina Bay Lighthouse Reservation, Oreg., which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment on page 1, line 7, after the word "approximately", to strike out "twenty-two" and insert "thirty-two", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Commerce is hereby authorized to convey to the State of Oregon (State highway commission), for public-highway and park purposes, the unused portion of Yaquina Bay Lighthouse Reservation, Oreg., containing an area of approximately 32 acres, more or less, excepting that part of lot 1, section 17; part of lot 1, section 18; and part of lot 5, section 8, all in township 11 south, of range 11 west, bordering on Yaquina Bay which is required for jetty purposes by the War Department, and reserving to the Commerce, Treasury, and War Departments the rights of ingress and egress over the land so transferred and to maintain thereon such facilities as these Departments may at any time require. The deed of conveyance shall describe by metes and bounds the land so transferred to the State of Oregon and contain the express condition that the grantee assumes the obligation of carrying out the purposes of the grant; and provide that the Secretary of Commerce may at any time by letter addressed to the Oregon State highway commission notify the grantee in the event it has not begun to perform, or has ceased to perform, any such obligations that the property so conveyed will revert to the United States; and if the grantee does not begin or resume the performance of such obligations within a period of 6 months from date of such notice, such property shall upon the expiration of such period revert to the United States without further notice of demand or any suit or proceeding.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OF PAINT ROCK RIVER, ALA.

The bill (H.R. 8234) to provide a preliminary examination of the Paint Rock River in Jackson County, Ala., with a view to the control of its floods, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OF CONNECTICUT RIVER, MASS.

The bill (H.R. 8562) to provide for a preliminary examination of the Connecticut River, with a view to the control of its floods and prevention of erosion of its banks in the State of Massachusetts, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OF NISQUALLY RIVER, WASH.

The bill (S. 1386) to provide for a preliminary examination of Nisqually River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of their floods, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause a preliminary examination to be made of Nisqually River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to control of their floods, in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of an act entitled "An act to provide for control of the floods of the Mississippi River, and of the Sacramento River, Calif., and for other purposes", approved March 1, 1917, the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors.

COAST GUARD STATIONS ON GEORGIA COAST

The bill (S. 2010) to provide for the establishment of a Coast Guard station on the coast of Georgia, at or near Sea Island Beach, was announced as next in order.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Over.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I inquire if the Senator from Michigan objected to the consideration of Senate bill 2010?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I objected, Mr. President, because it is not recommended by the Treasury Department and appears to be in conflict with the President's financial program. That of itself is not insuperable, but there is the further fact that there are a large number of Coast Guard stations on the coasts of the country, and particularly on the Great Lakes, in which many of us are interested, and we have been constantly met by this type of Treasury objection as being final and conclusive; and it seems to me that if the objection runs in one instance it ought to run in all instances.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I do not desire to take up unduly the time of the Senate, but I want a vote upon the bill, if the Senator will permit me to have it, with this word of explanation: There is not upon the entire coast of Georgia a single Coast Guard station; the nearest Coast Guard station to the particular populated section of the State is 140 miles away. The officer who made this investigation found that it was necessary and proper to establish the proposed station. The Assistant Secretary of the Treasury says there is no doubt about the merits of the proposal, but that the Treasury has but a small amount of money now available for such purposes. I ask the Senator not to interpose an objection but to let me have a vote upon the bill.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I have been the victim of this rule so often, and I sympathize so completely with the Senator, that I shall be happy to withdraw the objection, in the hope that "bread cast upon the waters" may come home.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to establish a Coast Guard station on the coast of Georgia, at or near Sea Island Beach, at such point as the commandant of the Coast Guard may recommend.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OF THE LOWER COLUMBIA RIVER

The bill (S. 3431) authorizing a preliminary examination of the lower Columbia River, with a view to the controlling of floods, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to cause a preliminary examination to be made of the lower Columbia River, with a view to determining the extent to which floods on such river may be controlled, the best methods of controlling such floods, and the probable cost of such flood control, in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of an act entitled "An act to provide for control of the floods of the Mississippi River and of the Sacramento River, Calif., and for other purposes", approved March 1, 1917. The cost of such examination shall be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OF LEWIS RIVER, WASH.

The bill (S. 3504) to provide a preliminary examination of the Lewis River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of its floods, was announced as next in order.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, there is an identical House bill on the calendar, being Order of Business No. 1146, House bill 9432. I ask that the House bill be substituted for the Senate bill, and considered at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill (H.R. 9432) to provide a preliminary examination of the Lewis River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of its floods was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DILL. I move that Senate bill 3504 be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OF COLUMBIA RIVER, WASH.

The bill (S. 3505) to provide a preliminary examination of Columbia River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of its flood waters, was announced as next in order.

Mr. DILL. I ask unanimous consent that Calendar No. 1147, being House bill 9433, of the same title and identically the same in language, be substituted for the Senate bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 9433) to provide a preliminary examination of Columbia River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of its flood waters, which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DILL. I move that Senate bill 3505 be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

DAM ON CAMAS SLOUGH, WASH.

The bill (S. 3506) granting the consent of Congress for the construction of a dike or dam across the head of Camas Slough (Washougal Slough) to Lady Island on the Columbia River in the State of Washington was announced as next in order.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that House bill 9434, being Calendar No. 1148, which is similar to the Senate bill, be substituted for the Senate bill and considered at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill (H.R. 9434) granting the consent of Congress for the construction of a dike or dam across the head of Camas Slough (Washougal Slough) to Lady Island on the Columbia River in the State of Washington was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, I move that Senate bill 3506 be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

COWLITZ RIVER, WASH.

The bill (S. 3507) to provide a preliminary examination of the Cowlitz River and its tributaries in the State of Washington with a view to the control of its floods was announced as next in order.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Order of Business 1144, being House bill 9430, which is identical with the Senate bill, may be substituted for the Senate bill and considered at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill (H.R. 9430) to provide a preliminary examination of the Cowlitz River and its tributaries in the State of Washington with a view to the control of its floods was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DILL. I move that Senate bill 3507 be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 3525) to repeal certain laws providing for the protection of sea lions in Alaska waters was announced as next in order.

Mr. BARBOUR. Over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 3589) authorizing associations of producers of aquatic products was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

PROMOTION OF WARRANT OFFICERS OF COAST GUARD

The bill (H.R. 8644) to provide warrant officers of the Coast Guard parity of promotion with warrant officers of the Navy was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Over.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Utah to inform me what is his objection with respect to this bill?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I join in the request that the Senator from Utah withhold his objection to the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah withhold his objection?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I will be glad to hear an explanation of the bill, but I want to say to the Senator there have been too many promotions in the various activities of the Government. We have a plan proposed by which various individuals are to be given commissions and military and naval titles, and we will soon have more with military and naval titles than we will have enlisted men.

Mr. BAILEY. I will agree with the Senator that is undesirable, but this bill is designed to correct a real injustice to the Coast Guard. It proposes merely to put certain noncommissioned officers of the Coast Guard on a parity with similar officers of the Navy.

Mr. KING. Why should they be?

Mr. BAILEY. I will say to the Senator that they are on a parity in every other respect, except this one respect, and this completes the granting of real justice to members of the Coast Guard, who are not only a part of the national defense but are a part of the law-enforcing arm of our country and are also absolutely essential to our shipping. The enactment of the bill will not cost the Government much, but it will be an act of real justice. It is not a matter that can occur again. It sets no precedent except in line with the general run of precedents which have been established in this particular matter. In view of the circumstances, I hope the Senator will not insist upon his objection.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over for the present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah objects.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, without taking unduly of the time of the Senate, I wish to add to what has already been said about the bill which has just been passed over that I am satisfied the sense of justice which animates the Senator from Utah will prompt him to accord the same recognition to officers in the Coast Guard in the particulars in which this bill affects them as is accorded to the officers of the Navy. There is no more gallant service than that of the Coast Guard. The members of that service are constantly performing perilous duties. They ought not to be discriminated against. The report discloses that there is a discrimination which would be removed by the passage of the bill. I hope the Senator from Utah may find it consistent to reconsider his objection.

Mr. KING. I shall give attention to the earnest appeal of my friend from Arkansas.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OF CHEHALIS RIVER, WASH.

The bill (S. 3503) to provide a preliminary examination of Chehalis River and its tributaries in the State of Washington with a view to the control of its floods was announced as next in order.

Mr. DILL. I ask unanimous consent that Calendar No. 1145, being House bill 9431, which is the same as the Senate bill, may be substituted for the Senate bill and considered at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill (H.R. 9431) to provide a preliminary examination of Chehalis River and its tributaries in the State of Washington with a view to the control of its floods was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF EMERGENCY FARM MORTGAGE ACT

The bill (S. 3540) to amend section 32 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933 was announced as next in order.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I understand the bill is approved by the Federal Credit Administration and that it will enable them to refinance a number of additional repurchase mortgages.

Mr. SMITH. That is correct.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, I should like to have a little further explanation of what the bill will do.

Mr. SMITH. It is to enable farmers who lost their farms prior to July 1, 1931, to have a chance to repurchase their properties, provided they have not passed out of the possession of the banks which foreclosed the mortgages. We passed a bill giving the Land Commissioner the right to take a second mortgage and in that way to reappraise the farms and enable certain farmers to repossess their land. The bill has been endorsed by the Farm Credit Administration. It is limited to July 1, 1931. Those who lost their property subsequent to that cannot recover it under any circumstances.

Mr. FESS. The idea of fixing the date as of July 1, 1931, was to cover the emergency?

Mr. SMITH. I do not recall just why that was done. An explanation was sent to us by the Farm Credit Administration. We passed an act amending the Farm Loan Act, creating a Land Commissioner, and providing that he could take a second mortgage and through that means enable those who had lost their farms, but which farms had not passed out of the possession of the land banks, to repossess their property.

Mr FESS. It strikes me it is a pretty broad authority.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, the limitation was against the redemption or repurchase of properties foreclosed prior to July 1, 1931. Under that authority only about $5,000,000 had been used to refinance the repurchase of farms foreclosed. I think it is felt that it is sound policy to extend the authorization so as to permit those foreclosed prior to July 1, 1931, to come under the operation of the law. Only a few applications have been received for arrangements for the redemption or repurchase of properties foreclosed prior to July 1, 1931, as I said a moment ago. There are only a few applications of that character.

Mr. FESS. Does the Senator anticipate there will be a great number?

Mr. SMITH. Oh, there cannot be, because there are comparatively few farms which have not passed in good faith into the hands of third parties, but there are a number which are still held by the banks and under this bill the former owners may negotiate for a repurchase of their property.

Mr. FESS. I shall not interpose an objection, but I have a fear that this is opening a wide door. If I find that to be so, I shall submit a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. The Farm Credit Administration report says:

> There have been a certain number of cases in which the existing limitation has operated to prevent the Land Bank Commissioner from affording relief of this character to farmers who appear to be deserving of it. Under the circumstances, although the question of policy involved in the amendment is one ultimately to be resolved by the Congress, there is no objection to the measure.

Mr. FESS. I shall interpose no objection at this time.

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

> Be it enacted, etc., That the fifth sentence of section 32 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933 is amended by striking out "which has been foreclosed at any time between July 1, 1931, and the date of the enactment of this act, or which is foreclosed after the enactment of this act."

MALHEUR NATIONAL FOREST, OREG.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3113) to add certain lands to the Malheur National Forest in the State of Oregon, which had been reported from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry with amendments on page 2, line 10, after the word "except", to strike out "south half" and insert "southwest quarter"; in line 15, after the word "inclusive", to strike out the word "and"; and after the words "section 5", to insert "and the northeast quarter section 12", to strike out lines 18, 19, and 20, as follows:

> Sections 4, 5, and 6; north half section 7; sections 8, 9, 16, and 17, township 12 south, range 28 east; all Willamette base meridian.

And to insert in lieu thereof the following:

> Sections 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9, southeast quarter and west half section 13, township 12 south, range 28 east, and sections 14 to 24, inclusive.
>
> Sections 16 to 21, inclusive, and section 25, township 12 south, range 29 east; all Willamette base and meridian.

So as to make the bill read:

> Be it enacted, etc., That the following-described lands be, and the same are hereby, added to and made part of the Malheur National Forest in the State of Oregon, and shall hereafter be administered subject to the laws and regulations relating to the administration of the national forests:
>
> Southwest quarter section 13; section 14; southeast quarter section 15; southwest quarter and east half section 22; sections 23, 24, 25, and 26; north half and southeast quarter section 27; east half section 34; sections 35 and 36, township 10 south, range 26 east.
>
> South half section 16; south half section 17; southeast quarter section 19; sections 20 and 21; southwest quarter section 22; southwest quarter section 26; sections 27 to 34, inclusive; west half and southeast quarter section 35, township 10 south, range 27 east.
>
> Section 1; north half and southeast quarter section 2; northeast quarter section 11; north half section 12; southeast quarter section 24; section 25; north half section 36, township 11 south, range 26 east.
>
> All of township 11 south, range 27 east except southwest quarter section 31 of said township.
>
> West half and southeast quarter section 18; section 19; sections 30, 31, and 32; southwest quarter section 33, township 11 south, range 28 east.
>
> Sections 1 to 4, inclusive, the north half section 5, and the northeast quarter section 12, township 12 south, range 27 east.
>
> Sections 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9, southeast quarter and west half section 13, township 12 south, range 28 east, and sections 14 to 24, inclusive.
>
> Sections 16 to 21, inclusive, and section 25, township 12 south, range 29 east; all Willamette base and meridian.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I have the attention of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY]? I notice the bill calls for the addition of approximately 50,000 acres to the forests. I wonder if the Government would have to purchase any part of these lands.

Mr. McNARY. No. The original act was passed last year. The bill now before us simply is to cure the erroneous description in that act. The Forest Service and the Department have asked to have the description corrected and that is the only point that is involved here.

Mr. KING. In the original act was it required that the Government buy the lands?

Mr. McNARY. The sole purpose of the bill is to correct the description of the lands conveyed. The Government has acquired some of the lands by exchange and some by purchase. Having done that, errors have been found in the description of the land and the Department asks to have them corrected. That is all that is involved in the bill.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WATER SUPPLY OF COQUILLE, COOS COUNTY, OREG.

The bill (H.R. 5597) to afford permanent protection to the watershed and water supply of the city of Coquille, Coos County, Oreg., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PURCHASE OF LANDS BY M'MINNVILLE, OREG.

The bill (H.R. 5823) to authorize the purchase by the city of McMinnville, Oreg., of certain tracts of public lands and certain tracts revested in the United States under the act of June 9, 1916, (39 Stat. 218), was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PURCHASE OF LANDS BY FOREST GROVE, OREG.

The bill (H.R. 7185) to authorize the purchase by the city of Forest Grove, Oreg., of certain tracts of public lands and certain tracts revested in the United States under the act of June 9, 1916, (39 Stat. 218), was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF DISTRICT CODE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3568) to amend section 824 of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 824 of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 824. UNLAWFUL ENTRY ON PRIVATE PROPERTY.—Any person who, without lawful authority, shall enter, or attempt to enter, a private dwelling against the will of the lawful occupant thereof, or being therein, without lawful authority to remain therein, shall refuse to quit the same on the demand of the lawful occupant thereof; or any person who, without lawful authority, shall enter, or attempt to enter, an unoccupied private dwelling against the will or consent of the lawful owner thereof, or his duly authorized agent, or being therein, without lawful authority to remain therein, shall refuse to quit the same on the demand of the lawful owner thereof or his duly authorized agent, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $50 or imprisonment in the jail for not more than 6 months, or both, in the discretion of the court."

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, let us have an explanation.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes, Mr. President; we should know something about changes in the code that are proposed to be made.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the report states—and this is a brief explanation of the bill—that—

> The bill is designed to correct an anomalous situation in the District of Columbia whereby persons who had entered and remained in unoccupied private dwellings without authority were not subject to arrest, although such action was an offense under the present section 824 of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia if the property were occupied. The bill under consideration would make it a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed $50 or imprisonment in jail for not more than 6 months, or both, for any person who, without lawful authority, shall enter or attempt to enter an unoccupied private dwelling against the will or consent of the lawful owner, or being therein, shall refuse to quit the same.
>
> The bill has the approval of the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia, the United States district attorney for the District of Columbia, and the Board of Commissioners for the District of Columbia.

The bill simply provides remedies for the Government as well as others when property is entered upon by trespassers. If it does not happen to be occupied, there is no penalty now provided for the trespass.

Mr. McKELLAR. Have we not a law covering unauthorized entry?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. That is sometimes difficult to invoke. I have no objection to the bill.

Mr. KING. The Government has property of its own, and to bring an action or to send troops to expel the trespassers would involve delay, and, perhaps, unfortunate results.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INGRAM-DAY LUMBER CO.

The bill (S. 854) for the relief of the Ingram-Day Lumber Co. was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Mississippi explain the purpose of the bill?

Mr. STEPHENS. Mr. President, this case grew out of a contract entered into during the war period involving the Emergency Fleet Corporation and a man named McLouth. The Ingram-Day Lumber Co. contracted to furnish certain lumber. Later the contract was canceled by the Fleet Corporation. Then the McLouth Co. canceled its contract with the Ingram-Day Lumber Co. The matter was taken into court. Suit was brought by the lumber company against McLouth. The matter remained in the courts 8 years. It began in the Federal district court, was carried to the Federal court of appeals, and finally carried to the Supreme Court of the United States. This caused delay of 8 years, which was occasioned wholly and entirely by the efforts of the Fleet Corporation, which Corporation brought this suit with its own attorneys, assisted by attorneys for the Department of Justice. The district court held, under its construction of the law, that the lumber company was entitled only to $647.65.

If our view of the law is correct, the lumber company, the plaintiff, is entitled to $42,000. The circuit court of appeals took the same view as the district court, but when the case went to the Supreme Court of the United States—I believe the opinion was delivered by Chief Justice Hughes—it was held that the lumber company was entitled to the $42,000.

McLouth himself did not contest this suit. As I recall, he was not represented by counsel. The Fleet Corporation intervened and delayed this matter for 8 years. Judgment in the sum of $42,000 should have been rendered 8 years before it was rendered. In the meantime, McLouth died. His estate, which was entirely solvent when the suit was first instituted, had become insolvent. This matter was considered by the committee, and it was agreed that the lumber company should be paid the amount found to be due to it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, would this have been the amount due if McLouth had been a party to the suit? Is $42,789.96 the amount which the Supreme Court said he was entitled to receive?

Mr. STEPHENS. Yes, sir; that is the exact amount to which the Supreme Court said he was entitled.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. KING. I object until I get some sort of information about the matter. I find that the general counsel, Mr. Parker, in whom we have the utmost confidence, states:

> If this be so, the bill seems to be without merit for another reason; that is, they propose to pay McLouth's creditors from the Public Treasury, deprive the Government of its right of set-off if it shall be found to be indebted to McLouth on any of the contracts involved, and leave it to look for payment of its claim to the same insolvent debtor's estate.

It seems that the Government had set-offs, and it is now proposed to take the money out of the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. STEPHENS. I may be mistaken in this statement, Mr. President, but I think not: I think Mr. Parker was one of the counsel who fought this case for 8 long years, and finally the Supreme Court of the United States held that his contention was absolutely wrong.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Mississippi has expired.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, until I have a chance to look into the bill a little further, I ask that it be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah objects, and the bill will be passed over.

MICHAEL ILITZ

The bill (S. 3499) for the relief of Michael Ilitz was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the time time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the pension laws or any laws conferring rights, privileges, or benefits upon persons retired from the United States Army Michael Ilitz, who served as master sergant, Hospital Corps, shall be held and considered to have been retired as captain, military storekeeper, United States Army, on June 28, 1916: Provided, That no pension, pay, or bounty shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

POWER REVENUES ON FEDERAL RECLAMATION PROJECTS

The bill (S. 3375) to provide for the distribution of power revenues on Federal reclamation projects, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any power system hereafter built on Federal reclamation projects heretofore or hereafter constructed by the United States under the provisions of the act of June 17, 1902 (32 Stat. 388), and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, shall be operated by the United States as a separate and distinct system, independently of the irrigation system. The construction cost of such power system, including such portion as the Secretary of the Interior may find (his finding to be conclusive) to be proper and equitable of the cost of structures and other facilities provided and used primarily for irrigation purposes but incidentally used in connection with and as a part of said power system, shall be returnable from power revenues and shall not be charged to or repaid, in whole or in part, by the water users of the project. Power furnished from such power system for construction of project features, for operation of project pumping plants, and for any and all project purposes shall be considered a sale and purchase and shall be charged for at such rate as determined by the Secretary of the Interior. Such charge for power furnished for project purposes during the period of construction and operation of the irrigation system by the United States and any rentals or sale of power to water users and their organizations after they have taken over the operation and maintenance of the irrigation system shall not be construed as vesting in them any interest in the power system. All revenues realized from the operation of any such power system shall be covered into the reclamation fund and shall not be credited in payment of any obligations payable by the water users of the project or any division thereof.

SEC. 2. That as to reclamation projects now constructed or partially constructed having a power development in operation, the cost of which has been charged to the water users who have obligated themselves to repay the same, the water users of the project, or any division thereof, who have assumed such obligation, may, at their option, be placed upon the same basis and become subject to the same conditions as those outlined in section 1 hereof, upon the execution of appropriate contract or contracts therefor satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 3. That wherever any power system now in operation, constructed under the provisions of the reclamation law by and at the expense of the United States, shall be enlarged or new construction work done thereon in the way of betterments or otherwise, such additional constructional work shall be upon the same basis and subject to the same conditions as those provided for in section 1 hereof.

LANGELL VALLEY IRRIGATION DISTRICT

The bill (S. 1510) to amend the act entitled "An act to adjust water-right charges, to grant other relief on the Federal irrigation projects, and for other purposes", approved May 25, 1926, with respect to certain lands in the Langell Valley irrigation district was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to adjust water-right charges, to grant other relief on the Federal irrigation projects, and for other purposes", approved May 25, 1926, is amended by adding after section 16 thereof the following new sections:

"SEC. 16–A. All payments upon construction charges shall be suspended against such lands in the Langell Valley irrigation district as the Secretary of the Interior shall cause to be classified as to productivity and as the said Secretary may determine to be temporarily unproductive because nonagricultural and unsuitable for irrigation, and the said Secretary is hereby authorized to reduce the construction obligations of the Langell Valley irrigation district exclusive of costs incurred in the construction of Clear Lake Channel in the ratio and proportion as the number of acres so found and determined to be temporarily unproductive bears to the total number of acres now included as a part of said irrigation district: Provided, That the amount of irrigation water to which the Langell Valley irrigation district is entitled shall be reduced in proportion to the area temporarily suspended from construction charges.

"SEC. 16–B. The Secretary of the Interior, as a condition precedent to the allowance of the benefits offered under section 16–A, shall require the Langell Valley irrigation district to execute a contract providing for the resumption of construction charges by said district upon all, or any, of such acreages so found and determined to be temporarily unproductive, as the Secretary of the Interior may, subsequent to such suspension, find and declare to be possessed of sufficient productive power to be again placed in the paying class."

WARREN BURKE

The bill (H.R. 2287) for the relief of Warren Burke was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SUE HALL ERWIN

The bill (H.R. 3167) for the relief of Sue Hall Erwin was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BENJAMIN WRIGHT, DECEASED

The bill (H.R. 3423) for the relief of Benjamin Wright, deceased, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH B. LYNCH

The bill (H.R. 4962) for the relief of Joseph B. Lynch was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF RAILWAY LABOR BOARD ACT

The bill (S. 3266) to amend the Railway Labor Act approved May 20, 1926, and to provide for the prompt disposition of disputes between carriers and their employees, was announced as next in order.

Mr. METCALF. I ask to have that bill go over. Because of the absence of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS], who has filed a minority report, I think the bill should go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island objects, and the bill will be passed over.

Mr. KING subsequently said: May I inquire what became of Senate bill 3266?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF] objected to its consideration.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Rhode Island upon what grounds he objects to the bill? It is the bill to amend the Railway Labor Act.

Mr. METCALF. I objected because I observe that the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS] has a minority report. He is not here today, and I think it is only fair that the bill should be passed over until his return.

Mr. WHEELER. I think there is scarcely any objection to the bill. The railroad men and everybody else are very anxious to get the bill through.

Mr. METCALF. I am in favor of a good deal of this sort of legislation, but I desire to have the bill await the return of the Senator from Delaware.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made, the bill will be passed over.

AMERICAN LEGION CONVENTION, MIAMI, FLA.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 9123) to authorize the Secretary of War to lend War Department equipment for use at the Sixteenth National Convention of the American Legion at Miami, Fla., during the month of October 1934, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments, on page 1, line 7, before the word "blankets", to insert "and", and in the same line, after the word "blankets", to strike out "and mattresses or bed sacks", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is authorized to lend, at his discretion, to the American Legion 1934 Convention Corporation, for use at the Sixteenth National Convention of the American Legion to be held at Miami, Fla., in the month of October 1934, such tents, cots, and blankets, and other available stock out of the Army and National Guard supplies as such corporation may require to house properly Legionnaires attending such convention: Provided, That no expense shall be caused the United States Government by the delivery and return of such property, the same to be delivered at such time prior to the holding of such convention as may be agreed upon by the Secretary of War and the American Legion 1934 Convention Corporation, through the executive vice president of such corporation, Charles A. Mills: Provided further, That the Secretary of War, before delivering such property, shall take from such corporation a good and sufficient bond for the safe return of such property in good order and condition, and the whole without expense to the United States.

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H.R. 363) for the relief of James Moffitt was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

MARTIN HENRY WATERMAN, DECEASED

The bill (H.R. 311) for the relief of Martin Henry Waterman, deceased, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES H. WILLETT

The bill (S. 2531) for the relief of Charles H. Willett was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. May we have an explanation of this bill from the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD], who reported it?

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, this man was discharged from the military service for the reason that he did not tell the Department he was married. He served one enlistment and was honorably discharged. He enlisted again, and it developed later on that he was married and had not told the Department; so it seems to be a very proper thing that the black mark against him should be wiped out.

Mr. KING. That is the only reason?

Mr. COPELAND. Yes.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers Charles H. Willett, who was a member of the Seventh Regiment United States Infantry, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States as a private of that organization on the 16th day of April 1899: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The resolution (S.Res. 242) authorizing the appointment of a committee to receive evidence and take testimony in impeachment trials was announced as next in order.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be passed over.

AMENDMENT OF STANDARD BASKETS ACT

The bill (S. 1182) to amend the Standard Baskets Act of August 31, 1916, to provide for a 1-pound Climax basket for mushrooms was announced as next in order.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, there is an identical bill, House bill 5522, Order of Business 1141, which I ask to have substituted for the Senate bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the House bill will be substituted for the Senate bill.

Mr. KING. I have no objection to the substitution, but I desire to ask the Senator some questions about the bill.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 5522) to amend the Standard Baskets Act of August 31, 1916, to provide for a 1-pound Climax basket for mushrooms.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have had a number of inquiries respecting this measure which I have not been able to answer. They have related to the necessity of the bill, and whether the Federal Government is warranted or justified in taking over the matters referred to in the bill.

Mr. WAGNER. The Federal Government is not taking over anything. It is simply prescribing that mushrooms may be sold in these Climax baskets of 1 pound instead of 3 pounds. Under the present law, Climax baskets can be used for the sale of mushrooms only when they contain 3 pounds. Mushrooms are sold by weight, and this state of affairs limits their sale. We found that the trade desire to be able to purchase 1 pound of mushrooms rather than 3; and the bill simply authorizes the sale of mushrooms in 1-pound baskets instead of 3-pound baskets.

Mr. KING. I have no objection to the change, but I do object to the Federal Government prescribing these things at all.

Mr. WAGNER. It has already prescribed them. This bill merely provides for a change in the size of the basket that may be used.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 1182 will be indefinitely postponed.

AMENDMENT OF EMERGENCY FARM MORTGAGE ACT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2462) relating to loans by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in connection with agricultural improvement projects, which had been reported from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry with an amendment, on page 1, line 5, after the word "sentence", to strike out the remainder of the bill and insert certain new language, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 36 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended, is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For like purposes and subject to the aforesaid terms and conditions, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation may make loans hereunder to or for the benefit of mutual nonprofit irrigation, drainage, or levee companies which prior to May 12, 1933, had completed projects devoted chiefly to the improvement of lands for agricultural purposes. In the event that any such mutual nonprofit company shall make a valid sale of its works and other properties to any district organized after May 12, 1933, which sale cannot be impeached as being in fraud of its creditors or for any other reason, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized to lend all or any part of the purchase price of such properties to or for the benefit of such district, provided that such transaction will have the effect of reducing and refinancing the burden upon the lands within the district on account of the debt previously owed by such mutual company. Insofar as the same are applicable, such loans shall be made subject to terms and conditions similar to those hereinbefore provided for loans to drainage, levee, and irrigation districts."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TERESA DE PREVOST

The bill (S. 762) for the relief of Teresa de Prevost was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] explain that bill to us?

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, the explanation of this bill is rather difficult. It grew out of transactions that happened about 1867, when the Alsop Co., a company conducting commerce in South America, had some of its boats destroyed in a South American revolution. Claims in the matter were pending for 50 or 60 years, and finally it was agreed that King George of England should be the arbitrator. He did arbitrate the matter, and awarded to the United States Government $800,000, in round numbers, for the benefit of the claimants who had lost property.

Mrs. Prevost is a representative of the original Prevost. A man named Hobson was interested in the original company. Hobson borrowed $25,000 in cash from Prevost about the time these transactions occurred and gave a note for the amount. Afterward he was unable to pay it; but he wrote Prevost time after time that if they could ever collect this claim the $25,000 should be paid out of it. Then he made a will and added a codicil, as I recall, saying that he wanted the amount paid. Then he gave a power of attorney to the son of the original Prevost, one of those who was interested in the matter, authorizing him to collect or to pay over this $25,000. Of course, at that time the interest amounted to one-hundred-and-some-odd thousand dollars. Then he wrote a letter, along with the power of attorney, in which he set up the fact that he had always intended to pay the $25,000 out of the proceeds of this claim.

When the money was distributed in the office of the Secretary of State they declined to pay this amount, aggregating over $100,000 to the Prevost estate, but insisted upon paying it, and did pay it, to the original heirs of Hobson; and that was done after they had all this information as to the assignments, the letters, the power of attorney, and everything.

Certain reasons are urged as to why that was done, but, at all events, it was done; and this poor old lady, now in Washington, who had more to do than anyone else with securing the money from the South American countries, and securing the award at the hands of King George, and who is largely interested in the bill because of this state of affairs, is left without a thing in the world in her old age because the Secretary of State made a mistake, or else, for some other reason, paid the money to the wrong people.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, has all the $800,000 been paid out?

Mr. LOGAN. Yes; everything was distributed. The Committee on Claims recommended the payment of $25,000. Of course, it had been drawing interest up to 1912, and would amount to more than that, but we thought that perhaps we could get the bill through if we made the amount small enough.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 5, after the word "of", to strike out "$100,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$25,000", and to add a proviso at the end of the bill, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Teresa de Prevost the sum of $25,000, in full satisfaction of her claim against the United States for losses sustained by reason of alleged irregularities in the distribution through the State Department to claimants under the so-called "Alsop award of July 4, 1911", made by the King of Great Britain as arbitrator: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AIRPORTS IN MINING DISTRICTS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2836) to amend the Mining Act of May 10, 1872, as amended.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, the Department having recommended against this bill, I am wondering whether we may not have an explanation. If not, I shall ask that the bill go over.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, to state the object of the bill in a sentence, it is to enlarge what is known as the "mill-site provision" of the mining act so as to permit the taking of a sufficient amount of land to provide for airports and places for the landing of airplanes.

The mill site law provided for 5 acres at $5 an acre. This bill provides for 20 acres upon the same terms. It is to be unreserved, nonmineral land. The purpose is simply to enable landing fields and airports to be provided in connection with the mining business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Mines and Mining with an amendment, on page 1, line 5, before the word "land", to insert the word "unreserved", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2357 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2337. Where unreserved land in the United States or Alaska situated in the vicinity of mining districts is not contiguous to a vein or lode and contains practically no known mineral value, and where the surface of such land is more valuable for the use and purpose of ore-reduction works or any other equipment necessary or convenient for economical working and treatment of ores, including landing fields and airports, such lands may be located under this act by designating the use and purpose thereof as 'mill-site claims': Provided, That no location shall exceed more than 20 acres to the claim, and where such locations are upon surveyed lands, and conform to the legal subdivision, no further survey or plat shall be required. When it is apparent that such nonadjacent land located is suitable for the installation of such equipment necessary or convenient for the development and operation of mines, the reduction of ore, and treatment thereof including landing fields and airports, the owner or owners, their heirs, assigns, or legal representatives, shall within 1 year from date of location pay to the United States of America $1 per acre or fraction thereof, said payment to apply upon the purchase price of said land in compliance with these provisions. The locators or claimants thereof shall have exclusive right of possession and enjoyment of all the benefits thereof, and thereafter shall annually pay $1 per acre or fraction thereof, for a period of 4 years. Said payment of $1 per acre must be paid at the land office in which the claims are located and the same must be paid at such land office on or before the 30th day of June each year. It shall be the duty of the register and receiver of such local land office in whose district such claims are located to receive and register all payments made by the claimants and to receipt therefor to them. That the payment or payments of said $1 per acre shall apply on the purchase price of said lands in any patent proceedings instituted in compliance with the provisions of this act: Provided, That the claimant or holder thereof shall on or before 5 years from date of location make application for a patent by proceeding as provided for in section 2325, and upon failure to comply with the provisions of this act the rights of the holder thereof shall be deemed forfeited, and such land thereafter shall be open to location in the same manner as if no location of the same had ever been made. That the purchase price of said mill sites shall be $5 per acre or fraction thereof."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NAVAJO INDIAN RESERVATION, N.MEX.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2531) to define the exterior boundaries of the Navajo Indian Reservation in New Mexico, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with amendments.

The first amendment was, on page 7, line 4, after the word "Indians", to insert "except sections 3 to 10, both inclusive, township 11 north, range 19 west; south half of township 11 north, range 20 west, south half of fractional township 11 north, range 21 west, New Mexico principal meridian, which lands are hereby added to the Zuni Reservation: Provided, That this section, in order to exclude the town of Ramah, shall not apply to sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 9, 10, and 16, township 10 north, range 16 west, New Mexico principal meridian", so as to make the section read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the exterior boundaries of the Navajo Indian Reservation in New Mexico be, and they are hereby, defined as follows:

Beginning at a point common to the States of New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, and Utah, thence south along the Arizona-New Mexico State boundary line, to its intersection with the township line between townships 10 and 11 north, New Mexico principal meridian, New Mexico; thence east to the southeast corner of section 33, township 11 north, range 20 west; thence north 1 mile; thence east 1 mile; thence north 1 mile; thence east 2 miles; thence north 2 miles; thence east 4 miles; thence north 2 miles; thence west 4 miles to the corner of townships 11 and 12 north, ranges 19 and 20 west; thence north to the corner of townships 13 and 14 north, ranges 19 and 20 west; thence east 6 miles; thence south 12 miles; thence east 6 miles; thence north 6 miles; thence east 6 miles; thence north to the south boundary of the Fort Wingate Military Reservation; thence west to the southwest corner of the Fort Wingate Military Reservation; thence north along the west boundary of the said military reservation to the township line between townships 13 and 14 north; thence east to the intersection of the township line between townships 13 and 14 north with the east boundary of the said military reservation; thence north 9 miles along said boundary line; thence east to the range line between ranges 14 and 15 west; thence south to the north right-of-way of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad; thence east following said north right-of-way line to its intersection with the township line between townships 13 and 14 north; thence east along that township line to the northeast corner of section 4, township 13 north, range 11 west; thence south 2 miles; thence east 1 mile; thence south 1 mile; thence east 1 mile; thence south 1 mile; thence east 1 mile; thence south 2 miles; thence east 3 miles; thence north 24 miles along a line bisecting townships 13, 14, 15, and 16 north, range 10 west; thence west to the southeast corner of township 17 north, range 11 west; thence north 6 miles; thence west 6 miles; thence north along the range line between ranges 11 and 12 west, to the southeast corner of township 22 north, range 12 west; thence east 18 miles; thence south 3 miles; thence east 6 miles; thence north 9 miles; thence west 24 miles; thence north 2 miles; thence west 9 miles; thence north 2 miles; thence west 3 miles; thence north along the east boundary of Navajo Indian Reservation to the San Juan River; thence following the south bank of said river to where it crosses the east line of the Navajo Reservation as established by the treaty of June 1, 1868; thence north to township line between townships 29 and 30 north; thence east to the southeast corner of township 30 north, range 16 west; thence north 6 miles; thence west to the east boundary of the treaty reservation; thence north along said treaty east boundary line to its intersection with the New Mexico-Colorado State line; thence west along the New Mexico-Colorado State line to the point of beginning; also the following:

Beginning at the northwest corner of section 24, township 21 north, range 8 west, New Mexico principal meridian; thence, west 3 miles; thence south 9 miles; thence west 6 miles; thence south 6 miles; thence west 1 mile; thence south 6 miles; thence east to the southwest corner of township 18 north, range 6 west; thence south to the southwest corner of township 17 north, range 6 west; thence east to the southeast corner of township 17 north, range 4 west; thence north 6 miles; thence east 1 mile; thence north to the northeast corner of section 6, township 19 north, range 3 west; thence west 7 miles to the southeast corner of township 20 north, range 5 west; thence north 6 miles; thence west 6 miles; thence south 6 miles; thence west 6 miles; thence north 6 miles; thence west 6 miles; thence north 3 miles to point of beginning; and beginning at northwest corner of section 4, township 10 north, range 16 west; thence east 10 miles to northeast corner of township 10 north, range 15 west; thence south 9 miles to the northwest corner of section 19, township 9 north, range 14 west; thence east 2 miles; thence south 1 mile; thence east 1 mile; thence south 1 mile; thence east 1 mile; thence south 1 mile to township line between townships 8 and 9 north; thence east 2 miles to the northeast corner of township 8 north, range 14 west; thence south 18 miles to the southeast corner of township 6 north, range 14 west; thence west 6 miles to the southwest corner of said township; thence north 3 miles; thence west 6 miles; thence north 3 miles to the northeast corner of township 6 north, range 16 west; thence west 6 miles to southwest corner of township 7 north, range 16 west; thence north 9 miles; thence east 1 mile; thence north 1 mile; thence east 1 mile; thence north 1 mile; thence east 1 mile; thence north 3 miles; thence west 1 mile; thence north 10 miles, along boundary of the Zuni Indian Reservation to point of beginning; also beginning at the southwest corner of section 30, township 2 north, range 6 west; thence east 8 miles to the southeast corner of section 29, township 2 north, range 5 west; thence north 4 miles; thence west 1 mile; thence north 1 mile; thence west 1 mile to the corner of townships 2 and 3 north, ranges 5 and 6 west; thence north 4 miles; thence west 6 miles; thence north 1 mile; thence west 1 mile; thence north 1 mile; thence west 3 miles; thence south 7 miles; thence east 2 miles; thence south 2 miles; thence east 1 mile; thence south 1 mile; thence east 1 mile; thence south 1 mile to place of beginning; also beginning at the southwest corner of section 6, township 9 north, range 3 west; thence east 12 miles to the southeast corner of section 1, township 9 north, range 2 west; thence north 7 miles to the northeast corner of township 10 north, range 2 west; thence west 8 miles to the southwest corner of section 35, township 11 north, range 3 west; thence north approximately 6 miles to the intersection of the south boundary of the Canada de los Alamos Grant; thence west to the southwest corner of the said Canada de los Alamos Grant; thence north along the west boundary of said Canada de los Alamos Grant to its intersection with the township line between townships 11 and 12 north; thence west 4½ miles along the line between townships 11 and 12 north to its intersection with the east boundary of the Cebolleta Grant; thence south to the southeast corner of said grant; thence east along the north boundary of the Paguate Purchase to the northeast corner thereof; thence south along the east boundary of said purchase to the southeast corner thereof; thence west along the south boundary of the Paguate Purchase to the intersection with the range line between ranges 3 and 4 west; thence south along said range line to the southwest corner of section 6, township 9 north, range 3 west, the place of beginning: Provided, That all vacant, unreserved, and unappropriated public lands within the boundaries above defined, except township 15 and the south half of township 16 north, range 18 west, and township 15 and the south half of township 16 north, range 19 west, New Mexico principal meridian, New Mexico, are hereby permanently withdrawn from all forms of entry or disposal, for the benefit of the Navajo Tribe of Indians, except sections 3 to 10, both inclusive, township 11 north, range 19 west; south half of township 11 north, range 20 west; south half of fractional township 11 north, range 21 west, New Mexico principal meridian, which lands are hereby added to the Zuni Reservation: Provided, That this section, in order to exclude the town of Ramah, shall not apply to sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 9, 10, and 16, township 10 north, range 16 west, New Mexico principal meridian. All lands in townships 14 and 15 north, ranges 12, 13, and 14 west, of the New Mexico principal meridian, situated within the boundaries defined above and embraced in the Cibola National Forest are hereby eliminated from the said forest, and permanently withdrawn for the benefit of the Indians of the Navajo Tribe. All valid rights and claims initiated prior to approval hereof under the public-land laws involving any lands within the said boundaries shall not be affected by this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 4 on page 9, line 16, after the numerals, "$482,136.22" to insert the words "reimbursable from the Navajo tribal funds", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 4. For the purpose of purchasing privately owned lands, together with the improvements thereon, within the boundaries above defined, and also within the area in San Juan County, Utah, added to the Navajo Indian Reservation by the act of March 1, 1933 (47 Stat. 1418), there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, from any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $482,136.22, reimbursable from Navajo tribal funds, which sum shall remain available until expended: Provided, That title to the land so purchased may, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, be taken for the surface only: Provided further, That said funds may be used in purchasing improvements on leased State school land within the boundaries above defined, provided the State of New Mexico agrees to the assignment of said leases to the Navajo Tribe of Indians on a renewable and preferential basis, and provided the legislature of said State enacts such laws as may be necessary to avail itself of the exchange provisions contained in section 2 of this act, and disclaim any right, title, or interest in and to any improvements on said lands.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS A. COYNE

The bill (S. 3199) for the relief of Thomas A. Coyne was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers Thomas A. Coyne, who was a member of Company C, Forty-fifth Regiment United States Infantry, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States as a member of that organization on January 4, 1918: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

TURTLE MOUNTAIN BAND OR BANDS OF CHIPPEWA INDIANS

The bill (S. 3626) referring the claims of the Turtle Mountain Band or Bands of Chippewa Indians of North Dakota to the Court of Claims for adjudication and settlement was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That jurisdiction be, and is hereby, conferred upon the Court of Claims, with right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States by either party, notwithstanding the lapse of time or statutes of limitation, to hear, adjudicate, and render judgment, according to right and justice, on any and all claims not heretofore determined and adjudicated on their merits by the Court of Claims or the Supreme Court of the United States, arising under any treaty, act of Congress, agreement, Executive order, or treaty with any other tribes or nations of Indians, or relating to, affecting, or violating the land occupancy or other rights of the Turtle Mountain Band or Bands of Chippewa Indians of North Dakota, including the band of Chief or Thomas Little Shell, and other isolated bands of Chippewas of North Dakota and Montana. The said courts shall consider all such claims de novo, upon a legal and equitable basis, and without regard to any settlement heretofore had in respect to any such claims.

SEC. 2. Any and all claims against the United States within the purview of this act shall be forever barred unless suit or suits be instituted or petition or petitions filed as herein provided in the Court of Claims within 5 years from the date of the approval of this act, and such suit or suits shall make the Indians mentioned in section 1 hereof party or parties plaintiff and the United States of America party defendant. The claim or claims of the band or bands aforementioned may be presented separately or jointly by petition or petitions, subject, however, to amendment. The petition or petitions shall be verified by the respective attorney or attorneys employed to prosecute such claim or claims under contract with the Turtle Mountain Band or Bands of Chippewa Indians, approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior, as provided by law. Official letters, papers, documents, reports, and records, or certified copies thereof, may be used in evidence; and the departments of the Government shall give access to the attorney or attorneys of said Turtle Mountain Band or Bands such treaties, agreements, papers, reports, correspondence, or records as may be needed by the attorney or attorneys of said band or bands of Indians.

SEC. 3. That if any claim or claims be submitted to said court it shall determine the rights of the parties thereto, notwithstanding lapse of time or statutes of limitation, and any payment which may have been made by the United States upon any claim so submitted shall not be pleaded as an estoppel but may be pleaded as a set-off in any suit; and the United States shall be allowed credit subsequent to the date of any law, treaty, agreement, or Executive order under which the claims arise for any sum or sums, including gratuities, heretofore paid or expended for the benefit of said Indians.

SEC. 4. That if the Court of Claims shall determine that the United States, under the provisions of any agreement, Executive order, law, or treaty referred to in section 1 hereof, has unlawfully appropriated or disposed of any property belonging to the said Turtle Mountain Band or Bands of Chippewa Indians, or to which the said Indians had the right of title by occupancy; or if the said court shall determine that the United States, under the provisions of any such agreement, Executive order, law, or treaty, herein referred to, under mistake of fact or duress, obtained title to or the cession of any land from the said Indians for an inadequate consideration; or if the court shall determine that the United States obtained cessions of land from said band or bands of Indians without obtaining the consent of a majority of the male adult members thereof; or if the court shall determine that the United States, to the loss of said Indians, appropriated to its own use or to the use of any other Indian tribe or band, or permitted white settlers to occupy and acquire title under the public-land laws of the United States, to any lands in North Dakota the title or occupancy of which by the said Indians had been recognized by other tribes and by official reports of the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs; or if a portion of the land so claimed by the said band or bands was taken from them by an Executive order for the benefit of any other band or tribe of Indians, without compensation to the said Turtle Mountain Band or Bands of Chippewa Indians, the damages shall be confined to the reasonable money value thereof at the time of such appropriation: Provided, That if the Court of Claims shall determine that the United States, by reason of any delay on the part of its authorized agents in submitting for ratification any agreement with the said Turtle Mountain Band or Bands of Chippewa Indians, for the purchase or cession of any land so occupied and possessed by them, or that the Congress of the United States unduly delayed the ratification of any such agreement whereby any such lands were ceded to the United States, to the detriment and loss of the said Indians, then the said court is hereby authorized to award and enter judgment, as justice and equity may demand, for damages due to such delay at 4 percent per annum of the stipulated or agreed amount set out in any such agreement ceding such lands to the United States, and to compute such interest from the date the said agreement was signed or executed by the said Indians; and with reference to all claims which may be the subject matter of the suit or suits herein authorized, the decree of the court shall be in full settlement of all damages, if any, committed by the Government of the United States and shall annul and cancel all claim, right, and title of the said Turtle Mountain Band or Bands of Chippewa Indians in and to such money or other property.

SEC. 5. Upon the final determination of such suit or suits the Court of Claims shall have jurisdiction to fix and determine a reasonable fee, not to exceed 10 percent of the recovery in each instance, together with all necessary and proper expenses incurred in preparation and prosecution of the suit or suits, to be paid to the respective attorneys employed by the said band or bands of Indians, and the same shall be included in the decree and shall be paid out of any sum or sums found to be due said band or bands of Indians. The court shall have jurisdiction and is hereby further authorized to determine what amount of the recovery, if any, shall be awarded to the respective bands who bring suit or suits hereunder.

SEC. 6. The Court of Claims shall have full authority by proper orders and process to bring in and make parties to such suit or suits any other tribe or band of Indians deemed by it necessary or proper to the final determination of the matters in controversy. A copy of the petition or petitions shall, in such case, be served upon the Attorney General of the United States, and he, or some attorney from the Department of Justice to be designated by him, is hereby directed to appear and defend the interests of the United States in such case.

SEC. 7. The proceeds of all amounts, if any, recovered for said band or bands of Indians, less fees and expenses, shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Indians decreed by said court to be entitled thereto, and shall draw interest at the rate of 4 percent per annum from the date of the judgment or decree.

PURCHASE OF FOREST LANDS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3521) to facilitate purchases of forest lands under the act approved March 1, 1911.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will not the able Senator from Alabama explain the bill?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, the basis of authority for the acquisition of forest lands is contained in the act of 1911, which requires the consent of the State before the Government may acquire land in any State for purposes of preserving the navigability of navigable streams. At present a fund is being administered for purchasing forestry lands under that act, but, unfortunately, some States, including my State and some other States, have not passed the necessary laws giving consent.

The legislature of my State will not be in session until next January, and that is the situation in some other States, I am informed. Therefore this bill authorizes permission of the State to be given by the governor filing a written consent and certifying that a majority of the members of the legislature have also, in writing, approved the written statement of the governor. In other words, it is to waive a formal, legal act and make it possible to accept the informal act of the governor and the legislature during the recess.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator whether this bill commits the Government to purchase lands?

Mr. BANKHEAD. No; there is no commitment of any kind. It merely authorizes the Government to purchase the land if it sees fit to do so.

Mr. KING. Does the Senator think that the Congress ought really to nullify the wishes of the State as expressed through its legislature?

Mr. BANKHEAD. No; that is the point. The original act of Congress required the consent of the State. There is no objection by the States. They simply have not affirmatively acted in compliance with the law passed by Congress. This simply allows them to act in an informal way.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I am deeply interested in the forestry act, having served as Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, but for some reason I have not been able to understand the Senator. There is so much disorder in the Chamber, with no apparent effort to keep the Senate in order, that I did not hear what the Senator had to say.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I am not able to hear the Senator.

Mr. McNARY. I could not hear the Senator because of the noise in the Chamber.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I want to know something about the bill. Does the bill provide for the acquisition of land simply to enlarge the forest area of the country, or does it affect the navigability of streams, or is it for the purpose of keeping clarified, as far as possible, the waters of the country for city use, for domestic purposes?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, the act of 1911, which is set out in the report on the bill, gives authority for the acquisition of forest lands.

Mr. McNARY. I am quite familiar with that act.

Mr. BANKHEAD. The Senator will recall that the act required, before forest lands could be acquired by the Government in any State, that the State should consent to the acquisition of such lands by the Government. That is a provision in the original act.

In some States, my State included, and other States, the legislatures have taken no action. They have not passed acts giving formal consent. Forestry lands are now being acquired under a definite, fixed allocation for the purposes specified under the act. We find that several States have not formally passed the consent legislation.

Mr. McNARY. Is this to take the place of nonaction on the part of the States?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Absolutely. Take my State, for instance. Our legislature will not convene until next January. We have no chance now to give consent, without a specially called session of the legislature.

Mr. McNARY. Why has the State which the Senator so ably represents stood by supinely all these years, since the act of 1911 was enacted, without taking advantage of the very thing it now desires?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I am unable to answer that question, because I never heard of it being called to the attention of the State, or any possible or probable action within the State. There are other States in the same situation.

Mr. McNARY. How many States are in the same situation the State of Alabama is in?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I cannot give that information. I am simply informed by the Department that there are other States in the same situation.

Mr. McNARY. Is this a Department bill?

Mr. BANKHEAD. The Department approves the bill. The original approval is shown in the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That to allow and facilitate the purchase of forest lands under the provisions of the act approved March 1, 1911 (36 Stat. 961; U.S.C., title 16, secs. 613–521), in States which desire that such purchases shall be made but cannot give their formal consent thereto until the next meeting of their legislative bodies, it is hereby provided that a written statement of consent signed by the Governor of the State prior to January 1, 1935, and containing the certification that a majority of the individual members of the current State legislative body have expressed in writing to the Governor their concurrence in and approval of such statement of consent shall be regarded as fully complying with and satisfying the requirements of that part of section 7 of said act of March 1, 1911, which provides that no deed or other instrument of conveyance shall be accepted or approved by the Secretary of Agriculture under said act until the legislature of the State in which the land lies shall have consented to the acquisition of said land by the United States.

CLAUDE C. MARTIN

The bill (S. 1792) for the relief of Claude C. Martin was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers Claude A. Martin, private, late of the United States Infantry unassigned, shall be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States on March 6, 1931: Provided, That no back pay, compensation, benefit, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

JOHN W. SCHELL

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1836) for the relief of John W. Schell, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, on page 1, after the word "Schell", to insert the word "deceased", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers John W. Schell, deceased, who was a member of Company G, One Hundred and Twelfth Regiment United States Infantry, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States as a private of that organization on the 8th day of May 1919: Provided, That no back pay, compensation, benefit, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of John W. Schell, deceased."

AMENDMENT OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT

The bill (S. 3584) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of that bill.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, this is a bill sent to the Congress by the Department asking that the R.F.C. be authorized to advance moneys sufficient to take up the outstanding notes that were accepted under the Government's proposition of advancing 10 cents on cotton stocks. It really is not in any sense an appropriation. It simply gives authority to advance money sufficient to take up these notes.

On July 1 these notes will mature. A lot of this money was borrowed by the Government from private banks and a lot of it was advanced by local bankers, on the understanding that at any time they saw fit they could hypothecate their warehouse receipts and their notes with the R.F.C. and have them taken up.

The notes will mature on the 1st of July, and the Government will hold the cotton as collateral security, as it has a large part now, and it is in order to meet those obligations that the Government simply wants this authority concentrated, and to meet the notes as they fall due.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

Mr. FESS. Let the bill go over.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Ohio will not object, because this bill does not appropriate one dollar. It simply makes provision for meeting a condition which will arise on the 1st of June which may necessitate the closing out of these notes, putting a large amount of this cotton on the market, without the authority of the Government to take the obligations and carry them and handle the matter in an orderly manner. The Government would not be out a nickel by the passage of this bill.

Mr. FESS. Is the Senator referring to Order of Business 1152?

Mr. SMITH. Yes.

Mr. FESS. What does this language mean:

There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $100,000,000.

Mr. SMITH. That, Mr. President, is really misleading. If the Senator from Ohio will read the report, he will see it is simply to authorize the Treasury Department or the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to advance this money until the cotton is sold. The Government is amply protected now. It has the cotton as collateral.

Mr. FESS. It may be all right, but I am not going to allow $100,000,000 to be authorized without having an opportunity to examine the particulars. I had not seen this bill until just now, and have just read it.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, the explanation is simply this: That certain banks now hold the notes and hold the warehouse receipts against this cotton. The Government entered into an agreement with the farmers that if they would reduce acreage the Government would take their holdings of cotton of last year, that which the farmers had on hand, at 10 cents a pound. The Government authorized the local banks, if they saw fit, to advance the 10 cents, hold the warehouse receipts and the notes, and agreed that at any time they could cash them by sending them to the R.F.C.

Arrangements for larger amounts were made with certain banks in New York. Those notes all expire on the 1st day of July. That is the limit. This bill extends the time for the distribution of this cotton, and the desire is to get authority to turn all these obligations and the cotton over to the Agricultural Department and either have the Secretary of the Treasury or the R.F.C. advance the money until such time as the cotton may be sold.

This bill does not provide for an appropriation at all. It is simply the Government assuming this obligation, being amply protected by the possession of the cotton.

Mr. FESS. I shall object, Mr. President, until I have had an opportunity to read the report. I will read the report immediately.

Mr. SMITH. I wish the Senator would, because the time is pretty nearly up now.

Mr. SMITH subsequently said: Mr. President, I should like to recur to Calendar No. 1152. I think the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FESS] is convinced that the measure is all right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] asks unanimous consent to recur to Order of Business 1152. Is there objection?

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, I have examined the report and I have also talked with the Senator from South Carolina, and I find that the obligation of the Government under the provisions of this bill is not in any way changed. It remains the same. May I ask the Senator if he is offering the amendment suggested by the Treasury Department?

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, the amendment of which the Senator speaks is with reference to Order of Business 1153. That has nothing to do with Order No. 1152.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to recurring to Calendar No. 1152?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 3584) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4. (a) The Secretary of Agriculture shall have authority to borrow money upon all cotton in his possession or control and may, at his discretion, deposit as collateral for such loans the warehouse receipts for such cotton.

"(b) There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $100,000,000 to be available, until expended, to the Secretary of Agriculture upon the approval of, and in the amounts determined by, the Secretary of the Treasury for paying off any debt or debts which may have been or may be incurred by the Secretary of Agriculture and discharging any lien or liens which may have arisen or may arise pursuant to part 1 of this title for protecting title to any cotton which may have been or may be acquired by the Secretary of Agriculture under authority of part 1 of this title, and for paying any expenses (including, but not limited to, warehouse charges, insurance, salaries, interest, costs, and commissions) incident to carrying, handling, insuring, and marketing of said cotton and for the purposes described in subsection (e) of this section.

"(c) The appropriation provided for in subsection (b) of this section shall be made available to the Secretary of Agriculture from time to time upon his request and with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. Each such request shall be accompanied by a statement showing by weight and average grade and staple the quantity of cotton held by the Secretary of Agriculture and the approximate aggregate market value thereof.

"(d) It is the purpose of subsections (b) and (c) to provide an alternative method to that provided by subsection (a) for enabling the Secretary of Agriculture to finance the acquisition, carrying, handling, insuring, and marketing of cotton acquired by him under authority of section 3 of this act. The Secretary of Agriculture may at his discretion make use of either or both of the methods provided in this section for obtaining funds for the purposes hereinabove enumerated.

"(e) The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to use in his discretion any funds obtained by him pursuant to the provisions of subsection (a) or (b) of this section or of section 5 for making advances to any agency which may have been or may be established by the Secretary of Agriculture for the handling, carrying, insuring, or marketing of any cotton acquired by the Secretary of Agriculture, to enable any such agency to perform, exercise, and discharge any of the duties, privileges, and functions which such agency may be authorized to perform, exercise, or discharge.

"(f) The proceeds derived from the sale of cotton shall be held for the Secretary of Agriculture by the Treasurer of the United States in a special deposit account and shall be used by the Secretary of Agriculture to discharge the obligations incurred under authority of part 1 of this title. Whenever any cotton shall be marketed the net proceeds (after discharge of other obligations incurred with respect thereto) derived from the sale thereof shall be used, to the extent required, to reimburse the Treasury for such portion of the appropriation hereby provided for as shall have been used, which shall be covered into the Treasury as a miscellaneous receipt. If when all of the cotton acquired by the Secretary of Agriculture shall have been marketed and all of the obligations incurred with respect to such cotton shall have been discharged, and the Treasury reimbursed for any and all sums which may have been advanced pursuant to subsection (b), there shall remain any balance in the hands of the Secretary of Agriculture, such balance shall be transferred to and taken as supplemental to the appropriation provided for by section 12 (a) of this act and may thereafter be used for and devoted to the purposes set forth in said section 12 (a)."

SEC. 2. Section 5 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is hereby authorized and directed to advance money and to make loans to the Secretary of Agriculture for the purpose of providing funds with which to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to perform the duties and functions which he is directed or authorized to perform under the provisions of part 1 of this title, provided such advance of money or such loans shall not be for amounts in excess of the market value of the cotton, or the interest of the Secretary of Agriculture in the cotton, against which the advance or loan is to be made at the time such advance or loan may be applied for by the Secretary of Agriculture, plus costs, expenses, and commissions incurred incidental to handling, carrying, and marketing of such cotton. The Secretary of Agriculture shall not be required to pledge or deposit warehouse receipts or other evidences of title to cotton as security for any advance of money or loans made pursuant hereto, but it shall be sufficient if the Secretary shall give to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation a written statement showing the quantity of cotton by weight and the average grade and staple of the cotton against which the advance or loan is to be made. The amount of notes, bonds, debentures, and other obligations which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized and empowered to issue and to have outstanding at any one time under existing law is hereby increased by an amount sufficient to carry out the provisions of this section."

EXEMPTION OF FLOOR STOCKS FROM TAX

The bill (S. 3419) to exempt articles of machinery belting from the tax on floor stocks imposed by the Agricultural Adjustment Act was announced as next in order.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. SMITH subsequently said: Mr. President, what became of Calendar No. 1153, Senate bill 3419?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That bill was objected to.

Mr. SMITH. I should like to make an explanation, in the absence of the Senator from Maryland.

Under the processing tax, the floor taxes were assessed. It transpired that a lot of those who made belting, the major part of which is cotton, had on hand belting which had become obsolete, and they have this material on hand at the present time. If one reads the report it will be discovered that the only way they can dispose of that material now is to sell it at a price far below the cost of manufacture. The Department thought it was but fair to relieve the holders of these articles from any tax on the floor stock. They cannot sell it. They are today subject to the tax. The Department recommends that this tax not be assessed against this character of manufacture.

There is an amendment attached to the bill which was sent down from the Department subsequently, which provided "that no such credit, refund, or abatement shall be made with respect to any such article which was disposed of by the taxpayer prior to the filing of the claim therefor." In other words, if they have sold, they cannot get any rebate. I will send the amendment to the desk. I ask unanimous consent to recur to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request?

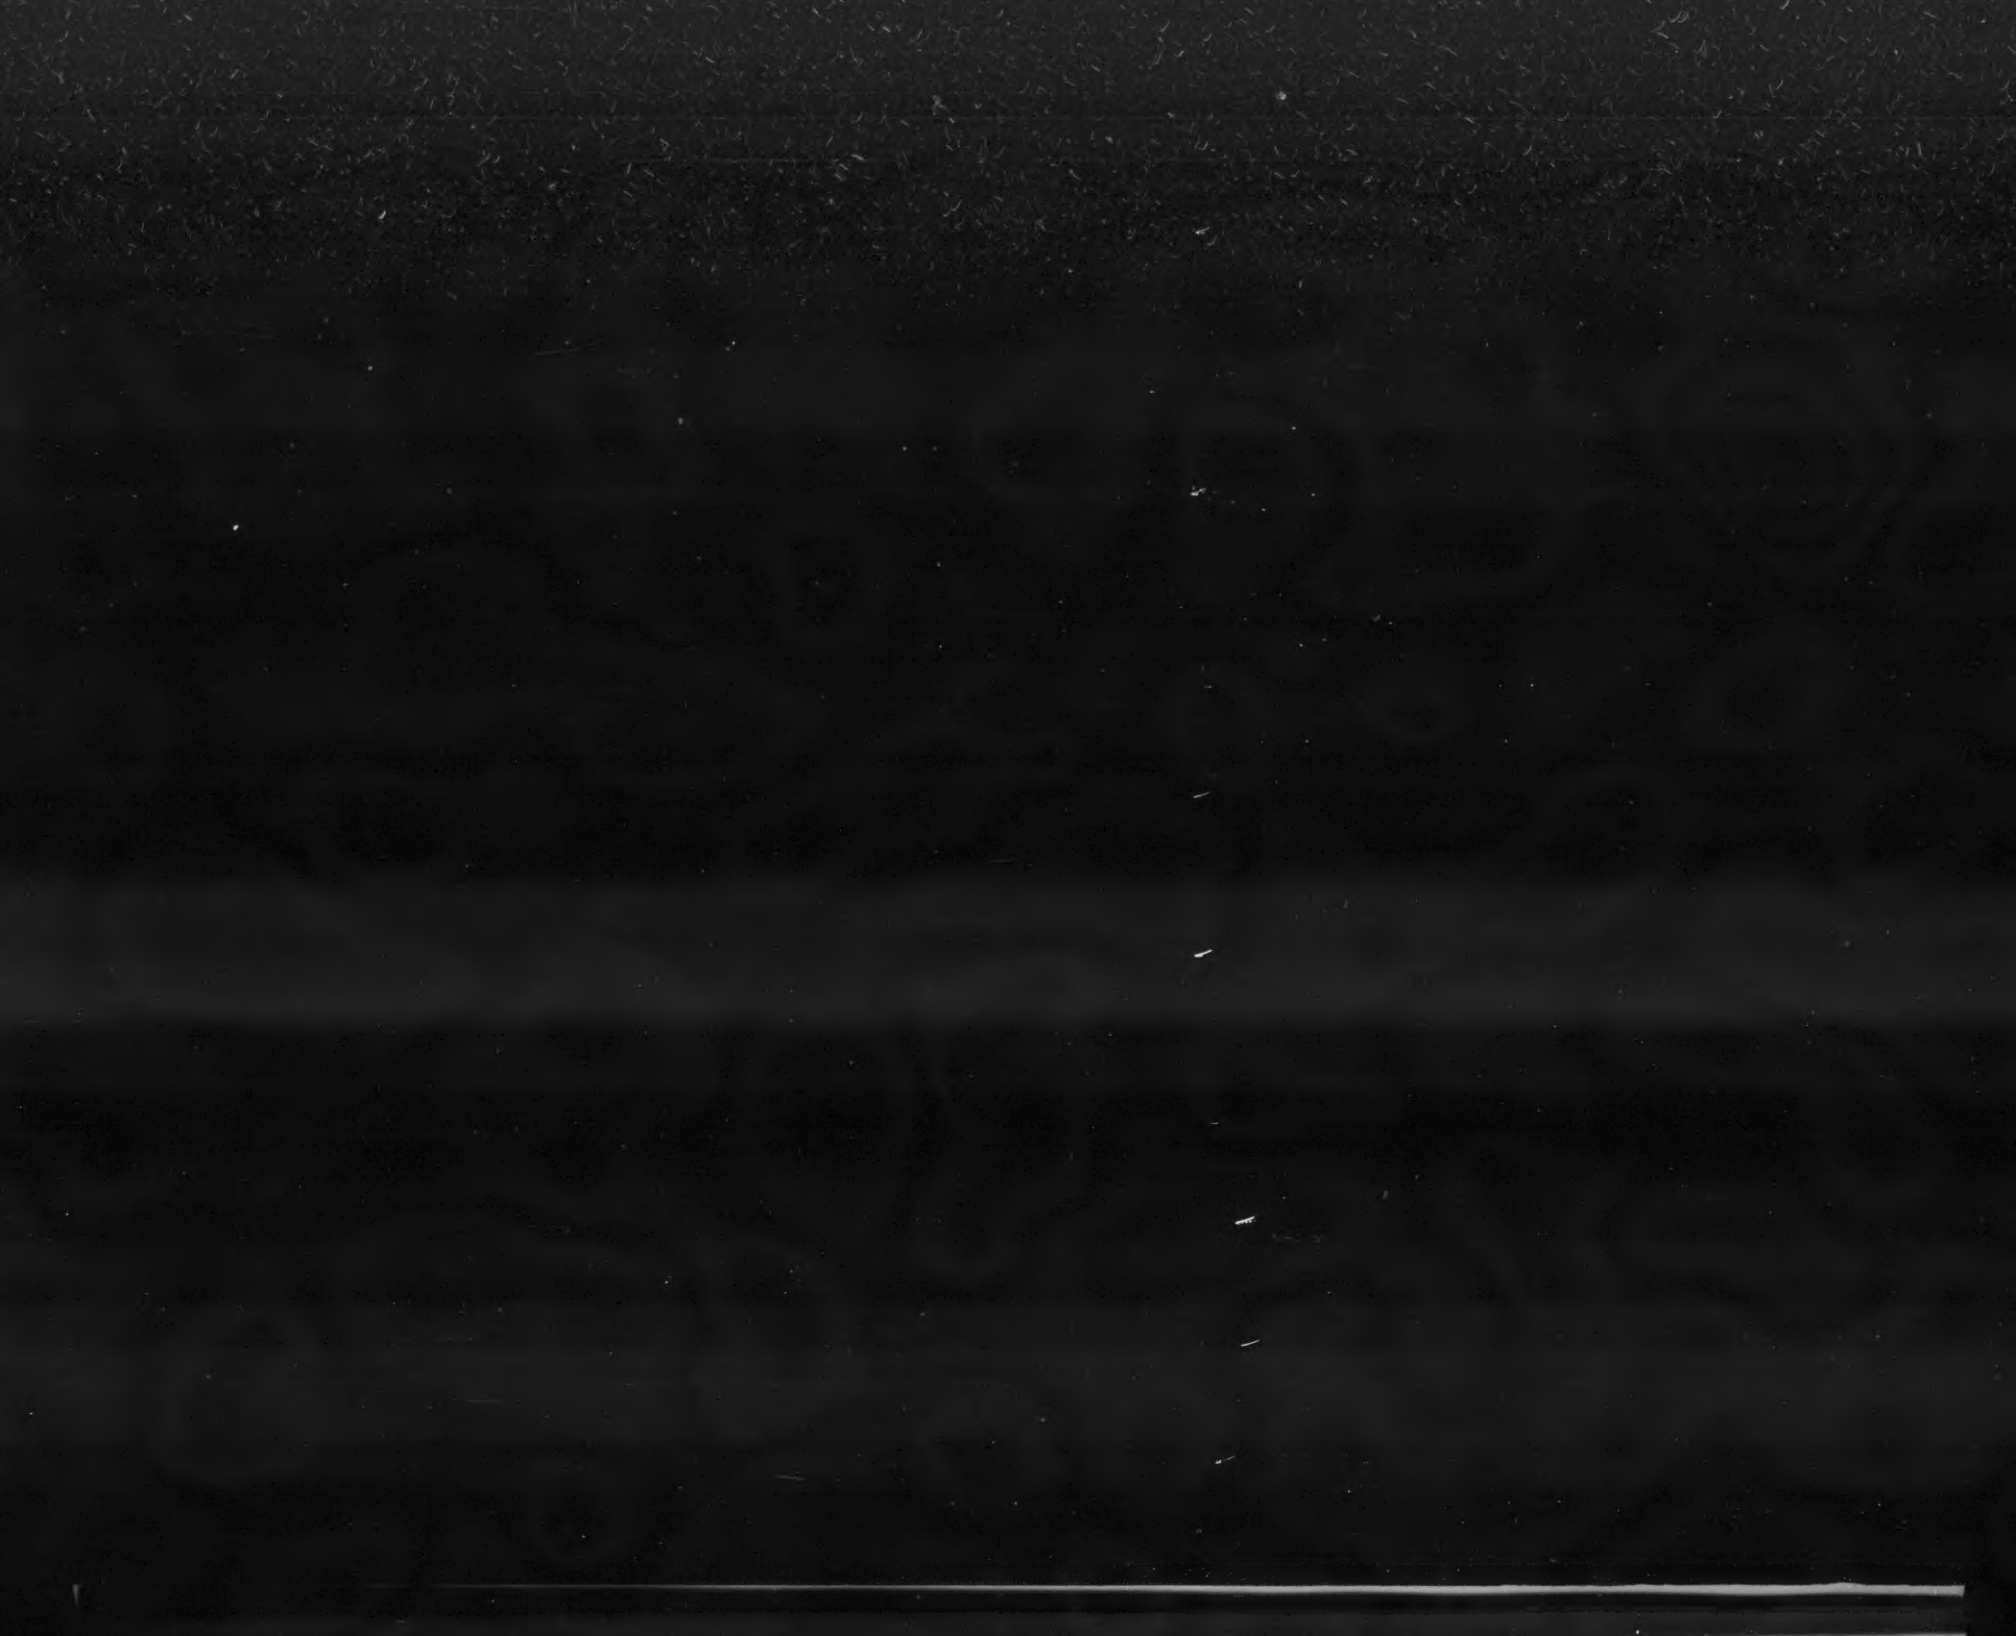
There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed on page 1, at the end of line 13, to insert the following:

Provided further, That no such credit, refund, or abatement shall be made with respect to any such article which was disposed of by the taxpayer prior to the filing of the claim therefor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.



The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, before we vote on the bill, I wish to ask a question. Is this not a bill with reference to an article upon which the processing tax was assessed, and is not this bill for relief from the payment of the processing tax?

Mr. SMITH. The bill provides for relieving those affected of the processing tax. They cannot even sell the form of manufacture referred to. It is a form of belting which they had and could not sell, but it was subject to the tax, because the law provides for a floor tax on all commodities held when the law went into effect.

Mr. FESS. The Senator recognizes that this is an effort to get rid of the processing tax by piecemeal, by offering an amendment here and there.

Mr. SMITH. No; if the Senator will read the report, he will find that those who hold these articles cannot sell them. This belting cannot be sold except at a tremendous loss. As I said previously, it cannot be sold except at a price below the cost of manufacture. It is obsolete.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, would the Senator from South Carolina be willing to accept an amendment to exclude jute bags?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of Senate bill 3419.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CONTINUATION OF CONSIDERATION OF CALENDAR

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at the hour of 2 o'clock the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed for 1 hour with the consideration of the present order of business under the unanimous-consent agreement heretofore entered into.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas asks unanimous consent that at the hour of 2 o'clock the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate continue for 1 hour on the present order of business under the unanimous-consent agreement heretofore entered into. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have no objection, but I suggest to the able leader that perhaps we ought to have a quorum call, as some of the Senators have absented themselves expecting that at the end of the 2 hours the consideration of the unobjected bills on the calendar would be discontinued.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, a quorum is not required.

Mr. KING. I know it is not required, but I am sure some of the Senators who have absented themselves would like to be present.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, a quorum call would take up a material part of the hour. I would rather not have a quorum call.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, can we not proceed until we complete the consideration of the bills on the calendar?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I made that suggestion, Mr. President, in several conferences I had, and it was stated that any such request would be objected to. That arrangement cannot be made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, would the Senator from Arkansas be willing to amend his request so as to include bills that are objected to but which might be considered on a motion to take them up?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No. That would destroy the purposes of the arrangement which I am trying to make. What I am trying to do is to give an opportunity for consideration now for unobjected bills, and, of course, if that is not granted, I shall make an arrangement at some other time.

Mr. NEELY. I have no intention to object. I was just hoping that that course might be pursued.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

INGRAM-DAY LUMBER CO.

Mr. STEPHENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 1118, the bill (S. 854) for the relief of the Ingram-Day Lumber Co.

Mr. GEORGE. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

BENEFITS TO INDIANS

The bill (S. 3645) to conserve and develop Indian lands and resources, to establish a credit system for Indians, to provide for higher education for Indians, to extend toward Indians the right to form business and other organizations, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. STEIWER. Over.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, did I understand that some Senator objected to Senate bill 3645?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection was made.

Mr. STEIWER. I made the objection to which the Senator refers. I will state for the information of the Senator from Montana that since the bill was reported certain matters have been called to my attention which led me to desire to offer some amendments to it. I think we could hardly consider them under the present order. I shall not endeavor to defeat the bill, but will at a later time discuss the matter with the Senator from Montana and see if we cannot reconcile the differences.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

NAVAL AIR STATION, HAMPTON ROADS

The bill (H.R. 6847) providing for the acquisition of additional lands for the naval air station at Hampton Roads Naval Operating Base, Norfolk, Va., was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of that bill.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, this bill provides for the giving of authority to the Navy Department to acquire additional lands adjacent to the naval station at Hampton Roads. That naval station is the largest on the eastern coast. It now comprises only 120 acres of land. This bill is approved by the Secretary of the Navy and permits the acquisition of 540 acres of additional land, but it carries no appropriation, and the appropriation will have to be provided in a future appropriation bill.

Mr. KING. The Senator from Virginia knows that it will involve a large appropriation. How much is it to cost?

Mr. BYRD. It provides for the acquisition of 540 acres of land, at an expenditure of $400,000, and I will say to the Senator from Utah that when the fleet is on the eastern coast it is necessary to have this additional land, because the present air base can accommodate only 120 planes, and there are 258 planes connected with the fleet when it comes to the east coast.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase or condemnation, additional tracts of land adjacent to and lying southeastwardly from the Hampton Roads naval operating base, Norfolk, Va., said land being generally known as "East Camp", together with such additional land adjoining same as is necessary for the development and expansion of naval air activities at said station, and comprising approximately 540 acres and being bounded by Masons Creek on the north and east, Bush Creek on the west, and the Virginian Railway on the south; and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the purchase of this entire tract the sum of $400,000.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 429) for the relief of Dominick Edward Maggio, was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 430) for the relief of Leo James McCoy was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Over!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 630) for the relief of Ray Funcannon was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Over!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

GRAND CALUMET RIVER BRIDGE, IND.

The bill (H.R. 9064) granting the consent of Congress to the State of Indiana to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Grand Calumet River near Clark Street, in Gary, Ind., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TENNESSEE RIVER BRIDGE, SHEFFIELD, ALA.

The bill (H.R. 9141) granting the consent of Congress to the State of Alabama, its agent or agencies, and to Colbert County and to Lauderdale County, in the State of Alabama, and to the city of Sheffield, Colbert County, Ala., and to the city of Florence, Lauderdale County, Ala., or to any two of them, or to either of them, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge, and approaches thereto, across the Tennessee River at a point between the city of Sheffield, Ala., and the city of Florence, Ala., suitable to the interests of navigation was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SAVANNAH RIVER BRIDGE, SYLVANIA, GA.

The bill (H.R. 9313) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Savannah River at or near Burtons Ferry, near Sylvania, Ga., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LAKE SABINE BRIDGE, PORT ARTHUR, TEX.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 9526) authorizing the city of Port Arthur, Tex., or any commission designated by it, and its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge over Lake Sabine at or near Port Arthur, Tex.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I offer certain perfecting amendments which I have prepared and which will put the bill in shape to effect its purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments will be stated.

The amendments proposed by Mr. SHEPPARD were, on page 1, line 5, after the name "Port Arthur" and the comma, to strike out "Texas, or any commisson designated by it" and insert "Texas, or the Port Arthur Bridge Commission (hereinafter called the commission) hereby created"; in line 6, after the word "successors", to strike out "and assigns"; on page 2, line 7, after the name "Texas" and the comma, to strike out "or any commission designated by it, and its successors and assigns" and insert "or the commission hereby created and its successors"; in line 20, after the name "Texas" and the comma, to strike out "or any commission designated by it, and its successors and assigns" and insert "or the commission hereby created and its successors"; on page 3, after line 20, to strike out "SEC. 5. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved" and insert:

SEC. 5. There is hereby created a body corporate and politic to be known as the "Port Arthur Bridge Commission" which shall consist of five members approved by the mayor of Port Arthur, subject to the approval of a majority of the city commission.

On page 3, after line 22, after the amendment just stated, to insert the following:

SEC. 6. The commission shall consist of five members appointed by the mayor of Port Arthur, and shall be a body politic and corporate constituting a public-benefit corporation and shall be deemed a public body within the meaning of the National Industrial Recovery Act. The commission shall elect a chairman from its members and may establish rules and regulations for the government of its own business. Each member shall serve for a term of 5 years and until his successor has been appointed and has qualified except that the initial terms of the members shall be respectively 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 years. The initial term of the member elected chairman shall be 5 years, and the commission shall determine by lot the initial terms of the other members. The mayor of Port Arthur, with the approval of a majority of the city commission, may appoint a successor to hold office for the unexpired term of any member in whose office a vacancy shall occur by death, resignation, or otherwise. Each member shall qualify by giving such bond as may be fixed by the governing body of the city of Port Arthur conditioned for the faithful performance of all duties required by this act. Three members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. No member shall receive a salary for his services as member, but each member shall be paid his actual expenses, not exceeding $5 per day, in the performance of his duties hereunder. Members of the commission may be removed for cause by the mayor of Port Arthur and the majority of the city commission. The commission may employ a secretary, treasurer, engineers, attorneys, and such other experts, assistants, and employees as it may deem necessary, who shall be entitled to receive such compensation as the commission may determine. All salaries and expenses shall be paid solely from the funds provided under the authority of this act.

SEC. 7. The commission shall have all the powers and authority necessary or convenient for the carrying out of the purposes of this act, including (but without limitation) the following rights, powers, and authority:

(a) To have perpetual succession as a corporation;

(b) To sue and be sued, implead and be impleaded, complain and defend in all courts of law and equity;

(c) To adopt, use, and alter a corporate seal;

(d) To acquire, purchase, hold, use, lease, mortgage, sell, transfer, and dispose of any property, real, personal, or mixed, tangible or intangible, or any interest therein;

(e) To make bylaws for the management and regulation of its affairs;

(f) To appoint officers, agents, employees, and servants, to prescribe their duties and to fix their compensation;

(g) To fix, alter, charge, and collect tolls and other charges for transit over and use of such bridge;

(h) To borrow money, make and issue negotiable notes, bonds, and other evidences of indebtedness of the commission, and to secure the payment of such obligations or any thereof by mortgage, lien, pledge or deed of trust upon all or any of the property of the commission, and to make agreements with the purchasers or holders of such obligations, or with others in connection with any such obligations, issued or to be leased, as the commission shall deem advisable, and in general to provide for the security for said obligations and the rights of the holders thereof;

(i) To make contracts of every kind and nature and to execute all instruments necessary or convenient for the carrying on of its affairs; and

(j) Without limitation of the foregong, to borrow money from the United States Government or any corporation or agency created, designated, or established by the United States and to enter into contracts with the United States or such corporation or agency.

SEC. 8. Without limiting any powers anywhere in this act granted to the commission, the commission is hereby authorized to provide for the payment of the cost of the bridge and its approaches and the necessary land, easements, and appurtenances thereto by an issue or issues of negotiable bonds of the commission and to secure the payment of all or any such bonds by mortgage, lien, pledge, or deed of trust upon all or any of its property. Said bonds shall be authorized by resolution of the commission and shall bear such date or dates, be in such forms and contain such provisions as the commission may determine and as may be provided in such resolution or in the mortgage or deed of trust or other instrument securing said bonds. Any resolution or resolutions authorizing such bonds may contain provisions, which shall be part of the contract with the holders of such bonds, as to (a) the rates of tolls and other charges to be charged by the commission for transit over or use of the bridge, (b) the registration of the bonds as to principal only or as to principal and interest, and the interchangeability and exchangeability of such bonds, (c) the issuance of temporary bonds or interim receipts pending the preparation of definitive bonds, and the terms and provisions of such temporary bonds or interim receipts, (d) the redemption of the bonds, and the price or prices, not exceeding 105 and accrued interest, at which they shall be redeemable, (e) the setting aside of reserves or sinking funds and the regulation and disposition thereof, (f) limitations upon the issuance of additional bonds, (g) the terms and provisions of any mortgage, deed of trust, or other instrument under which the bonds may be issued or by which they may be secured, and (h) any other or additional agreement, with the holders of such bonds. The bonds shall be signed by such officers as the commission shall determine, and coupon bonds shall have attached thereto interest coupons bearing the facsimile signature of the treasurer or other corresponding officer of the commission. Any such bonds may be issued and delivered, notwithstanding the fact that one or more of the officers signing such bonds, or the treasurer or corresponding officer whose facsimile signature shall be upon the coupons or any thereof, shall have ceased to be such officer or officers at the time when such bonds shall actually be delivered.

The commission may enter into any mortgages, deeds of trust, indentures, or other agreements with any bank or trust company or other person or persons in the United States having power to enter into the same, including the United States Government or any corporation or agency designated or created by it, as security for the bonds, and may transfer, convey, mortgage, or pledge all or any of the property of the commission thereunder. Such mortgage, deed of trust, indenture, or other agreement may contain such provisions as may be customary in such instruments or as the commission may authorize, including (but without limitation) provisions as to (a) the terms and provisions of the bonds or the resolution providing for the issuance of the same, (b) the construction, operation, maintenance, repair, and insurance of the properties of the commission and the duties of the commission with reference thereto, (c) the application of funds and the safeguarding of funds on hand or on deposit, (d) the rights and remedies of such trustee and the holders of the bonds (which may include restrictions upon the individual right of action of bondholders), and (e) possession of the properties covered by such mortgage, deed of trust, indenture, or other agreement.

The bonds of the commission may be sold in such manner, at such time or times, and at such price or prices as the commission may determine, but no such sale shall be made at a price which would make the interest cost to maturity on the money received therefor, computed with relation to the absolute maturity of the bonds in accordance with standard tables of bond values, exceed 6 percent per annum. The cost of the bridge shall be deemed to include interest during construction of the bridge, and for not exceeding 12 months thereafter, and all engineering, legal, architectural, traffic-surveying, and other expenses incident to the construction of the bridge and the acquisition of the necessary property, and incident to the financing thereof, including the cost of acquiring existing franchises, rights, plans, and works of and relating to the bridge, now owned by any person, firm, or corporation, and the cost of purchasing all or any part of the shares of stock of any such corporate owner if, in the judgment of the commission, such purchases should be found expedient. If the proceeds of the bonds issued shall exceed the cost as finally determined, the excess shall be placed in the sinking fund hereinafter provided.

SEC. 9. After payment of the bonds and interest and discharge of any other obligations of the commission, or after a sinking fund sufficient for such payment and discharge shall have been provided and shall be held for that purpose, the commission shall be authorized to deliver deeds or other suitable instruments of conveyance of the interest of the commission in and to the bridge, that part within the State of Texas to the State of Texas or any municipality thereof or any agency of said State or any such municipality as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereinafter referred to as the "Texas interests") and that part within the State of Louisiana to the State of Louisiana or to any municipality thereof or any agency of said State or any such municipality as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereinafter referred to as the "Louisiana interests"), under the condition that the bridge shall thereafter be free of tolls and be properly maintained, operated, insured, and repaired by the Texas interests and the Louisiana interests, as may be agreed upon; but if either the Texas interests or the Louisiana interests shall not be authorized to accept or shall not accept the same under such conditions, the commission may transfer the bridge to either of said interests which shall so accept the same, and if neither interest shall so accept the same, then the bridge shall continue to be owned, maintained, operated, insured, and repaired by the commission, and the rates of tolls shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, insurance, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management, including reasonable reserves, until such time as the Texas interests or the Louisiana interests, or both, shall be authorized to accept and shall accept such conveyance under the conditions aforesaid.

SEC. 10. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize or permit the commission or any member thereof to create any obligation or incur any liability other than such obligations and liabilities as are dischargeable solely from funds provided by this act. No obligation created or liability incurred pursuant to this act shall be an obligation or liability of any member or members of the commission, but shall be chargeable solely to the funds herein provided, nor shall any indebtedness created pursuant to this act be an indebtedness of the United States.

SEC. 11. All provisions of this act may be enforced, or the violation thereof prevented, by mandamus, injunction, or other appropriate remedy brought by the attorney general for the State of Texas, or by the attorney general for the State of Louisiana, or by the United States district attorney for the district in which the bridge may be located, in part, in any court having competent jurisdiction of the subject matter and of the parties.

SEC. 12. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act authorizing the city of Port Arthur, Tex., or the commission hereby created and its successors, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge over Lake Sabine, at or near Port Arthur, Tex."

MISSOURI RIVER BRIDGE, BROWNVILLE, NEBR.

The bill (H.R. 9567) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Brownville, Nebr., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DENIS HEALY

The bill (S. 829) for the relief of Denis Healy was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon persons honorably discharged from the United States Navy Denis Healy shall be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the United States Navy on the 23d day of December 1902: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

MICHAEL F. CALNAN

The bill (S. 2787) for the relief of Michael F. Calnan was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

ANNIE BRUCE

The bill (H.R. 6246) granting 6 months' pay to Annie Bruce was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SALE OF MILK AND CREAM IN THE DISTRICT

Mr. KING. Mr. President, before reaching it, I have had a number of requests for hearings upon a bill which has passed the House, being House bill 6130, an act to prevent misrepresentation and deception in the sale of milk and cream in the District of Columbia. This is Order of Business No. 1305. I feel that under all the circumstances I ought to move to recommit the bill to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the bill referred to by the Senator from Utah will be recommitted to the Committee on the District of Columbia, in accordance with his request.

BRIDGE ACROSS COLUMBIA RIVER, WASH.

The bill (S. 3615) authorizing the county of Wahkiakum, a legal political subdivision of the State of Washington, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Columbia River between Puget Island and the mainland, Cathlamet, State of Washington, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the county of Wahkiakum, a legal political subdivision of the State of Washington, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Columbia River between Puget Island and the mainland, Cathlamet, State of Washington, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in said act.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

AGATE PASS BRIDGE, WASHINGTON

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3604) to authorize the Bainbridge Island Chamber of Commerce, a corporation, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across Agate Pass connecting Bainbridge Island with the mainland in Kitsap County, State of Washington, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments, on page 1, line 3, after the word "That", to strike out "in order to promote interstate commerce, improve the Postal Service, and provide for military and other purposes" and insert "the act approved March 2, 1929, authorizing the"; in line 7, after the word "assigns", to strike out "be, and is hereby, authorized"; on page 2, line 2, after the name "Washington", to strike out "at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled 'An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters', approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act" and insert "be, and the same is hereby, revived and reenacted: Provided, That this act shall be null and void unless the actual construction of the bridge herein referred to be commenced within 1 year and completed within 3 years from the date of approval hereof", so as to make the section read:

That the act approved March 2, 1929, authorizing the Bainbridge Island Chamber of Commerce, a corporation, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across Agate Pass connecting Bainbridge Island with the mainland in Kitsap County, State of Washington, be, and the same is hereby, revived and reenacted: Provided, That this act shall be null and void unless the actual construction of the bridge herein referred to be commenced within 1 year and completed within 3 years from the date of approval hereof.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, after line 11, to strike out section 2, as follows:

SEC. 2. After the completion of such bridge, as determined by the Secretary of War, either the State of Washington, any political subdivision thereof within or adjoining which any part of such bridge is located, or any two or more of them jointly, may at any time acquire and take over all right, title, and interest in such bridge and its approaches, and any interest in real property necessary therefor, by purchase or by condemnation or expropriation, in accordance with the laws of such State governing the acquisition of private property for public purposes by condemnation or expropriation. If at any time after the expiration of 10 years after the completion of such bridge the same is acquired by condemnation or expropriation, the amount of damages or compensation to be allowed shall not include goodwill, going value, or prospective revenues or profits, but shall be limited to the sum of (1) the actual cost of constructing such bridge and its approaches, less a reasonable deduction for actual depreciation in value; (2) the actual cost of acquiring such interests in real property; (3) actual financing and promotion cost, not to exceed 10 percent of the sum of the cost of constructing the bridge and its approaches and acquiring such interests in real property; and (4) actual expenditures for necessary improvements.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 3, after line 10, to insert:

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 3, after line 12, to strike out:

SEC. 3. If such bridge shall at any time be taken over or acquired by the State of Washington, or by any municipality or other political subdivision or public agency thereof, under the provisions of section 2 of this act, and if tolls are thereafter charged for the use thereof, the rates of toll shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the amount paid therefor, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 20 years from the date of acquiring same. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls, or the rates of toll shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management. An accurate record of the amount paid for acquiring the bridge and its approaches, the actual expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, after line 11, to strike out:

SEC. 4. The Bainbridge Island Chamber of Commerce, a corporation, its successors and assigns, shall within 90 days after the completion of such bridge file with the Secretary of War and with the highway department of the State of Washington, a sworn itemized statement showing the actual original cost of constructing the bridge and its approaches, the actual cost of acquiring any interest in real property necessary therefor, and the actual financing and promotion costs. The Secretary of War may, and at the request of the highway department of the State of Washington shall, at any time within 3 years after the completion of such bridge, investigate such costs and determine the accuracy and the reasonableness of the costs alleged in the statement of costs so filed and shall make a finding of the actual and reasonable costs of constructing, financing, and promoting such bridge. For the purpose of such investigation the said Bainbridge Island Chamber of Commerce, a corporation, its successors and assigns, shall make available all of its records in connection with the construction, financing, and promotion thereof. The findings of the Secretary of War as to the reasonable costs of the construction, financing, and promotion of the bridge, shall be conclusive for the purposes mentioned in section 2 of this act, subject only to review in a court of equity for fraud or gross mistake.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, after line 11, to strike out:

SEC. 5. The right to sell, assign, transfer, and mortgage all the rights, powers, and privileges conferred by this act is hereby granted to the Bainbridge Island Chamber of Commerce, a corporation, its successors and assigns; and any corporation to which or any person to whom such rights, powers, and privileges may be sold, assigned, or transferred, or who shall acquire the same by mortgage foreclosure or otherwise, is hereby authorized and empowered to exercise the same as fully as though conferred herein directly upon such corporation or person.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, after line 21, to strike out:

SEC. 6. All contracts made in connection with the construction of the bridge authorized by this act and which shall involve the expenditure of more than $5,000 shall be let by competitive bidding. Such contracts shall be advertised for a reasonable time in some newspaper of general circulation published in the State in which the bridge is located and in the vicinity thereof; sealed bids shall be required and the contracts shall be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder. Verified copies or abstracts of all bids received and of the bid or bids accepted shall be promptly furnished to the highway department of the State in which such bridge is located. A failure to comply in good faith with the provisions of this section shall render null and void any contract made in violation thereof, and the Secretary of War may, after hearings, order the suspension of all work upon such bridge until the provisions of this section shall have been fully complied with.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, after line 13, to strike out:

SEC. 7. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to revive and reenact the act entitled 'An act to authorize the Bainbridge Island Chamber of Commerce, a corporation, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across Agate Pass connecting Bainbridge Island with the mainland in Kitsap County, State of Washington', approved March 2, 1929."

MISSOURI RIVER BRIDGE, GARRISON, N.DAK.

The bill (H.R. 9320) to further extend the times for commencement and completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Garrison, N.Dak., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (H.R. 9326) granting the consent of Congress to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Susquehanna River at or near York Furnace, Pa., was announced as next in order.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I ask that order of business no. 1171, being House bill 9326 and Order of Business 1172, being House bill 9401 go over. I ask that they go over at the request of a Senator who is now temporarily absent from the Chamber.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEELY in the chair). Without objection, the bills referred to by the Senator from Oregon will be passed over.

ST. MARYS RIVER BRIDGE, MICH.

The bill (H.R. 9585) authorizing the city of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., its successors, and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the St. Marys River at or near Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY ALLEN YOUNG

The resolution (S.Res. 223) granting a gratuity to Mary Allen Young, submitted by Mr. McNARY on April 27, 1934, and reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, was considered and agreed to as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate is hereby authorized and directed to pay from the contingent fund of the Senate to Mary Allen Young, daughter of John Sims, late an employee of the Senate, a sum equal to 1 year's compensation at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered inclusive of funeral expenses and all other allowances.

INVESTIGATION OF CONTRIBUTIONS AND EXPENDITURES IN SENATORIAL CONTESTS

The resolution (S.Res. 173) creating a special committee to investigate contributions and expenditures in senatorial contests in 1934, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McNARY. I should like to ask the Senator from Missouri if the resolution conforms to resolutions of similar character heretofore adopted?

Mr. CLARK. I will say to the Senator from Oregon that this resolution is identical with the resolutions which were adopted in the last Congress and the preceding Congress, with the exception that in lines 12 to 18, page 2, a proviso is added which makes it the duty of the committee in cases in which a formal complaint is filed, supported by affidavit of probable cause upon information and belief by a candidate, or his authorized manager, 20 days before the date of the primary, immediately to proceed to make an investigation.

In other words, the theory of that, I may say to the Senator, is that it has been the practice in the past to conduct such investigations always after the primary. The effect of the adoption of the proviso will be simply to afford a method by which a candidate engaged in the primary may have the benefit of the processes of the committee before the primary if he files formal application.

Mr. McNARY. Is the committee to be bipartisan in character?

Mr. CLARK. Exactly the same provision is made with regard to that as has heretofore been contained in similar resolutions, that the committee shall be bipartisan in character and that no member of the committee shall be appointed from any State in which a Senator is to be elected this year.

Mr. McNARY. How many members is the committee to have?

Mr. CLARK. It is to have five.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, my experience with this kind of resolution is such that I must object. I have seen such resolutions abused so glaringly, and have been the victim of them, that I cannot sit here and have the opportunity afforded again. I object.

Mr. CLARK. I wish to state to the Senator from Louisiana that this resolution will be brought up in due course in this body, and the committee will very likely be authorized by the Senate, whether the Senator wishes it or not.

Mr. LONG. That is all right; we will consider that question when we come to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made, the resolution will be passed over.

STRAITS OF MACKINAC BRIDGE, MICHIGAN

The bill (S. 3415) authorizing the State of Michigan, by and through the Mackinac Straits Bridge Authority, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge or series of bridges across the Straits of Mackinac at or near a point between St. Ignace, Mich., and the Lower Peninsula of Michigan was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to facilitate interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, the State of Michigan by and through the Mackinac Straits Bridge Authority, its successors and assigns, be, and is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge or series of bridges and approaches thereto across the Straits of Mackinac, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near a point between St. Ignace, Mich., and the Lower Peninsula of Michigan, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

SEC. 2. There is hereby conferred upon the Mackinac Straits Bridge Authority, its successors and assigns, all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use real estate and other property needed for the location, construction, operation, and maintenance of such bridge and its approaches as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation or expropriation of property for public purposes in such State.

SEC. 3. The Mackinac Straits Bridge Authority is hereby authorized to enter upon, use, and possess title to any United States lands as may be needed for, or be useful for, the construction and operation of the bridge and project, as may be approved by the Secretary of War.

SEC. 4. The right to sell, assign, transfer, and mortgage all the rights, powers, and privileges conferred by this act is hereby granted to the Mackinac Straits Bridge Authority, its successors and assigns; and any body to whom such rights, powers, and privileges may be sold, assigned, or transferred, or who shall acquire the same by mortgage foreclosure or otherwise, is hereby authorized and empowered to exercise the same as fully as though conferred herein directly upon such body.

SEC. 5. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

GEORGE DACAS

The bill (H.R. 4541) for the relief of George Dacas was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

E. C. WEST

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 7437) for the relief of E. C. West, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on line 7, after the word "reimbursement", to insert the words "in full", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to E. C. West, of Dunn, N.C., the sum of $201.59 as reimbursement in full of substitute-clerk hire paid by him from December 31, 1921, to September 30, 1922, while acting as postmaster at Dunn, N.C.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

LANDS IN THE BOROUGH OF BROOKLAWN, N.J.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 171) for the relief of certain purchasers of lands in the borough of Brooklawn, State of New Jersey, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims, with amendments.

The first amendments was on page 9, after line 10, to insert:

Provided, That said refunds shall be in full settlement of all claims that such owners of lands, as hereinbefore described in this act, may have against the Government of the United States.

So as to make the section read:

That the United States Shipping Board is authorized and directed to make refunds to present owners of lands in the borough of Brooklawn, in the State of New Jersey, which have been purchased by them from the United States, of 28 percent of the purchase price of such purchased lands where the full purchase price of said lands has been paid by such owners into the Treasury of the United States: Provided, That said refunds shall be in full settlement of all claims that such owners of lands, as hereinbefore described in this act, may have against the Government of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, page 2, line 6, after the word "act", to insert:

Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated by virtue of this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated by virtue of this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like an explanation with regard to this bill.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. President, this is a project that was started by the Shipping Board. During the World War they built 400 or 500 houses. After the war was over they tried to sell them. For some of them they received cash and for some they took mortgages. The consequence is that if they buy back the property under foreclosure of the mortgages there is not enough taxable property left in the borough to pay for the schools, fire engines, or anything else. They sold some of the property at auction, but every time they have offered it for sale the Board has had to buy it back; so that the property is just brought back into the hands of the Government again. It is getting nowhere with it, and school and other activities of the town are stopped.

This bill is designed to relieve the purchasers of part of the purchase price, which will enable them to keep their homes and will enable the municipality to go ahead. The bill has been approved by the former head of the Shipping Board and by Admiral Cone, who was also head of the Shipping Board. It was gone into very carefully by both of them and they have approved it.

Mr. KING. I ask the Senator what is the amount involved?

Mr. KEAN. The amount involved is $163,000.

Mr. KING. Will that discharge the entire liability?

Mr. KEAN. That will be the maximum expense to the United States. The passage of the bill will relieve the Board; otherwise they will have all these houses on their hands, and they will have to keep them in repair, the cost of which will amount to a good deal more than the sum mentioned.

Mr. KING. The Senator will perceive that the bill contains no limitation. It provides:

SEC. 2. There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary.

Mr. KEAN. If the Senator will read the report on page 3, I think that is made clear.

Mr. KING. The Senator stated, as I understood, that the amount required is $160,000?

Mr. KEAN. It is $163,400.

Mr. KING. How does the Senator reach that amount?

Mr. KEAN. It will be found in the report on the third page.

Mr. KING. I shall not object to the consideration of the bill, but I desire to offer an amendment because I do not like the unlimited authority conferred. I move to amend, on page 2, line 5, after the word "necessary", by inserting "not to exceed $163,000."

Mr. KEAN. Will not the Senator make it $164,000?

Mr. KING. I shall not be outdone in generosity by the Senator from New Jersey. I move to amend, on page 2, line 5, after the word "necessary", by inserting "not to exceed $164,000."

Mr. KEAN. I will accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Utah.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GRIER-LOWRENCE CONSTRUCTION CO.

The bill (S. 3394) for the relief of the Grier-Lowrence Construction Co. was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like an explanation of the bill.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, the bill is for the relief of one of the bridge companies which constructed a bridge across the Potomac River, based upon two considerations.

First, the damage to the contractor is based on the fact that the plans were not supplied, the opportunity to do the work was not afforded, and the contracting company was delayed.

The other consideration is that the drawings of the Commission, which had charge of the construction of the Arlington Bridge, represented that the soil was in a certain condition. The bid was made on the basis of that soil condition, the representation being made that it was substantial yellow clay. When the contractor dug down he found that the soil was muck and he had great difficulty in getting a foundation. He also found there was an old railroad bed under there which had caused or permitted the river to seep in.

The claim is in quite a considerable figure, $79,933. The bill has been passed by the House. It is not recommended by Mr. Ickes. However, Mr. Ickes said:

If, as a result of an examination of the facts in this case, the Congress determines that the Grier-Lowrence Construction Co. is entitled to relief, this Department will interpose no objection to the passage of the bill.

There are the facts, without going into great detail. The contract was made under a misrepresentation by the Government of conditions. The contractor was ruined and put out of business by reason of the loss sustained. The corporation was ruined, and the members of the corporation were ruined.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 4, to strike out "Grier-Lowrence" and insert "Grier-Lowrance"; in line 7, after the word "settlement", to insert "of all claims against the Government of the United States"; in line 9, to strike out "Grier-Lowrence" and insert "Grier-Lowrance"; and on page 2, at the end of the bill, to insert a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the Grier-Lowrance Construction Co., of Statesville, N.C., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $74,723.97, in full settlement of all claims against the Government of the United States on account of extra work performed by the Grier-Lowrance Construction Co. for which no payments have been made, and deductions imposed under contract dated May 18, 1929, for the construction of foundations for the structures comprising the bridge plaza and water gate of the Arlington Memorial Bridge project, Washington, D.C.: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read "A bill for the relief of the Grier-Lowrance Construction Co."

A. C. FRANCIS

The bill (H.R. 2748) for the relief of A. C. Francis was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

E. B. ROSE

The bill (H.R. 2749) for the relief of E. B. Rose was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JUDD W. HULBERT

The bill (H.R. 4932) for the relief of Judd W. Hulbert was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OSCAR P. COX

The bill (H.R. 5935) for the relief of Oscar P. Cox, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. PLEASANT LAWRENCE PARR

The bill (H.R. 6890) for the relief of Mrs. Pleasant Lawrence Parr was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. JOSEPH RONCOLI

The bill (H.R. 7028) for the relief of Mrs. Joseph Roncoli was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LT. H. W. TAYLOR

The bill (H.R. 5780) for the relief of Lt. H. W. Taylor, United States Navy, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANNIE MORAN

The bill (H.R. 4272) for the relief of Annie Moran was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H.R. 194) to refund to Caroline M. Eagan income tax erroneously and illegally collected was announced as next in order.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I think the bill should go over. It involves a refund of income taxes paid. It has been passed upon by the Claims Committee and no doubt was regularly referred to that committee, but obviously it ought to have gone to the Finance Committee. I ask that it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

SHELBY J. BEENE ET AL.

The bill (H.R. 5736) for the relief of Shelby J. Beene, Mrs. Shelby J. Beene, Leroy T. Waller, and Mrs. Leroy T. Waller was announced as next in order.

Mr. HATFIELD and Mr. McKELLAR. Over.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, will the Senators withhold their objection while I make an explanation of the bill?

The bill provides for the relief of certain persons who were erroneously assessed and compelled to pay, under judgment of the court, certain income taxes. There were 48 partners connected with the transaction. Assessment was made against the 48 partners. Four of them resisted payment. The Board of Tax Appeals decided against them. The circuit court of appeals decided against them. They made application for a writ of certiorari to the Supreme Court which was refused. The remaining 44 partners in the same transaction paid the tax assessment under protest and instituted suit in the Federal district court.

Mr. McKELLAR. Does the Department recommend repayment of the taxes?

Mr. OVERTON. Yes.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. The bill would merely put the four on the same basis as the 44?

Mr. OVERTON. That is correct.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. It would make uniform the treatment of all of them?

Mr. OVERTON. Yes. The Supreme Court of the United States decided in reference to the other 44, in granting the writ, that they should be reimbursed the taxes which had been erroneously assessed against them.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. The issues were in no important detail materially different from those in the case in which the refund was allowed?

Mr. OVERTON. Not only was there no material difference, but they were upon the same record. Therefore, I ask that the objection be withdrawn. I wish to have the amendment rejected. The amendment strikes out the allowance of interest, but interest was allowed to the other 44 taxpayers.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I believe if the Senator insists on that point he is likely to defeat his purpose. The Government does not pay interest.

Mr. OVERTON. They do in cases of this kind, under the act of 1933.

Mr. McKELLAR. There were some 40 or 50 of these claimants, and all of them except four took an appeal to the Supreme Court. Did the four whom we are now asked to favor refuse to take an appeal, or how did it happen that they did not appeal with the rest? In other words, are they in this way getting the benefit of the court action of the many? If so, I have my doubts about whether or not the bill ought to be passed at all.

Mr. OVERTON. No, Mr. President; that is not the case.

Mr. McKELLAR. Why is it that they were not included?

Mr. OVERTON. I will explain the situation.

These four refused to pay. The Board of Tax Appeals decided against them. The circuit court of appeals decided against them. They applied for writ of certiorari to the Supreme Court and the Supreme Court refused the writ. That is the case of the four.

In the case of the other 44, they paid under protest, and instituted suit to recover in the district court. Their claim was disallowed. They appealed to the circuit court of appeals. Their claim was disallowed there. Then they appealed for a writ of certiorari to the Supreme Court of the United States; and the Supreme Court, which had previously denied a writ of certiorari under the same issues and the same facts to the 4 who are now asking for relief, granted it to the 44, and, on a review of the case, decided that the payment was erroneous. The record was exactly the same in both series of cases.

Mr. McKELLAR. Under those circumstances, if the Senator is willing to let the bill go through without interest, I shall not object to its consideration.

Mr. OVERTON. Will the Senator hear me for just a moment on the matter of interest?

Under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, the other 44 were allowed interest. Under the Revenue Act of 1933, interest at the rate of 6 percent is allowed on these refunds. It is, therefore, the policy of the Federal Government to allow interest in these cases.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. But they paid.

Mr. McKELLAR. They paid.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McGILL in the chair). The time of the Senator from Louisiana has expired. Objection is heard to the consideration of the bill at this time, and the bill will be passed over.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 3516) for the relief of the Morgan Decorating Co. was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEELY in the chair). The bill will be passed over.

LILLIAN MORDEN

The bill (S. 527) for the relief of Lillian Morden was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the minority report on this bill. This lady claims to have contracted influenza while serving in a hospital.

Mr. KING. Objection was interposed to the consideration of the bill. In view of the record, I object to its consideration.

Mr. BAILEY. I did not offer any objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah objects, as the Chair understands.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, if the Senator will withhold his objection, I wish to make a brief statement with regard to this case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah withhold his objection for the purpose of enabling the Senator from North Dakota to make an explanation?

Mr. KING. Yes.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, this young lady volunteered as a student nurse during the World War, at the request of the Government, when the influenza epidemic was at its height. She was teaching school at the time, with a good salary. She had excellent health and was quite a noted athlete. She volunteered and was assigned to the camp at Fort Dodge, Iowa, and while there developed influenza. It has caused a throat trouble which afterward developed into arthritis.

For several years the young lady has been totally helpless. She has been denied hospitalization in Government hospitals because she was not in the Regular Army service. For the past year or two she has been with a married sister at Wahpeton, N.Dak.

I visited this young lady last fall. She is totally helpless, and has been for some years. Because of the financial condition of her sister and her husband during the past 2 months, the young lady was sent to a county hospital there, and is now a county charge, because her relatives cannot take care of her and because she is unable to take of herself by reason of her services to the United States Army.

Mr. President, I know that there is a technicality against legislation of this kind, but I am satisfied that there is a just cause here; that this young lady is entitled, morally at least, to hospitalization in Government hospitals, and to some pay—a little pay, at least—for the expenses which have been incurred in trying to restore her health. The amount asked for in the bill does not begin to cover the expenses of this young lady in the way of doctors' bills.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah insist upon his objection?

Mr. KING. No; I withdraw the objection.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I should like to say that while I do not care to dispute any statement made by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER] as Chairman of the Claims Committee, I am looking for a little guidance.

If it is to be the policy of the Congress to pay all people in the Government service who contract influenza or other diseases in the discharge of their duties, we ought to know it, and I think there will be no question as to what will happen. Every postmaster, every rural free-delivery carrier, every one of the six or seven hundred thousand clerks will have a right, under the precedent, if he contracts a bad cold or typhoid fever or pneumonia or influenza, to present a claim against the Government.

If the Congress desires that policy set up in the Claims Committee, I should like to know it.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, this situation is quite different. In this case the young lady contracted this disease during the World War, when she was in the service of the Government, only as a private citizen, of course, but in the war service, at a war camp. She contracted the disease there, and has been totally disabled practically ever since. It seems to me that we are justified in passing measures to take care of special cases. We continually pass special bills. We have passed a good many of them today; and bills similar to this have been passed at previous sessions of Congress. So I hope this bill may go through, and that this young lady may be taken care of.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Lillian Morden the sum of $2,462.20, in full settlement of all claims against the Government for medical expenses incurred as a result of contracting influenza and other ailments while employed as a student nurse in the Medical Department of the Army at Fort Dodge, Des Moines, Iowa; and that said Lillian Morden shall be admitted to such Army hospital as may be directed by the Surgeon General of the United States Army for necessary care and treatment.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 3326) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. FESS, Mr. DICKINSON (and other Senators). Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

RUTH J. BARNES

The bill (S. 1137) for the relief of Ruth J. Barnes was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Chief of Finance of the Army shall cause to be paid to Ruth J. Barnes, wife of Joseph A. Barnes, late of the Air Corps Reserve, Air Service, United States Army, who was killed while engaged in flying at the Brooks Field, Tex., on October 12, 1932, an amount equal to 6 months' pay at the rate the said Joseph B. Barnes was receiving at the date of his death. Such amount shall be paid from funds appropriated for pay of the Army.

JAMES DARCY

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 771) for the relief of James Darcy, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, on page 1, line 5, after the word "Darcy", to insert "alias James Hurley", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers James Darcy, alias James Hurley, who was a member of Battery N, Seventh Regiment United States Artillery, Spanish-American War, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States as a member of that organization on the 12th day of April 1900: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of James Darcy, alias James Hurley."

APPOINTMENT OF SPECIAL AGENTS, DIVISION OF INVESTIGATION, AS STATE OFFICERS

The bill (S. 3075) to permit the appointment of special agents of the Division of Investigation as State officers was announced as next in order.

Mr. DICKINSON. Let that go over.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator who objected withhold his objection for a moment?

Mr. DICKINSON. I withhold the objection.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, the plan of the bill, if put into operation, would do away with such fiascoes as we have seen in the attempt to capture Dillinger.

The bill provides that the governor of each State may recommend to the Attorney General, just as we now recommend to the Department of War or the Navy Department young men for appointment to West Point or Annapolis, two persons, residents, citizens, and, if possible, natives of the State. Then, if they are found by the Attorney General to be qualified, they are to be appointed to the Bureau of Investigation and given exactly the same fine training that is given to all the applicants for those positions. They are to be given, as I say, the usual training, and are to be paid officials of the United States.

Then these men will return to their States, or perhaps one will be left in the regular service of the Bureau. The other will return to his State capital—for example, to Madison, Wis., or to Des Moines, Iowa. Then what will he do? It will be his business to become acquainted with the personnel of the police departments of the State, of the cities, of the State troopers, of the constabulary generally. Then when an affair happens like the escape of Dillinger, and the criminal goes up into Wisconsin, the officials of Wisconsin who are familiar with the byways and the highways and the terrain will be called out by the aid of this Government officer; and I am confident that the enactment of the bill will do much to coordinate the activities of the Federal and the State Governments.

Mr. President, I submitted this plan to the Governor of every State. Forty Governors replied fully, and 35 of them gave absolute or qualified approval to the measure. The point about the matter is that this citizen of Iowa, for example, who is to be appointed a special agent, and who is known as a native or as a citizen of that State, will be given a cordial reception locally. At present, when a man is sent from the Federal Bureau of Investigation into any State of the Union, he is given the cold shoulder. This agent will be there; and if the law of the Sate of Iowa or the State of Wisconsin permits him to be made a dollar-a-year man and given the police power of the respective State, so much the better; but I am sure—and that is one of the conclusions of our committee on crime—that this plan, if put into operation, will coordinate the police efforts of our country and make more difficult the escape of a man like Dillinger.

I hope, therefore, that the Senate may see fit to pass the bill.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. DICKINSON. How much would the enactment of the bill increase the personnel of this branch of the Government?

Mr. COPELAND. It would increase it by 96.

Mr. DICKINSON. How many special agents have they now?

Mr. COPELAND. Three hundred.

Mr. KING. More than that.

Mr. DICKINSON. It would be necessary either to have an increase in the degree of efficiency in running down crimes, or to have 96 much better men than they have had heretofore, in order to be very effective.

Mr. COPELAND. I should not want to say that the present special agents are not good men; but to take 20 lawyers—they are all lawyers in the Bureau now—from Chicago and send them up into the woods of northern Wisconsin and expect those boys to find Dillinger under those conditions is an absurdity. The Attorney General believes that the personnel of the Bureau of Investigation should be increased to a thousand men. I know that if we could have 100 men, so that there would be 2 men from each State employed in that Bureau, we would go far toward solving the problem of crime in this country.

Mr. DICKINSON. Let me make one further inquiry, whether or not, if we pass this bill, it is going to be duplicated in the other types of bureaus which have enforcement authority.

Mr. COPELAND. Of course, I cannot answer for anything else. I can speak only about crime prevention.

Mr. McKELLAR. I shall have to object.

Mr. COPELAND. I hope the Senator will not object.

Mr. DICKINSON. I was about to withdraw my objection.

Mr. KING. Regular order.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I hope that the Senators who objected to the consideration of this bill will see fit to withdraw their objections.

In reference to the number of men under the Director of the Bureau of Investigation, I believe that it has been revealed here by the eminent Senator from the State of New York, who has sponsored this legislation, that there are only about 300 men in that Bureau. As a matter of fact, if we expect ever to bring about law and order in this country, if we hope ever to be able to cope with the situation as we find it today, with one of the greatest outlaws ever known out in Oklahoma, "Pretty Boy" Floyd, and Dillinger, and hundreds of other criminals in the country just as bad as Dillinger at large, it is absolutely necessary and imperatively important that the Director of this Bureau be provided with the means with which to be able to apprehend those outlaws.

Were I privileged to do so, I would unhesitatingly increase the force from 300 to 1,000. It is not a question of the character and the capabilities of the 300 men who are now in that Bureau. I think the Bureau of Investigation in the Department of Justice, under the direction of Mr. Edgar Hoover, has done a wonderful work, and has made marvelous progress in the discovery of crime. I hope the Senators will withdraw their objections.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee withdraw his objection?

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I wish to look into the matter further.

Mr. KING. Regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will go over.

VALIDATION OF CONVEYANCES BY THE CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILWAY CO.

The bill (H.R. 7082) validating certain conveyances heretofore made by Central Pacific Railway Co., a corporation, and its lessee, Southern Pacific Co., a corporation, involving certain portions of right-of-way, in and in the vicinity of the city of Lodi, and near the station of Acampo, and in the city of Tracy, all in the county of San Joaquin, State of California, and in or in the vicinity of Galt and Polk, in the county of Sacramento, State of California, acquired by Central Pacific Railway Co. under the act of Congress approved July 1, 1862 (12 Stat.L. 489), as amended by the act of Congress approved July 2, 1864 (13 Stat.L. 356), was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

VALIDATION OF CONVEYANCES BY THE CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILWAY CO.

The bill (H.R. 7098) validating certain conveyances heretofore made by Central Pacific Railway Co., a corporation, and its lessee, Southern Pacific Co., a corporation, involving certain portions of right-of-way in and in the vicinity of the town of Gridley, all in the county of Butte, State of California, acquired by Central Pacific Railway Co. under the act of Congress approved July 25, 1866 (14 Stat.L. 239), was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to inquire whether there is any defect in the title which calls for validating legislation?

Mr. JOHNSON. Yes. The deeds which were originally given by the railroad company to the settlers involved a part of a right-of-way which was not intended to be included in the original grant, with the result that subsequently they quitclaimed to the settlers. Then the title of the settlers was not held to be entirely perfect, and this legislation is designed to clear up the title. Some of the settlers have been in possession of the land for 60 years.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, does the Department recommend the legislation?

Mr. JOHNSON. It does.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN J. MORAN

The bill (S. 2333) for the relief of John J. Moran was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and paid to John J. Moran the sum of $296.42, being the amount paid by Mr. Moran as postmaster at Southington, Conn., to Raymond F. Keating and Keron R. Welch, employees at the post office, for the period August 16 to September 30, 1918, which amount was not allowed by the Post Office Department, plus interest at the rate of 4 percent per annum.

COMPENSATION FOR EXTRA WORK AT MONEY-ORDER OFFICES

The bill (H.R. 3214) to compensate the Post Office Department for the extra work caused by the payment of money orders at offices other than those on which the orders are drawn was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF POSTAL LAWS RELATING TO SECOND-CLASS MATTER

The bill (H.R. 5334) to amend the third clause of section 14 of the act of March 3, 1879 (20 Stat. 359; U.S.C., title 39, sec, 226), was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OATHS BY POST-OFFICE INSPECTORS

The bill (H.R. 6675) to authorize the acknowledgment of oaths by post-office inspectors and by chief clerks of the Railway Mail Service was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RATES OF PAY, RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE

The bill (H.R. 7213) to provide hourly rates of pay for substitute laborers in the Railway Mail Service and time credits when appointed as regular laborer was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FEES FOR DELIVERY OF MAIL

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 7301) to authorize the Postmaster General to charge an additional fee for effecting delivery of domestic registered, insured, or collect-on-delivery mail, the delivery of which is restricted to the addressee only, or to the addressee or order, which had been reported from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads with an amendment, on page 1, line 8, to strike out after the word "Provided", through the word "Service", on page 2, as follows:

That no refund shall be made of fees paid for this service unless erroneous delivery of the article or articles was made by the Postal Service.

And to insert in lieu thereof the following:

That no refund shall be made of fees paid for this service unless request for refund is made and erroneous delivery of the article or articles was made by the Postal Service or nondelivery of the article or articles was due to some fault of the Postal Service.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster General, under such regulations as he may prescribe, is authorized to collect an additional fee of 10 cents for effecting the delivery by carrier or otherwise of domestic registered, insured, or collect-on-delivery mail, the delivery of which is restricted to the addressee only, or to the addressee or order: Provided, That no refund shall be made of fees paid for this service unless request for refund is made and erroneous delivery of the article or articles was made by the Postal Service or nondelivery of the article or articles was due to some fault of the Postal Service.

The amendment was agreed to

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

POSTAL TREATIES OR CONVENTIONS

The bill (H.R. 7317) to provide for the final construction on behalf of the United States of postal treaties or conventions to which the United States is a party was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LIABILITY OF POSTAL CONTRACTORS

The bill (H.R. 7340) to authorize the Post Office Department to hold contractors or carriers transporting the mails by air or water on routes extending beyond the borders of the United States responsible in damages for the loss, rifling, damage, wrong delivery, depredations upon, or other mistreatment of mail matter due to fault or negligence of the contractor or carrier, or an agent or employee thereof, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PAYMENT OF TRAVELING EXPENSES, POSTAL SERVICE

The bill (H.R. 7711) to permit postmasters to act as disbursing officers for the payment of traveling expenses of officers and employees of the Postal Service, was announced as next in order.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Tennessee give an explanation of the bill? It seems to be rather far-reaching.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, the bill requires that postmasters act as disbursing officers for the payment of traveling expenses of officers and employees in the Postal Service. It is recommended by the Department on the ground that it will benefit the Service very much and enable the employees to get their salaries more promptly. The same accounting will be required. There will be no danger of loss. I think the bill ought to be passed.

Mr. DICKINSON. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That those parts of the acts of May 4, 1882 (22 Stat. 54), July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. 156), July 28, 1916 (39 Stat. 418), and June 3, 1924 (43 Stat. 356), which are incorporated in section 50 of title 39 of the United States Code are amended to read as follows:

"Postmasters may be designated by the Postmaster General as disbursing officers for the payment of mail messengers and others engaged under their supervision in transporting the mails. He may also designate postmasters at Presidential post offices as disbursing officers for the payment of the salaries of the officers and employees of the Postal Service concerned in the transportation of mails or in their distribution in transit, and for such other payments as they are authorized to make from postal revenues, and he may designate postmasters at money-order post offices as disbursing officers for the payment of the salaries and traveling expenses of officers and employees of the Postal Service, and for such other payments as postmasters are authorized to make from postal revenues."

NATIONAL BANK BRANCHES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 605) authorizing national banks to establish branches in certain cases, which had been reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency with an amendment, on page 1, after line 10, to add the words, "and that any national banking association legally established and situated in a Territory or possession of the United States may, with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, establish and operate new branches at any point within the Territory or possession where such association is situated", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That wherever the United States shall own, or have, a Federal reservation of any kind, in any county or counties, of any State in the Union in which reservation there is no State, national, or branch bank, any national bank in any such county in which said reservation, or any part thereof, is situated may, by and with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency of the United States, establish therein a branch of said bank where it may conduct a branch banking business, and that any national banking association legally established and situated in a Territory or possession of the United States may, with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, establish and operate new branches at any point within the Territory or possession where such association is situated.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of this bill.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, this bill is almost wholly a private measure, although it does appear as if it might be broader than it really is.

There is an Army camp down in Kentucky about 15 miles or more from any bank, Fort Knox, a very large camp, and carrying money to pay the soldiers from the nearest bank to the fort is rather dangerous as well as rather difficult. This bill would allow the establishment of a branch bank in a Federal reservation.

Mr. WALSH. I have no objection. The title was rather misleading.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Kentucky whether the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] and other members of the Committee on Banking and Currency approve the bill?

Mr. LOGAN. My colleague can answer the question, as he is a member of the Committee on Banking and Currency. It was reported favorably by the Department, and was approved by all interested parties.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the bill was approved by the Committee on Banking and Currency. I am thoroughly familiar with the situation which makes the legislation necessary.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NAVAL RECORDS OF CREWS OF THE "ALGONQUIN" AND "ONONDAGA"

The bill (H.R. 5018) to correct the naval records of former members of the crews of the revenue cutters Algonquin and Onondaga was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I should like to have an explanation of that.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. President, have we ever followed the custom of correcting the records of an entire crew?

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

Mr. DICKINSON. Let us have an explanation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Unless the objection is withdrawn, debate on the question is not in order. Objection is made, and the bill will go over, under the rule.

BAYOU BARTHOLOMEW BRIDGE, LOUISIANA

The bill (S. 3640) granting the consent of Congress to the Tensas Basin Levee Board of the State of Louisiana to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across Bayou Bartholomew at or near its mouth in Morehouse Parish, La., was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Tensas Basin Levee Board of the State of Louisiana to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge and approaches thereto across the Bayou Bartholomew, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near its mouth in Morehouse Parish, La., in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

TREATIES WITH REFERENCE TO AMERICAN SAMOA

The joint resolution (H.J.Res. 340) to harmonize the treaties and statutes of the United States with reference to American Samoa, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ABANDONED LIGHTHOUSE RESERVATION AND BUILDINGS, ERIE, PA.

The bill (H.R. 5312) to provide for the conveyance of the abandoned lighthouse reservation and buildings, including detached tower, situate within the city limits of Erie, Pa., to the city for public-park purposes was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FLOODS IN THE SALMON RIVER, ALASKA

The bill (H.R. 5665) authorizing the control of floods in the Salmon River, Alaska, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DEVELOPMENT AND REGULATION OF CIVIL AERONAUTICS

The bill (S. 3526) to amend the Air Commerce Act of 1926 and to increase the efficiency of the Aeronautics Branch of the Department of Commerce with respect to the development and regulation of civil aeronautics, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I should like to have an explanation of the bill. Let it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over temporarily.

PRINTING OF BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3237) to repeal certain provisions of the act of March 4, 1933, and to reenact sections 4 and 5 of the act of March 2, 1929, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary, with an amendment to add a new section at the end of the bill, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That such provisions in section 1 of the act of March 4, 1933 (47 Stat. 1603), as purport to amend "sections 4 and 5 of the joint resolution approved March 2, 1929 (U.S.C., supp. VI, title 1, secs. 54 (a) and (b))", are hereby repealed.

SEC. 2. Sections 4 and 5 of such joint resolution of March 2, 1929 (U.S.C., supp. VI, title 1, secs. 54 (a) and 54 (b), shall hereafter be in full force and effect as originally enacted.

SEC. 3. That, subject to the provisions of the second section, the Joint Committee on Printing is hereby empowered to authorize the printing of any bill or resolution, with index and ancillaries, in such style and form as the Joint Committee on Printing shall deem to be most suitable in the interest of economy and efficiency, and to so continue until final enactment thereof in both Houses of Congress; and such committee may also curtail the number of copies of such bills or resolutions, including the slip form of such public act or public resolution.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 3407) authorizing the establishment and maintenance of an industrial plant at Reidsville, W.Va., was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

CHARLES E. SECORD

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3160) for the relief of Charles E. Secord, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 6, to strike out "$5,000", and to insert in lieu thereof "$500 in full settlement of all claims against the Government", and to add a proviso at the end of the bill, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Charles E. Secord the sum of $500, in full settlement of all claims against the Government, for injuries received through the negligent operation of a motor vehicle by a prohibition agent working under the Treasury Department of the United States Government: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES R. MANSFIELD

The bill (S. 2074) for the relief of James R. Mansfield was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to James R. Mansfield, the sum of $58.33 a month for the remainder of his natural life, as compensation for a permanent disability resulting from injuries received by him on or about January 4, 1925, while assisting a prohibition agent in making a raid on an illicit still on Waldens Ridge, Rhea County, Tenn. Such monthly payments shall be made through the United States Employees' Compensation Commission, and shall date from the approval of this act.

DR. R. N. HARWOOD

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2501) for the relief of Dr. R. N. Harwood, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 9, after the name "Harwood", to insert "for compensation for disabilities to his hands received while acting as designated dental examiner on fee basis at Morristown, Tenn., for the Veterans' Administration", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes", approved September 7, 1916, as amended, the United States Employees' Compensation Commission is hereby authorized to consider and determine the claim of Dr. R. N. Harwood for compensation for disabilities to his hands received while acting as designated dental examiner on fee basis at Morristown, Tenn., for the Veterans' Administration, in the same manner and to the same extent as if said R. N. Harwood had made application for the benefits of said act within the 1-year period required by sections 17 and 20 thereof: Provided, That no benefits shall accrue prior to the approval of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

H. N. WILCOX

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3122) for the relief of H. N. Wilcox, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 9, after the word "boat", to strike out "Catchalot" and to insert "Cachalot", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to H. N. Wilcox, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $119 in full settlement of all claims against the Government for hospital and medical expenses incurred as a result of injuries sustained by H. N. Wilcox and Edson Reed in an explosion aboard the gasoline fishing boat Cachalot on December 8, 1933: Provided, That before any payment is made to the claimant, H. N. Wilcox, that reimbursement be made to the Truesdale Hospital, Inc., of Fall River, Mass., and Dr. C. H. Bryant, of Tiverton, Rhode Island, in full satisfaction of all hospital and medical expenses incurred by H. N. Wilcox and Edson Reed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HERBERT E. MATTHEWS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2343) for the relief of Herbert E. Matthews, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 3, to strike out all after the enacting clause and to substitute in lieu thereof the following:

Be it enacted, etc., That the United States Employees' Compensation Commission is hereby authorized to consider and determine the claim of Herbert E. Matthews, of Johnson City, Tenn., formerly employed by the Federal Barge Lines, operated by the Inland Waterways Corporation, aboard the steamer Memphis, in the same manner and to the same extent as if application for the benefits of the United States Employees' Compensation Act had been made within the 1-year period required by sections 17 and 20 thereof: Provided, That no benefits shall accrue prior to the approval of this act.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR] whether or not the passage of this bill would establish the precedent of waiving the statute of limitations in reference to the time within which claims of this character may be filed.

Mr. MCKELLAR. I think a bill of this kind would not establish a precedent. Each case depends on its own merits. The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS] has made the report. I wish the Senator would make an explanation of the bill.

Mr. STEPHENS. Mr. President, the Committee on Claims has had many bills of similar character before it. It is not at all unusual that the statute of limitations be waived and that the Employees' Compensation Commission be allowed to consider and pass upon the claim.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JEWELL MANESS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2613) for the relief of Jewell Maness, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims, with an amendment, on page 1, line 9, after the name "Tennessee", to insert "and the United States Employees' Compensation Commission is authorized and directed to consider and determine her claim for compensation on account of her husband's death notwithstanding the limitations in the first paragraph of section 10 of the said act", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That sections 17 and 20 of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties and for other purposes", approved September 7, 1916, as amended, are hereby waived in favor of Jewell Maness, widow of Ward W. Maness, deceased, former transfer mail clerk, Union Depot, Jackson, Tenn., and the United States Employees' Compensation Commission is authorized and directed to consider and determine her claim for compensation on account of her husband's death notwithstanding the limitations in the first paragraph of section 10 of the said act: Provided, That compensation, if any, shall commence from and after the date of the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. DONNIE WRIGHT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2336) for the relief of the estate of Mrs. Donnie Wright, deceased, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 6, after the name "Wright", to strike out "$10,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$4,500"; in line 7, after the word "her", to strike out "three"; in line 8, after the words "killed on", to strike out the words "day of" and to insert in lieu thereof "September 30"; and at the end of the bill to insert a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the estate of Mrs. Donnie Wright $4,500, in full and final settlement for the benefit of her children by reason of her being killed on September 30, 1929, in a public elevator, located in a Federal building in the city of Vicksburg, Miss., and operated by a Government employee: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SAN PEDRO RIVER, ARIZ.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3657) authorizing the construction of a dam on the San Pedro River, Ariz., which had been reported from the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation with an amendment on page 2, line 3, to strike out "$2,800,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$1,200,000", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior, through the Reclamation Service, is authorized and directed to construct a dam on the San Pedro River, in the State of Arizona, at or near the Charleston Dam site, or any other suitable place in the San Pedro Valley, for the purposes of flood control, irrigation and reclamation, development of hydroelectric power, and the prevention of soil erosion.

SEC. 2. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,200,000 for the purpose of constructing the dam authorized by this act, and the carrying out of all necessary work in connection therewith.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

C. A. BETZ

The bill (H.R. 3992) for the relief of C. A. Betz was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RESTORATION OF HOMESTEAD RIGHTS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2987) to restore homestead rights in certain cases, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, with an amendment, to add at the end of the bill a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter any person who has heretofore made entry under the homestead laws on any lands embraced within any reservation ceded to the United States by the Indian tribes and has paid for his land the sum of at least $1.25 per acre shall, upon proof of such facts, if otherwise qualified, be entitled to the benefit of the homestead law as though such former entry had not been made; but the provisions of this act shall not apply to any person who has failed to pay the full price for his former entry or whose former entry was canceled for fraud: Provided, That, in making any new homestead entry as authorized by this act or the prior similar acts of February 20, 1917 (39 Stat. 926), and February 25, 1925 (43 Stat. 981), such entry shall not include any land to which the Indian title shall not have been fully extinguished.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OCMULGEE NATIONAL MONUMENT, GA.

The bill (H.R. 7653) to authorize the establishment of the Ocmulgee National Monument in Bibb County, Ga., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

"OLMSTEAD LANDS", NORTH CAROLINA

The bill (H.R. 8779) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to adjust claims to so-called "Olmstead lands" in the State of North Carolina, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GREAT SMOKY MOUNTAINS NATIONAL PARK

The bill (H.R. 7360) to establish a minimum area for the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LOSS OR DAMAGE TO MAIL MATTER

The bill (H.R. 7299) to authorize the Post Office Department to hold contractors responsible in damages for the loss, rifling, damage, wrong delivery, depredation upon, or other mistreatment of mail matter due to fault or negligence of the contractor or an agent or employee thereof, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GRAZING LANDS

Mr. KING. Mr. President, what became of Calendar No. 1231?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk informs the Chair that that bill was passed several days ago.

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not think that is on the calendar, although it is in our calendar file.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk informs the Chair that Calendar No. 1231 was disposed of some days ago, and that the bill indicated by that number has been passed.

Mr. KING. That is the grazing bill.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, the so-called "Taylor grazing bill" has not been reached. It is Calendar No. 1258, on page 30.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Arizona that Calendar No. 1231 is the number about which the Senator from Utah has inquired.

Mr. KING. That is the Taylor grazing bill.

Mr. WAGNER. No. 1258 on the calendar is the grazing bill.

Mr. ASHURST. Will the able Senator from Colorado in charge of the bill inform me as to the number?

Mr. ADAMS. No. 1258 is the calendar number of the Taylor grazing bill.

Mr. KING. I have here on my file, Mr. President, H.R. 6462, reported by the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] with the amendments, Calendar No. 1231.

Mr. ADAMS. Will the Senator permit me to make this explanation? An erroneous report came to the Senate, and that was subsequently canceled. The Taylor grazing bill was placed on the calendar by mistake.

Mr. KING. Very well.

TERMINAL RAILWAY POST OFFICES

The bill (H.R. 9392) to reclassify terminal railway post offices, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STAR ROUTES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 7212) to remove the limitation upon the extension of star routes, which had been reported from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads with an amendment, on page 1, line 11, after the word "contract" to insert "at not exceeding 50 miles and" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the last paragraph of section 1 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912, and for other purposes" approved March 4, 1911 (36 Stat. 1327; U.S.C., title 39, sec. 442), is amended to read as follows:

"The Postmaster General may, in cases where the mail service would be thereby improved, extend service on a mail route under contract, at not exceeding 50 miles and at not exceeding pro rata additional pay: Provided, That such extension shall not exceed 50 miles of traveled service route."

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

OSAGE NATION OF INDIANS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1948) amending the act entitled "An act authorizing the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment in the civilization fund claim of the Osage Nation of Indians against the United States", approved February 6, 1921 (41 Stat. 1097), which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with an amendment, on page 4, line 2, after the word "Interior", to insert "on May 6, 1908, and May 5, 1931", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the provisions of the act of Congress approved February 6, 1921 (41 Stat. 1097), conferring jurisdiction upon the United States Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment in the civilization fund claim of the Osage Nation of Indians against the United States be, and the same hereby are, amended to read as follows:

"Jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the Court of Claims of the United States, notwithstanding the provisions of article I of the treaty of September 29, 1865 (14 Stat. 687), proclaimed January 21, 1867, and notwithstanding the lapse of time, to hear and determine the net amount realized by the United States under said treaty of 1865 from sales of Osage lands and deposited in the civilization fund in the Treasury of the United States, with interest thereon at the rate of 5 percent per annum from the dates of deposits of money received from such sales in the Treasury of the United States, and to enter judgment for the Osage Nation of Indians against the United States for any and all such sum or sums, less any legal and equitable set-offs or counterclaims, including gratuities, arising since the date of the proclamation of said treaty on January 21, 1867, which the United States may have against the Osage Nation of Indians. The judgment of the said Court of Claims hereunder shall be subject to a special right of appeal on the full record by either party to the Supreme Court of the United States, and any such judgment, when satisfied, shall annul and cancel all claims of the said Osage Nation in and to all the matters and claims adjudicated hereunder.

"SEC. 2. That proceedings hereunder may be by an amended petition in the Court of Claims, to be filed within 1 year of the passage of this act, making the Osage Nation of Indians party plaintiff and the United States of America party defendant, to be verified by the authorized attorney or attorneys of the said Osage Nation employed under contract approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior May 5, 1931, as provided by law, on information and belief as to the facts, and no other statement or verification shall be necessary; or said action hereunder may be by motion to be filed for and on behalf of the Osage Nation of Indians within 1 year of the passage of this act, to reopen and reconsider the case filed in said Court of Claims under the said act of Congress of February 6, 1921, supra, entitled 'Osage Nation of Indians against the United States of America', and known as no. B-36: Provided, That the evidence heretofore submitted to the said Court of Claims in the said cause shall be admitted for all purposes in the action hereby authorized, and additional evidence, including official letters, papers, and public records, or certified copies thereof, may be offered in such proceedings.

"SEC. 3. That upon the final determination of such suit or suits the Court of Claims shall decree such fees and expenses as may be reasonable to be paid the attorneys employed by the Osage Nation of Indians under contracts approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior on May 6, 1908, and May 5, 1931, and in no event shall such fees and expenses exceed the amount stipulated in such contracts, nor amount to more than 10 percent of the judgment recorded in the said cause."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROBERT N. STOCKTON

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3656) for the relief of Robert N. Stockton, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 6, to strike out "$5,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$4,000", and at the end of the bill to insert a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Robert N. Stockton, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $4,000 in full settlement of all claims against the Government for injuries received on January 7, 1933, while he was assisting Federal enforcement officers in apprehending bootleggers, said Stockton being the night marshal of Amory, Miss.: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 3676) to provide for a census of unemployment, employment, and occupations to be taken as of November 12, 1934, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

AMENDMENT OF EMERGENCY RAILROAD TRANSPORTATION ACT, 1933

The bill (S. 3650) to amend the Emergency Railroad Transportation Act, 1933, approved June 16, 1933, was announced as next in order.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, I ask that House bill 9694, Calendar No. 1341, which is a bill textually the same as the Senate bill, be substituted for the Senate bill and placed upon its passage.

There being no objection, the bill (H.R. 9694) to amend the Emergency Railroad Transportation Act, 1933, approved June 16, 1933, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 14 of title I of the Emergency Railroad Transportation Act, 1933, is amended by striking out the second sentence thereof and substituting therefor a sentence reading as follows: "It shall be the duty of each carrier, within 30 days after June 16, 1934, to pay into this fund, for the second year of the operation of this title, $2 for every mile of road operated by it on December 31, 1933, as reported to the Commission, and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to collect such assessments."

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, I ask that the Senate bill be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 3650 will be indefinitely postponed.

NAVAL STATION AT GUANTANAMO BAY, CUBA

Mr. KEAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Calendar No. 1293, being the bill (S. 504) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to make a long-term contract for a supply of water to the United States naval station at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. The reason I ask for unanimous consent is because it is very important to have early action, as the fleet is going down there this year, and the only way the fleet can get water is by means of tanks of water brought by rail and transferred by barge. I should like to have unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill at this time in order to have it immediately passed, so that it will surely go through at this session, in order that the fleet may have water when it goes to Guantanamo Bay.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request of the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. KEAN]? The Chair hears none.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The parliamentary inquiry will be stated.

Mr. NORRIS. How far have we proceeded on the calendar? Unless I am mistaken this request is taking us ahead of the point at which we now are on the calendar.

Mr. KEAN. Yes, Mr. President; this is going ahead on the calendar. The only reason I am asking for present consideration of this bill is because the Secretary of the Navy is very anxious for its passage.

Mr. NORRIS. We have not as yet reached that bill on the calendar.

Mr. KEAN. No; and we cannot reach it today. Therefore I ask unanimous consent to have it taken up at this time.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I think a statement in this connection is pertinent and proper. We have devoted 3 hours today to the consideration of unobjected bills on the calendar and have not been able to complete the calendar. Senators in charge of the silver bill consented to lay that bill aside temporarily so that we could proceed under the order to dispose of bills on the calendar. It is my purpose, as soon as the silver bill shall have been disposed of, to ask for an arrangement which will enable us to complete the call of the calendar and also to call that portion of the calendar which was not taken up today.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, we ought to have an understanding, it seems to me, when we take up the calendar again, which I think should be very soon, that we should commence where we left off today.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. That is right.

Mr. NORRIS. That would give us an opportunity at least to go through the calendar once.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I shall make the request for unanimous consent when the silver bill shall have been disposed of, if that will be satisfactory.

Mr. McNARY. Does that mean the final vote upon the silver bill must be reached before we will again take up the calendar?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; I think, in all probability that will have to be done, because the silver bill is the unfinished business, and those in charge of it have indicated that they do not desire to yield further for the disposition of bills on the calendar.

Mr. KING. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey has the floor.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. President, I understand there is no objection to the bill for which I desire consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I make no objection to his request.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 504) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to make a long-term contract for a supply of water to the United States naval station at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, which had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with amendments, on page 1, line 5, after the article "a", to strike out "contract for a period 20 years or longer" and to insert "long-term contract without regard to fiscal year"; and on line 7, after the word "bidder", to insert "to be determined by the Secretary of the Navy"; and on page 2, line 9, after the word "for", to strike out "a further period of 20 years or longer, and such Secretary is hereby authorized to enter into such extension, but the cost of supplying water thereunder shall be the average annual cost of operation of the plant during the last 10 years of the contract entered into pursuant to this act, plus 10 percent thereof in addition to the actual cost of any improvements deemed necessary by such Secretary" and to insert "such additional period and on such terms as in his judgment may be for the best interests of the Government, but in no event at a higher cost to the Government than under the existing contract, and said Secretary is hereby authorized to enter into such extension", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered, at his discretion, to negotiate and enter into a long-term contract without regard to fiscal year, with the lowest responsible and capable bidder, to be determined by the Secretary of the Navy, for supplying the United States naval station at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, with an adequate and satisfactory supply of water, suitable for all purposes, delivered into the water-storage reservoirs within said naval station, in such an amount as he shall deem adequate for the present and future needs of the station, and at such annual cost or rental as in his judgment may be for the best interests of the Government. Any contract entered into pursuant to the provisions of this act shall contain a provision authorizing the Secretary of the Navy within a reasonable period of time prior to the expiration of such contract to extend the contract for such additional period and on such terms as in his judgment may be for the best interests of the Government but in no event at a higher cost to the Government than under the existing contract, and said Secretary is hereby authorized to enter into such extension.

SEC. 2. This act shall become effective immediately upon its passage and approval.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its clerks, announced that the House had Chaffee to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 8687) to amend the Tariff Act of 1930.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 8781) to increase employment by authorizing an appropriation to provide for emergency construction of public highways and related projects, and to amend the Federal Aid Road Act, approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes; asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. CARTWRIGHT, Mr. WARREN, Mr. WHITTINGTON, Mr. TURPIN, and Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

EMERGENCY CONSTRUCTION OF PUBLIC HIGHWAYS

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 8781) to increase employment by authorizing an appropriation to provide for emergency construction of public highways and related projects, and to amend the Federal Aid Road Act, approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. McKELLAR. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. McKELLAR, Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. McGILL, Mr. SCHALL, and Mr. FRAZIER conferees on the part of the Senate.

BITTER ROOT IRRIGATION PROJECT, MONTANA

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I wonder if I could obtain unanimous consent for the present consideration of Order of Business No. 1273, being Senate bill 3116. The bill has been reported favorably by the committee and also has the favorable recommendation of the Department.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that the hour of 3 o'clock has arrived when the unfinished business was to be considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 3 o'clock having arrived, and the time set aside for the consideration of the calendar having expired, the Chair now lays before the Senate the unfinished business.

Mr. PITTMAN. I now yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. WHEELER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill referred to by me. It will not lead to debate, and if there shall be any objection to it I will withdraw it. I repeat that the Department has recommended it. It provides for entering into contracts by the Secretary of the Interior with the Bitter Root Irrigation District.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to negotiate and execute a contract with the Bitter Root Irrigation District, amending as provided herein articles 3 and 6 of the contract dated August 24, 1931, between the United States of America and said irrigation district. The amended contract shall segregate the district's obligation into two components: (1) All money advanced to the district under section 2, subsection (1), of the act of July 3, 1930, for liquidating bonded and other outstanding indebtedness of said district; and (2) all money advanced or used under section 2, subsections (2) and (3), of said act for construction, betterment, and repair work. All money advanced under component (1) shall be repaid to the United States within the period fixed in said contract, with interest at 4 percent per annum until paid: Provided, That interest now due and unpaid and interest to become due and payable July 1, 1934, shall be added to and merged with the principal sum advanced under component (1). Nothing herein contained shall be construed as authorizing a modification in said amendatory contract of the interest charges heretofore paid on component (1) by the district under contract of August 24, 1931.

SEC. 2. The amended contract shall provide also that all money advanced or used under section 2, subsections (2) and (3) of the act of July 3, 1930, shall be repaid to the United States within the period fixed in said contact, and in the case of default in the payment when due of any installment fixed by the Secretary for repayment of money advanced or used under said section 2, subsections (2) and (3) there shall be added to the payment unpaid a penalty of one-half of 1 percent of the amount unpaid on the 1st day of each month thereafter so long as such default shall continue.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THE PRESIDENT'S ATTITUDE ON WOOL

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President——

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield to the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, during the month of April it was reported to me that wool buyers were endeavoring to hammer down the price of wool in the West by circulating the report that the tariff on wool would be certain to be lowered if the tariff bargaining bill then pending should be passed. The terms of the measure were, of course, not generally known. Comparatively few persons outside of the Congress had even read it, and it was not understood generally that the bill provided for increases of tariff rates as well as for decreases. Neither was it generally understood that the measure prohibits the transfer of any commodity from the dutiable list to the free list.

Those who were circulating the reports were not above intimating that the administration planned to remove the tariff altogether.

From previous interviews with the Secretary of State and the Secretary of Agriculture, I knew that representations of a hostile attitude on their part toward wool were altogether unfounded. In order that I might have an authoritative statement defining the attitude of the administration, I asked the Secretary of State to write me on the subject. On April 20 I received from him a formal letter, which I at that time read in the Senate, and which I now send to the desk to be read again by the clerk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the letter will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

FROM THE SECRETARY OF STATE

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, April 20, 1934.

The Honorable JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I have just received your message to the effect that eastern wool buyers in Wyoming are undertaking to beat down the price of wool by the representation that the Federal Government in entering into reciprocity commercial agreements will so affect the wool situation as to necessitate heavy cuts in domestic-wool prices.

This sort of statement is wholly irresponsible and unjustified. In the first place, no discussion whatsoever has been had here about wool, nor has there been any negotiation concerning any other specific commodity apart from the very narrow range of items which entered into our discussions with Cuba. Secondly, the broad and definite policy on which all reciprocity trade agreements will rest is that of mutual and equal profitableness to the countries participating. Thirdly, it must be apparent that after the passage of the tariff bargaining bill an effective organization freely accessible to all interests concerned must be developed. Ample time will be required for the making of necessary studies and for carrying on exploratory conversations with various governments before steps can be taken for the negotiation of definitive agreements.

Sincerely yours,

CORDELL HULL.

AN INTERVIEW WITH THE PRESIDENT

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, after the publication of the letter which has just been read by the clerk, I had occasion, with other Senators and Members of the House of Representatives, to be present at the White House upon the day when the so-called "sugar bill" was signed. Reports were still in circulation that the administration was hostile to wool; and having freely expressed to my own constituents my confidence in the purpose of the administration to do everything in its power to help agriculture, including wool, I took advantage of the occasion to ask the President for a confirmation of my opinion; and having received from the President what seemed to me to be an altogether satisfactory statement, I issued a formal press release which I now send to the desk and ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will read as requested.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

STATEMENT TO THE PRESS MAY 9, 1934, BY UNITED STATES SENATOR JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY, WYOMING

President Roosevelt today gave renewed evidence that he is in complete sympathy with the West. Immediately after signing the sugar bill, which stabilizes the price of sugar for all domestic producers, the President, in the presence of Senator Costigan and Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Tugwell, authorized me to say that he and his administration are as much concerned in maintaining the price of wool as they are in maintaining the price of wheat, cotton, and other agricultural commodities.

I told the President that wool buyers recently have been making low offers on wool and that there has been considerable apprehension lest the reciprocity policy would mean sweeping reduction in the tariff on wool and an adverse effect upon the market. I told him that I have been advising the people of my State that an administration, the primary object of which is to improve the condition of agriculture, could be depended upon not to take any hostile action toward the wool industry. The President replied that in this position I was exactly correct. Both he and Secretary Tugwell agreed that this administration should do everything possible to maintain the price of wool, and the President said that he recognized woolgrowing as one of the fundamental agricultural industries and desired to be helpful to it.

A LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, statements substantially the same as that which has just been read by the clerk were issued by other Senators; but thereafter in certain quarters there was still some uncertainty professed as to what the policy of the administration might be. Concerned with the effect that the expression of these doubts might have upon the price of wool, which, of course, is a primary interest of the people of Wyoming, but knowing that there was no basis in fact for the propaganda, I took the liberty of presenting the matter once more to the President, and I am today in receipt of a letter from him which I now send to the desk and ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will read as requested.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, June 5, 1934.

Hon. JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,
United States Senator, Washington, D.C.

MY DEAR SENATOR O'MAHONEY: My concern that agricultural prices should be protected and, where possible, substantially raised ought to be well known by this time. This is why I was surprised that a question should be raised about wool. The new tariff bill has been thought of as one of the emergency measures which would help in the general effort to rehabilitate agriculture and industry together. The wool industry is one of those which needs price protection; and the suggestion that the new tariff bill might be used to lower those prices is one which would not have occurred to me. That is the thought I expressed to you, Senator COSTIGAN, and others on May 9.

I have read the statement which you issued, and, as I might expect, it correctly reports the facts. I hope you will have no further concern for fear that something damaging to the industry may result from this legislation.

Very sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

STATISTICAL POSITION OF WOOL

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I now ask that there may be incorporated in the RECORD, immediately following the letter from the President, a telegram from Mr. Fred E. Warren, of Cheyenne, and a copy of my response thereto, and a letter to me by Governor Myers, of the Farm Credit Administration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The telegrams and letter are as follows:

CHEYENNE, WYO., May 22, 1934.

Hon. JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,
United States Senate, Washington, D.C.:

Report comes from sources apparently reliable that Government Wool Board now seriously considering making severe reduction in asking price Government-controlled wool. I feel this would be a mistake at this time, as tending demoralize price western clip now being sold. Buyers have hammered down price eastern fleece wool probably because lack of sales resistance, but so far market for territory wool has not declined so much. Believe firm stand now will prevent too serious declines. By Government-controlled wool mean clips consigned or to be consigned against which there are R.F.C. or other Government loans.

FRED E. WARREN.

MAY 25, 1934.

Mr. FRED E. WARREN,
Cheyenne, Wyo.:

Confirming message of Wednesday, am glad to advise Gov. W. I. Myers is today issuing formal statement that there will be no change in the established policy of the Farm Credit Administration with reference to the marketing of wool. On receipt of wires Tuesday advising that rumors were being circulated that alteration of policy was in contemplation, with Senator PITTMAN, of Nevada, I took up matter with Department of Agriculture, R.F.C., and F.C.A. Nowhere did I find any basis for the report reaching you. Governor Myers states: "There is nothing in statistical position of domestic wool to indicate lower values, and the foreign wool situation is beneficial rather than detrimental to the American wool market at this time."

It is unfortunate that certain selfish interests are now busily engaged in spreading fear among woolgrowers for the twofold purpose of reducing wool prices and undermining confidence in administration policy. I am sure that western woolgrowers will not forget that the program initiated by the Farm Credit Administration last year and operated by the Wool and Mohair Advisory Committee consisting of H. B. Embach, of Phoenix, Ariz., head of the National Wool Marketing Corporation; R. L. Turnbull, of Boston; Fred Marshal, Salt Lake City, secretary of the National Wool Growers' Association; and George M. Brennan, Federal Intermediate Credit Bank Commissioner, was one of the principal factors in bringing about an increase in the price of wool from approximately 11 cents to 33 cents. The monetary policy of the present administration which has raised the price of English money in terms of American dollars is another factor which has played, and is playing, an important part in maintaining the price of American wool. Furthermore, curtailment of cotton production under the Bankhead bill will have an unquestioned tendency to help the wool market. Bearing these facts in mind, I think woolgrowers may feel confident that the outlook for the trade is favorable. Chairman Embach, of the Advisory Committee, has issued a formal statement saying: "There is nothing in the present quietness of the market that would justify any change in present quoted wool values."

JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,
United States Senator.

MAY 25, 1934.

Hon. JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,
Hon. KEY PITTMAN,
United States Senate.

DEAR SENATORS: Following our conversation in my office last Wednesday, I asked the Wool and Mohair Advisory Committee of the Farm Credit Administration to make a survey of the wool situation.

On the basis of the information available, it reports that wool is in a much stronger statistical position now than a year ago, or at any time during the past several years. American stocks of raw wools were substantially lower on January 1, 1934, than on January 1, 1933, and stocks of wool in secondary markets of the world are not considered burdensome. Furthermore, in view of the present price differential, the foreign wool situation is beneficial rather than detrimental to the American wool market at this time.

Domestic consumption of wools continues to exceed domestic production. While a weak undertone in present wool values is reported, I am advised that this is due largely to a lack of demand, occasioned by the fact that there still is a sizable accumulation of wool in various stages of manufacture which has not yet reached its final destination, and to seasonal conditions.

There is nothing in the statistical position of domestic wool, either the remainder of the 1933 clip or the prospective clip for 1934, to indicate lower values. I am advised by the Wool and Mohair Advisory Committee that these views are shared by those in the trade whose judgment is recognized as reliable.

The unsold wools of the 1933 clip, held under the so-called "wool marketing plan" of the Farm Credit Administration, represent a relatively small proportion of the total tonnage of wools consigned under the plan. There has been no change in the established policy of the Farm Credit Administration with reference to the marketing of wool in which its agencies have a financial interest, regarding which I made the following statement at the time the 1934 marketing plan was announced:

"Wools handled under the administration's marketing plan will continue to be marketed in an orderly manner in response to consumptive demand. The price of wool during the 1934 season will be determined by fundamental factors of supply and demand. Following the institution of the plan for the handling of the 1933 clip, prices of grease wool in the country advanced sharply and wool continued to rise throughout the greater part of the season. With wool at present values a rise of no such proportions this year is anticipated. Nevertheless, the plan should assure the industry a much firmer price foundation than might otherwise exist without it. It is not an effort to control prices but one to try to prevent unnecessary fluctuations."

Very truly yours,

W. I. MYERS, Governor.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, in connection with the matter introduced into the RECORD by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], I may say that the President made a similar remark to me, and I am very pleased that his letter has been received.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me a word, as a participant in two of the conversations at the White House referred to by the able Senator from Wyoming, I am happy to testify to the accuracy of his statements.

CONSIDERATION OF RESOLUTIONS REPORTED FROM THE COMMITTEE ON PRINTING

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President——

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. HAYDEN. By direction of the Committee on Printing I report back without amendment two resolutions for which I shall ask immediate consideration. I first ask consideration for the resolution providing for the printing of a revised edition of the Senate Rules and Manual.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the resolution (S.Res. 233) was read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Rules be, and is hereby, directed to prepare a revised edition of the Senate Rules and Manual for the use of the Seventy-fourth Congress, and that 2,500 additional copies be printed and bound for the use of the committee, of which 300 copies shall be bound in leather and tagged as to contents.

Mr. HAYDEN. I now ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the second resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be read.

There being no objection, the resolution (S.Res. 261) submitted today by Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas, was read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the manuscript containing a digest of the proceedings during the World War of the Council of National Defense and the Advisory Commission, prepared by Dr. Franklin H. Martin, be printed with illustrations as a document, in such style and form as may be directed by the Joint Committee on Printing, and that 2,000 addtional copies be printed for the use of the Council of National Defense.

RECOMMITTAL OF BILL

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President——

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I ask unanimous consent that Order of Business No. 1325, being Senate bill 3693, granting the consent of Congress to the State Board of Public Works of the State of Vermont to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across Lake Champlain at or near West Swanson, Vt., be recommitted to the Committee on Commerce.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the bill will be recommitted to the Committee on Commerce.

MONETARY USE AND PURCHASE OF SILVER

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H.R. 9745), to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase silver, issue silver certificates, and for other purposes.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I intend very briefly, if possible, to explain the silver bill. First I wish to state some of its main purposes.

The first purpose is to correct the maladjustment of our currency in this country. From the time of the adoption of our Constitution down to the present time there has been a dollar. That dollar has been measured by so many grains of gold and so many grains of silver. In 1873, while we did not change the content of the silver dollar or the gold dollar, we constituted the gold dollar as the measure of value.

The purpose of the bill is to reestablish, in the first place, our silver money as full legal tender. In the second place its purpose is to restore silver to our currency system. When I say "restore silver to our currency system", I mean that in 1900 one-half of all the metallic money in the country was silver, and 27 percent of all the currency in the country was silver currency. That has changed until today less than 10 percent of our metallic currency is silver and less than 12 percent of our total currency is silver currency. The bill has for its purpose the readjusting of our currency by bringing into our monetary system a larger proportion of silver currency.

Those who favor this character of legislation feel that it is better to have the currency based upon metal rather than upon the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury or any other human mind. There is no question that silver has an intrinsic value.

The second purpose of the bill is to raise the price of silver throughout the world. I realize when I state that purpose that most people will think we are simply looking after the interests of a few mining States. That should be entirely answered by the vote in the House, which was 272 to 37, and I venture to say there were not 15 Representatives among them who come from States producing silver.

Those of us who favor the bill believe that the appreciation of silver currency in the world will protect us against dumping from silver-using countries, because when we raise the value of their money it has the same effect as depreciating the value of our money with reference to their currency. That is the first thing. The second is that we contend that when the exchange value of another country's money with reference to ours is raised, they are better able to buy our products.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Is there anything in the silver-purchase history of the country which lends assurance to the prospect that it will produce an increased price of silver?

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes. If I had time I could show the Senator, by graphs which have been prepared, that in every period involving a rise in the price of silver, the exports from other countries to our country dropped while our exports to other countries increased in every case.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That is not my question. I am wondering, speaking academically, whether the movement might not depress the price of silver instead of raising it.

Mr. PITTMAN. I cannot conceive it, nor have I heard that argument made. I really cannot conceive it.

Coming back to the bill itself, I have stated its main objects. The first paragraph of the bill sets forth the policy of our Government and reads as follows:

It is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States that the proportion of silver to gold in the monetary stocks of the United States should be increased, with the ultimate objective of having and maintaining, one-fourth of the monetary value of such stocks in silver.

That is announcing a policy. We come now to the definition of monetary silver. I think I had better take that up next. In section 10 we find the following definition:

The term "monetary value" means a value calculated on the basis of $1 for an amount of silver or gold equal to the amount at the time contained in the standard silver dollar and the gold dollar, respectively;

The term "stocks of silver" means the total amount of silver at the time owned by the United States (whether or not held as security for outstanding currency of the United States) and of silver contained in coins of the United States at the time outstanding.

Those are the definitions of the term "monetary stocks of the United States." In other words, the monetary stocks of the United States are the stocks of gold and silver owned by the United States.

The next paragraph is one dealing with the requirement to purchase silver. As the bill was orginally introduced by me in the Senate it read:

The Secretary is authorized and directed to purchase silver—

And so forth. The bill I introduced, as it was originally drafted, read in this way:

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to purchase silver, at home or abroad, for present or future delivery with any direct obligations, coin, or currency of the United States, authorized by law, or with any funds of the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, at such rates, at such times, and upon such terms and conditions as he may deem reasonable and most advantageous to the public interest—

And so forth. The question was raised as to whether or not the Secretary was required to continue to purchase until any definite period of time. I have not the bill before me; but, at any rate I added, after the words "public interest", language to this effect:

Until there shall be in the monetary stocks of the United States 25 percent of silver and 75 percent of gold.

The House corrected that language when they passed this bill, and wrote it in this way:

Whenever and so long as the proportion of silver in the stocks of gold and silver of the United States is less than one-fourth of the monetary value of such stocks, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to purchase silver—

They included it at first before the word "directed." I take it that it means exactly the same thing.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. NORRIS. I have been wondering why it is necessary to use all the language that is used on page 2, and whether that language could not be abridged and still mean the same thing.

On page 2 of the bill, commencing with line 2, it reads as follows:

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to purchase silver, at home or abroad, for present or future delivery with any direct obligations, coin or currency of the United States, authorized by law, or with any funds in the Treasury—

Why could we not say there, "is authorized and directed to purchase silver with any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated", and leave out all the other modifying language? If not, I can see one possible meaning of some of the language, and that is where it says "with any direct obligations." I presume the idea there is that the Secretary of the Treasury can issue bonds in place of silver if he desires to do so.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I will state that the way this happened was that a voluntary group here drew the bill in very much shorter form than its present form.

Mr. NORRIS. What is the use of saying "with any * * * coin or currency of the United States, authorized by law"? Why not simply say "with any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated"?

Mr. PITTMAN. I think the reason for that was that those of us who drafted this bill simply directed that the Secretary purchase this silver with silver certificates. The Department officials did not like the idea of his being confined to that, and told us that they might want to buy silver with gold, or with gold notes, or with Treasury certificates; and they did not want the inference to exist that they were limited to buying it with silver certificates.

Mr. NORRIS. If we said nothing in the bill about coin or currency, it would mean that the Secretary could use any funds; it might be gold, it might be silver, or part of each, for that matter.

Mr. PITTMAN. I feel that it is all right, Mr. President; but since we spent 4 or 5 weeks in an attempt to reach an agreement so that we could be assured of this action, while it may be tautology, if the counsel of the Treasury Department felt that the Secretary should be authorized to use these various forms of purchasing media for the purpose of purchasing silver, I saw no objection to it.

Mr. NORRIS. I will say to the Senator, if he will permit me, that I see no real objection to it; but I am wondering if there is any reason why we should use that language. If there is not any reason, I see no object in using it.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. KING. My recollection is that this language was copied in part from the gold bill under which the President has authority to purchase gold. In the authority there granted, substantially the same terminology is found.

Mr. PITTMAN. I think that is correct, also. Exactly the same language was used there. Those who drew the bill thought this language was essential, but I do not know as to that.

I say that in the draft which was prepared in the first place, it was provided that silver should be purchased with silver certificates. Subsequently, when this clause was put in, we insisted that if silver were purchased with anything else than silver certificates, the Treasury should issue silver certificates as against the silver they purchased, for the reason, of course, as we argued at the time, that if silver were purchased with gold, and the silver were put in the Treasury, and it were allowed to lie there simply as bullion, frozen, there would be a contraction of our currency to that extent; and, of course, if the Treasury officials bought it with anything else, they were directed to issue silver certificates as against the bullion in the Treasury.

So they have two methods of dealing with the matter. They may buy silver with silver certificates, or they may acquire it through any other medium; and if they do, they are directed to issue silver certificates against it.

Mr. NORRIS. Of course, under the law, the purchasing power of silver certificates or gold or any other currency that might be used is the same in each case.

Mr. PITTMAN. It is the same in each case.

Mr. NORRIS. It would be immaterial whether one form or another were used. If the Secretary should pay for this silver with silver certificates, it would be just the same as if it were paid for with gold, because the currency would be interchangeable, each kind having the same value as the other.

Mr. KING. However, if the Senator will pardon me, in the case of the silver which might be purchased, even though it were purchased with gold, it was desired that there should be issued silver certificates based upon the silver.

Mr. PITTMAN. Of course. This bill provides farther on for such issuing of silver certificates. That is all right; but the purchasing power of those silver certificates is just the same as the purchasing power of the money that is in the Treasury.

Mr. KING. They are made legal tender in payment of all debts.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. KING. And the silver certificates are just as good as gold, or gold certificates.

Mr. NORRIS. Just as good as gold.

Mr. PITTMAN. When the so-called "Agricultural Adjustment Act" was passed I added this amendment to the act:

Such notes and all other coins and currencies heretofore or hereafter coined or issued by or under the authority of the United States shall be legal tender for all debts, public and private.

Since that time there has been no distinction whatever in any of our species of currency; but I may say to the Senator from Nebraska that a foreign seller of silver, for instance, might not want to accept silver certificates. He might want a Treasury note, or something else. Therefore, we do not care what the Treasury officials buy the silver with so long as they issue certificates against it when it gets into our Treasury.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator another question about the language which I thought was unnecessary. The expression is used, "purchase silver, at home or abroad." What is the use of saying in the bill "at home or abroad"? Why not just authorize and direct the purchase of silver? It would mean the same thing, it seems to me, if we should leave out those words; or is there a reason why those words should be put in?

Mr. PITTMAN. I know of no reason, unless it is the caution that was used in drawing all of the measure.

Mr. KING. May I say, if the Senator will pardon me, that provision is made there for the purchase of domestic silver; and I suppose it was quite natural, when the authorization was for the acquisition of silver aside from domestic silver, to say "at home or abroad."

Mr. NORRIS. This language is not for the purchase of domestic silver. It is not defined in that way. The language is:

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to purchase silver, at home or abroad—

Suppose we should say:

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to purchase silver—

And leave out the words "at home and abroad", and then say:

for present or future delivery—

And so forth.

Mr. PITTMAN. That would be all right.

Mr. NORRIS. It would mean exactly the same thing, as I understand.

Mr. PITTMAN. Those who drafted the bill probably were afraid of the Comptroller of the Currency. I do not know why the words "at home or abroad" were used, but certainly they do not hurt the bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I invite the attention of my friend from Nebraska to the fact that in the act for the purchase of gold this language is found:

With the approval of the President, the Secretary of the Treasury may purchase gold in any amounts, at home or abroad, with any direct obligations, coin, or currency—

And so forth.

Mr. PITTMAN. Section 3 directs the purchase of silver. It is mandatory. It requires the Secretary to purchase silver until it shall constitute one-fourth of our monetary stocks, which consist, under the definition of the bill, of gold and silver.

Section 4 provides that there shall be two limitations upon the purchase of silver. Whenever the Government officials shall have acquired the designated proportion of silver in the monetary stocks—that is, 25 percent in silver and 75 percent in gold—they shall cease to purchase silver, because they will have accomplished what they set out to accomplish; or whenever silver shall have gone above its monetary value they shall cease to purchase it.

The monetary value is defined. It is $1.29 an ounce.

Let me see if I can make that clear. Today a standard silver dollar has only 0.78 of an ounce in it, and yet it is a dollar, and five of them will exchange for $5 in gold notes. But in those five silver dollars there are only 3.91 ounces of silver. Therefore the silver is selling in exchange or in use in this country at the monetary value of $1.29 an ounce. The monetary value is described here.

Of course we have a general act in our statutes which states that when silver gets above the parity price, that is, when silver becomes more valuable as bullion than as money, that is, when it gets above its exchange value for other money, when it gets above $1.29 an ounce, the Government has a right to sell silver so as to bring the parity price down, so as to protect the parity of our currency.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I notice that the bill has made the purchase of silver obligatory, but as to the sale of silver, where the condition the Senator has just now described is reached, if ever reached, to wit, when it is worth more than $1.29, the Secretary may, with the consent of the President, sell silver. Would there be any reason, in the Senator's judgment, why there should not be a compulsion to sell as well as to buy, under the conditions named in the bill?

Mr. PITTMAN. Under the parity act, which already exists, the language is "may" and not "shall", and there are reasons why that is so. In other words, the value of silver in the world might be rising. The ratio of silver to gold might be changing. Instead of using the power to sell, the Department might use the power of the embargo to prevent the melting up of the coins and selling them elsewhere. China, time and again, has threatened to place an embargo upon the exportation of silver from her borders so that she could protect her own currency. We would leave it discretionary as to whether or not the Department should impose an embargo or whether or not they should sell silver to protect the market.

Mr. NORRIS. There is nothing provided in the bill about an embargo. As I take it, if silver were going too high, and we wanted to prevent that, if it were above $1.29, where the bill authorizes the sale, if the sale did not take place and no authority were given the President to make the sale, I can conceive how it might continue to rise, and that the only way to control its going beyond $1.29 an ounce which, as I take it, would be undesirable, would be to sell.

Mr. PITTMAN. I may say that the President now has authority, if he wishes, to cut down the silver content of the dollar.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. PITTMAN. And if he does, then the monetary value of the dollar increases.

Mr. NORRIS. Is it not true that one of the things the Senator thinks ought to be done and will be done under the bill if it shall become a law is that we will prevent silver from going above $1.29 an ounce, and that the only way to bring that about is to sell it?

Mr. PITTMAN. Undoubtedly we want to give authority to sell it.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not doubt that at all, but I am wondering why the President should not be compelled to sell.

Mr. PITTMAN. The reason why silver is $1.29 today is that it is on the basis of what we call 16 to 1.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. PITTMAN. In other words, it is on the old basis of 371¼ grains of silver as a dollar and 23$\frac{22}{32}$ grains of gold as a dollar. As a matter of fact, the value of the gold dollar has been changed; the value of the silver dollar may be changed. If the Treasury reduces the number of grains in the silver dollar, then, as a result of that very act, instead of the value being $1.29, it may go to double that amount. In other words, we do not put the power in the hands of the Government to readjust the ratio between gold and silver. I think the time will come when they will adjust the ratio between them. At the present time we are simply relying on the old value of $1.29 an ounce.

Mr. NORRIS. I am wondering whether I have made myself perfectly clear to the Senator. Is it not true that the authority to sell the silver when it goes above $1.29 an ounce is given for the purpose of preventing silver from going above $1.29 an ounce?

Mr. PITTMAN. At the present time we do not want that to happen.

Mr. NORRIS. That is the reason why we provide that authority in the bill.

Mr. PITTMAN. At the present time we do not want that to occur.

Mr. NORRIS. If the President does not exercise the authority—and nothing in the law would compel him to—then it might go up indefinitely.

Mr. PITTMAN. In no law have we ever compelled it.

Mr. NORRIS. But we would compel the President to buy in order to keep the price up. If the Government owned the silver and we wanted to prevent it going above $1.29 an ounce, we could easily prevent that, if we offered our silver for $1.29 an ounce, assuming that the Government had enough silver in stock to control the market.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, it has done that. In 1920, when silver went to $1.38 an ounce throughout the world, the silver in the standard silver dollar was more valuable for its bullion, and people started to melt it. The Government then took 50,000,000 standard silver dollars out of the Treasury and turned them over to the exporters of silver in order to break the market, and they did break it, from $1.38 to below a dollar.

The duty is imposed upon the Secretary of the Treasury, in another act, to maintain the parity. He is actually directed in the Parity Act to maintain it. But the pending bill does no repeal the Parity Act at all. The Parity Act directs the Secretary to maintain the parity, but when we get down to it, we are in the process, undoubtedly, of changing the parity of our currencies today.

When the administration reduced the gold content of the dollar, it changed the ratio between silver and gold from 16 to 1—because 371¼ grains is 16 times 23.2 grains—to very nearly 28 to 1, and that process may go on constantly.

The result is that, while there is a general act requiring the Secretary to maintain the parity of all our currency, under this particular bill, under which he may change the monetary value of the silver dollar at any time, he may increase the monetary value of the silver dollar, and if he does, we do not want to direct him to sell silver at a price below the monetary value of the silver dollar at some future date which we fix.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In the course of this process of purchase, what happens on the books of the Treasury in respect to the value of this purchased silver? Let me illustrate. Suppose there are purchases at 50 cents, and the process of purchase raises the price to a dollar. Does the silver remain on the Treasury books at 50 cents?

Mr. PITTMAN. It does until it is disposed of. When it is disposed of in any form whatever the Government is credited with the seigniorage, the profit, the difference between what it paid for it and what it used it for. For instance, the average price at which the Government has purchased silver from the beginning is around 90 cents an ounce. They have not sold that silver except to our own people, but they have sold it. That is, when they would manufacture it into quarters and sell it to a bank they were selling that silver at the rate of $1.38 an ounce. When they manufactured five dollars and sold those five dollars to a bank for use they were selling it at the rate of $1.29 an ounce. What they do is to keep the balance, of course, and of course what they sell for is a fixed price, because they are only selling it to commerce and banks; but the difference between what it cost them and what they circulate it for, which means the same as what they sell it for, is called "seigniorage", and we have today in the Treasury of the United States, accumulated since 1873, $262,000,000 profit.

Mr. VANDENBERG. They do not have to circulate the silver at all under the terms of the bill, do they?

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes; they have to circulate it as silver certificates.

Mr. VANDENBERG. And there is no change on the books of the Treasury in respect to a synthetic profit, let us call it, except as there is a completed transaction subsequently?

Mr. PITTMAN. No; but in this case it will be an immediately completed transaction, because the bill requires that they issue silver certificates against the silver.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Then each time they issue a certificate, the seigniorage, or profit, goes on the credit ledger of the Government?

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes; it does.

Mr. VANDENBERG. And if, as the Senator cannot conceive, the price of silver should go down under the bludgeoning of the heavy sales, they would have to charge a loss by the same process?

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes; but that seems never to have happened in history.

Mr. WHEELER. In other words, if the Government buys the silver at 50 cents an ounce and issues silver certificates against it, it makes a profit, because it will issue the silver certificates at the rate of $1.29. So, consequently, it would make on that ounce of silver the difference between the 50 cents and the $1.29, because the silver certificates will pass for a dollar.

Mr. PITTMAN. Permit me now to hurry through with a description of this bill. I have just dealt with the authority to sell. Section 5 directs the issuance of the silver certificates we have just been talking about. I will read a part of it:

SEC. 5. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to issue silver certificates in such denominations as he may from time to time prescribe in a face amount not less than the cost of all silver purchased under the authority of section 3. There shall be maintained in the Treasury as security for all silver certificates heretofore or hereafter issued and at the time outstanding an amount of silver in bullion and standard silver dollars of a monetary value equal to the face amount of such silver certificates. All silver certificates heretofore or hereafter issued shall be legal tender for all debts, public and private, public charges, taxes, duties, and dues, and shall be redeemable on demand at the Treasury of the United States in standard silver dollars; and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to coin standard silver dollars for such redemption.

The question now arises as to whether or not the word "issue"—in the sentence "to issue silver certificates"—means to place into circulation. I will state that I first got the opinion of the counsel of the Treasury Department on that question. It is his opinion that the word "issue" carries with it the legal definition to circulate.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. BONE. I do not know whether I understood the Senator from Montana aright. I understood him to say that a value of 50 cents in silver would cause the issuance of a certificate to the value of $1.29.

Mr. WHEELER. If the Government buys the silver at 50 cents it will issue the silver certificates at the rate of $1.29.

Mr. BONE. The bill itself provides that the Secretary of the Treasury shall maintain an amount of silver and in bullion and in standard silver dollars of a monetary value equal to the face amount of the silver certificates issued.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I desire to ask the Senator from Nevada a question. He may have answered it already. We on this side could not hear the conversation which has been going on among the several Senators on the other side of the Chamber. If the Senator will answer this question, I think it will be plain. In section 5 it is provided:

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to issue silver certificates in such denominations as he may from time to time prescribe in a face amount not less than the cost of all silver purchased under the authority of section 3.

Suppose, to illustrate the point on which I want to get the information, that under such law the Secretary purchased 1 ounce of silver and paid 50 cents for it. Would he issue a silver certificate for a dollar or for 50 cents?

Mr. PITTMAN. No; he could not issue a certificate for less than a dollar, but he could issue a silver certificate against the ounce of silver.

Mr. NORRIS. In other words, I am interested to know what the amount of the silver certificate would be. The Secretary paid 50 cents for the silver. Would he now issue a silver certificate for $1?

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. Having purchased an ounce of silver, he would issue a silver certificate against it for $1?

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes. He would take seventy-eight one-hundredths of that ounce and make a silver dollar out of it, and against that silver issue a certificate, and he still has a little surplus silver on hand.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. KEAN. What would he do with the balance?

Mr. PITTMAN. The rest of it is what we call "seigniorage or profit" to the Government, and we now have $262,000,000 of profit from such transactions.

Mr. KEAN. But does he expect to issue currency against that or not?

Mr. PITTMAN. He has the authority to, but is not directed to.

Mr. KEAN. But he may do so?

Mr. PITTMAN. He may.

Mr. KEAN. Therefore he may use that balance?

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes.

Mr. KEAN. And when this bill shall be passed, this money will be the only sound money in the United States? Is that right?

Mr. PITTMAN. Well, it will be just as sound as any we now have.

Mr. KEAN. It will be the only sound money we have.

Mr. BORAH. I rather think that is true.

Mr. PITTMAN. I would not say it is true.

Mr. BORAH. Well, it would be sound enough, anyway.

Mr. VANDENBERG. It will not be too sound.

Mr. PITTMAN. I have now completed the discussion of section 5. I now come to the section with regard to embargo——

Mr. KEAN. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. KEAN. The money we were just discussing would be the only redeemable money in the United States, would it not?

Mr. PITTMAN. It would be the only money that is circulating today which has any intrinsic value.

Mr. KEAN. Yes; and it would be the only redeemable money in the United States.

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes. The silver dollar today has a value of 35 cents all over the world. It has that value here and everywhere else.

Mr. KEAN. Whereas the paper currency is not worth the paper it is printed on?

Mr. PITTMAN. It is not worth as much as a silver certificate to me.

Here is the embargo clause, section 6:

SEC. 6. Whenever in his judgment such action is necessary to effectuate the policy of this act, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized, with the approval of the President, to investigate, regulate, or prohibit, by means of licenses or otherwise, the acquisition, importation, exportation, or transportation of silver and of contracts and other arrangements made with respect thereto; and to require the filing of reports deemed by him reasonably necessary in connection therewith.

Then comes the penalty clause. Now comes section 7. Section 7 deals with the nationalization of silver. I do not care to read that. It is the same provision as the one we had dealing with the nationalization of gold. It is copied from it, I take it.

Then comes section 8. Section 8 is an amendment to schedule A of title VIII of the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended (relating to stamp taxes), and what it provides in effect is that there shall be an excess-profits tax on the sale of silver. That excess-profits tax commences to run for sales made after the 15th day of May. If there are any profits on sales made after that time one-half the profits go to the Government. Profits or sales made between the 15th day of May and the time of the passage of this act are accounted for in the income tax. After this act takes effect stamps are placed on the memorandum of transactions of sales which stamps amount to 50 percent of the profits on the sales.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. What date is used as the date of the purchase with a view to ascertaining the profit? The sale is of the date of May 15.

Mr. PITTMAN. There is no date back of May 15 which would be used as a date of purchase in order to fix the tax.

Mr. BAILEY. Do we not have to fix the date?

Mr. PITTMAN. Not from the time of purchase. The date is fixed with reference to the sale of the silver.

Mr. BAILEY. A date has to be fixed in order to determine the profit.

Mr. PITTMAN. The man who sells knows how much he paid for the silver.

Mr. BAILEY That will relate back just as far as one wants to?

Mr. PITTMAN. The market price makes no difference. One must account for what one pays for silver in order to establish profit after the 15th day of May.

Mr. BAILEY. That will relate back indefinitely to any purchase in the past?

Mr. PITTMAN. It is governed by the sale. Any sales which take place prior to the 15th day of May are not accounted for. Those which take place after the 15th day of May are accounted for and the profits are based on what was paid for it and what it was sold for.

Mr. BAILEY. If some one now has a profit, by reason of speculating in silver on the prospect of silver legislation, he cannot get his profit now without being taxed, but if he got out prior to May 15 he would not be taxed?

Mr. PITTMAN. He would not be taxed.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. Is the profit tax provided by this section limited to sales made to the Government, or does it apply to all sales of silver, regardless of to whom made?

Mr. PITTMAN. It applies to all sales, but at this point let me say that it does not affect a sale by miners, producers, because the cost to the producer is fixed at the world price at which he sells, and, therefore, there is no profit to him. It does not apply to those who acquire silver in industries, because there is no sale of the silver, though there is a purchase, the profit, if any, going to the manufacturing industry. The tax is limited, I may say, to the actual profit on transactions of buying and selling bullion purely as a commodity. That is the definition of it.

Mr. President, those are the only material clauses in this bill except the definitions to which I have referred.

Now, let me say before I conclude that I discussed this question quite fully on the 17th day of last month when I presented a similar bill, from which I eliminated the tax clause and also the appropriation clause.

The pending bill, I may say, is not what many of us would desire or what many of us have sought for many years. However, there has been a vast difference of opinion upon this subject for so long that it is perfectly evident to me that we could never accomplish any advance whatever in the larger use of silver as a monetary base in this country unless we could bring our minds together on some proposal.

The first trouble we had in arriving at a conclusion was due to the fact that the administration demanded that not only should the time and method of buying be permissive but that the question of buying at all should be permissive. Of course, there would be no legislation in that aspect of the case, because nothing whatever would be added to the existing law. Today the President has authority to buy silver, but there is no law, unless this bill shall be enacted, to direct him to buy silver. This bill absolutely directs the Secretary of the Treasury to buy silver until there is one-third as much silver in the Treasury as there is gold, or, in other words, until our monetary stock—which means all the gold and silver owned by our Government—is in the proportion of 25 percent silver and 75 percent gold. I say that that is a tremendous advance. I say to you, Mr. President, that not since 1873 have we ever been able to place an act on the statute books which declared that it was the policy of the Government to maintain one-third of our metallic monetary stocks in silver. There has not been an act on the statute books since 1873 that declared that such a ratio should be maintained.

There have been two acts only on our statute books since 1873 that even required the administration to buy silver at all, except under the Pittman Act, which was simply designed to replace some silver that was taken out during the war, and that act terminated of its own force. There have not been any acts that required the coinage of silver since 1873, except the two purchase acts which expired over 30 years ago.

Last year was the first time that silver was remonetized since it was demonetized in 1873. It was demonetized in 1873 because at that time its full legal tender value was destroyed. By this bill and by other acts passed recently we have absolutely remonetized silver in two ways: We have declared that its use shall be reestablished, that it shall be maintained, and that it shall be full legal tender for all debts, public and private, and for all public dues. Those were great steps that we accomplished.

So far as I am personally concerned, I am not interested in the nationalization of silver and I am not interested in the question of taxation of silver, and I do not think that the nationalization of silver means anything, but others do. I think the taxation of silver will bring some money into the Treasury and will prevent some speculation here or there, but I would rather have a free market in the United States so that we could take the market away from London, which has had control of it for many years, than to have that little advantage which is proposed to be given. As a matter of fact, the history of the exchange is this: This bill, so far as the taxation of silver is concerned, went into effect on the 15th day of May; and since the 15th day of May, the metal exchange of New York has done just as much business in silver as it ever did. The only difference is there has been a steadier buying and selling and the market has not been so erratic. However, these things mean nothing to me. That is all I have to say.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma offers an amendment which will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, it is proposed to strike out lines 5 to 9, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SEC. 2. It is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States that the proportion of silver to gold in the monetary metallic reserves of the United States should be increased, with the ultimate objective of having and maintaining one-fourth of such reserves by value in silver.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, the heart of this bill, if it has a heart, is contained in section 2. I propose to strike out section 2, and to insert in lieu thereof a new section which, in my judgment, will make the bill something different from what it is at the present time, and make it a real 100-percent silver bill. At present time this bill, in my judgment, changes the existing law in but few particulars. I disagree in many respects with the distinguished Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], and I will point out those differences as I proceed, and, Mr. President, as I proceed if any Senator takes exception to my interpretation I shall be only too glad to have him point out wherein he thinks I am wrong because I do not desire to be wrong.

This bill does not change the present status of silver as money. Silver is now not money any more than paper, nickel, and copper are money, and this bill does not propose to change the status of silver.

Section 2 of this bill proposes to add some more silver to the stock of money. Mr. President, we have now in our general stock of money the following:

We have gold in the sum of seven and one-half billion dollars plus; we have gold certificates, still carried in the total stock of money, in the sum of $4,000,000,000 plus. Gold certificates, paper, are a part of our general stock of money.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, may I make an inquiry of the Senator there?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. So that there may be no misunderstanding and lest the Senator's remarks might be misinterpreted, let me ask does the Senator add the gold certificates to the gold? Do not the gold certificates simply represent so many gold dollars held in lieu of the certificates?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is exactly so, but the gold certificates are still in circulation somewhere; they are still out.

Mr. NORRIS. But the Senator just gave the amount of gold as $7,000,000,000 plus, and then the amount of gold certificates as $4,000,000,000. Does he mean that we have $11,000,000,000 in gold and gold certificates altogether?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I am quoting from form 1028 of the Treasury Department, Public Debt Service, and I am reading from an item which gives the kinds of money. The Director of the Mint calls this item "Stocks of money." This particular statement call it "Kinds or money", the first item of which is $7,500,000,000 of gold. The second item is gold certificates, and they are in the amount of $4,778,000,000 plus. Apparently, there is that amount of gold certificates which are in some way being used by somebody, because they are classified as money.

Third, standard silver dollars in the sum of $540,000,000. That is a part of our general stock of money.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. That is, gold certificates are issued against gold in the Treasury, and the total is not $11,000,000,000 of gold, but seven and a half billion dollars of gold against which $4,000,000,000 plus, of certificates are outstanding. Is not that correct?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator is exactly right, but I am simply cataloging the stock of money we have.

The fourth item is silver bullion secured under the act of May 12, 1933. That was last year when we received some silver bullion from our war debtors. From them we received 22,000,000 ounces plus.

Silver certificates. We have $499,000,000 of silver certificates in existence, and they are a part of our general monetary stock.

We have Treasury notes of 1890 in the sum of $1,000,000,000 plus. They are a part of our monetary stock. We have subsidiary silver, $296,000,000. That is made up of half dollars, quarters, and dimes, and that is a part of our general monetary stock. The subsidiary silver is equivalent to paper—no better, no worse.

Minor coins—that means pennies, I presume, in the main, and perhaps nickels—$126,000,000. That is a part of our general monetary stock.

We have of United States notes $346,000,000. Those are the detested greenbacks we hear so much about, printing-press money, yet carried as a part of our general monetary stock and in circulation today in the United States.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. KING. The Senator, of course, understands there is gold to the extent of $150,000,000 back of the greenbacks?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes. There are $346,000,000 in greenbacks in existence. The gold to which the Senator refers is back of some other forms of our paper money as well. It is not back of the greenbacks alone.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. LONG. That money is good for the payment of all debts, public and private, except taxes.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It is good for all kinds of debts. An amendment was adopted last year making all money heretofore and hereafter issued legal tender in the payment of all debts, public and private. That means every kind of debt.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. I should be glad if the Senator from Oklahoma would be good enough to give his definition of the word "reserves" as used in his amendment. He is substituting for the word "stocks" the word "reserves." In the bill, as I read it, the term "monetary stocks" includes all the money substances in the Treasury and those in circulation. The term "reserves" ordinarily means money set apart to meet some obligation existing or in contemplation.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, by "reserves" I mean primary money. By "reserves" I mean standard money. By "reserves" I mean basic money. Today we have but one class, standard money, basic money, and that is gold. Any money that is used as ultimate redemption money is basic money. It is standard money, primary money, and the only kind of money we have today that fills that definition is gold, and gold alone.

I read now from the weekly report of the Federal Reserve Board. They carry a good many particular items, and one is the monetary gold stock. The Federal Reserve Board does not carry a monetary silver stock. It has nothing to say about silver. In the opinion of the Federal Reserve System, silver is no more important as money than nickel or copper or paper. It is nothing. The bill does not make it any better than it is now.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. In view of the Senator's statement, let me say that I prefer the Senator's amendment to the provision in the bill. But the Senator's amendment does not make silver a money of ultimate redemption. His amendment, in my opinion, still leaves it in the same class with token money, and not as money of ultimate redemption.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I am glad to have the Senator's interpretation of the amendment. The amendment of course does not make the bill perfect, but the amendment if adopted would give a cornerstone for the bill upon which we could build. If it is not adopted and the original text remains in the bill, it does not have even a cornerstone and it has no foundation. There would be no change in our present financial system.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. LONG. I did not know whether the Senator had that in mind. If the Senator's amendment is adopted I have a further amendment which I intend to offer, which would specifically state that we are operating on a bimetallic basis with a standard ratio of gold and silver.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I want to finish the statement as to the stocks of money. I mentioned just a moment ago United States notes, sometimes called "greenbacks." We have of those notes now $346,000,000. This most detestable form of money was issued during the war between the States. We did not have any gold in those days. The war was on. We did not have any silver. The North did not have any credit. It had armies in the field. They had to be financed. President Lincoln came to Congress and got Congress to enact a law giving him authority to issue what became known in slang parlance as "greenbacks." They were United States Treasury notes.

Those Treasury notes were issued and placed in circulation to the extent of almost $500,000,000. With that money President Lincoln financed the North in the war, paid the soldiers, paid the expenses of the Government. It might be too broad to say that through those greenbacks the northern side won. Whether or not that be true is immaterial. When the war was over we had no gold, no silver, no credit. All we had was the Treasury notes. They served the purpose.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. I am bound to respond to the suggestion that the greenbacks won the war. The Confederate States of America issued a great many more greenbacks than the Federal Union did, and we lost the war. I do not think it was a contest as to who could issue the most notes.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Perhaps the Senator's observation is correct, but had not we issued the greenbacks the war would not have lasted as long as it did. I think the Senator will agree with that.

Mr. BAILEY. That may be so. I am simply making the point that the great contest was not determined on either side by the amount of paper money that was issued.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I agree with the Senator. I was making the point that that is all we had on the northern side with which to finance the war.

After the war was over those greenbacks were in circulation. We gradually acquired some gold, acquired some silver, and acquired some credit after the war terminated. The Congress and the Government began to pay off the greenbacks. They began to retire them. The greenbacks were paid off and retired and canceled, and the volume of money was constantly decreased.

Later on it was seen that the smaller the amount of money in circulation, the higher the value of money. The Congress in those days apparently had an understanding of this matter. Not desiring to see the amount of money curtailed and made smaller, Congress enacted a law preventing the further retirement of the greenback. They did not stop by simply saying that "We shall not retire any more greenbacks", but Congress enacted a solemn declaration that "not only will we not retire any more greenbacks but we will keep the ones we have in circulation constantly and continuously." That was 70 years ago. They are in circulation now and there is no bill pending to retire them.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, is the Senator really arguing that this country or any other country could get along with a mere paper currency not supported with any value?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I have not gone into that question at all. I do not care to discuss it now.

Mr. BAILEY. Then, what is the significance of the Senator's remarks on the subject of greenbacks?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I was explaining to those who criticize greenbacks that they are not a class of money subject to criticism. There is no better money in the world than those greenbacks.

Mr. BAILEY. Then there is really no significance in the Senator's remarks.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Not at all. I am trying to answer some of the objections made with reference to greenbacks.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. Let me say to the Senator that, in my opinion, if we had no gold whatsoever in this country and we still had the same amount of currency outstanding, that currency would be just as good as it is now, whether or not we had any gold in the Treasury, for the simple reason that we are a creditor nation, and so long as we are a creditor nation, and other people and other nations owe us, there will be a demand for our money. Because of the fact that other nations know we can pay off those notes, that money will be just as good as if we had not a dollar back of them at all.

That is the reason why it has been difficult to depress the American dollar and it has been necessary to use artificial means to do it. That is also the reason why, when the President revalued gold and did not issue any more currency against the gold of which he had raised the value, we had no rise in commodity prices in this country.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, we now have almost eight billion dollars in gold. It is not in use. It is not in circulation. There is no way to get it in circulation. The Treasury can sell that gold. The Treasury is selling that gold. If we had an obligation that we owed to some foreign nation, we could use that gold in settlement of that obligation. If a private concern owed some foreign nation, that private concern could go to the Treasury and acquire that gold with which to settle that private debt. The gold is not in circulation today because the law does not make that necessary.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. BAILEY. The fact is that we could not settle the indebtedness either of our citizens or of our country to any other nation except in gold or gold value. It is not a matter of convenience; it is a matter of necessity.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Exactly so; and the amendment I have just offered, if adopted, will make it possible for us to use silver in exactly the same way that we are now using gold.

Mr. BAILEY. Does the Senator imagine that France or England would accept silver from us at our value, or would they accept silver at the gold value?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The amendment provides that they shall accept silver at the gold value.

Mr. BAILEY. Then the Senator puts us at once on the gold basis.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Exactly so. It is that way now.

Mr. BAILEY. I understand; and under the proposed legislation silver assumes merely the character of a commodity. It happens to be a metallic commodity; and the Government might just as well buy cotton or lead, and issue money against it, as to buy silver.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Exactly so; except that under the terms of the bill as it is now before the Senate it would be analogous for the Government to buy a bale of cotton for $50 and then issue $129 of currency against it.

Mr. BAILEY. Silver is not a product of the southern States. Cotton is. Would the Senator join me in voting for a bill to authorize the Government to buy 20,000,000 bales of cotton and store them and issue money against them?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It would be much better money than we have now.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator will agree that it would be quite as good as the silver proposal which is before us?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. This bill does not propose, even by insinuation, to change the present status of silver,

The other day, if I am not mistaken, the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] made the statement that the bill makes silver primary money. I cannot agree to that statement, if he still adheres to it.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I do.

Mr. PITTMAN. I do not know what the Senator means by "primary money." I have been trying for a long time to find out what primary money is. I have never found it defined in any lexicon; but I say that the Constitution still declares that gold and silver shall be the money of the country, and there are only two things that we did to silver in 1873. One of them was to say that the measure of value should be solely gold, and that silver money should not any longer be full legal tender. By this bill we are reestablishing the full legal-tender quality of silver, and we are attempting to restore to silver its ratio of use.

Today, gold is not primary money under our law, is it?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. In theory, it is; not in practice.

Mr. PITTMAN. I mean, under the law, is gold primary money?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Not in practice; I agree with the Senator.

Mr. PITTMAN. Does the Senator mean that according to his definition, before we changed the law with regard to gold, it was primary money?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. So long as a man could take his paper money down to a bank and get gold for it, gold was primary money, money of ultimate redemption; but since the passage of the bill last year which recalled all the gold, and took it out of circulation, it is not now practically money of redemption.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. Just wait until I get through.

Mr. LONG. Just a moment. Will the Senator from Oklahoma yield to me for a question?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield first to the Senator from Nevada. Then I will yield to the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. PITTMAN. Why should the Senator desire to interrupt a colloquy? What was the last statement of the Senator?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I stated that I understood the Senator from Nevada to say recently that this bill made silver primary money.

Mr. PITTMAN. I did not use the word "primary", because I do not understand the definition of primary money. What I say is that the bill remonetizes silver, and I say that in my opinion silver has exactly the same status under the bill that gold has. That is what I mean. When we come down to the question as to whether or not we are to restore the old gold standard, I do not know. I do not believe we ever shall; but I do say that in my opinion the bill gives to silver money the same status that we now have with regard to gold money.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Let me ask the Senator from Nevada a question. In what way does the bill change the present status of silver?

Mr. PITTMAN. The bill changes the status of silver only to the extent that it reasserts, in the first place, that it is full legal tender. In the second place, it declares that it is the policy not to do away with its use. In the third place, it reestablishes the coinage of silver money.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, the full legal-tender quality of silver was reestablished in the bill we passed a year ago, so this bill does not add anything to that statement.

Mr. PITTMAN. Not to that portion of it; but does it not add to the use of it?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I do not think so.

Mr. PITTMAN. Certainly the Treasury officials are going to buy more silver under it, are they not?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I hope so; but they will not permit us to say in the bill that they shall buy more silver.

Mr. PITTMAN. No; I understand; but when the President of the United States says to me and to a group of us, at a time when the Senator from Oklahoma is present, "I intend to carry out this purchase enthusiastically", I take his word for it.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I do not doubt the President's word, but I have just made the statement that we could not put in the bill any clause making it mandatory for the Secretary to buy a single ounce of silver.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I do.

Mr. LONG. I wish to ask the Senator a question. If gold is not our primary money, what is our primary money? We have today a law on the statute books that abridges a citizen's right to go and get gold in exchange for his paper money, because he will be arrested if he gets more than $100 worth of it. We have nothing in the law which abolishes gold as primary money, except the indirection which does not allow the citizen to hold it. In one theory, we have gold as the sole currency; in the other, we have a prohibition against it. No one can define what is primary money today.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. From a practical standpoint we have no primary money, or else all money is primary money, because it is all on an equality. The money we have in circulation today is, first, silver dollars. Those silver dollars are worth 35 cents intrinsically. Here is a piece of paper that is the size of a paper dollar. This piece of paper has some value. It is not worth 35 cents, but it has some value. Run that through the printing press and it becomes one dollar. That is token money. A silver dollar today, under the law, is token money and nothing else, because it is not worth a dollar, any more than this piece of paper is worth a dollar.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. How many times is it necessary to run a piece of paper like that through the printing press before it gets to be worth more than it is worth without having anything printed on it?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It will still be worth its weight in paper.

Mr. BAILEY. Exactly; and if it is run through 10,000,000,000 times that is exactly what it will be worth.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is exactly so.

I exhibit to the Senator an ounce of silver. There is an ounce of pure silver. It is about as large as a button on a gentleman's overcoat and a little thicker. That weighs a troy ounce. That ounce is worth today on the market approximately 45 cents; yet if I should take it to the mint, if I could, the Director of the Mint would take this ounce of silver and run part of it through his printing presses and make a silver dollar out of a portion of it, and would give me back the almost 100 grains that would not be used. That sample act converts a portion of this ounce of silver into a token dollar. That token, after it is run through the printing press, is no more valuable than this piece of paper if it is run through the same printing press, or a comparable printing press. One stamps figures and letters on silver, and the other prints figures and pictures on paper.

So I contend that silver now is token money and nothing more. I contend that under this bill, if passed, silver will be token money and nothing more. It is not made what I term "primary money." Of course, a citizen can take his silver certificate down to the bank and get 35 cents' worth of silver for it if he wants to have it melted, but he gets only a dollar's worth of buying power, and he starts with a dollar's worth of buying power; so he does not enhance anything by converting his paper dollar into a silver dollar.

Mr. PITTMAN. Does the Senator's amendment accomplish the purpose?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Of course, this is going to be a little bit complicated and intricate; but if Senators will sit around me and ask questions, I think we can come to some agreement.

Mr. PITTMAN. I know the other effects of the Senator's amendment, but does his amendment itself accomplish that particular purpose?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes, Mr. President.

Now let me proceed with what I started to say a while ago, before I get away from that subject.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes; I yield to the Senator.

Mr. ADAMS. I desire to make an inquiry of the Senator. Under his test or definition of token money, if under this bill silver should rise in value to be worth more than $1.29 an ounce, with the consequence that gold would decrease in value, so that the $20 gold piece in fact had less than $20 worth of bullion gold in it, would the Senator then say that the gold was token money, and that silver had ceased to be token money?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. No, Mr. President, for the reason that the law provides that 15 grains plus of gold shall be one dollar, and that dollar is a unit of measurement. So always 15 grains plus of gold is a dollar. It does not have to be stamped to make it a dollar.

I should like to show the Senator a dollar's worth of gold, but it is so small that I cannot show it to him.

Mr. ADAMS. I have good eyes.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator would have to use his imagination to see that small piece of yellow metal. It is about half the size of a small bean. If we should take a small bean and cut off one end of it, we would have a chunk of bean that would be comparable in size to 15 grains plus of pure gold. By running that through the stamp we do not add a thing to its value. It is worth a dollar now. We can take it to any jeweler, and he will weigh it for us, and give us a dollar's worth of merchandise for it. Anyone else who knows its weight will give us a dollar's worth of merchandise for it. Nothing is added to the value of this gold by stamping it. It is a dollar, whether stamped or not stamped.

Mr. ADAMS. If the Senator will permit a further observation, all money, when it is truly called money, is based upon the signature or the stamp of the Government. Only the Government makes money; and its value may depend upon the solvency of the Government in one case, or it may depend upon the bullion or commercial value of the thing out of which the money is made.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. BAILEY. I understood the distinguished Senator to say that a man would have to use his imagination to see that dollar's worth of gold.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes; at the distance between the Senator and myself. It is rather dark in the Senate Chamber today.

Mr. BAILEY. Is not this the difference? It is not necessary to use our imaginations to realize the dollar's worth of gold in the small amount of gold the Senator has; but if he has a silver dollar that is worth 35 cents on the market, does he not have to use his imagination to consider that a dollar?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. We have used silver money for 150 years.

Mr. BAILEY. But have we not always done it by the exercise of our imaginations, and wholly because the amount of silver outstanding has been relatively small as compared with the amount of redemption money?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Any time I see a piece of paper or a piece of metal with the monetary stamp of the United States upon it, I do not worry my imagination about that piece of money.

Mr. BAILEY. How does the Senator arrive at the conclusion that it is worth a dollar? He knows that the gold is worth a dollar. How does he arrive at the conclusion that this 35 cents' worth of silver is worth a dollar, except by the exercise of his imagination?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Under previous law, the act of 1900, all forms of money were redeemable in gold, and the Treasury Department was directed and commanded to keep all these forms of money at a parity.

Mr. BAILEY. That was effectual because the amount of silver outstanding was relatively small as compared with the amount of gold.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield to me?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. LONG. I should like to ask the Senator whether in 1873 a man did not have to use his imagination as much to know that the silver dollar was a silver dollar as to know that a gold dollar was a gold dollar.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I do not think there were many silver dollars in circulation in 1873. They were very scarce.

Mr. LONG. Nevertheless, silver was the same standard, visible, actual money that gold was, at the ratio of 16 to 1, until the law of 1873 stopped the coinage of silver.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, in the colonial days there was some money in this country. They had forms of money of foreign nations in circulation in the Colonies. The different Colonies had some different forms of money. There was very little gold in circulation, and not very much silver, but there was some silver in circulation.

The Continental Congress passed a resolution fixing the silver dollar as a standard of value among the Colonies That dollar was fixed at practically the same size and same weight that the dollar is fixed at today, and that silver dollar was and remained the standard of value until the Constitution was adopted.

When the Constitution was adopted it provided that gold and silver should be the money of the Constitution. In the first administration Mr. Hamilton was made Secretary of the Treasury. All the money they had was the money issued by the old Continental Congress, which established and made the silver dollar the standard. Alexander Hamilton made an investigation of the question of the establishment of a mint, and he recommended that the unit of measurement be fixed as the silver dollar and fixed the weight of that silver dollar at 371¼ grains of fine silver.

During the first administration of Mr. Washington, Congress, in 1792, by law established the silver dollar as prescribed by Hamilton as the unit of value, the standard of the monetary system of the United States. That silver dollar, insofar as the weight is concerned, has never been changed. The weight of the pure silver in the Hamilton silver dollar has remained the same to this day. The gold content has been changed on numerous occasions, but the silver dollar has remained, so far as the pure silver content is concerned, unchanged. The amount of the alloy was decreased once or twice, but the pure silver in a silver dollar has remained steadfast and secure since the Continental Congress.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Discussing the continental money, will the Senator identify what money it was that gave rise to the expression "not worth a continental"?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. In the early days of the Republic, when the colonists were finghting Great Britain, under George Washington, the Colonies found themselves in the same predicament in which the South was during the sixties. The Colonies had no gold, they had no silver, and they had no credit, and they were in a war with Great Britain, a powerful nation. The Colonies had their soldiers at Yorktown and at Valley Forge, ragged, naked, hungry, and they had no money with which to pay the soldiers and to supply their needs.

So the Continental Congress, for the want of gold and for the want of silver and for the want of the ability to borrow, issued paper money. Of course it was Continental currency, comparable to the money issued in the South in the sixties.

The colonists under Washington, prior to the Constitution, used those Continental bills with which to finance the struggle for independence. Of course they had to issue those bills in rather large quantities, and frequently, and the more they issued the more plentiful the bills became, and there began to operate the economic law that as things become plentiful they become cheap. That is a thing which some of our officials here today cannot realize as yet. If they realize it, they refuse to acknowledge it. That is what made the continental currency worthless, and that is why they call the paper "not worth a continental." They had to issue so much of the continental currency that it became so cheap that it became worthless, or practically worthless.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Is it the Senator's view that if we, even now, were to embark upon a relatively unrestricted use of mere printing-press money, again it would similarly recede and be "not worth a continental"?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. There is no argument about that matter, I will say to the Senator from Michigan. So far as I know, there is not a citizen in the United States who is in favor of what is known as "inflation per se." The same economic law that governs the value of money governs the value of everything else. The same economic law that governs the value of wheat, governs the value of corn, governs the value of cotton, and governs the value of hogs, governs the buying power of money. When those commodities are plentiful they are cheap.

When they are scarce, they are high. When money is plentiful, money is cheap. When money is scarce, money is high; and I will come to that later on in my discussion, when I shall give some figures and cite some illustrations. If anyone has any doubt about it he can argue with my figures, but I do not think he will argue with my reasoning.

I was trying to show a moment ago how much we have in our stock of money. We have Federal Reserve notes in the sum of $3,316,000,000. Those Federal Reserve notes form a part of our stock of money.

We have Federal Reserve bank notes in the sum of $180,000,000. Those Federal Reserve bank notes form a part of our general stock of money.

We have national-bank notes in the sum of $974,000,000, and those national-bank notes likewise form a part of our general stock of money.

Add up those various forms of money—and the statement to which I am referring is of April 30, scarcely a month old—and we find we have now in the Treasury and in circulation and in the banks a total stock of money in the sum of $13,539,773,590.

It is proposed by the pending bill to add some more silver to the general stock of money, and that is all this bill proposes to do.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will not the Senator repeat the total?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It is $13,539,773,590.

Mr. President, it was stated a while ago that silver is not now money, that it is only token money. Silver was money from the first of the Nation's existence until 1873. At that time silver as money was destroyed, and since 1873 silver has been nothing more nor less than token money. It plays no more important part in our system of financing than does nickel or than does copper.

This bill, if enacted, will provide that we can go out and buy a few tons of silver, perchance, and use that silver to increase the amount of the money we may have in our stock. We may go to the State of the Senator from Michigan and buy a few tons of copper and coin that into copper cents, and add those copper cents to our stock of money. We would increase the volume somewhat, but would not interfere with or change the system of finance in the United States.

This bill, if passed, will have no more effect upon our system of money than if we go out and buy copper and coin it into copper pennies and add them to our general stock of money.

This bill, if passed, will have no more effect on our financial system than if the Treasury Department should go up to Connecticut and buy a train load of the particular paper that they manufacture there, from which they make money, paper with a silken thread running through it. Our financial system would not be changed. We are still upon the gold standard, and I am not arguing that we go off it. We are off it practically and theoretically.

This bill does not change the situation. The bill as drawn does not provide that the basis of our money shall be changed. Under this bill silver would not become primary money. Silver, in the silver ounce, may never be worth more than it is today, under the terms of this bill.

Mr. VANDENBERG. It could be worth less, could it not?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. As I see it, it could well be worth less. In 1873 Congress struck down silver as money, and it became a token, no more important than nickel, copper, or paper.

In 1878 Congress passed what was known as the "Bland-Allison Act." Congress was not satisfied with just having gold as the standard of value—they wanted silver. Some wanted free coinage returned. They could not get that, so they compromised by passing the Bland-Allison Act in 1878. That measure directed the Treasury to buy two and a half million ounces of silver a month, I think it was, it may have been two and a half million dollars worth of silver a month. Anyway, it was one of the two.

The bill passed, and after they commenced to buy silver it had no effect on the value of silver. It kept on going down. It might fluctuate—might go up or down. But the purchase of silver under the Bland-Allison Act, passed in 1878, had no effect upon the price of silver. It did not make silver money. They went ahead and the fight still was waged for silver.

In 1890 Congress passed what was known as the "Sherman Silver Purchase Act." The Sherman Silver Purchase Act provided that the Secretary of the Treasury should buy 4,500,000 ounces of silver a month. That was mandatory. The Bland-Allison Act was mandatory. The Secretary had to buy silver under that act. The Sherman Act was mandatory. Under it, the Secretary of the Treasury had to buy 4,500,000 ounces of silver a month.

That did not help the price of silver very much. The Secretary did not take all the silver that was offered. Apparently, there was more silver for sale than the Treasury could buy. The Secretary of the Treasury bought what he had to buy, and the price did not go up.

The Sherman Act remained in effect until 1893, in which year President Cleveland called a special session of the Congress and sent a message to Congress asking it to repeal the Sherman Act; and the Congress, accepting the recommendation of President Cleveland in this special session, did repeal the purchasing clause of the Sherman Act.

Then we had the campaign of 1896, and no more silver legislation was passed until 1918, when the Congress passed the Pittman Act. The Pittman Act likewise was a silver-purchasing act. The Pittman Act provided that the Secretary of the Treasury could sell silver to foreign nations, but that in the event the Treasury did sell silver to foreign nations the Secretary of the Treasury should immediately proceed to buy domestically mined silver in America. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] comes from a silver-producing State. It was good business on his part to get rid of some of our silver and sell it abroad, and then direct the Treasury to replace the silver sold abroad with silver from the many silver-producing States; but the power given in the Pittman Act did not result in increasing the price of silver.

It is true that silver did go up in value, and in 1919–20 it sold at one time at $1.36, $1.37, and even $1.38 an ounce, but at that time we had a 50-cent dollar in buying power. That in itself would double the price of silver over what it was formerly. So, in my judgment, the high price of silver bullion in 1920 was due to the cheapness of the dollar and not to any law which was or was not passed.

The Pittman Act is still on our statute books. It is still in existence. It has never been repealed.

Mr. President, I shall try to show the difference between the two sections in question.

The present bill, as introduced, provides that we shall go into the markets and buy silver at the market price and add that silver to our general monetary stocks. The moment the silver is acquired it ceases to have the value of the price we paid for it, but it goes into our monetary stocks as of the value of $1.29 an ounce. I presume everyone understands why the figure of $1.29 an ounce is placed in the bill.

Under the Pittman bill, if it should be followed rigorously and as promised, approximately 2,000,000,000 ounces of silver would be required to make up the 25 percent of our monetary stocks. We now have in our reserves as stocks, not as primary money, a little less than a billion ounces of silver. That amount is made up of $540,000,000 of silver dollars and $300,000,000 of subsidiary money—half dollars, quarters, and dimes. Then we have a little bullion which we have acquired in the past few months. We have, in round numbers, 900,000,000 ounces of silver in our monetary stocks.

To get to the 2,000,000,000 ounces we must go in the open market and buy more than a billion ounces of silver. It is immaterial what we pay for the silver. We can get it for 45 cents an ounce, as it is today; it may go to 48 cents or 50 cents an ounce; or it may go still higher. When we get 2,000,000,000 ounces of silver, it will immediately be valued monetarily at $1.29 an ounce. The 2,000,000,000 ounces of silver will make up the two and one-half billion dollars in monetary value necessary to make up 25 percent of our monetary stocks. So under this bill, as I see it, we shall never have more than 2,000,000,000 ounces of silver, because 2,000,000,000 ounces of silver at $1.29 an ounce makes a little more than two and a half billion dollars as valued in money; and unless our gold increases to more than seven and a half billion dollars, the monetary value of silver will not increase above two and one-half billion dollars.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. PITTMAN. There is no doubt that the Senator is right about the quantity of silver which would be required to constitute one-third of the gold value in this country. If silver did not go up to $1.29 an ounce, I think that is true.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Permit me to make a suggestion to the Senator. It is immaterial what we have to pay for silver. We cannot have more than 2,000,000,000 ounces, because, from a monetary standpoint, that number of ounces makes up our two and one-half billion dollars in monetary value.

Mr. PITTMAN. That is true. Suppose, for instance, we should buy 750,000,000 ounces of silver out of the billion, and get it for an average of 60 cents an ounce, and then suppose that by the time we should get the other 250,000,000 ounces the price of silver should have gotten up to $1.29 an ounce. That would end our purchasing anyway, would it not, because the total amount of silver in our Treasury multiplied by the market price at the time we finished making our purchases would constitute its value, which would be $1.29 an ounce? Consequently, if it should reach $1.29 an ounce at any time before its total value was over one-third of the gold value, it would have to be multiplied by the $1.29. If we had too much silver, when it got to $1.29 an ounce we should have to sell down to the point where the total amount of silver multiplied by $1.29 would be the required amount.

It is just a question in my mind as to whether the Senator thinks we are going to keep on buying at 45 cents an ounce. If that is so, then the Senator is right that we would get a whole lot more silver, and I myself should like to see us get more silver. I am absolutely convinced, however, that perhaps not quickly, but inevitably, before we get the required amount of silver, the price will reach $1.29 an ounce.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. On that point, I should like to be informed as to what the Senator's judgment is as to what the effect will be upon our commerce with the Orient, with the silver-using countries, if we pursue a policy which will increase the value of their money, and therefore decrease their commodity prices.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I am glad that question is asked, Mr. President. I am trying so to modify this bill as to force an effect upon our trade with foreign nations which will be advantageous to America. The terms of this bill, as I see it, will not necessarily have any effect upon our foreign trade. I am trying so to amend this bill, if I understand the situation that it will force an effect upon the foreign nations.

This is what I mean by that: Under the terms of the bill as written, silver may not enhance in value. Under the terms of the amendment, if silver does not enhance in value, it would force us to buy as much as 5,000,000,000 ounces of silver. There is not that much for sale. The purchase of 1,000,000,000 ounces might be necessary under the Senator's bill, and we might buy that billion ounces, and it might not raise the price of world silver; but if we put this silver in the monetary stock at its cost price we must buy two and one-half billion dollars' worth of silver to get our so-called "reserves" up to two and one-half billion dollars.

Let me see if I can put it in another way. Here is this ounce of silver, again. Under the Pittman bill, we go into the market and buy this ounce of silver. We pay 45 cents for it. That silver goes into our stock of money, not at 45 cents, but at $1.29 an ounce. Under my amendment we go into the market and buy this ounce of silver at 45 cents. It goes into the reserves, the stock of money, at 45 cents and no more, and is held there at 45 cents when the price of silver goes up. If it goes up to 60 cents, this piece of silver is worth 60 cents; and until the price of silver goes to $1.29 an ounce this piece of silver is not worth $1.29.

The original section puts a fictitious imaginary value upon silver, and that is the difference in the value between what the Treasury pays for it and the value the Treasury considers it has under the terms of this bill which is $1.29 an ounce.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KING in the chair). Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. PITTMAN. Does the Senator object to the other provisions with regard to the issuance of silver certificates?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. No. I will come to that later on. I am dealing first with section 2. I want to get that understood, if I can.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. I wish to make sure I understand the Senator. The Senator's statement indicates that he proposes that by means of his amendment the silver under the proposed legislation shall become absolutely an intrinsic value money.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Exactly so. Otherwise the corner on gold will never be broken.

Mr. BAILEY. That is the antipode of the greenbacks.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Exactly so. Under my amendment, if adopted, a silver certificate from the time this bill shall be passed will be worth $1 in gold or worth $1 in silver. Silver is measured by gold. Theoretically one can take a silver certificate and redeem it. It may not work out in practice, because now one cannot get a dollar of gold for a gold certificate. We may not make it workable under this provision. That is immaterial. But if this bill should pass, a silver certificate would not be worth 371 grains of fine silver; it would be worth a dollar's worth of fine silver at the world's price of silver. It might take two and a half ounces of silver to be worth a dollar, but the silver certificate would be worth a dollar, nevertheless, if it should take $2, or $2.50, or $1.75 for 371¼ grains.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator has stated that he proposes in his amendment to place silver money on an intrinsic-value basis.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Exactly so.

Mr. BAILEY. That intrinsic-value basis is determined in the world market in terms of gold.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Exactly so.

Mr. BAILEY. So may we work around in a circle and still come back to our gold basis?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, three-fourths of the people in the world live in countries, such as China, India, Japan, Mexico, and others, where the only money they have, the only money they see, and the only money they want is silver.

Mr. BAILEY. And each of them trading on a gold basis?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes; and trading on silver.

Mr. BAILEY. I am speaking internationally. They make their settlements with other nations on a gold basis.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I agree with the Senator.

Mr. BAILEY. Does the Senator propose that the silver to be bought by this Government, and coined under the bill as he proposes it to be amended, shall still be on a gold basis? Is that what the Senator desires?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Exactly so.

Mr. BAILEY. So that under the Senator's theory his silver bill does not make silver primary money but makes gold primary money, because that is the redemption money. Is not that so?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. No; I disagree with the Senator, and I will explain it in this way. Today the only money that China or India wants is silver. If we should buy from China or India a boatload of goods, they would not take our paper money for anything. They would not accept our silver at its monetary value. Then we would have to send them silver on its bullion value but measured in gold, or send them gold. Does the Senator agree? Yes; he agrees. I am trying to make silver certificates acceptable in China or India or any place in the world on a par with gold. At the present time we have no form of money that has an intrinsic value that anyone outside of the borders of the United States will accept.

Mr. BAILEY. Very well; we are agreed on all those propositions. I ask the Senator if this is not the conclusion——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I understand the Senator's question and I will answer it if he will give me a chance.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator's proposal is to put silver on a gold basis by way of coining no more silver in grains than the silver is worth in the terms of gold in the world market, and therefore under his argument silver is still a secondary money in that its value is measured by another standard, and it is redeemable in the world market in gold. Is not that correct?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I understand the Senator's question. It will require an explanation to give my viewpoint. In the early days we had silver coin. The silver ratio was too high. The silver in the silver dollar was worth more than the gold in the gold dollar. As the result silver went out of circulation and gold came into circulation. For 40 years in this Government no silver dollars were coined because the moment they were coined and placed in circulation, they were grabbed up and melted into bullion, and the bullion disposed of because it was worth more in the bullion than as money.

Mr. BAILEY. Let me ask the Senator a question on that point.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Let me finish answering the Senator's other question, if he pleases.

In those days gold was measured by silver. Silver became very valuable and went out of circulation. Gold was the money in circulation. Later on silver fell in value, gold went up, and silver went out of circulation. When one metal is higher than the other, it is the main money and the other is secondary. If the tide changes and gold becomes more valuable and silver goes down, gold becomes the main money and silver becomes secondary. At the present time silver is secondary money. Silver metal is secondary metal.

It is provided in the bill that silver certificates shall be worth $1 in silver and in order to be worth $1 in silver they must be worth $1 in gold, at least theoretically. The Senator can take a silver certificate and get a dollar's worth of silver for it or trade it for a dollar's worth of gold—if not here, then in France or some other silver-gold-using country.

Mr. BAILEY. That puts silver on a gold basis, then.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Absolutely.

Mr. BAILEY. Does not the Senator have in mind that there shall be a domestic value different from the foreign value?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I hope not. Let me explain that. Today every dollar of American money is based upon gold. The moment it leaves the boundaries of the United States immediately those dollars become worth 60 cents. In Europe today the American dollar, paper or silver, is worth 60 cents. Here it is worth $1.37 in buying power.

Mr. BAILEY. How much?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It is worth $1.37 in buying power.

Mr. BAILEY. So there is a domestic value of our money which is psychological or, I might say, moral.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. We have two values.

Mr. BAILEY. The foreign value is the true test, but the Senator proposes to test his silver value by the foreign standard. Is that correct?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Money is worth only what it is worth in the world market.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator has answered my question right there.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes; that answers the question. Gold is worth its weight any place in the world. Silver today as bullion is worth its weight any place in the world. Silver, when stamped and given an artificial value, is worth its stamped value only in the country where it is stamped, and the moment it goes beyond the border of that country it is worth only its bullion value.

Mr. BAILEY. But the Senator protests against giving silver an artificial value.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I do not protest against it, but it is no more money than to give a piece of paper an artificial value so far as money is concerned.

Mr. BAILEY. If that is the Senator's view, and he is opposed to giving silver an artificial value, then is he not opposed to the Pittman bill?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. No; the Senator would not have me go on record in that way.

Mr. BAILEY. Let me ask him in this form.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Let me answer the Senator's question first.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator recognizes that the Pittman bill is designed to give silver an artificial value.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Absolutely. There is nothing else to the bill at all. It has had an artificial value since 1873 and it will not have any different than an artificial value until silver on the same ratio with gold is stamped by the Government and made interchangeable, each worth 100 cents. The question is whether we can do that alone. That question is not involved in this debate.

Mr. KING. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. O'MAHONEY in the chair). Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. KING. Is the Senator quite accurate in his statement that silver certificates in foreign markets are worth only their bullion value? I know that silver certificates in London or Paris or Berlin are just as good as gold certificates.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I agree with the Senator thoroughly, but the silver certificate is no better than the silver dollar, and the silver dollar is no better than the silver certificate when it leaves the United States. Is not that correct?

Mr. KING. I do not follow the Senator. No matter what the bullion value may be here at home or throughout the world, a silver certificate issued by the Treasury of the United States is just as good as the gold certificate and will buy just as much in Kamchatka or Russia, or any country in the world, as will a gold dollar or a gold certificate.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. A greenback does the same thing outside of the boundaries of the United States, and a greenback is just as good as a silver certificate. A silver certificate is just as good as a greenback. They are on a par, but they are not money of ultimate redemption. They are only token money. They are symbols. We are talking about making silver a part of our basic redeemable monetary reserves, and the bill does not pretend to do that. It simply carries silver into a larger quantity of token money.

Mr. KING. A gold certificate is not redeemable today in gold. The Senator may have a million dollars' worth of gold certificates, but he could not get a million cents in gold for them out of the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is because a law was enacted making it illegal to have gold certificates in one's possession.

Mr. KING. A silver certificate under this bill, as well as under the so-called "Thomas amendment", as well as under the so-called "Pittman amendment" and other legislation which we have, has all the validity, all the prestige, all the power, all the monetary qualities that a gold certificate has or that a gold dollar has in this and other countries.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Under existing law we have 8 forms of paper money, 8 different pictures, 8 different sets of figures on our bills. We have gold certificates—that is no. 1. We have silver certificates—that is no. 2. We have the Treasury notes of 1890, no. 3. We have greenbacks, no. 4. We have Federal Reserve notes, no. 5. We have Federal Reserve bank notes, no. 6. We have national-bank notes, no. 7. We have national currency, no. 8. Then we have silver dollars, no. 9. Each is just as good as the other. One has no advantage whatever over the other as money. A silver dollar in America melted into bullion is worth only 35 cents, and is worth nothing as a monetary value because it does not form any part of our reserves. In referring to reserves, I speak of them as the term is used in the bill, meaning money of ultimate redemption, money that will be accepted any place in the world for its intrinsic value. I am trying, under this bill, to make silver a bullion convertible into legal tender anywhere in the world. The bill does not do it. My amendment does; and if I have time, I shall try to make that clear before I get through.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Let me yield now to the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN].

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, does the Senator from Oklahoma expect to achieve the important objectives he has specified by this one amendment declaring national policy, or has he other amendments in reserve?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. This is the cornerstone. Unless we can have the cornerstone, we cannot get any other amendment. I do not care to tackle too many things at one time. I am trying to shoot one bullet at one particular point. Unless I can hit an objective, there is no use in using a shotgun loaded with bird shot.

Now I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon me, I was about to call his attention to the declaration in an act of Congress that no currency shall be redeemed in gold; so, when the Senator speaks about the money of ultimate redemption, there is no money of ultimate redemption, in the sense that we have by law prevented the redemption of gold certificates or any money that we have by gold, whereas under the Dies bill, which is now before us, the silver certificates may be redeemed in silver. Therefore silver has that advantage over gold.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Let me say to the Senator from Utah that we have not the Dies bill before us.

Mr. KING. I refer to the bill that came over from the House.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is the last House bill. It is practically the same as the Pittman bill, introduced here some few days ago.

Mr. KING. It is the one that passed the House. Mr. DIES introduced it in the House.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator is right in that particular. I thought he meant the original Dies bill.

Mr. KING. Oh, no.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator is correct. Today we have no money redeemable in anything save in silver. We redeem a dollar, then, for 35 cents, which, of course, is not actual redemption. Nobody would think about redeeming 100 cents in 35 cents; so we do not now have in our monetary system any metal of redemption that is worthy of the name. I am trying so to amend this bill that we shall have silver as a metal of ultimate redemption; and if this amendment shall be adopted our silver certificates will be worth a dollar in silver. I do not know how much silver it will take to make that dollar. It depends upon the price of silver.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Here is the point I am trying to make, if the Senator from North Carolina will permit me: If we shall adopt this amendment we will commence trading in silver. We shall commence paying our obligations to foreign nations in silver. We shall not have to have gold. That will break the corner on gold. It will lessen the demand for gold, because we can send silver to China and Japan and India and Mexico in settlement of our international obligations, and it will not be necessary to have gold. That will lessen the demand for gold. As I say, it will break the corner on gold. It will make a demand for silver; and as the demand for silver increases silver will go up. As the demand for gold decreases gold will come down. It will tend to equalize this abnormal ratio, and that is what I am trying to do.

If this amendment shall be adopted, we shall have silver as one metal of ultimate redemption. We do not have it now. The amendment, of course, would perhaps require the purchase of a large amount of silver in order to raise the price. We should have to purchase a large amount of silver if we ever are to get the price up.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator uses the term "a dollar's worth of silver." A silver dollar should be worth a dollar. Is it worth a dollar in gold?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It is worth a dollar in gold.

Mr. BAILEY. Does the Senator undertake to propose an amendment to this bill which will so provide that a silver dollar of the present standard of weight and fineness will buy 35 cents' worth of gold, or 100 cents' worth of gold?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I do not touch that question. For the present, a silver dollar is no better than a silver certificate. They are one and the same. They are both tokens. I do not disturb the silver dollar. If anybody wants to keep silver dollars in circulation, they are no better than paper, and no worse. They are just the same.

Mr. BAILEY. Does the Senator mean that that dollar would buy 35 cents' worth or 100 cents' worth, say, of bacon? Let us take that as an illustration.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, if the Government should take a piece of black imitation leather and run it through the printing press down at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and print a dollar's worth of figures and signs on it, as they could, that would be worth a dollar, 100 cents.

Mr. BAILEY. No; I beg the Senator's pardon. That would be a dollar in the domestic market.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes.

Mr. BAILEY. It would not be anything on earth in the foreign market. Is not that true?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It would be just as good as the silver dollar here at home. It would be just as good as any of our eight forms of paper money here at home. It would not be as good as a silver dollar in foreign markets. It would not be worth anything in foreign markets. The silver dollar would be worth 35 cents in foreign markets. That is the only distinction.

Mr. BAILEY. Is the Senator arguing for a currency confined to the domestic market as to its value, or to the world market?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. No; I join in the viewpoint expressed by the senior Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] a few days ago, that the money question is the most important question pending before America and pending before the world; and from my viewpoint the rest of the countries of the world are looking to the United States to help them adjust their monetary systems, and unless we adjust ours, of course they will not have any help. I join entirely in that viewpoint.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I assert that in India or in China or in Japan or in any of the 136 countries of the world that are using silver today a greenback can be exchanged for just as much as can a silver dollar or a gold dollar or a gold certificate.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. There is no doubt about that, because it is the duty of our Government to maintain on a parity all forms of money issued. Whatever one form is worth all are worth that. They are worth that in buying power because they are accepted in payment of dues, in payment of taxes, in payment of customs, in payment of everything. So that makes every form of money in America worth the same, be it silver dollars stamped, a piece of paper stamped, a piece of leather stamped, a conch shell stamped, a piece of wampum stamped, a razor blade stamped. It makes no difference what it is; in America it is worth 100 cents so long as the law stands. Outside of the United States, intrinsically, only gold is accepted as the standard or measure of value, and silver to the extent of its bullion value.

Mr. REYNOLDS. As the standard; but, at the same time, in China or any of the other countries that utilize silver, a person can get just as much in exchange for a greenback as he can for gold itself.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Oh, yes; there is no doubt about that.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In presenting a short time ago his figures respecting the total volume of currency in the United States at the present time, the Senator showed that $13,539,000,000 is now circulating.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. No; I did not say that. I beg the Senator's pardon. I did not say it is now circulating. That is the total amount of our stock of money; but there is only five billion and a little more in circulation. The total of thirteen and one-half billions includes both the money in circulation and that which we have in our storehouses, our reserves. At the Treasury Department there is a lot of money that is subject to being issued, but it is not issued yet. It could be issued, however. The Federal Reserve banks have a large store of money that they can put out at any time they desire. It is not in circulation. The amount in circulation on last Thursday was only $5,338,000,000. That is the amount of money in circulation; but the total amount we could circulate if we desired to do so is $13,500,000,000. It is not in circulation.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Is the balance of the $13,000,000,000 in physical existence?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Oh, yes.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Where is it?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I can go over these figures, if the Senator is interested.

The gold is all in the Treasury, theoretically; it is actually in the Federal Reserve banks, and in the mint, and in the strong boxes. It is not in circulation.

Gold certificates are hoarded. Most of them are scattered throughout the world. Federal Reserve banks hold some of the gold certificates in lieu of the gold they should have, but they do not have the gold, so they get these gold certificates, which serve the same purpose as gold, so far as being back of their gold certificates to the extent of 40 percent is concerned.

Of the standard silver dollars there are 540,000,000. Something over 29,000,000 are in circulation. The balance are in the Treasury in Washington, mostly. Some are scattered in banks, some in the Federal Reserve banks.

As to the paper money, I could give the amounts in actual circulation. The balance, not in circulation, is held in the Treasury or in Federal Reserve banks.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Let me ask the Senator this question; perhaps it will illuminate my point better than anything else.

The total stock of money has increased, apparently, from $8,000,000,000 plus to $13,000,000,000 plus in the last 4 years.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is correct.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In what type of money has that increase occurred?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator asks me the question, so I am forced to answer it.

Just before this administration came into power the banks were getting into bad shape for the want of actual money. The banks had on deposit 60 billion dollars of money, but they had in their vaults about only a billion dollars. The folks were getting scared and were drawing out their money. The banks owed them sixty billion, and had, altogether, a billion, so the banks had to send to Washington or to the Federal Reserve banks to get more money to put in their vaults, to take care of the demands for withdrawals, for hoarding.

Under the recent administration, the printing presses were run here in Washington day and night, three shifts, printing money to take care of what might be termed an emergency, and as the result of those over hours of printing money the total stock of money was materially increased. That was mostly in the form of national-bank currency, in the form of Federal Reserve bank currency, and in a new kind called "national currency."

Mr. VANDENBERG. When did that occur, chiefly?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It was during the banking holiday, more than a year ago, the fall of 1932 and the spring of 1933.

Mr. VANDENBERG. If the Senator will permit me, what would be necessary to produce circulation in connection with the $13,000,000,000 supply which we are discussing?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. We are spending about $22,000,000 a day in running expenses of the Government. Those are figures I have, and they are authentic. That money is being spent in the form of checks, in the main. The Treasury pays no bills with money, as a rule. But the Treasury is each day writing checks for $22,000,000.

If the Treasury would undertake and establish a policy of paying out actual bills in payment of 600,000 salaries throughout the United States, paying the C.C.C. workers, and the expenses of the camps, paying the Army, Navy, and marines in money in the place of paying by checks, paying for the construction of the Boulder Dam, the Norris Dam, and the Muscle Shoals improvement, this vast amount of work that is going on throughout the United States—if we put out $22,000,000 in money in place of checks, we would pay out $600,000,000 a month, and in a few months we could put out as much as is necessary.

Mr. VANDENBERG. If the volume theory of money is correct, it would be possible to substantially pursue it without any new legislation. Is that correct?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Absolutely. The pending bill, if passed, would not give anybody any power he needs that he does not now have. Under the present law the President has the power to handle all domestically mined silver. He did it under his proclamation of December 31 last, taking all domestically mined silver at 64½ cents. He could have taken it at 50 cents, he could have taken it at a dollar, or he could have taken it at $1.29. So, under the present law the President has the power to handle domestically mined silver in any way he sees fit.

Under the same law, the President has the power to reduce the silver content in the silver dollar. He can bring it down to any size he desires. He could open the mint to the free coinage of gold and silver, fix the number of grains in a silver dollar, or fix the number of grains in a gold dollar, within the limits of the law. So today he has the power to open the mints to the silver of the world.

The President has the power, under existing law, to go into the markets of the world and buy silver. He is now doing it. At least, in his message to the Congress, sent here recently, there was what I took to be an admission that he had bought silver, and was buying silver, in the markets of the world. That is about all the power the administration wants with regard to silver. That is what this bill would give them.

Mr. VANDENBERG. What, in the Senator's judgment, would be the effect on the price index if the entire $13,000,000,000 supply were in circulation?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I will give the Senator my opinion, which may not be worth much. It is my opinion that we should not begin to contemplate the placing of that much money in circulation. To answer the question of the Senator directly, if we should proceed to put that much money into circulation, it is my judgment, as a guess, that the buying power of the dollar would be less than 10 cents. It might not be that low immediately, but it would be down to that point very shortly.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Then, if it is the administration's objective to reach the 1926 price level, they have all the necessary monetary machinery, from the Senator's viewpoint, to accomplish that purpose, without any additional money legislation whatever?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. There is not a shadow of a doubt in my mind about that being true. Under the amendment we adopted last year, the administration has the power to issue $3,000,000,000 in Federal Reserve notes and buy $3,000,000,000 worth of bonds. That would place in circulation $3,000,000,000 of money.

The administration has the power to issue $3,000,000,000 of greenbacks and use those greenbacks in buying outstanding obligations, which might mean bonds just now being issued, bills current.

So the administration has $6,000,000,000 today, under existing law, which it could place in circulation, in addition to what we have in circulation now.

Under the existing law, the Federal Reserve Board, under the Comptroller's administration, has the power to go into the market and buy outstanding bonds and pay for those bonds with Federal Reserve notes. I do not know how many bonds are outstanding, but the total bonded indebtedness, so to speak, will soon be $30,000,000,000, not so much as that in long-term bonds; the great part is in short-term bills. But, for illustration, I will say there are $20,000,000,000 in bonds. The administration has the power to go into the open market and buy those bonds, paying for them with Federal Reserve notes, and that means that much more money in circulation.

The President has the power to take silver and put it in circulation. He has the power to buy silver and coin it into money and put that into circulation. So the President today has the power, without additional legislation, to place in circulation, conservatively, as much as $10,000,000,000. That is very, very conservative. That means over and above what is now in circulation.

It will not be necessary to put that much money into circulation. No one who presumes to understand the money question would urge that any considerable part of that be put into circulation. All we are asking is that more money be put into circulation instead of taking money out of circulation. It has been the policy for the past year to take money out of circulation instead of putting money into circulation.

I will give the facts. On March 9 last year, 1933, there was in circulation $7,538,000,000. On last Thursday there was in circulation $5,338,000,000. Make the subtraction, and we find that since March 9, 1933, we have taken $2,200,000,000 of money—actual money, the kind of money one can spend with a stranger—from circulation.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I suggest that the comparison with March 9, which was in a period of an extraordinary 10 or 15 days, is not a fair basis.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I agree with the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. BAILEY. If the Senator will compare the money in circulation——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I was getting to that, if the Senator will permit me to proceed.

Mr. BAILEY. Take April 30; we have the data here; and then take October 30, 1920——

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, may I suggest a distinction there? My understanding of the tabulation which the Senator has is that it refers to money in circulation as the money which is passing from hand to hand, and excludes the money which is in the State banks and in the Federal Reserve banks. That is my understanding of the term "money in circulation" as used in those statistics.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, money in circulation is money outside of the Treasury. Money in the Federal Reserve banks is not money in circulation. Money in the banks of the Nation is money in circulation. All other money outside of the Treasury and outside of the Federal Reserve banks is money in circulation.

The suggestion made by the Senator from North Carolina is correct. On the 9th of March last year, after the banking holiday was over, the banks made demands on the Federal Reserve bank for a large quantity of money to protect themselves against runs. That is the reason why the circulation increased so greatly at that particular time. When the banks were reopened the anticipated runs did not occur, confidence came back, and the banks were paying interest on this money; so the banks began to send that money back to the Federal Reserve banks to end the payment of the interest. So far as the banks are concerned, my statement was correct, but not from the standpoint of effect.

Mr. President, a year ago we had rising prices, and everyone had a great deal of hope that good times were coming back right away. A year ago—that is, on May 31, 1933—we had in circulation $187,000,000 more than we have now. In other words, since a year ago we have taken out of circulation $187,000,000, and the circulation today is $187,000,000 less than it was a year ago, when prices were rising, and we thought we were getting out of trouble.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The total volume of money has increased $3,500,000,000 in that period.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is true. The Senator is right; but this money is down in the Treasury being aged, and in the Federal Reserve vaults, where we cannot get to it. This gold is in a place where we cannot get to it. It is the money in circulation which counts.

Mr. President, the value of wheat is controlled by the number of bushels of wheat we know we have. The value of hogs is controlled by the number of hogs we have. The value of cotton is controlled by the number of bales of cotton we have, and the prospect of the crop this fall. The value of money is controlled, not by the general stock of money but by the number of dollars in circulation.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. BANKHEAD. How was this money taken out of circulation?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I will tell the Senator how that money was taken out of circulation; and I am forced to criticize the banking authorities of the Government when I tell the Senator how it was taken out of circulation.

The banking authorities, in my judgment, have pursued a too rigid policy with regard to the banks of the Nation. The banking authorities, through their examiners, have served notice on the banks of the country that they must collect their notes, and the banks have proceeded to collect those notes where collection was possible. These banks in the main have owed the Federal Reserve banks; and the moment a bank made a collection from some of its customers, and had some money on hand, having no place to loan the money—and I will come to that later—there was nothing for the bank to do but to send the money to the Federal Reserve bank and pay its note. When it paid its note and sent the money to the Federal Reserve bank, the money was drawn out of circulation.

That is the reason why we have in circulation today $187,000,000 less than a year ago. The banks have forced the customers to pay. When the banks collected the money they would not again loan it. I am not blaming the banks. The individual banks owed the Federal Reserve banks, and they had to pay interest on the money they owed the Federal Reserve banks, and they could not loan the money they had; so the individual banks sent it up to the Federal Reserve banks and got rid of that much of their indebtedness on which they were paying interest. That is the reason why the money has gone out of circulation.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. I desire to recall the Senator to his point of departure, in which he said that his effort was to stop the Treasury from taking money out of circulation; and he used the figure of $7,000,000,000 as of March 9. If he will refer to the circulation statement which he has there, he will find that the amount now is $5,393,000,000.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. On Thursday, the 31st of May, it was $5,338,000,000.

Mr. BAILEY. And it was only $6,000,000,000 on April 30, 1933. The Senator has that figure there:

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I have them all.

Mr. BAILEY. And on October 31, 1933, it was $5,698,000,000; so there is no great reduction.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. In the last 12 months there has been a reduction of $187,000,000. I will show the Senator how that runs.

In the past week the Treasury put $22,000,000 in circulation. In the week before that $28,000,000 went out of circulation. In the week before that $8,000,000 went out of circulation. In the week before that $7,000,000 went out of circulation. In the week before that $35,000,000 went into circulation. In the week before that $25,000,000 went out of circulation. The trend, however, was to take money out of circulation. That is what I am complaining of.

Mr. BAILEY. The coming in or going out of $100,000,000 or $200,000,000 of circulation is due to conditions of commerce rather than to any conduct of the Treasury.

On the other point, I should like to get the matter straight about the stock of money. The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] asked why it had jumped by the sum of $3,000,000,000 since April 30, 1933. I think that appears on the face of the statement as being due to devaluing the gold dollar and simply increasing the figure. The amount of gold is the same, but the figure rose from four and one-half billion dollars to $7,000,000,000.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Treasury made a profit of approximately $2,800,000,000 on the devaluation of gold. That increased the general stock to that extent.

Mr. President, I am trying to get the Senate to understand, if I can, the difference between the pending bill and the amendment I introduced. Under the pending bill we add silver to our general stock of money, and the moment we get the silver it is valued at $1.29 an ounce—carried on the books at $1.29 an ounce.

Under my amendment we buy the silver at what it costs and add it to the general stock at what it costs us. If we get it at 50 cents, we put it in our stock and carry it at 50 cents. Under the terms of the original bill, when we buy 2,000,000,000 ounces of silver, we shall have gotten our monetary stock of silver up to 25 percent of the entire monetary stock. Its value may still be 45 cents an ounce.

Under my amendment, we keep on buying silver until we get two and one-half billion dollars' worth of silver in these stocks. Two and one-half billion dollars' worth of silver at 50 cents an ounce is 5,000,000,000 ounces of silver; and I am surprised to find the Senators coming from silver States agreeing to accept a bill limiting the possible number of ounces of silver in a bill to 2,000,000,000 when they could accept my amendment and have 5,000,000,000 ounces of silver purchased.

I do not come from a silver-producing State. My State does not produce any silver. The end is the same if the price goes up to $1.29 an ounce; but if we can buy this 5,000,000,000 ounces of silver at 50 cents and then later on the other nations learn that silver is to be made into money, and they learn that silver is good money, and the price of silver goes up to $1.29, we shall have 5,000,000,000 ounces of silver that will have cost us two and one-half billion dollars. If silver goes up to $1.29 an ounce, the 5,000,000,000 ounces will be worth about $6,000,000,000.

I am astonished that those who are likely to profit most from silver legislation are not willing to accept my suggestion.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. I simply desire to put a bit of responsibility for the errors of some of us from silver States upon a bill which the Senator from Oklahoma introduced a while back, which I understood involved plans somewhat similar to those of the present bill; and I am among those who favored that measure. The bill, as I recollect, provided that the purchases of silver should be at the rate of $50,000,000 a month, but should stop when the 1926 price level was reached.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That bill provided, Mr. President, that if we bought an ounce of silver at 50 cents we should immediately issue certificates against it for $1.29, and put the $1.29 into circulation.

Mr. ADAMS. That is correct.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. This bill provides that if we buy an ounce of silver at 50 cents we shall put 50 cents in circulation instead of $1.29.

Mr. ADAMS. The difference is that under the Senator's bill it was compulsory to put the entire amount in circulation. Under this bill it is compulsory only to put in circulation the amount of the purchase price, and the balance is optional.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator is correct.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. KING. The Senator knows that the Treasury of the United States may put into circulation the full $1.29 per ounce for every ounce of silver that is purchased.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is true; but when they do it, it is still token money, unless and until the silver in the silver dollar becomes worth a dollar. It is all token money until then.

Mr. KING. Under the bill to which the Senator refers the silver there purchased has just as much of the quality of token money as under the measure for which the Senator is contending.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Under this amendment, if it shall go through, in the future a $1 silver certificate will be exchangeable for a dollar's worth of silver. It may be 1 ounce, 2 ounces, or 5 ounces, but it will be possible for an individual to go and exchange his silver certificate for a dollar's worth of silver. As I explained to the Senator from North Carolina, when silver is used as basic money throughout the world there will be an increased demand for silver and a decreased demand for gold. Increased demand for silver makes silver go up. Increased demand for gold makes silver go down. After a while, if those tendencies keep on working, they get together. Then we might establish a parity.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. KING. I think the policy for which I believe the able Senator is contending, if I correctly understand him—and I do not pretend that I do—disparages silver.

The view which the President has taken, the view which those of us who support the bill take, is that silver is to be given the same prestige and the same validity as gold. It is to be lifted out of the humble place it has occupied by reason of demonetization. We contend that silver is worth $1.29 an ounce, the historic value. We do not want to treat it as bullion. We want to treat it as primary money, to use the Senator's expression, having the validity and the purchasing power of gold or gold certificates.

The Senator seems to chide some of us for supporting the bill and his position is that we should get 5,000,000,000 ounces of silver. We could not get 5,000,000,000 ounces of silver if we should search the world over. We will have difficulty, in my opinion, in getting the amount provided in the bill which has been submitted by the President. Long before we reach the maximum amount that is authorized, silver will have reached $1.29 an ounce, not only in the United States but throughout the world, and the purchasing power of the people of the United States and the purchasing power of the people of the world will have been augmented to that degree.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. We are all anxious to get silver up to $1.29 an ounce. That is our ultimate objective. My amendment will see to it that we get silver to $1.29 an ounce or else we will buy upward of 5,000,000,000 ounces of silver. The bill of the Senator from Nevada is trying to get silver to $1.29 an ounce, but under it we can only buy 1,000,000,000 ounces of silver. If that does not do the job it stops by limitation of law.

Mr. President, I have heard it said here this afternoon that this is a great silver bill. The Sherman Act was passed in 1890. It was repealed in 1893. There is more of a silver bill in the act repealing the Sherman Law than there is in the bill now before us. Let me read from the act repealing the Sherman silver purchase law. I am reading from the text, approved November 1, 1893:

> It is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States to continue the use of both gold and silver as standard money—

Let me emphasize those words "as standard money"— > and to coin both gold and silver into money of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value.

That is the wording of the law which repealed the Sherman Silver Purchase Act. That was enacted by Congress and approved by the President November 1, 1893.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Oklahoma if that law is in effect now?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. No. It was repealed. This is the repealing section which I have read. I made the statement that even though this is a repealing section, there is more of a silver bill in the repealing section than there is in the bill now before us because it stated a silver monetary policy, and the bill now before us only states a "stocks-of-money" monetary policy.

Mr. PITTMAN. In what way did that statement change the status of silver in 1873?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The repealing act only sounded well. I will admit that Congress was killing silver while it was complimenting silver to its face.

Mr. PITTMAN. In other words, the pronouncement of policy that it was standard money did not mean anything?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Absolutely not, and neither does the similar provision in the bill now before us.

Mr. PITTMAN. There is little difference. Without calling it any name at all, what the Senator has read pronounced a thing something that was not anything. The bill repeats that silver is full legal tender.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That was enacted into law last May.

Mr. PITTMAN. That is true enough, and it is reiterated in the pending bill.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Then the reiteration does not change the status of silver. The bill does not change the status of silver. I stand by that statement.

Mr. PITTMAN. Another point: If we did have silver as legal-tender money and had no provision for a supply of silver, that also would be another vacant statement, such as the Senator just read.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I am going to be here 5 years more if I live. I hope that the rest of the Senators will be here that long and longer. If we can lay the cornerstone of a silver bill in this Congress, we will have something on which to build. But if we pass this bill, which, in my judgment, on its face is the least effective of all the silver bills ever passed since the Congress convened in 1700, here is what I think will happen: The monetary system will not have changed. The bill does not presume to change it. When we come back next year, if times are not any better, we will be told, "Well, we tried to work out of this difficulty by manipulating money. We did everything with gold that we could think of, and it did not do any good. Then we did everything we could think of with silver and that did not do any good. It is evident we cannot help conditions by manipulating money." Then the advice will be, "Quit tinkering with the currency." That will be the advice we will get.

I am hoping to lay the cornerstone of a silver bill that will enable us to make silver into money. If we can do something to get the price of silver up, where the silver in a dollar is worth a dollar, and in that way bring up the price of gold, then when we meet next year with a parity almost established, we can get a conference with the other nations of the world and get a world agreement on money, following the suggestion of the distinguished Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] that that is necessary—and I agree with him.

That is the reason why I want to make this a better bill. This is a silver bill. It talks about silver. We can do a lot under the bill, and we can do it now.

Unless we can get some policy provision in the bill that will make silver something more than simply token money, simply comparable to copper and nickel and paper, I can see no necessary value in the bill, if the bill is not amended. As it comes before the Senate it has the name "silver" attached to it; and because a lot of people want it, I shall vote for the bill, even though it is only a 3-percent or 10-percent or 12-percent silver bill. I am for a 100-percent silver bill, and this is not a 100-percent silver bill.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. LONG. In line with what the Senator said, we have figured around here and used a lot of foolscap paper trying to get somebody in some way to remonetize silver. The ordinary man is not as well posted on this business as we are. The situation looks to me like a lot of children playing with a toy dollar. We have gotten nowhere. The President already has a great deal more power than the bill would give him.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is true. The bill does not take any power away, but it does not give any new power. Perhaps I ought to make the statement that the bill contains a provision which attempts to give the administration power to nationalize silver, but I doubt the validity of that provision. I doubt if the President and the Treasury Department can nationalize silver under that provision. In order to nationalize silver we must go out by force and take it. We can only take it if is necessary to be used for the public use. We have to pay what it is worth.

Silver, if it is made into money, real money, to be used for nothing else but money, is to be taken under the terms of the bill, and under the terms of the same bill silver is going to have no more value than nickel, no more value than any other metal that might be made into an alloy of pewter, such as zinc or copper, so far as money is concerned, because we can take those metals and put them in an alloy and stamp them with the dollar mark, and they will be worth a dollar. That is all silver will be worth under the bill.

Of course, we could raise this alloy to be worth a dollar, and then it would be worth a dollar. If we could raise silver to be worth a dollar, it would be worth a dollar; but under this bill silver is no more important as money than any kind of an alloy that has the same wearing and durability qualities.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LONG. If the Senator will pardon me again, I understand that this House bill comes over here with section 8 in it, which was stricken out by the Senator from Nevada. The only thing this bill does is to remove the market for silver from the United States.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I was about to point out some things that the bill does. It undertakes to give the administration power to nationalize silver. I will not say that it cannot do that, because in this country an administration edict is almost law, and the courts try to sustain it and do what they can; but if a contest should come on, I am not sure what the courts might hold. Unless silver is such a metal that we must have it to solve our money problem, we cannot take the silver of private individuals. The bill does not state that silver is that kind of a metal; under the bill it is not made that kind of a metal; and I am very doubtful if, under the nationalization section, the nationalization of silver will ever be undertaken.

Silver is different from gold. Gold was money—money of ultimate redemption. It was money, basic money, primary money, standard money, made so by the Constitution and by all the laws that have been passed from the time of the framing of the Constitution until now. So it was necessary to have gold, and to have more gold, and under that theory the President took the gold; but it will be noticed that as soon as the session of Congress opened this winter we passed an act validating the proclamations of the President, so that if his action in acquiring the gold was not legal we approved what he did, and it has the effect of law.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. PITTMAN. I call the Senator's attention to the word "monetary." I think the word "monetary" might be interpreted to mean "money." I call attention to this language:

It is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States that the proportion of silver to gold in the monetary stocks—

The word "monetary" means "money"; and then, when we turn over here and see what money means, we find that "monetary stocks" means all the gold and silver owned by the United States. So it seems to me that that declaration as to "monetary stocks" means that all the gold and silver owned by the Government shall be our money.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I hope that is true, and I hope those who manage the existing laws, and laws hereafter passed, will so construe it, and act accordingly; but the Federal Reserve System is the System which manages our monetary affairs. Every week the Federal Reserve Board issues a series of publications or leaflets, and those weekly bulletins list the monetary gold stock and nothing else. They carry gold as monetary metal. They do not carry silver as monetary metal. Evidently, under the opinion of the Federal Reserve banks, silver is not a monetary metal. It has no place in our system other than token money, the same as nickel, copper, or any other metal that might be stamped with a Government stamp.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, would the Senator like to suspend now?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes; at the Senator's pleasure.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 620. An act for the relief of Catherine Wright;

S. 1430. An act for the relief of M. Thomas Petroy;

S. 1731. An act for the relief of Marion Von Bruning (nee Marion Hubbard Treat);

S. 2041. An act to amend the act of June 15, 1933, amending the National Defense Act of June 3, 1916, as amended;

S. 2377. An act for the relief of A. E. Shelley;

S. 2692. An act relating to the record of registry of certain aliens;

S. 3170. An act to revise air-mail laws, and to establish a commission to make a report to the Congress recommending an aviation policy;

S. 3524. An act to amend an act of Congress approved February 9, 1893, entitled "An act to establish a court of appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes";

S. 3586. An act for the relief of George A. Fox;

S. 3641. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the St. Lawrence River at or near Ogdensburg, N.Y.;

H.R. 8687. An act to amend the Tariff Act of 1930; and

H.R. 9280. An act relating to deposits in the United States of public moneys of the government of the Philippine Islands.

FOREIGN-TRADE ZONES—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate the conference report on House bill 9322, which is on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate the conference report on the bill referred to by the Senator from New York, which will be read.

The report was read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 9322) to provide for the establishment, operation, and maintenance of foreign-trade zones in ports of entry of the United States, to expedite and encourage foreign commerce, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment restore the matter proposed to be stricken out by the Senate amendment; and on page 2 of the House bill, strike out lines 7 to 10, inclusive, and insert the following:

"(e) The term 'public corporation' means a State, political subdivision thereof, a municipality, a public agency of a State, political subdivision thereof, or municipality, or a corporate municipal instrumentality of one or more States."

And on page 12, line 5, of the House bill, after "repeated", insert "willful."

And the Senate agree to the same.

H. D. STEPHENS,
ROYAL S. COPELAND,
CHAS. L. MCNARY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

THOS. H. CULLEN,
JOHN MCCORMACK,
FRED M. VINSON,
ALLEN T. TREADWAY,
I. BACHARACH,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. COPELAND. I ask for the present consideration and adoption of the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the question is on agreeing to the report.

The report was agreed to.

WHY FEAR COTTON-CROP CONTROL?—ARTICLE BY SENATOR BANKHEAD

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "Why Fear Cotton-Crop Control?" written by me and published in the June number of Nation's Business.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WHY FEAR COTTON-CROP CONTROL?

(By JOHN H. BANKHEAD, United States Senator from Alabama)

Much criticism has been leveled at the cotton-reduction program. Objectors have assailed the efforts of voluntary reduction and also the semicompulsory reduction plan proposed in the Bankhead cotton-control bill. Practically all of these objections have come from theoretical economists and politicians who cannot engender any enthusiasm over the success of the present administration. Very little opposition has developed from those who know the cotton business or from newspapers, bankers, merchants, or others in the Cotton Belt.

Those who live by cotton and with cotton understand the need for a more reasonable relation of supply to the consumptive demands of the market. It has been thoroughly demonstrated that sentiment in the entire Cotton Belt on the necessity for such a reduction is as nearly unanimous as it has ever developed on any economic subject. When the importance of a fair price for cotton and its effect upon our national wealth is properly appreciated, it seems rather strange that the will of the people directly involved, in the light of their knowledge of what they need, should encounter criticism and resistance from politicians and theorists in other sections.

Cotton has been the largest factor in the increase of our national wealth as a result of foreign trade. A higher percentage of the annual cotton crop is sold abroad than any other industrial or agricultural commodity produced in the United States.

Exports of the United States from 1791 to 1933 totaled $150,000,000,000. In this period, merchandise exports exceeded merchandise imports by $36,600,000,000. That amount constitutes our net balance of trade from the time our Government was established. In the same period, exports of unmanufactured cotton totaled $30,000,000,000. From 1826 to 1933, inclusive, all exported cotton manufactured goods were valued at $3,750,895,000. Without cotton our balance of trade and the increase of our national wealth from foreign trade for 142 years would be only $2,849,105,000. Cotton has supplied 92 percent of the total amount constituting our balance of trade since our Government was established.

Normally we produce about 15,000,000 bales of cotton a year. Our domestic consumption is about 40 percent, or 6,000,000 bales. The balance finds buyers in foreign countries. In other words, 60 percent of our annual cotton crop brings new money to our country.

With the exception of a few industrial sections, the people on the farms and in the towns in the entire Cotton Belt depend upon cotton for their supply of money. Excluding the border States, it is probable that less than 15 percent of the industrial commodities bought by the people in the Cotton Belt are produced within that area.

Every mail every day carries checks to other sections of the country—chiefly to the industrial and financial centers outside the Cotton Belt—to pay for shoes, hats, clothes, farm implements, automobiles, radios, and all the other articles of general use and consumption.

COTTON HELPS OTHER SECTIONS

It should also be borne in mind that most of the mortgage indebtedness in the Cotton Belt is held outside of that section. Most of the life insurance companies who do business there are located in the East and North. Most of the railroad bonds and stocks and utility securities are owned elsewhere. The dividends, interest, and premiums flow out of the Cotton Belt. The money paid to farmers for their cotton trickles into the towns and then to the cities in that section and on to the industrial and financial centers elsewhere. A reasonable supply of purchasing power in the Cotton Belt stimulates the operation of industrial plants in other sections to produce commodities for sale to the cotton producers. As practically all of the money received from the sale of cotton moves each year into other sections, it is astonishing to find, in the industrial sections which are directly benefited by a good price for cotton, so little sympathetic interest in the welfare of the cotton producers.

It seems that the experience of 1931 and 1932, when the purchasing power in the Cotton Belt was practically destroyed, would have impressed them with the importance of a good price for cotton. I am at a loss to understand why, on an economic problem involving the welfare of such a large area, the representatives of the Republican Party in Congress have so unitedly opposed any program advanced by this administration looking to the rescue of agriculture.

In 1919 the farm price for the cotton crop was $2,034,558,000. In 1929 it was $1,200,000,000, in round figures. In 1931 it fell to $485,000,000, and in 1932 to $394,000,000.

Disaster and despair gripped the people of the South. The average farm price during these 2 years was 6 cents a pound. That was the market price when Mr. Roosevelt was inaugurated.

What was the reason for such a low price? Was it due entirely to the depression? Was the price out of line with the average index level of industrial commodities which the cotton producer must buy; and if so, why?

Accepting the pre-war period 1909–14, as representing a fair exchange price level between all commodities, and rating them at 100 percent, we find that the average price of industrial commodities bought by the farmers did not descend below 106 percent, while the price of basic agricultural commodities went down to 56 percent.

It is true that in all depressions the price of agricultural commodities goes down faster and further than do the prices of industrial commodities. The reason is found in the age-old trade law of supply and demand. The manufacturer estimates the cost of each unit he produces and sends his salesmen into the markets to find buyers at a price fixed by the manufacturer which gives him cost of production plus a reasonable profit. When he finds sales resistance and when it develops that effective demand for his products has decreased he does not continue to operate his plants at full capacity and offer in the markets for sale all the units that he can produce at any price they will bring. Good business prompts him to reduce production.

The units producing a particular industrial commodity are limited in number. They can act in accord. They gear the supply to fit the market demand.

The farmer plants his crop in the spring. He has no further control over his production. Two million cotton farmers scattered from Virginia to California, and occupying varying relations in life cannot voluntarily act in accord in the matter of gearing production to meet consumptive demand.

Each individual proceeds in his own way with his production. When his cotton is harvested he takes it to his local market and asks the buyer what he will give for it. He must sell all he has produced. He must take any price offered. He has no say whatever as to what price he will get for his commodity.

INDUSTRY DOESN'T RUN AT CAPACITY

Since industry can regulate and restrict production in the face of a developing depression, it is in position to put the brakes on and retard falling prices. The agricultural producer has no such power.

He must pile into the market places during a short period of the year the products of his entire year's work. In the absence of sufficient consumptive demand for the entire crop the farmer has no way to retard declining prices.

No sensible person can ignore the trade law of supply and demand. The high value of gold and diamonds is due to the scarcity. Leaves and the sands of the seas have no commercial value because of their countless numbers.

Those who exclaim, "Let nature take its course" in the matter of agricultural production blindly close their eyes and beckon to the gods of grief to overwhelm the tillers of the soil.

They insist that agricultural producers should clothe and feed the world by working long hours and cultivating their entire farm capacity, even though such action pauperizes the farmer.

I have heard none of these apostles who so vigorously proclaim in favor of personal liberty and the duty of the farmer to produce more than he can sell at cost insist that the farm-implement manufacturers, the fertilizer companies, and the steel corporations should operate their plants at full capacity and work their employees longer hours and full time and sell their products at whatever price they would bring in order to avoid economic waste.

LARGE ACREAGE PLANTED

The Agricultural Adjustment Act was passed in April 1933. As a result of the widely publicized statement of the declared policy of that act to restore agricultural prices to parity levels, and of the farmers' very great faith that President Roosevelt would bring about better prices for them, the area planted to cotton was increased about 4,000,000 acres. The carry-over of American cotton was then 13,000,000 bales—by far the largest in history. The consumption for the preceding 3 years had averaged about 12,000,000 bales. Production had averaged about 15,000,000 bales.

Every student of the subject recognized that it was necessary to reduce that great pile of surplus before cotton could take its normal place in the general price structure. It was then too late to take cotton land out of cultivation.

Before officials had been selected to administer the Agricultural Adjustment Act all cotton had been planted.

Under ideal weather conditions it was known that with another bumper crop of cotton the situation would be hopeless for a number of years.

To avoid that calamity a small group of cotton States' Senators, of whom I was one, sponsored the plan to plow up a substantial part of the planted crop and to pay the producers a reasonable price for doing so. Twenty-five percent, or 10,000,000 acres of young cotton, was destroyed. Good cotton weather continued, and on the remaining acreage as much cotton was harvested as was harvested the preceding year. Thirteen million new bales found their way to the market.

To those who protest against that destruction I beg to point out that every year every farmer destroys a large proportion of the cotton which comes up as a result of his planting. Chopping season destroys more cotton plants than were plowed up last year. The plow-up was merely an enlargement of the cotton-chopping practices.

If it is economically unsound to destroy living vegetation, how could we ever have had any farms? It was necessary to destroy all the trees on the land before it could be planted. The cry against destruction is whimsical nonsense.

While we did not obtain the reduction hoped for last year, we avoided a crop of 17,600,000 bales. That large quantity, added to the biggest known carry-over, would doubtless have resulted in a price of 3 or 4 cents a pound if there had been any market at all. And still we hear people insisting on letting nature take its course.

Increased consumption reduced the carry-over to 11,500,000 bales. The average carry-over for the pre-war period, 1909–14, was slightly more than 3,000,000 bales.

The necessity for a definite and certain reduction in production this year is obvious if the farmers are to get a price that will approach the cost of production.

INTENSIVE CULTIVATION WAS POSSIBLE

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration, in recognition of that fact, inaugurated a campaign to rent 40 percent of the 40,000,000 acres which were planted last year to cotton. All persons familiar with cotton farming knew that, even if that campaign was 100 percent successful, the number of bales which would be produced was left wide open, and depended upon many other factors.

We knew that millions of acres which had not been planted to cotton in recent years—much of it never planted to cotton—were being prepared for cotton cultivation this year.

We knew that, by the application of fertilizer, intensive cultivation, and the selection of the best cotton land, as many bales could be grown on 6 acres as are ordinarily grown on 10.

The fortunate part about our situation is the fact that the cotton farmers understand the operation of the law of supply and demand. Individually they cannot make that law effective.

It developed that more than 90 percent of them wanted Congress to give them machinery under which, collectively, the supply could be brought under control. Most farmers were willing to reduce their production if assured that all the others would do so in the same proportion. The sentiment of the cotton farmers in favor of a compulsory control bill was so nearly unanimous that only five Members of the House in the entire Cotton Belt from North Carolina to California voted against the bill.

Only two Senators from the real cotton-growing States voted against it. They were from border States and, I believe, recognized that an overwhelming majority of their cotton-growing constitutents favored the bill. They opposed it on other grounds.

A clamor has been set up that this is unjustifiable regimentation. What about industry under the code system? When a business is put under a code, whether by the will of a majority in that business or by the Government, every person engaged in that business is subject to the terms of the code. When the automobile code was adopted Henry Ford protested and refused to sign it. He stood upon his right of personal liberty—so eloquently portrayed by some of our orators. It is well known, however, that, although not in sympathy with the code, Mr. Ford literally complied with all its requirements. He was obliged to do so to avoid prosecution. We heard of no statesmen or editorial writers defending Mr. Ford's right to defy and ignore the code.

LIMITING THE TEXTILE INDUSTRY

In the cotton-textile industry the code reduced and limited the hours of operation and the number of spindles that could be operated. In short, that code almost automatically limited the number of units of production.

We have heard no eloquent appeals in behalf of those who did not choose to cooperate under that code. We have heard little about regimentation and socialism.

In the ice-making business, a new plant cannot be established anywhere without the consent of the Administrator. Production control of a necessity!

Many other illustrations could be given, such as the proration of oil quotas, but these are units of industry and not of agriculture. What a difference that makes to many people who never added anything to our wealth!

The Bankhead cotton control bill extends to the cotton producers the principles of the N.R.A. code. No new revolutionary or socialistic program is involved. The law is not the result of any activities by the Department of Agriculture. The demand for it came up from the cotton rows, and it was passed in the face of expressed reluctance by Secretary Wallace.

It was intended not solely to curb and bring into line the chiselers but also to protect the cooperative farmers from each other in the matter of overproduction which they knew would result from an acreage plan alone. Its machinery affords them self-government in their own business.

TWO-THIRDS MUST APPROVE LAW

If the law remains in effect next year, it will be because two-thirds of the producers have expressed themselves in favor of its continuance.

The law gives to 2,000,000 producers machinery under which they can regulate and control the marketing of cotton just as the stockholders have the power by vote to control the sales management of a steel corporation. A new principle as applied to agriculture? Yes; but a long-needed one! And I favor its continuance as a permanent policy for the cotton producers.

As the production line on a graph showing annual cotton production for 40 years moves up and down each year we find that the price line moves in an almost exactly opposite direction. When the farmer plants his cotton he can have no idea about what he will get for it when he takes it to market, because he does not know how much cotton all the farmers will produce.

His credit facilities are impaired because his merchant or banker does not know whether a bale of cotton, when harvested, will bring 6 cents a pound or 25 cents. If the line of production on the graph could be straightened out, the price line would automatically straighten out with it. The price of cotton would be stabilized at a place where it properly belongs in the general price level of commodities.

The principle involved is not essentially one of personal liberty. The real issue involved is the application of the age-old law that one should not use his own property to the injury of others.

An overwhelming majority of cotton producers have protested against that practice and invoked protection against unfair practice in interstate and foreign commerce. The antitrust law penalizes unfair sales competition in interstate commerce. Has personal liberty disappeared?

I observe that the practice of "closed shops", whether union or nonunion labor is involved, while compulsory on the minority, is not denounced as destructive of personal liberty.

Is it better to insist on the personal liberty and inalienable right to walk the streets without interference or to submit to traffic regulations for the general welfare?

The American Indians declined to submit to the established order of society and civilization. They could not understand that the general welfare of an advancing people required acquiescence in social, political, and economic organization controlled by the majority for the good of all. We have highly developed Anglo-Saxon intellectuals who entertain the Indian philosophy when individualism is involved.

FOREIGN INCREASES UNLIKELY

There is no cause for alarm based upon suggestions by those ignorant on the subject that the reduction of our abnormal surplus will stimulate production of cotton in foreign countries. The fact is that since 1925 there has been no material increase in production in any country except Russia. The area with suitable soil and climatic conditions adaptable to the production of cotton has been largely explored everywhere. We have a grade and staple of cotton which has little competition from other countries. Our chief exporting competitors are Egypt and India. Egypt raises a long-staple cotton and India an inferior grade of cotton. If other countries had the means of increasing cotton production they would not attempt it merely because of our temporary program for reducing our surplus. They know that when that plan has been accomplished we will go back to the normal production of fourteen to fifteen million bales a year.

Let me point out that cotton has heretofore led this country out of its depressions. The people in the Cotton Belt know how to handle their own situation. If abstract theorists and extreme individualists and hostile politicians will let us alone we will work out our own salvation.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. O'MAHONEY in the chair) laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States, submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. MURPHY, from the Committee on Education and Labor, to which was recommitted the nomination of John Ward Studebaker, of Iowa, to be Commissioner of Education, vice George F. Zook, reported favorably thereon.

Mr. McCARRAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of E. P. Carville, of Nevada, to be United States attorney, district of Nevada, to succeed Harry H. Atkinson, term expired.

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably the nominations of sundry cadets of the United States Military Academy to be second lieutenants in the Regular Army, with rank from June 12, 1934.

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reports will be placed on the calendar.

TREATIES

Mr. PITTMAN. From the Committee on Foreign Relations, I report back favorably several treaties. I ask to have the resolutions of ratification read and to have the treaties placed on the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the resolutions of ratification will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of Executive K, Seventy-third Congress, second session, a supplementary extradition treaty between the United States and Sweden, signed at Washington, May 17, 1934.

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of Executive L, Seventy-third Congress, second session, a supplementary extradition treaty between the United States and Lithuania, signed at Washington on May 17, 1934.

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of Executive M, Seventy-third Congress, second session, a supplementary extradition treaty between the United States and Finland, signed at Washington on May 17, 1934.

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of Executive O, Seventy-third Congress, second session, a convention on extradition signed on December 26, 1933, by plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and other republics of the Western Hemisphere represented at the Seventh International Conference of American States at Montevideo, Uruguay.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The treaties will be placed on the calendar.

Mr. PITTMAN. I ask to have the injunction of secrecy removed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NOMINATIONS OF GRADUATING CLASS AT WEST POINT

Mr. SHEPPARD. From the Committee on Military Affairs I report back favorably the nominations for commissions in the Army of the graduating class at West Point. It is very necessary that these nominations be confirmed at once in order that the commissions may be ready when the cadets graduate.

I ask for the immediate confirmation of the nominations, and that the President be notified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc, and the President will be notified.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. President, I ask that the clerk read the remarks which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is it desired that all this matter shall be read at this time?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I shall object to that in the order in which we are proceeding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

If there be no further reports of committees, the calendar is in order.

TREATIES

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I suggest that the treaties go over for the day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I desire to advise our leader and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] that when the treaty signed at Geneva in 1925 is under consideration, being a convention for the supervision of the international trade in arms and ammunition and in implements of war, I desire to offer a reservation to the treaty.

Mr. PITTMAN. I will state that it is the purpose of the Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, at the appropriate time, to ask for sufficient time to take up all these treaties.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I think in a day or two an arrangement will be made to proceed to the consideration of the treaties under conditions which will afford opportunity for their final disposition.

Mr. KING. So that the chairman of the committee and our leader may know the character of the reservation, I will state that it is to the effect that nothing in the treaty shall affect the sovereignty or the right of Persia over and in and to the waters of the Persian Gulf.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, may I ask the chairman of the committee whether the committee has disposed of the safety-at-sea treaty?

Mr. PITTMAN. No; that is in charge of a subcommittee, and they have not reported.

Mr. COPELAND. Is there some hope that the treaty may be reported at this session?

Mr. PITTMAN. I have just written to the members of the subcommittee asking them when they would be ready to report.

Mr. COPELAND. I thank the Senator.

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Thomas C. Kasper to be collector of internal revenue, district of South Dakota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Harry P. Hornby to be collector of customs for Customs Collection District No. 23, San Antonio, Tex.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, inasmuch as there is a vacancy in that office, I ask that the President be notified of the confirmation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

BUREAU OF NAVIGATION AND STEAMBOAT INSPECTION

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Alvin A. Morrison, of Ohio, to be supervising inspector.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Edward Maurer, of Kentucky, to be supervising inspector.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominanations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask that the nominations of postmasters be confirmed en bloc, with the exception of the nomination of Tasker Howard Cairns to be postmaster at Radnor, Pa. I ask that that nomination be recommitted to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination to which the Senator refers will be recommitted to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Without objection, the other nominations of postmasters are confirmed en bloc.

IN THE ARMY

The legislative clerk read sundry nominations for appointments and promotions in the Army.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I ask that the Army nominations be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Army nominations are confirmed en bloc.

The Senate resumed legislative session.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas obtained the floor.

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. President, I send to the desk a statement which I should like to have read or inserted in the RECORD.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I shall not object to the statement being inserted in the RECORD, but I do object to its being read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, the statement will be printed in the RECORD.

EDICT OF CODE STAR CHAMBER TO EVADE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD an article from the New York Herald Tribune of Sunday, May 27, 1934, entitled, "Press Freedom Held Menaced by Book Code."

The headline continues: "Publisher Fears Provision Will Suppress Works on Controversial Subjects—Hits Cheap-edition Rule—It Curbs Right of Distribution."

I ask that this be referred to the Judiciary Committee for their consideration in connection with my Resolution 248.

The Herald Tribune, in an interview with Alex L. Hillman, managing director of William Godwin, Inc., publishers, gives the information that a book-publishing code has been drafted under the N.R.A. here in Washington, and about to be promulgated, which in effect amends the copyright law, and suppresses the right to print books dealing with controversial matters of political, economic, religious, and social nature—"without special written permission of the code authority."

Since the Glenville edict against freedom of the press under the reign of George III—which was specially aimed against the expression of public sentiment favorable to the freedom of the American Colonies—we are today confronted under the codes of the N.R.A. with a drastic series of edicts against freedom of the press in America and the major violation of Thomas Jefferson's article I of the constitutional amendments.

History of dictatorships is repeating itself. Since the day Gutenberg set up his press to print the Bible in 1450, and Caxton began printing books at Westminister Abbey, 1477, every dictatorship, every tyrannical king, every monarch intent on curbing the will of the people, has laid the foundation of his imperial rule on keeping the people in the dark and curtailing the power of the press in disseminating the truth for public enlightenment.

Mussolini in Rome, Hitler in Berlin, the Soviet in Moscow, laid the foundation of their dictatorial power in control of the printing press. They did not set up an N.R.A. code authority. They accomplished the same end under other names, such as, Fascist, Nazi, or Soviet authority over publishers and the public press.

In England, immediately before the American Revolution, the ministry of George III tried to suppress the public press, books, and even the publication of parliamentary debates.

Two generations before the American Revolution, blind John Milton wrote the famous essay Areopagitica, a Speech for the Liberty of Unlicensed Printing.

That was under the second Stuart tyranny, in the reign of Charles II, when publishers were subject to license in order to publish a book, and the public press was subject to license under proclamations of the star chamber and the court of high commission.

What is the difference between a license from an N.R.A. code authority and a license from a star chamber or court of high commission?

Are the printing licenses under the star chamber of Charles II to be revived by the printing licenses under the code authority of Roosevelt, the second?

Only once before in American history, and that experience in violating article I of our Bill of Rights hastened a civil war, have those in power sought to throttle the press. But even the treatment of Garrison and Lovejoy 80 years ago was not supported by statesmen in Washington. Those violations of article I were simply local riotous acts. There was no Federal act sought to curb the press under a Federal code authority, or under any other Federal star chamber, until this administration hove in sight.

In the analysis of the proposed book code by the manager of the Godwin Publishing House it is stated:

> Without special written permission of the code authority, or of some agency duly designated for such purpose by it, no cheaper edition than the original regular trade edition of any copyright nonfiction book may be issued until 1 year after its publication date in the United States, nor may a popular reprint thereof, to retail at $1 or less, be issued until 2 years or more after date of its original publication, without such permission.

That covers all books discussing the "new slippery deal", the N.R.A., the A.A.A, the industrial collapse following the initiation of these bold experiments in June last, the policy of this administration, the collapse of the gold standard, the secrecy enshrouding the Treasury, the 7-billion deficit and 30-billion debt, and, indeed, any public question that may be voted on at the congressional elections of 1934 or 1936.

"Without special written permission of the code authority", no such publication can be issued at popular prices until 1 year after the original publication date; and if the popular reprint sells at $1 or less, it cannot be issued until 2 years after, without special written permission of the code authority.

Except without special written permission of the code authority, no political party could promulgate criticisms of this administration. There would be no more Darrow reports against the N.R.A. administration issued in popular book form. Moreover, the code authority would have control of books issued for public schools. No school board could buy popular-priced books for the young generation without a license from the code authority saying that the book was O.K.

Certainly, Charles II, James I, Henry VIII, and George III, and their star chambers and courts of high commission, would rise up in their coffins and call the code authority blessed if they could call up now and say, "Why did not our court ministers think of that? Why did not our government have a 'Crack-down' Johnson?"

It is called by Roosevelt, the second, a new deal, but history will undoubtedly mark it down as a perfidious "slippery deal." John Milton described it back in 1684 in his speech for the liberty of unlicensed printing. Mussolini put it into effect in 1925 as the foundation of Fascist rule of Italy. Hitler followed with his Nazi control of the German press. Soviet Russia swept all publishing under a Moscow code authority.

Green's History of the English People tells us that "the statute for the regulation of public printing" was passed in 1679. That is to say, this code authority for regulating public printing was a new deal in England 250 years ago. That is about the average antiquity of most of the bold experiments, though the main item, dictatorship, runs back a few thousand years B.C.

Says Historian Green:

> Galling to the Crown as the freedom of the press and the Habeas Corpus Act were soon found to be, Charles * * * moved cooly and resolutely forward on the path of despotism.

Green also says a little later:

> His death at the very moment of his triumph saved English freedom.

In this country Charles might not have died, but he might have been defeated in the fall elections.

After a few more kings, Green gets to the time of George III, and says:

> With Glenville's ministry began the political power of the press and the struggle with America.

Thus we note that when Moley and Tugwell, the witch doctors of the new deal, tell the public that we shall never go back to the ideas of '76, they mean that we shall never go back to the Declaration of Independence from imperial rule, and shall never go back to the freedom of the press demanded by article I of the American Bill of Rights. Moley, as editor of the magazine owned by Vincent Astor, the President's lord admiral, knows that his publications would receive the special written permission of the code authority.

But under code authority, and the Moley-Tugwell edict against the ideas of '76, what chance would a publisher have to get out a popular edition of the works of Washington and Jefferson—to say nothing of Jackson and Lincoln, or even Grover Cleveland and Theodore Roosevelt, much less get out a history of the Nation's rule of Roosevelt, the second, and his gracious Queen Eleanor.

The article from the New York Herald Tribune referred to by Mr. SCHALL is as follows:

[From the New York Herald Tribune, May 27, 1934]

PRESS FREEDOM HELD MENACED BY BOOK CODE—PUBLISHER FEARS PROVISION WILL SUPPRESS WORKS ON CONTROVERSIAL SUBJECTS—HITS CHEAP-EDITION RULE—IT CURBS RIGHT OF DISTRIBUTION, HILLMAN SAYS

A threatened abridgement of the freedom of the press in the proposed code of fair competition for the book-publishing industry was inveighed against yesterday by Alex L. Hillman, managing director of William Godwin, Inc., publishers, of 66 Fifth Avenue.

What Mr. Hillman fears will result in a suppression of the right to print books dealing with controversial matters of political, economic, religious, and social nature is the proposed section of the code dealing with reissues at cheaper prices.

"Without special written permission of the code authority", the section reads, "or of some agency duly designated for such purpose by it, no cheaper edition than the original regular trade edition of any copyright nonfiction book may be issued until 1 year after its publication date in the United States, nor may a popular reprint thereof, to retail at $1 or less, be issued until 2 years or more after date of its original publication, without such permission."

CLAIMS RIGHT OF DISTRIBUTION

Mr. Hillman took exception to this section at the meeting of the code body in Washington last Friday on the ground that it was a clear violation of the basic right of the fredom of the press, since that freedom extends, he said, to the right of distribution as well as to the right of printing.

"If my firm publishes a book, say, either for or against the National Recovery Act, and we are unable to sell it at the publication price of $3 but find that we can sell it at $1, why should we have to go to the code committee and ask permission to distribute it in that fashion? To do so would be to surrender the right of a free-born American citizen. We should have the right to distribute that book as we see fit. It is not like other merchandise. There is a constitutional guaranty protecting the right to print and to distribute it, just so it is not obscene or libelous."

Mr. Hillman said that the code should plainly exempt all books of a controversial nature in the realms of politics, economics, religion, or sociology from the limiting provisions.

DISCOUNT PROVISION OPPOSED

Another code provision which hits at the very life of the small publisher, Mr. Hillman said, is the one that would prohibit the giving by publishers of more than a 46-percent discount to jobbers or wholesalers, while retailers are given a 43-percent discount. This would allow only a 3-percent margin for the wholesalers to do business on and would force such an organization as the American News Co., which wholesales one-quarter of the trade books of the country, out of business, according to Mr. Hillman. The effect on the small publishers will be immediate, he said; they will be compelled to carry a large sales organization to compete with the big houses or be forced to the wall.

"The way it shapes up at present", said Mr. Hillman, "is that we will be forced to become big or be ruined. The codifiers seem to feel that it is fair competition for Appleton-Century to be capitalized for $2,500,000, as against our $75,000, but unfair competition for us to give a 2-percent discount under them."

Another provision of the proposed code which says that, unless 15 percent of the published price of a book can be obtained, the book shall not be sold, will work as a confiscation and destruction of books printed before the code was considered, according to Mr. Hillman.

The code is now under consideration by Robert Houston, Deputy Administrator, in Washington.

RECESS

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 6 o'clock p.m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Thursday, June 7, 1934, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate June 6, 1934

FOREIGN SERVICE OFFICER, CLASS 4, CONSUL, AND SECRETARY IN THE DIPLOMATIC SERVICE

Clinton E. MacEachran, of Massachusetts, to be a Foreign Service officer of class 4, a consul, and a secretary in the diplomatic service of the United States of America.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

Frank K. Myers, of South Carolina, to be United States district judge, eastern district of South Carolina, to succeed Ernest F. Cochran, deceased.

George Murray Hulbert, of New York, to be United States district judge, southern district of New York, to succeed Frank J. Coleman, deceased.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS

Fred A. Isgrig, of Arkansas, to be United States attorney, eastern district of Arkansas, to succeed Wallace Townsend, whose term will expire June 9, 1934.

Carlisle W. Higgins, of North Carolina, to be United States attorney, middle district of North Carolina, to succeed John R. McCrary, whose resignation is effective July 1, 1934.

George Philip, of South Dakota, to be United States attorney, district of South Dakota, to succeed Olaf Ridem, whose term will expire June 10, 1934.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL

Virgil Pettie, of Arkansas, to be United States marshal, eastern district of Arkansas, to succeed George L. Mallory, whose term will expire June 9, 1934.

Charles W. Robertson, of South Dakota, to be United States marshal, district of South Dakota, to succeed Chester N. Leedom, whose term will expire June 10, 1934.

William F. Burguson, of South Carolina, to be United States marshal, eastern district of South Carolina, to succeed Allen B. Kale, resigned.

Reuben Gosnell, of South Carolina, to be United States marshal, western district of South Carolina, to succeed Arthur N. Sifford, appointed by court.

MEMBER OF THE FEDERAL POWER COMMISSION

Clyde L. Seavey, of California, to be a member of the Federal Power Commission for the remainder of the term expiring June 22, 1935, vice George Otis Smith.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS

Charles J. Baker, of South Carolina, to be collector of customs for customs collection district no. 16, with headquarters at Charleston, S.C., in place of Frederick G. Davies.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate June 6, 1934

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE

Thomas C. Kasper to be collector of internal revenue for the district of South Dakota.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS

Harry P. Hornby to be collector of customs for customs collection district no. 23, San Antonio, Tex.

SUPERVISING INSPECTORS, BUREAU OF NAVIGATION AND STEAMBOAT INSPECTION

Alvin A. Morrison to be supervising inspector, Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection.

Edward Maurer to be supervising inspector, Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

George William Edgerly to be captain, Infantry.

TO BE SECOND LIEUTENANTS WITH RANK FROM JUNE 12, 1934

Corps of Engineers

1. Cadet Charles Francis Tank.
2. Cadet Thomas DeForth Rogers.
3. Cadet John Burroughs Cary.
5. Cadet Robert Erlenkotter.
6. Cadet John Heughes Donoghue.
7. Cadet Staunton Lindsley Brown.
8. Cadet Richard Moser Sieg.
9. Cadet Joseph Lemual Johnson.
10. Cadet Ferdinand Julian Tate.
11. Cadet Burton Blodgett Bruce.
12. Cadet Robert George MacDonnell.
13. Cadet Paul Carter Ashworth.
16. Cadet William Joslin Himes.
18. Cadet Rudolph Green.
21. Cadet Joseph Ochsenschlager Killian.
22. Cadet Thomas Heber Lipscomb.
23. Cadet James Edward Walsh.
25. Cadet John Page Buehler.

Signal Corps

17. Cadet Robert Beauchamp Miller.
19. Cadet Charles Francis Fell.

Coast Artillery Corps

14. Cadet Charles Leon Andrews.
24. Cadet Austin Wortham Betts.
27. Cadet Edward Walter Moore.
28. Cadet Seymour Irving Gilman.
29. Cadet Curtis Delano Sluman.
30. Cadet Byron Elias Brugge.

31. Cadet Robert Butler Warren.
33. Cadet Wilford Edward Harry Voehl.
34. Cadet John Jacob Stark.
40. Cadet George Bernard Dany.
41. Cadet Harvey Julius Jablonsky.
43. Cadet Peter Samuel Peca.
44. Cadet Lawson S. Moseley, Jr.
45. Cadet Richard Ringo Moorman.
47. Cadet James Oscar Baker.
48. Cadet Lewis Kaspar Beazley.
50. Cadet Severin Richard Beyma.
54. Cadet Theodore Frelinghuysen Hoffman.
62. Cadet Joseph Sylvester Piram.
65. Cadet John DuVal Stevens.
66. Cadet Yale Harold Wolfe.
69. Cadet Franklin Kemble, Jr.
71. Cadet Gersen Leo Kushner.
80. Cadet George Julius Weitzel.
81. Cadet Charles Wadsworth Hill.
85. Cadet Henry William Ebel.
87. Cadet Jack Edward Shuck.
88. Cadet David Belmont Ruth.
92. Cadet Robert Griffith Finkenaur.
98. Cadet Alexander James Stuart, Jr.
99. Cadet Harrison Francis Turner.
102. Cadet William Monte Canterbury.
103. Cadet Kenneth Riffel Kenerick.

Field Artillery

20. Cadet Charles Rea Revie.
26. Cadet Paul Henry Berkowitz.
32. Cadet Thompson Brooke Maury, 3d.
35. Cadet William Sebastian Stone.
36. Cadet Jonathan Owen Seaman.
37. Cadet Kermit LeVelle Davis.
42. Cadet Urquhart Pullen Williams.
46. Cadet Jean Paul Craig.
51. Cadet Thomas Leslie Crystal, Jr.
55. Cadet Miles Birkett Chatfield.
56. Cadet Howard Marshall Batson, Jr.
58. Cadet Charles Henry White, Jr.
59. Cadet Arthur B. Proctor, 3d.
60. Cadet William Jack Holzapfel, Jr.
61. Cadet Mathew Valois Pothier.
63. Cadet George Edward Adams.
67. Cadet John Farnsworth Smoller.
68. Cadet Craig Smyser.
72. Cadet Richard Edward Weber, Jr.
74. Cadet James Alexander Costain.
78. Cadet Robert Gardner Baker.
79. Cadet Ronald LeVerne Martin.
91. Cadet Peter James Kopcsak.
93. Cadet William Scott Penn, Jr.
96. Cadet Horace Lake Sanders.
100. Cadet William Dowdell Denson.
101. Cadet Percy Thomas Hennigar.
104. Cadet Richard Lee McKee.
106. Cadet Stacy William Gooch.
107. Cadet Clark Lynn, Jr.
108. Cadet Edward Flanick.
110. Cadet Harry Jenkins Hubbard.
111. Cadet Samuel Knox Yarbrough, Jr.
112. Cadet Joe Free Surratt.
114. Cadet William Milton Gross.
117. Cadet Gordon Graham Warner.
119. Cadet Edward French Benson.
121. Cadet Robert Carl Bahr.
122. Cadet Frank Carter Norvell.
125. Cadet Robert Hawkins Adams.
126. Cadet Donald Glover McLennan.
128. Cadet Theodore Gilmore Bilbo, Jr.
130. Cadet Berton Everett Spivy, Jr.
132. Cadet Kenneth Alonzo Cunin.
133. Cadet Lawrence Kent Meade.
134. Cadet Thomas Eugene Wood.
139. Cadet Thomas Clary Foote.
140. Cadet John Huber Squier.
141. Cadet Charles Bernadou Elliott, Jr.
142. Cadet James Richard Winn.
144. Cadet Daniel Henry Heyne.
147. Cadet Wilson Hawkes Neal.

Cavalry

38. Cadet Ellis Oakes Davis.
52. Cadet Frederic Wood Barnes.
53. Cadet William Beehler Bunker.
73. Cadet Robert Waight Fuller, 3d.
75. Cadet Charles Warren Schnabel.
77. Cadet Carl Delbert Womack.
83. Cadet Donald Oliver Vars.
90. Cadet Travis Ludwell Petty.
105. Cadet Jerome Edward Blair, 2d.
124. Cadet John Walker Darrah, Jr.
127. Cadet John Francis Franklin, Jr.
129. Cadet Perry Bruce Griffith.
145. Cadet Harry Evans Lardin.
155. Cadet Theodore Fiquet Hurt, Jr.
157. Cadet Dana Watterson Johnston, Jr.
159. Cadet John Monroe Hutchison.
161. Cadet Daniel Edward Still.
163. Cadet Richard Albert Smith.
167. Cadet James William Snee.
171. Cadet Joseph Aloysius Cleary.
173. Cadet William Starr Van Nostrand.
174. Cadet Raymond Judson Reeves.
178. Cadet William Harvey Wise.
183. Cadet Harvey Thompson Alness.
184. Cadet Paul Earl Johnson, Jr.
196. Cadet Karl Trueheart Gould.

Infantry

4. Cadet James Fuller Miller, Jr.
15. Cadet Walter Jackson Renfroe, Jr.
39. Cadet William Loveland Rogers.
49. Cadet John Hicks Anderson.
57. Cadet Karl William Bauer.
64. Cadet Almon White Manlove.
70. Cadet Henry Richardson Hester.
76. Cadet Harold Charles Davall.
82. Cadet Gene Huggins Tibbets.
84. Cadet George Francis Wells.
86. Cadet Paul Tompkins Hanley.
89. Cadet Leroy Carl Miller.
94. Cadet John dePeyster Townsend Hills.
95. Cadet Frank Willoughby Moorman.
97. Cadet Merlin Louis DeGuire.
109. Cadet Leo William Henry Shaughnessey.
113. Cadet Charles John Bondley, Jr.
115. Cadet Claude Morris Howard.
116. Cadet Dale Orville Smith.
118. Cadet Hudson Hutton Upham.
120. Cadet Albert Patterson Mossman.
123. Cadet Vincent Shaw Lamb.
131. Cadet Stilson Hilton Smith, Jr.
135. Cadet Fredric Carson Cook.
136. Cadet Lloyd Elmer Fellenz.
137. Cadet Joseph Michael Cummins, Jr.
138. Cadet Percival Stanley Brown.
143. Cadet Louis Lee Ingram.
146. Cadet Paul Burlingame, Jr.
148. Cadet Elvin Seth Ligon, Jr.
149. Cadet Charles Herbert Wood.
150. Cadet Jack Jerome Neely.
151. Cadet John Wentworth Merrill.
152. Cadet Charles Burton Winkle.
153. Cadet Herbert Marvin Baker, Jr.
154. Cadet George Rolfe Walton.
156. Cadet Thew Joseph Ice, Jr.
158. Cadet Daniel Murray Cheston, Jr.
160. Cadet Edmund Waller Wilkes.
162. Cadet Clifford Guldlin Simenson.
164. Cadet Arno Herman Luehman.
165. Cadet Paul Lawrence Barton.
166. Cadet Frank Joseph Caufield.
168. Cadet Ralph Emerson Bucknam, Jr.

169. Cadet Floyd Felice Forte.
170. Cadet James Dudley Wilmeth.
172. Cadet Stanley Holmes.
175. Cadet Harry Lester Hillyard.
176. Cadet Robert Hugh Bennett.
177. Cadet William Hutcheson Craig.
179. Cadet Richard Andrew Legg.
180. Cadet Ralph Doak McKinney.
181. Cadet Gerald Joseph Higgins.
185. Cadet John Thomas Hillis.
186. Cadet Charles Edward Johnson.
187. Cadet Robert Carson Kyser.
188. Cadet John Dixon Lawlor.
189. Cadet Russell William Volckmann.
190. Cadet Donald Linscott Durfee.
191. Cadet Victor Charles Huffsmith.
192. Cadet Sidney Thompson Telford.
193. Cadet Hallett Daniel Edson.
194. Cadet Edwin Rusteberg.
195. Cadet Albert Theodore Wilson, Jr.
197. Cadet Harold Webb Browning.
198. Cadet Herbert Hadley Andrae.
199. Cadet William Frederick Northam.
200. Cadet George Lowe Eatman.
201. Cadet John Berchman Stanley.
202. Cadet John William White.
203. Cadet John Stotsenburg Kromer.
204. Cadet Charles Edward Brown.
205. Cadet Nathaniel Plummer Ward, 3d.
206. Cadet James Buchanan Wells.
207. Cadet Donald Adams McPheron.
209. Cadet Thomas Hogan Hayes.
210. Cadet Robert Herbert Sanders.
211. Cadet Paul Lee Turner, Jr.
212. Cadet Arthur Lafayette Inman.
213. Cadet Stanley Joseph Donovan.
214. Cadet Henry Agnew Sebastian.
215. Cadet Harold Conly Brookhart.
216. Cadet Edward Messmore O'Connell.
217. Cadet Russell Walker Jenna.
218. Cadet Gerhard Leroy Bolland.
219. Cadet William Bentley Kern.
220. Cadet Louis Alfred Walsh, Jr.
221. Cadet James Frederick Harris.
222. Cadet George Horner Gerhart.
223. Cadet Thomas Andrew McCrary.
224. Cadet John George Benner.
225. Cadet Eugene Harrington Cloud.
226. Cadet Dale Emerson Huber.
227. Cadet Travis Tabor Brown.
228. Cadet Edwin Gantt Hickman.
229. Cadet John Elwood Mead.
230. Cadet Arthur Ferdinand Meier.
231. Cadet David Lyon Hollingsworth.
232. Cadet William Alexander Cunningham, 3d.
233. Cadet Edward Ernest Bruno Weber.
234. Cadet John Edwards Diefendorf, Jr.
235. Cadet Meade Julian Dugas.
236. Cadet Thomas Almon O'Neil.
237. Cadet Emory Alexander Lewis.
238. Cadet Samuel Alfred Luttrell.
239. Cadet William Joseph Mullen, Jr.
240. Cadet William Hammond Waugh, Jr.
241. Cadet Henry Neilson.
243. Cadet William Graham Barnwell, Jr.
244. Cadet Robert Hector McKinnon.
245. Cadet Oliver Prescott Robinson, Jr.
246. Cadet Dennis John McMahon.
247. Cadet James O'Hara.
248. Cadet Robert Nabors Tyson.
249. Cadet Joseph Edward Barzynski, Jr.
250. Cadet John Buchanan Richardson, Jr.

APPOINTMENTS, BY TRANSFER, IN THE REGULAR ARMY

Capt. Clyde Eugene Austin to Quartermaster Corps.
Capt. Hobart Raymond Gay to Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lt. Paul Russell Weyrauch to Field Artillery.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

Clarence Chamberlin Wilson to be captain, Air Corps.
Byron Elihu Gates to be captain, Air Corps.
Marion George Pohl to be first lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
John Archibald Sawyer to be first lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.
John Southworth Upham, Jr., to be first lieutenant, Infantry.
Wilson Carlisle von Kessler to be lieutenant colonel, Medical Corps.
Coleridge Livingstone Beaven to be lieutenant colonel, Medical Corps.
William Guy Guthrie to be lieutenant colonel, Medical Corps.
Frederick Frasier Black to be colonel, Infantry.
Delos Carleton Emmons to be lieutenant colonel, Air Corps.
Ittai Albert Luke to be major, Ordnance Department.
Elmer Karl Pettibone to be captain, Quartermaster Corps.
Thomas Hugh Young to be captain, Infantry.
Thayer Stevens Olds to be first lieutenant, Air Corps.
Samuel Leslie Myers to be first lieutenant, Cavalry.

REAPPOINTMENT IN THE OFFICERS' RESERVE CORPS

George Herbert Harries to be major general, Auxiliary Reserve.
John Miller Turpin Finney to be brigadier general, Auxiliary Reserve.

POSTMASTERS

ALABAMA

Charles W. Sarver, Athens.
Robert B. Vail, Bay Minette.
Elias B. Reid, Cherokee.
Evelyn Jones, Mentone.
Olis O. Goode, Rogersville.

ARKANSAS

Simpson A. Kemp, Hot Springs National Park.
Ida T. Mayo, McCrory.

COLORADO

William J. Murphy, Breckenridge.
Flora G. Hier, Castle Rock.
Glenn G. Ellington, Delta.
Agnes M. Padan, Fort Logan.
Lewis Hollenbeck, Salida.
Mary E. Dermody, Strasburg.

CONNECTICUT

Martin M. J. Murray, Falls Village.
Harry W. Potter, Glastonbury.
Willis Hodge, South Glastonbury.
Clarence Davenport, Washington.

GEORGIA

Rem B. Edwards, Crawfordville.
Elizabeth S. Maxwell, Lexington.
William H. Wood, Jr., Loganville.
George H. Busha, Toccoa.

HAWAII

Rose De Fries Austin, Aiea.

ILLINOIS

George A. Porter, Alexis.
Frank Dvorak, Algonquin.
Joseph L. Lampert, Alton.
Samuel J. Schuman, Astoria.
George A. McFarland, Avon.
Emma Zinschlag, Beckemeyer.
Vernard D. Snyder, Bethany.
Ruth M. McElvain, Broughton.
Carl J. Markel, Carpentersville.
Conrad C. Miller, Chadwick.
Charles J. Schneider, Columbia.
Lee C. Vinyard, East Alton.
Charles R. Bowers, Elmwood.
Edwin J. Heiligenstein, Freeburg.
Roy R. Pattison, Godfrey.

C. Mancel Wightman, Grayslake.
Warthen K. Kimball, Gurnee.
Leah Pearl York, Hartford.
Raymond J. Kelley, Huntley.
Lyle O. Kistler, Joy.
Mark J. Humphreys, Keithsburg.
George H. Wales, Lanark.
Henry J. Hosman, Lyons.
John A. Peters, Mason City.
John V. Barr, Mazon.
Benjamin B. Holston, Nashville.
Thomas J. Studley, Neponset.
John L. Mead, New Boston.
George G. Martin, Noble.
Mansford W. Blackard, Omaha.
Harry U. Hartzell, Orangeville.
Walter Hill, Pana.
Hugh J. Gorman, Peotone.
Marguerite A. Lamb, Port Byron.
Ben W. Sharp, Reynolds.
John H. Ryan, Richmond.
James Higgins, St. David.
Marcus M. Wilber, Sorento.
Hubert W. Darby, Tampico.
George Lyons, Tilden.
James Wheeler Davis, Troy.
James E. Heflin, Versailles.
Wilfred J. Brennan, West Chicago.
Floyd E. Madden, Willow Hill.
Zeno G. Stoecklin, Wood River.
Ernest F. Picker, Worden.
Elmer M. Bickford, Wyanet.
Frances I. Thurman, Yates City.

IOWA

Audra Pearson, Ainsworth.
Clarence N. Hildebrand, Belmond.
Vern Freeman, Clarence.
Fannie Hach, Clutier.
Lemuel S. Hill, Des Moines.
Herman J. Schroeder, Fort Madison.
Lilly B. Gibbons, Jefferson.
Daniel P. O'Connor, Lawler.
Ray O. Bass, Ogden.
Joseph P. Quinn, Riverside.
David A. McElliott, Ryan.

LOUISIANA

Harry Preaus, Farmerville.
Amy B. Griffin, Gilbert.
Owen R. Phillips, Glenmora.
Winnie H. Arras, Gramercy.
Overton Gauthier, Jennings.
Mrs. Leonard C. Davenport, Mer Rouge.
Florida I. Fagot, Metairie.
Auburtin H. Barre, Mooringsport.
William E. Brock, Natchitoches.
Thomas E. Barham, Oak Ridge.
Thelma L. Ellis, Sulphur.

MASSACHUSETTS

Minnie A. Barden, Agawam.
Parker E. Wilson, Bryantville.
Armand L. Bengle, Indian Orchard.

MICHIGAN

John Leon Breckenridge, Breckenridge.
Michael Leary, Calumet.
Roger J. Tobin, Channing.
Johanna Rosie, Macatawa.
Max A. Hill, Vicksburg.
Max E. Wilson, Waldron.
William G. F. L. Wentzel, Zeeland.

MONTANA

Ludwig S. Rigler, East Helena.
Charles A. Westphal, Forsyth.
Isbell S. McQuitty, Harlowton.
Marie D. Laramy, Malta.
Lawrence H. Tooley, Red Lodge.

NEBRASKA

Don Dey Ermand, Dalton.
Daniel F. Sheehan, Emerson.
Bryan J. Snyder, Fullerton.
George H. Looschen, Hooper.
Mary W. Morrow, Merna.
Marvin H. Lutt, Niobrara.
Matthew T. Liewer, Osmond.
Martin Sorenson, Plainview.
Paulus W. Barker, Rising City.
Charles O. Kocina, Verdigre.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Arthur P. Varney, Alton.
Roy T. Hildreth, Bethlehem.
Stuart W. Heard, Center Sandwich.
Hazel J. Hayes, Rye Beach.
Edna C. Mason, Tamworth.

NEW YORK

Francis J. Sinnott, Brooklyn.
Frank Brancato, Clinton Corners.
Chester A. Miller, Oneonta.
Marion A. Carroll, Montrose.
Clarence A. Chamberlain, Orangeburg.
Ruth E. Perrin, Potsdam.

OKLAHOMA

William A. Jenkins, Beggs.
Phebe B. Bolin, Forgan.
Mike Craig, McCurtain.
Grover C. Diedrich, Marshall.
Frank B. Lucas, Ponca City.
Tom L. Pike, Weleetka.

OREGON

George A. Belloni, Coquille.
Kenneth E. Sturges, Linnton.
John D. Kennedy, North Portland.
Oscar E. Marvin, Wallowa.

PENNSYLVANIA

Joseph R. McCrum, Alexandria.
Arthur B. Clark, Altoona.
Oscar H. Stillwagon, Ambler.
James A. Patterson, Avella.
F. Joseph Roach, Bala-Cynwyd.
James P. Bryan, Beaver.
Harry E. Cuppett, Bedford.
Wilson I. Shrader, Berwick.
Harry D. Kutz, Bethlehem.
Orie A. Nary, Biglerville.
Elizabeth D. Bermingham, Blossburg.
George W. Goodley, Jr., Boothwyn.
J. Daniel Moore, Bridgeville.
Lewis M. Sutton, Camp Hill.
Francis P. Kelly, Carbondale.
Oliver F. Stolz, Carrolltown.
Martin A. King, Clarks Summit.
Jesse C. Yoders, Clarksville.
Grace Baker, Claysburg.
Daniel Leffler, Clearfield.
John A. McShane, Clifton Heights.
Daniel J. Frantz, Jr., Coal Center.
Joseph B. Roper, Coatesville.
Clarence W. Scheuren, Collegeville.
James P. Meaney, Conshohocken.
Herman L. Levy, Daisytown.
George T. Kirkendall, Dallas.
Charles L. Lehman, Devon.
Peter T. Dotey, Dingmans Ferry.
Robert Grant Furlong, Donora.
Sylvester M. Considine, Drexel Hill.
Clair F. Semelsberger, Duke Center.

Philip S. McDermott, Duquesne.
Antonio R. Minio, Edge Hill.
W. Fred Smith, Ephrata.
James Nevant, Farrell.
Dominick Franceski, Forest City.
Clara B. Dunmire, Foxburg.
Neale Boyle, Freeland.
C. Gaddis Howland, Gaines.
James W. Earley, Gilberton.
James N. Gardner, Glen Campbell.
Charles T. Bonner, Glen Riddle.
William L. Nolder, Grampian.
Carrie Stephens, Great Bend.
Wilmer F. Sowers, Green Lane.
Katharine Olive McCoy, Grove City.
Paul O. Holtz, Hastings.
Willard K. Allison, Hickory.
Harry A. McIntosh, Hollidaysburg.
S. Marple Lemmon, Honey Brook.
Amy G. Murray, Hop Bottom.
James O. Bergantz, Huntingdon.
William H. Solomon, Hyndman.
Bernard A. Devlin, Jenkintown.
John A. Eckert, Jersey Shore.
Frank J. Studeny, Johnstown.
Robert E. Holland, Kane.
John L. Clover, Knox.
Marjorie L. Samson, Lake Ariel.
Cornelius McCullough, Lansdowne.
William J. Cannon, Lansford.
James A. Sproull, Leechburg.
Fred Schneider, Leetsdale.
Wilbur G. Warner, Lehighton.
John C. Amig, Lewistown.
John A. Frazier, Liberty.
Lawrence B. Fink, Littlestown.
Stephen F. Payer, McAdoo.
Vernon J. McCarty, Marianna.
Helen T. Henrie, Meshoppen.
John C. Tritch, Middletown.
Ezra D. Parker, Mifflintown.
Frank W. Cross, Milford.
James F. Boran, Minersville.
John W. Klepper, Mortoursville.
William J. Burke, Mount Carmel.
James K. Wiley, Mount Union.
Joseph C. Clark, Natrona.
Samuel S. Ulerich, New Florence.
William G. Loy, Newport.
Penrose L. Young, Northampton.
Gerald H. Rickerson, North Warren.
Ralph B. Mushler, Norwood Station.
Fred Favo, Oakmont.
Nevin L. Wuchter, Orwigsburg.
James F. Dugan, Osceola Mills.
Eli R. Diller, Paradise.
William Leslie, Parkers Landing.
Russell W. Mosteller, Pen Argyl.
John J. Borntrager, Pennsburg.
Clair A. Wamsley, Phoenixville.
James H. Rattigan, Pottsville.
Marie E. Potteiger, Progress.
Paul Q. Barclay, Punxsutawney.
William J. Moran, Ralston.
Paul A. Martin, Roaring Spring.
William T. Collihan, St. Clair.
Archer L. Laws, Sayre.
Joseph F. Conrad, Scranton.
James A. Carney, Sharon Hill.
James D. Creary, Shenandoah.
John E. Blair, Shippensburg.
W. Fred Williams, Shippenville.
Joseph Murray Gilliland, Snow Shoe.
Gordon H. Fish, South Montrose.
Marie H. Bailie, Springdale.
William D. McIntire, Stoneboro.
Edmond J. Holleran, Susquehanna.
Alfred P. Smalley, Swarthmore.
Rosanna McGee, Towanda.
Llewellyn L. Childs, Townville.
John D. Cox, Tyrone.
Edgar S. Thompson, Upper Darby.
G. Frank Zerbe, Valley View.
Joseph P. Caufield, Verona.
Michael J. Winters, Villanova.
Stafford W. Parker, Wallingford.
James K. Bell, Warren.
Alfred R. Warner, Waynesboro.
Earl R. Young, Weatherly.
George D. Arner, Weissport.
Samuel H. Tschop, Windsor.
Charles E. Fereday, Woodville.
Francis G. Ackley, Wyalusing.
Emma R. Eakins, Wynnewood.
Frank A. Crippen, Youngsville.

SOUTH DAKOTA

William J. Nolan, Buffalo Gap.
William J. Gassen, Gregory.
Cleveland F. Brooks, Platte.

TEXAS

George W. Kidd, Brownwood.
Lon M. Peeples, Milano.

VERMONT

Walter H. Beckwith, Chelsea.
George H. St. Pierre, Island Pond.
Rosa M. Stewart, Tunbridge.
Albert C. Moore, Westminster.

VIRGINIA

Charles M. Hutcheson, Charlotte Court House.
Mary C. Lewis, Fort Eustis.
Paul Scarborough, Franklin.
Carolyn C. Bryant, Independence.
Frank L. Schofield, University of Richmond.
Alice H. Tyler, Warsaw.
William Nelson Page, Winchester.

WASHINGTON

Warren H. Perrigo, Arlington.
Frank O. Keith, Battle Ground.
Walter V. Cowderoy, Blaine.
Alex Huse, Cheney.
Nellie E. Merryweather, Concrete.
Joshua J. Peak, Davenport.
Floyd D. Tatman, Kalama.
David N. Judson, Oak Harbor.
Ralph H. Mitchell, Omak.
Paul Hamilton, Prosser.
Paul Rhodius, Sedro Woolley.
Eudocia B. Leech, Steilacoom.
Rufus B. Kager, Sultan.
Donald S. Farver, Tonasket.
George B. Day, Walla Walla.
Connie C. Wall, Winlock.

WEST VIRGINIA

Elmer O. Bowyer, Dundon.
Alice McCoy, Franklin.
William M. Boardman, Gary.
Edward J. Rush, Grant Town.
George W. Kilmer, Hedgesville.
Clarence C. Francisco, Iaeger.
Denny B. Browning, Logan.
Edward E. Williams, Mason Town.
Okey J. Garrett, Matoaka.
George E. Dunaway, Ranson.
Marmion S. R. Moler, Shepherdstown.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 6, 1934

(Legislative day of Monday, June 4, 1934)

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker at 11 o'clock a.m.

PAUL JELNA

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 3032) for the relief of Paul Jelna, with a Senate amendment, disagree to the Senate amendment, and request a conference with the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Mr. HILL of Alabama, Mr. COFFIN, and Mr. GOSS.

CONFEDERATE CEMETERY, FAYETTEVILLE, ARK.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1358) to provide for the improvement of the approach to the Confederate Cemetery, Fayetteville, Ark., with an amendment.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, it was announced yesterday that the first order of business this morning would be consideration of the conference report on the tariff bill.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, I may say to the gentleman from New York that this is purely a local bill and should not take more than 5 minutes. I assure the gentleman that should controversy develop or there be any evidence that the bill will take any time for its consideration, I will withdraw my request.

Mr. SNELL. If it is a purely local matter about which there is no controversy, I shall not object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the Mildren Lee Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, the sum of $3,200, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the construction of a suitable hard-surfaced road from the end of the paved portion of East Rock Street, Fayetteville, Ark., and running along the unpaved portion of said street to the entrance of the Confederate Cemetery in said city, such road to be constructed under the supervision of the Secretary of War. No payment shall be made under this act until the city of Fayetteville has consented to the construction of such road.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FULLER: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following: "That the Highway Department of the State of Arkansas is hereby authorized and directed to expend not to exceed $12,800 out of any sums heretofore or hereafter granted to such highway department under the provisions of title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act, in the construction of an 18-foot concrete pavement on approaches to the Confederate Cemetery and the National Cemetery at Fayetteville, Ark., as follows: (1) From Mill Avenue in said city east on East Rock Street to the east side of the Confederate Cemetery, a distance of approximately 1,300 feet; and (2) from West Fourth Street in said city south on Government Avenue extended to the main entrance of the National Cemetery just south of the southern limits of said city, a distance of approximately 1,060 feet."

Amend the title to read as follows:

"To provide for the improvement of approaches to the National Cemetery and the Confederate Cemetery at Fayetteville, Ark."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 9280. An act relating to deposits in the United States of public moneys of the government of the Philippine Islands.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4253) entitled "An act for the relief of Laura Goldwater."

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 3170) entitled "An act to revise air-mail laws."

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments, in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 8781. An act to increase employment by authorizing an appropriation to provide for emergency construction of public highways and related projects, and to amend the Federal Aid Road Act, approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 620. An act for the relief of Catherine Wright;

S. 1430. An act for the relief of M. Thomas Petroy;

S. 1731. An act for the relief of Marion Von Bruning (nee Marion Hubbard Treat);

S. 2692. An act relating to the record of registry of certain aliens; and

S. 2377. An act for the relief of A. E. Shelley.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendment to the bill (H.R. 3032) entitled "An act for the relief of Paul Jelna", disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. SHEPPARD, Mr. LOGAN, and Mr. CAREY to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

RECIPROCAL TRADE AGREEMENTS

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 8687) to amend the Tariff Act of 1930, with Senate amendments, and to consider the same en bloc in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object to ask the gentleman a question, does the gentleman intend to discuss the amendments, or simply ask for a vote? I should like to have a few minutes.

Mr. DOUGHTON. If an explanation of any amendment is necessary, I shall be pleased to make it.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman from North Carolina should tell the House what changes the Senate has made.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I should like to have 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently a quorum is not present.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 176]

Abernethy	Brooks	Connery	Fitzgibbons
Adair	Browning	Cooper, Ohio	Ford
Allgood	Bulwinkle	Corning	Foulkes
Andrews, N.Y.	Burke, Calif.	Crosser	Frey
Auf der Heide	Carley, N.Y.	Dear	Fulmer
Bacharach	Carter, Calif.	DeRouen	Gambrill
Bacon	Celler	Dickstein	Gasque
Bailey	Chapman	Dies	Goldsborough
Berlin	Chase	Disney	Green
Black	Church	Doutrich	Greenwood
Boland	Coffin	Eagle	Hancock, N.Y.
Bolton	Cole	Farley	Hartley
Brennan	Collins, Miss.	Fish	Higgins

Hoeppel	Lewis, Md.	Reid, Ill.	Thurston
Holdale	Ludlow	Sadowski	Waldron
Huddleston	McGugin	Shoemaker	Weideman
Jeffers	McKeown	Simpson	West, Tex.
Kee	McSwain	Sisson	Wilcox
Kelly, Ill.	Maloney, Conn.	Smith, Va.	Withrow
Kennedy, Md.	Marland	Smith, Wash.	Wolfenden
Koppleman	Muldowney	Smith, W.Va.	Wood, Mo.
Kvale	Norton	Stalker	Zioncheck
Lambertson	Peterson	Strong, Tex.
Lea, Calif.	Ransley	Sumners, Tex.
Lee, Mo.	Rayburn	Thompson, Ill.

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and thirty-two Members having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

On motion by Mr. BYRNS further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

PROCEDURE OF HOUSE

Mr. LUCE. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LUCE. Mr. Speaker, Jefferson's Manual says that when any Member means to speak he is to stand up in his place uncovered and to address himself not to the House or any particular Member, but to the Speaker.

Fifteen years ago when I came here no Member ever broke this rule. No Member ever failed to follow the time-honored practice which came down to us through the centuries of addressing himself to the Speaker. Some one introduced the custom of also addressing himself to the Members of the House. This invasion of the time-honored dignified rule led me to confer with Speaker Longworth, who was even more severe in his criticism than I care to be. Later I brought the matter to the attention of the House and Speaker GARNER was equally emphatic in his comments upon the situation. At that time I found that the official reporters had put me down as saying "Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen", which I did not say, because I had never broken the rule. My remonstrance has led to its omission in part from the RECORD, but still the words appear "Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen", and some one the other day went so far as to say "Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen, and friends." That took in the gallery.

I should like to know if in the Speaker's judgment the rule, which is not altogether clear, in that it refers to the first address made to the Speaker when seeking the floor, should be extended to cover all introduction, and if it is further the Speaker's judgment that the practice is an invasion of the dignity of the House and ought to be stopped?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LUCE] has read from section 354 of the House Rules and Manual, which clearly states the rule. The Chair might also read clause 1 of rule 14, which has reference to decorum and debate:

> When any Member desires to speak or deliver any matter to the House, he shall rise and respectfully address himself to "Mr. Speaker", and, on being recognized, may address the House from any place on the floor or from the Clerk's desk, and shall confine himself to the question under debate, avoiding personality.

When the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LUCE] presented this matter during Mr. Garner's Speakership, Mr. Garner ruled:

> The Chair is in entire sympathy with the remarks made by the gentleman from Massachusetts. It is supposed to be a slight upon the Chair, according to the expressions of former Speakers of the House, when Members address the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole or the Speaker and then address Members on the floor en masse.
>
> The Speaker represents the House of Representatives in its organization, and by addressing the Chair he addresses the entire Membership of the House.

There is not any question about the rule. The dignified method of procedure is to address the Speaker when the House is in session and to address the Chairman when the House is in Committee of the Whole, and thus the Member addresses the entire Membership. The rule provides very clearly what the mode of address should be. The Chair thinks the rule ought to be followed in the interest of dignity and decorum in the proceedings of the House.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the Chair permit a further suggestion? Even before the days of Jefferson's Manual and the House rules just referred to, back to the days of the Roman Caesars, they began by saying, "Friends, Romans, and countrymen."

The SPEAKER. That is too far back.

Mr. FOCHT. The gentleman's knowledge of Roman history seems to be confined to Mark Antony's address.

Mr. STUDLEY. That was in the forum, not in the senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman may settle that matter with the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, a further parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WOODRUM. Is it not also a fact that in debate, for instance, and in colloquy between Members, under the strict and literal rules of the House, a Member has no right to interject himself into debate or make comments to a Member who is addressing the Chair or the committee of the House without first addressing himself to the Speaker or Chairman and asking whether or not the Member will yield and getting permission to have himself recognized?

The SPEAKER. That is the rule, and it should be adhered to.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. FULLER. May I inquire whether it is a violation of the rules and not in keeping with the dignity of the House and the position which we occupy on the floor of this House for a Member having a right to extend his remarks, as was done recently, to cast aspersion and reflection on the Speaker, the President of the United States, the Vice President of the United States, and other distinguished personnel of the Government in regard to patronage? [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. That is a matter for the Member who extends his remarks to take into consideration.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, following the parliamentary inquiry a little further, may I direct the attention of the Speaker of the House to the fact that when Jefferson's Manual was written there were no gentlewomen Members of the House. From what I have read of the life and character of Thomas Jefferson, I believe that in writing the manual, if at that time gentlewomen were Members of the House, he would have prescribed as the proper manner to address the Chair as "gentlewomen and Mr. Speaker."

The SPEAKER. What is the gentleman's inquiry?

Mr. BOYLAN. The parliamentary inquiry is, I think "gentlewomen" should also be included in addressing the House. The form should be "Mr. Speaker and gentlewomen."

The SPEAKER. When a Member addresses "Mr. Speaker" it includes the gentlewomen as well as the gentlemen.

RECIPROCAL-TRADE AGREEMENTS

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 1, line 8, after "assisting", insert "in the present emergency."

Page 1, line 11, strike out "in the present emergency."

Page 2, line 9, after "finds", insert "as a fact."

Page 2, line 10, after "restrictions", insert "of the United States or any foreign country."

Page 2, line 11, strike out "or" and insert "and."

Page 2, lines 12 and 13, strike out "use of the powers herein conferred" and insert "means hereinafter specified."

Page 3, line 3, strike out all after "indirectly" down to and including "Cuba" in line 6.

Page 3, after line 15, insert:

"(b) Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the application, with respect to rates of duty established under this section pursuant to agreements with countries other than Cuba, of the provisions of the treaty of commercial reciprocity concluded between the United States and the Republic of Cuba on December 11, 1902, or to preclude giving effect to an exclusive agreement with Cuba concluded under this section, modifying the existing preferential customs treatment of any article the growth, produce, or manufacture of Cuba: Provided, That the duties payable on such an article shall in no case be increased or decreased by more than 50 percent of the duties now payable thereon."

Page 3, line 16, strike out "(b)" and insert "(c)."

Page 3, line 25, strike out "section 336" and insert "sections 336 and 516(b)."

Page 4, line 4, after "act", insert ", or to any provision of any such agreement."

Page 4, line 4, strike out all after "act." down to and including "flour" in line 8, and insert "The third paragraph of section 311 of the Tariff Act of 1930 shall apply to any agreement concluded pursuant to this act to the extent only that such agreement assures to the United States a rate of duty on wheat flour produced in the United States which is preferential in respect to the lowest rate of duty imposed by the country with which such agreement has been concluded on like flour produced in any other country; and upon the withdrawal of wheat flour from bonded manufacturing warehouses for exportation to the country with which such agreement has been concluded, there shall be levied, collected, and paid on the imported wheat used a duty equal to the amount of such assured preference."

Page 4, strike out lines 16 and 17, and insert:

"(c) The authority of the President to enter into foreign trade agreements under section 1 of this act shall terminate on the expiration of 3 years from the date of the enactment of this act."

Page 4, after line 20, insert:

"SEC. 4. Before any foreign trade agreement is concluded with any foreign government or instrumentality thereof under the provisions of this act, reasonable public notice of the intention to negotiate an agreement with such government or instrumentality shall be given in order that any interested person may have an opportunity to present his views to the President, or to such agency as the President may designate, under such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe; and before concluding such agreement the President shall seek information and advice with respect thereto from the United States Tariff Commission, the Departments of State, Agriculture, and Commerce and from such other sources as he may deem appropriate."

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in all the Senate amendments to the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina moves to concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, at a meeting of the Committee on Ways and Means on yesterday for consideration of the Senate amendments to House bill 8687, I was directed by the committee to move that the House concur in all amendments adopted by the Senate.

There are 14 amendments to the bill as it passed the House, all of which, except 3, are mere perfecting amendments or changes of language which carry no change in intent or purpose with respect to the provisions of the bill. In other words, they are merely clarifying amendments.

The first of the three amendments to which I have alluded where there is some change in the bill is on page 2, amendment no. 5, which makes the change conjunctive rather than disjunctive. In other words, two reasons must be found before the trade agreements can be entered into rather than one. It is a very simple change and anyone reading the amendment can easily understand its import.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. It is also true in connection with this amendment that it is thought it further strengthens the constitutionality of the bill.

Mr. DOUGHTON. It is really a limitation of power, as has been suggested by my good friend the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. VINSON].

The next amendment I may refer to is on page 4, amendment no. 10, which refers to section 336 of the present tariff law. It does not repeal section 336 but only renders it inoperative as to those commodities with respect to which trade agreements are negotiated, and leaves it operative as to those commodities as to which trade agreements are not negotiated.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. The gentleman has referred to section 336. In this amendment the same treatment is applied to section 516 (b) of the tariff law as the House bill did to section 336. It is made inapplicable to those commodities that are covered in a foreign trade agreement.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Precisely; the gentleman from Kentucky is correct and I thank the gentleman for his statement.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

It is evident from the colloquy going on on the other side of the aisle that the gentlemen who have this bill in charge think it is merely a Democratic measure. The Republican side would like to know something about it, even though we do not agree with what you are doing.

Mr. DOUGHTON. I did not yield to the gentleman. The gentleman does not seem to have very much regard for the rules of the House.

Mr. BRITTEN. I addressed myself to the Chair by a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. DOUGHTON. If the gentleman wants to debate the matter, that is another question. I am endeavoring to explain the changes made by the amendments, as requested by the minority leader.

On page 6, section 4, amendment no. 14, which is very clear, provides:

Before any foreign trade agreement is concluded with any foreign government or instrumentality thereof under the provisions of this act, reasonable public notice of the intention to negotiate an agreement with such government or instrumentality shall be given—

And so forth. This provides reasonable notice so that any interested parties may be heard, and it is for the purpose of giving a hearing to any individual or corporation that might be affected by any proposed trade agreement.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from New York.

Mr. SNELL. Does the gentleman understand by that language that if, for instance, they were to have a trade agreement with Russia they would definitely state in the announcement that it was on pulpwood or coal or wheat or some other product, or would it simply refer to a general trade agreement with Russia?

Mr. DOUGHTON. The details, of course, would have to be made known upon inquiry; but when it is suggested that a trade agreement will be negotiated with the government of any country, that gives notice. It is generally known what commodities as to which that country would be interested in entering into an agreement.

Mr. SNELL. But when we consider a country that sends a great many different kinds of imports into this country, it seems to me it would be very indefinite. I think if you are going to make any announcement to the country you should say, "We propose to take up trade agreements on this, that, and the other thing", and then the industries of the country that are directly interested will have an opportunity to protest or to ask for a hearing.

Mr. DOUGHTON. I may say to the distinguished minority leader I have not the slightest doubt that the President will give due notice to any individual or any corporation that might be affected or might be interested in any trade agreement he proposes to negotiate. Of course, in the administration of any act we all know that the good faith of those in charge must be taken for granted; otherwise you could leave no discretion in anyone to administer any law.

Mr. SNELL. I appreciate that statement, but I should like to make it clear that it is the opinion of the chairman of the committee that at least the probabilities are that the administration will tell the country the articles which they propose to consider for trade agreements.

Mr. DOUGHTON. In further response to the gentleman from New York, I would not want to go that far, because I have no such authority——

Mr. SNELL. I said that this is the gentleman's opinion.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Opinions, as the gentleman knows, might not be worth very much.

Mr. SNELL. I think this is important so far as the country is concerned.

Mr. DOUGHTON. From my discussion of this matter with those interested and representing the administration, including the State Department, I have not the slightest doubt that every legitimate American industry and interest will be properly considered and given ample opportunity to present its objection to any trade agreement that may be proposed. This is my individual opinion, not speaking for the administration but speaking for myself alone.

Mr. SNELL. That is along the line of my contention, and it ought to be done.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield.

Mr. RICH. If under the terms of this tariff measure reciprocal trade agreements are made with foreign countries, will those trade agreements be ratified by the Senate?

Mr. DOUGHTON. A man of the intelligence and diligence of my good friend from Pennsylvania should know that no such provision is carried in this bill.

Mr. RICH. I was under the impression; but the gentleman from Tennessee made the statement that in order to make it constitutional certain changes would have to be made. If that is the case, I think the law as written is unconstitutional. I cannot see how you can make it constitutional unless you have the Senate ratify it.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. If the gentleman from North Carolina will yield, I made no such statement. I said this was a clarifying provision that added strength to the legal phases of the bill and clarified certain constitutional views of it.

Mr. RICH. I did not mean to imply that the gentleman made that direct statement, but I was thinking of the constitutionality of the act, and I wanted to bring that out, because I believe the courts would hold it unconstitutional.

Mr. DOUGHTON. For years and years under Republican administration there have been trade agreements made with other countries without being ratified by the Senate.

Mr. TREADWAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield.

Mr. TREADWAY. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee, in view of the inquiries that have been made by the gentleman from New York, if it was not a fact that all during the hearings on this bill before the House Committee on Ways and Means it was absolutely impossible for us to secure from any officials of the Government any indication as to the nature of the transactions that were likely to be undertaken with foreign governments in exchanging products or goods? Did we secure the slightest information from the Treasury or from the State Department as to what reciprocal trade was likely to be had?

Mr. DOUGHTON. We did not, and for the simple reason that the administration in advance of the legislation, in advance of the enactment of this bill into law, would not be in a position to state what they were likely to do with respect to trade agreements with foreign governments. That would be presuming what the foreign governments might do when they assemble around the conference table.

Mr. TREADWAY. Under section 14, inserted by the Senate amendment, is there anything in it to show what would be the type of evidence on which the hearings would be based in its relation to any manufacturing industry in this country?

Mr. DOUGHTON. It says as plain as language can make it:

> Before any foreign trade agreement is concluded with any foreign government or instrumentality thereof under the provisions of this act, reasonable public notice of the intention to negotiate an agreement with such government or instrumentality shall be given—

And so forth.

Mr. TREADWAY. The President can seek advice. It is not in the nature of evidence; he is authorized to obtain advice and he can form his own conclusions.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. I call the attention of the gentleman from Massachusetts to the fact that in this section the privilege is given to the interested person to present his views to the President or to such agency as the President may designate. Consequently you have this broad power of the presentation of such evidence and such views as the person interested may see fit to make. If we had started to narrow or circumscribe that privilege, then, of course, I know the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] would be the first one to object.

Mr. DOUGHTON. It not only provides in this amendment that reasonable notice shall be given, but it goes on and further says:

> And before concluding such agreement the President shall seek information and advice with respect thereto from the United States Tariff Commission, the Departments of State, Agriculture, and Commerce, and from such other sources as he may deem appropriate.

The United States Tariff Commission, a bipartisan Commission, is supposed to know more about the effect of tariffs than any other organization or commission or agency in the United States, and the President is also required to seek information from the Department of State, the Department of Commerce, and the Department of Agriculture. Not only must notice be given but advice must also be sought from these different departments of the Government. It seeks to throw around this provision every possible safeguard, so that any interested party could be heard, and the President may obtain advice from all proper sources.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is reading from the amendment, and that is all right; but is it not a fact that in the other branch there was such tremendous opposition to doing away with hearings and placing this power of treaty making outside of the other body's own rights, that in order to get the bill through the Senate at all, the advocates of the bill were obliged to make this very minor concession, that there should be hearings?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I think that is just a conclusion, and, so far as I know, there is no basis in fact for that conclusion. I do not know what took place in all the conferences that were had.

Mr. TREADWAY. If the gentleman will read the language of the protracted argument in the other branch, he will be convinced that this bill never could have passed the Senate without a sop of this kind being made.

Mr. DOUGHTON. I notice the enemies of the bill, like the gentleman from Massachusetts, diligently and earnestly endeavored to amend the bill and that they were unsuccessful, except where the administration and those who favored the bill were agreeable.

Mr. TREADWAY. Oh, we admit that. We have not any influence with the administration. The gentleman does not need to make that statement. We know that to be the fact; but I still say that in spite of the tremendous majority the Democratic Party has in both bodies, yet, in order to put this bill through the Senate, the friends of the bill were obliged to offer this sop of a hearing.

Mr. DOUGHTON. And I suppose that statement really pleases the gentleman.

Mr. TREADWAY. I am making a truthful and correct statement, and the gentleman knows it is correct.

Mr. DOUGHTON. By what standard does the gentleman establish its correctness?

Mr. TREADWAY. If the gentleman will read the debates in the Senate, he will see they could not have passed the bill in that body without some sop of that kind.

Mr. DOUGHTON. That is the gentleman's opinion, founded on no facts or evidence.

Mr. TREADWAY. Oh, absolutely. Read the RECORD; that is all I ask the gentleman to do.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. LOZIER. Is it not a fact that hearings were not contemplated by James G. Blaine, the father of reciprocity——

Mr. TREADWAY. Oh, James G. Blaine never wanted any such legislation as this.

Mr. LOZIER. He was the father of the doctrine of reciprocity.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order. The distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LUCE], the colleague of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY], invoked a decision from the Chair this morning with reference to observance of the rules.

Mr. TREADWAY. And one of them is not to address the Chair while standing in the well, as the gentleman from Alabama does at the present moment. I maintain the gentleman from Alabama is addressing the Chair from the well, and I make the point of order that the gentleman from Alabama is not in order, where he is addressing the Chair.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the injection of the remark just made by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] is out of order and should not go into the RECORD, because he has failed to observe the Rules of the House in first addressing the Chair and asking permission to interrupt, and I ask for a ruling on that point of order.

Mr. TREADWAY. I want the RECORD to show that the gentleman from Alabama was out of order when he called me to order, in that he was in the well of the House when he addressed the Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The point of order is sustained. In order to interrupt a gentleman on the floor, Members must first address the Chair, who will then ascertain whether the gentleman having the floor will yield for the interruption.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LOZIER].

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Speaker, if my Republican colleagues on the other side of the aisle will read the debate in the Senate in the Fifty-first Congress, they will find a complete refutation of the fallacious arguments they are now presenting against the pending reciprocity tariff bill.

Benjamin Harrison, a Republican, was then President and James G. Blaine was Secretary of State. Mr. Blaine was a man of outstanding genius, magnetic personality, and a superb master of statecraft. He was the high priest of the Republican Party, and for 30 years was the only man allowed to enter the Republican "holy of holies"; and, like David, permitted to eat the Republican shewbread. Mr. Blaine was the father and originator of the policy of reciprocity. Claiming that the pending McKinley tariff bill would not open a single foreign market to an American producer, on June 4, 1890, Mr. Blaine, then Secretary of State, wrote a lengthy letter to President Harrison submitting a report upon a custom's union adopted by the International American Conference, recommending reciprocal trade relations with South America. Thereupon Senator Hale, a Republican, offered a reciprocity amendment to that bill, which amendment evidently reflected the views of Mr. Blaine. As a class, Republicans supported this reciprocal amendment. Such legal giants as Hoar, of Massachusetts; Hale, of Maine; Edmunds, of Vermont; and Spooner, of Wisconsin, made speeches in favor of the reciprocity provisions of the proposed McKinley tariff bill.

Practically all the Republican Senators favored the doctrine of reciprocity and opposed an amendment offered by Senator Evarts, Republican, which would have required the President to "communicate to Congress the facts which he shall have ascertained", so that Congress might act thereon. This amendment was defeated. Only two Republican Senators, Dolph and Evarts, voted for it. Such Republican Senators as Aldrich, Spooner, Allison, Plumb, Cushman K. Davis, Platt, Ingalls, Hoar, Dawes of Massachusetts, Cullom, Edmonds, Frye, Hawley voted against the Evarts amendment, which would have required the President to submit the reciprocal agreements to Congress for ratification.

In that debate, Senator Hale, Republican, of Maine, said of reciprocity:

> It commits to the President, whom we know by his communications to the Senate is in favor of this movement, powers which I am entirely willing should be placed in his hands. That he will exercise them wisely and in the true interest of American labor no man who knows his present attitude and his past history can doubt.

In other words, in 1890 Senator Hale, Republican, had faith in President Harrison and was willing to vest in him the authority to negotiate reciprocal tariff agreements with foreign nations without requiring such agreements to be submitted to the Congress for ratification. I am sure that confidence was justified, and that every Member of Congress, Democrat or Republican, has the same confidence in Franklin D. Roosevelt, and the same willingness to trust him as the President of all of the American people to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements with foreign nations, which will open up foreign markets for the surplus products of our farms and factories.

It is a reflection upon the present, or any future President of the United States, whether he be a Democrat or a Republican, to assume for one moment that he would recklessly use the powers conferred by this act, or that he would enter into any trade agreement which would prejudicially affect any of our industries, or that he would make any reciprocal agreement without carefully weighing the arguments in favor of or against such agreement.

When the time comes for a President to exercise the powers and prerogatives conferred by this act, whether he be a Democratic President or a Republican President, he would, of course, make a thorough investigation and give the industry involved, whether it be agriculture or any other vocational group, an opportunity to present arguments and reasons, if any there be, why such trade agreement should not be made.

This bill gives the President great power, but the conferring of that power does not presuppose that the President would use the power in such a manner as to destroy any legitimate industry in America, and I assert that this would be true, whether the President is a Democrat or Republican.

For instance, take my good Republican friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY]. If he were elevated to the Presidency, an office which he would well adorn [applause], when he sat in the seat of the mighty, when he was clothed with Presidential responsibility, when he stood face to face with his duty, when called upon to negotiate reciprocal-trade agreements authorized by the pending bill, he, though a militant Republican, would carefully consider the arguments for and against the application of this formula to any particular industry. In other words, official responsibility and grave public duties frequently make officials cautious and conservative, who, without that responsibility, might be radical and lacking in judicial poise. So I say, Mr. Speaker, that the granting of this power does not presuppose its abuse. I have confidence in whoever may occupy the exalted office of President of the United States, whether he be a Democrat or a Republican, when he stands face to face with duties and responsibilities incident to the administration of this act, he will perform that duty and discharge that responsibility as becomes a faithful public servant, motivated by a controlling determination to discharge with fidelity the responsibilities of his great office. [Applause.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. CROWTHER].

Mr. CROWTHER. Mr. Speaker, I notice in the Democratic platform of 1932 the following statement:

> We advocate a competitive tariff for revenue, with a fact-finding Tariff Commission free from Executive interference.

During the debate at the other end of the Capitol—and I shall not mention any names, because I understand that according to our rules we may not mention a Senator's name—on page 10394 of the RECORD I find this statement. It was during the discussion as to the granting of power to the President, and the Senator said:

> The President now has the power, for we all know that he can control the Tariff Commission. Everybody knows it.

Well, that is rather a contradiction of the policy laid down in the Democratic platform. Of course, I did not know it. I do not think many Members of this House knew that such a statement could be made regarding Presidential control of the Tariff Commission, but according to this statement, "Everybody knows it."

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CROWTHER. Yes; I yield.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Is that a statement of the Chairman of the Tariff Commission which the gentleman is quoting from?

Mr. CROWTHER. No. That is the statement of a Senator.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. The Chairman of the Tariff Commission did make such a statement before the committee. The gentleman knows that Mr. CROWTHER. Knowing him as I do, his making that statement does not surprise me in the least.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CROWTHER. I yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. The gentleman must know that Democratic platforms were made to run on rather than to stand on.

Mr. CROWTHER. I thank the gentleman for the suggestion.

Mr. LEWIS of Maryland. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CROWTHER. Excuse me just a moment. Now, we had this argument as to whether it was proper to confer this power upon the President of the United States, no matter whether he be a Democratic or a Republican President. I remember very well in the Seventy-second Congress when we had our reorganization bill here, sent by President Hoover, and the Democrats then declared, "that that was too much power to confer upon any man." In this Seventy-third Congress there appears to be no limit to the powers conferred upon the President.

So you see it just depends upon whose ox is gored or whose cod is on the hook.

Now, this tariff bill and the Democratic tariff bill of 1932 ought to be printed in parallel columns.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Does not the gentleman mean Democratic platform?

Mr. CROWTHER. No; with the bill that was passed in 1932. I think I am right. Section 4 of that bill reads as follows:

SEC. 4. International Economic Conference: That the President is respectfully requested to initiate a movement for an International Economic Conference with a view to (a) lowering excessive tariff duties and eliminating discriminatory and unfair trade practices, and other economic barriers affecting international trade, (b) preventing retaliatory tariff measures and economic wars, and (c) promoting fair, equal, and friendly trade and commercial relations between nations; but with the understanding that any agreement, treaty, or arrangement which changes any tariff then in existence or in any way affects the revenue of the United States must first be approved by the Congress of the United States.

In the present bill the "approval of Congress" is eliminated, although in 1932 this policy was stoutly advocated by the Democrats, who were then, as now, in control of the House and Senate.

As I say, this 1932 proposal and the bill under consideration should be printed in parallel columns to show the wide degree of inconsistency my Democratic friends have developed in the short period of 2 years.

You gentlemen "point with pride" and we "view with alarm" amendment 14, providing for a hearing before an agreement is concluded. I will tell you what that is. That is merely an invitation to industry to have a front seat at its own hanging. That is all it is, and if a group of industries are involved, not one of them is quite sure who is to be the victim.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CROWTHER. I yield.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Does the gentleman concur in the section he just read?

Mr. CROWTHER. I voted against that bill and the gentleman from Washington voted for it; but now the gentleman from Washington [Mr. HILL] is supporting the very opposite contention.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Then who is inconsistent?

Mr. CROWTHER. I voted against the entire proposition. [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield two additional minutes to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CROWTHER. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to be classed as one of the carping critics who think that nothing good has come out of this administration. Some of the policies that we have adopted have been meritorious and have, I believe, brought about a condition of benefit to the country. [Applause.] I do not believe it is within the power of any man to make an analysis and state what percentage of the benefit is due to natural causes or normal developments, and what percentage is due to the artificial shots in the arm that have been supplied by the Treasury of the United States. I know from past experience that it is dangerous to ramble in the realms of prophecy. I have done it heretofore and I have been taken to task several times; and I have had my statements read to me from the RECORD. It is dangerous procedure, but I will say that this reciprocal tariff bill is not even a noble experiment; it will prove to be one of the most futile ventures ever undertaken by the American Government. [Applause.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY].

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, it is useless, of course, to go into any serious argument relative to the merits, or rather the demerits, of this measure for the House, with 3 to 1 Democratic majority, has passed the bill. It is water gone over the dam. I do wish, however, to call attention to a few defects which appear to me to be outstanding in a measure of this character.

The question of constitutionality has been raised. In the Senate a new amendment was inserted in order, as the advocates of the bill say, to try to strengthen it constitutionally.

When the bill was before the House an amendment was adopted on the recommendation of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MCCORMACK] limiting the time of operation of the bill to 3 years for the purpose, as was admitted at the time, of having the bill appear in the nature of emergency legislation, and in that way strengthen it against possible attack on the ground of unconstitutionality. These efforts to strengthen the bill against attack in the courts indicate its weakness and show on their face that the advocates of the bill realize they are dealing with a very difficult subject when they take away from Congress the power over taxation. This, in my opinion, is a very material defect in this legislation.

But, Mr. Speaker, permit me to say this: The bill is about to become a law, because, of course, it was on the "must" list of the President. I hope it will be executed in a very large degree by the author of the bill, the Assistant Secretary of State, Dr. Sayre. Dr. Sayre was before the Ways and Means Committee practically all of the time this bill was under consideration. While I have frequently criticized members of the "brain trust", and probably will criticize them in the future, I hope all of them may have the good, common sense of Dr. Francis B. Sayre. I am proud of the fact that his collegiate education was secured in my district [applause] and that he has a son at the present time in Williams College, a classmate of the son of my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL]. These young men will be trained along the right line up in Williamstown, but I am afraid they will perhaps gather some of these inaccurate doctrines of tariff from their two distinguished fathers.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I do not think the gentleman wants to leave the impression that he is in favor of a transposition of the tariff relationships from the other departments of the Government to the State Department.

Mr. TREADWAY. Oh, not at all. I think that would be the least of my intentions; but I am gratified to think that a man possessed of the courtesy and the educational qualifications of Dr. Sayre is likely to be the one to administer a very unfortunate piece of legislation.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Does not the gentleman also think that transposition from the other department to the office of the Secretary of State is one of the serious defects of the whole structure of the bill?

Mr. TREADWAY. Absolutely. I am opposed to the whole thing.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. The assumption of the gentleman from Ohio that jurisdiction is transferred to the Department of State is not justified by the text of the act.

Certainly there is nothing in the act that indicates it is to be transferred to the Department of State. The right to exercise the powers granted in this act lies in the President of the United States.

Mr. TREADWAY. The gentleman from Washington is accurate in that statement, but he realizes, of course, that in the multitudinous duties of the President of the United States he must have assistance in carrying out legislation, and, therefore, I think the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS] is correct in his inference also that the carrying out of this bill will be largely in the hands of the State Department.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. TREADWAY. Of course, this relationship as carried out between our country and other countries and the method of approach is always through the State Department.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Of course, the official avenue of approach to other countries in connection with this matter is through the State Department, so that of necessity the State Department will participate in these matters.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Trade agreements cannot successfully be made under this bill or under any bill unless they are made through the Secretary of State or with their approval and consent.

Mr. TREADWAY. I think that is correct.

Mr. BEEDY. I wonder if the gentleman will elaborate for a moment to the House as to his meaning when he stated that this bill will be "executed" by Mr. Sayre.

Mr. TREADWAY. I may also use that word in its literal sense. I hope he will execute it. Perhaps the Democrats would prefer to have him administer it.

May I call attention to one serious difference from my viewpoint in the Senate amendments. On page 4, line 17, reference is made to the Senate amendment, mentioning section 516 (b) of the Tariff Act of 1930. That little reference itself seems very modest, but it has a very definite effect on the bill. It takes away from our manufacturers and producers the right of appeal to the Department for hearing on the classification of articles for the rates of tariffs to be assessed. It does away with this feature entirely and leaves no appeal, which is a very serious drawback.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. The gentleman will recall that in this act the President has authority to proclaim modifications of existing duties and other import restrictions or such other additional import restrictions, and so forth, and that the term "duties and other import restrictions" is defined to include the rates, form of import duties, and classification of articles. That covers the subject matter referred to in section 516 (b); that is, it relates to classification and rates of duty. If under this act the President is given authority when a trade agreement is entered into to change the classification of merchandise and hence the rate that goes along with that particular classification, what is the reason for having the inconsistencies that would exist if you retain section 516 (b) insofar as it applies to the commodities which may be the subject of various trade agreements?

Mr. TREADWAY. All I care to say in answer to the gentleman is that the entire purpose and intent of the bill, from our viewpoint, is to make it very much easier to secure foreign-made products as against American-made goods. That is simply another sop to the foreigner, taking away certain authority and certain rights that the American citizen has under the Tariff Act of 1930.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. If the gentleman will make sure that I will have sufficient time so that I may finish my remarks, I yield.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. The gentleman will have plenty of time. I think it is not a violation of confidence as to occurrences in the committee to state that Dr. Sayre stated to our committee in session yesterday that he had examined all of the cases arising under section 516 (b), and not in one single instance had such a charge been sustained. It seems to me almost conclusively established that the appraisers and collectors of customs are diligently on the job protecting the interests of the United States and the interests of Americans in the matter of classification and rates.

Mr. TREADWAY. I may also add that Dr. Sayre thought the cases involved had been trivial. That may be his judgment.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. TREADWAY. The producer in this country knows whether his case is trivial or not from his own individual viewpoint, I should say, and what might be trivial in the view of the State Department might be extremely important to the producer up in New England.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield briefly to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. May I remind the gentleman that the statement was that the court had found that these cases were trivial.

Mr. TREADWAY. I am not sure as to whom Dr. Sayre stated held that view, and I am perfectly willing to accept the gentleman's statement.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. Of course, this act in its application to section 516 (b) of the Tariff Act of 1930 merely suspends the operation of that paragraph with respect to the goods that are the subject matter of the contracts and agreements. It does not take away any right unless the article is included in the foreign trade agreement.

Mr. TREADWAY. I have a list of objections, and all I will do is to refer briefly to those objections at this time. I shall not take all the time I would otherwise take in elaborating on each one.

The Senate bill and House bill do not materially differ. These changes are of some benefit, although I should not approve of the amendment relating to section 516 (b), nor do I think we are getting anything in the way of a concession by public hearings, because it is very, very indefinite.

Under the bill, the President has complete authority over all domestic industries dependent upon tariff protection. That is very evident from the fact that we have taken the power away from the Congress to have anything to do with the set-up of tariff matters. He has the power to say whether they shall continue to do business or give way to foreign products.

The Democrats have fought down amendments to insure agricultural products against decreased duties. I hope our friends will explain this matter to their constituents and to the farmers generally.

They have fought down amendments to prevent lowering of duties below foreign and domestic cost differentials, which is extremely important from the standpoint of maintaining domestic industries and the American standard of living. This matter was fought out on the floor of the House and Senate. The Democrats are absolutely on record as not being willing to allow a tariff differential to offset lower foreign production costs.

The Democratic-controlled Senate has surrendered its power of ratification of treaties. Under the terms of the bill, advance approval is given to all trade agreements negotiated by the President, regardless of how disastrous their effect may be upon domestic industry.

The Democrats are interested in building up foreign purchasing power, while that of our own people is constantly declining. They seek to grant foreign producers freer access to the domestic market, thus depriving our own workers of a means of livelihood.

Trade agreements mean lowered tariffs. Lowered tariffs mean less goods produced in the United States. Less goods produced in the United States means more unemployment.

The program for lowered tariffs is clearly inconsistent with the efforts to raise prices in domestic markets. Under the N.R.A. and A.A.A., domestic prices have been forced higher and higher, thus increasing the foreigner's competitive advantage, both in the domestic and foreign markets.

The President's authority under this bill lasts for 3 years, but agreements may be entered into the last day which may be good for 3 more years. So you are really setting up a 6-year program under the guise of an emergency.

I now yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. DOUGHTON. May I ask my colleague if any standard has ever been set up or any process devised by which the cost of production of foreign-made goods and domestically made goods can be determined. My colleague will recall that the Chairman of the Tariff Commission stated emphatically that it is an absolute impossibility to reach any such conclusion correctly.

Mr. TREADWAY. We do know very certainly that the whole object of this bill is to reduce import rates on articles coming into this country in competition with ours, otherwise there would be no call for this reciprocal deal.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. Yes.

Mr. REED of New York. There is one thought that has been overlooked, or at least has not been mentioned. A standard has been set up in this country, and a new standard, to determine whether an industry is efficient or inefficient. This is the new philosophy that many of our industries are inefficient.

Mr. TREADWAY. May I interrupt the gentleman there to ask did not the Secretary of Agriculture practically say that any small industry is inefficient, and that is the kind of industry we have in our country?

Mr. REED of New York. Exactly; and under this bill they are to be eliminated.

Mr. TREADWAY. The action which the House is about to take seals the doom of all small and so-called "inefficient" industries in the United States. Unfortunately for New England, most of our industries are run on a comparatively small scale, and hence our people are the ones most likely to suffer at the hands of those who will administer this bill. The philosophy of its sponsors is well stated by the Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Wallace. During the hearings before the Ways and Means Committee the following colloquy occurred between the Secretary and the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED]:

Mr. REED. Well, would you favor lowering the tariffs on things Germany produces and ships to this country and which we produce here in our own country?

Mr. WALLACE. If Germany can produce them more efficiently than we can, it would be of benefit to our consumers, and our consumers certainly represent the eventually dominant interest in our population.

The delegation of tariff-making power to the President as proposed by this bill is directly contrary to the position taken by the Democratic Party in connection with the enactment of the present flexible tariff provisions, under which the President may raise or lower tariff duties under a formula laid down in advance by Congress. At that time the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON] expressed the view that the President's authority under the flexible provisions was "too much power and authority to lodge in any man who ever has been, is now, or ever will be President of the United States." Yet today he sponsors a measure that makes the President a dictator over the tariff, contrary to the Constitution of the United States, and without being restricted by any formula for rate making laid down in advance by Congress.

When the present bill was under consideration in the House last March I inserted in the RECORD a joint statement issued by Democratic members of the Finance Committee of the other body in connection with the 1930 tariff bill, in which they unanimously condemned the principle of permitting the President to pass upon tariff rates. They, too, have now completely reversed their position and have gone headlong in the other direction.

Reference has been made to the fact that the Republican Party in the past has stood for the principle of reciprocity. That is true. But the Republican Party has never advocated it to the extent that in order to secure foreign trade we should surrender the home market to foreign competitors. Nor has the Republican Party ever given the President complete control over the tariff. Whenever the President in the past has been given the authority to negotiate reciprocal treaties Congress has always retained the right of ratification both to the House and Senate. Even the Democratic tariff bill which was vetoed by President Hoover in the Seventy-second Congress retained this right. Moreover, whenever Congress in the past has given the President the authority to negotiate trade agreements without ratification by either body it has specified in advance the articles which could be made the subject of tariff bargaining and has fixed the concessions to be offered or retaliations to be imposed.

In conclusion, may I say that the responsibility for this legislation is clearly upon the Democratic Party? The Republicans have fought it every inch of the way. The vote in the House showed 99 Republicans against the bill and 2 for. On the Democratic side, 268 voted for the bill and only 11 against. In the other body the vote also was along party lines.

As I pointed out in my speech on the bill last March, the issue presented here, in the final analysis, is one of internationalism against nationalism, in which the administration has taken the part of internationalism. The Republican Party will welcome the opportunity to meet this issue before the American people in November.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LOZIER].

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Speaker, supplementing the remarks I made a few minutes ago with reference to the attitude of the Republican Party toward the policy of reciprocity, I call to the attention of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY], the position of Senator Hoar and Senator Dawes, two outstanding Massachusetts Republicans, who for many years represented Massachusetts in the United States Senate, and both of whom embraced, with the zeal of a crusader, the reciprocity doctrine formulated and eloquently advocated by James G. Blaine, the "plumed knight" of Republicanism. There were giants in those days, and the intellectual giants of the Republican Party in the Fifty-first Congress, after subjecting the policy of reciprocity to the acid test of reason, accepted it as sound and wholesome.

May I call the roll of some of the great Republicans who championed the doctrine of reciprocity? Senator Hale, from Mr. Blaine's home State of Maine; Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, one of the greatest constitutional lawyers America ever produced, and a Republican in whom there was no guile; Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, a man of great learning and force of character, a grandson of Roger Sherman, who was a signer of the Declaration of Independence; Senator Hoar having represented Massachusetts for a longer period in the National Congress than any other Representative from that State; Senator Spooner, of Wisconsin, one of the stars of first magnitude in the constellation of constitutional lawyers whose intriguing, convincing, and compelling logic was irresistible; Senator Ingalls, whose intellectual stiletto was as sharp as a Toledo blade or a rapier forged in the hot furnace of Damascus; Senators Aldrich, Cullom, Frye, and many others who not only understood our Constitution but had the undoubted ability to construe and expound. All these and other great Republicans never challenged the constitutionality of reciprocal trade agreements.

The flower of the Republican Party in the Senate, the men who controlled the Republican Party at that time, both voted and argued in favor of the wisdom, expediency, and constitutionality of a law vesting in the President authority to enter into reciprocal trade agreements with other nations.

No one will challenge the Republicanism of Senator John Sherman, who in the Fifty-first Congress, in supporting Blaine's reciprocity provision said:

> Congress has the absolute right, not only to impose duties, but to leave to the President or any other authority the determination of some facts upon the happening of which a duty may be either removed or levied.

Senator Pierce (Republican, North Dakota) said of the Hale amendment which embodied the Blaine reciprocity policy:

> The latitude given the President is wide, his discretion ample, his power sufficient without being dangerous.

Senator Aldrich, who for many years was Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and who made and unmade tariff laws, an uncompromising Rhode Island Republican, supported the reciprocity provision of the McKinley Act.

I repeat, James G. Blaine was the author and expounder of the doctrine of reciprocity, and his resistless logic and transcendent genius convinced the American people that the policy was not only workable but eminently sound.

Reciprocity was made an article of Republican political faith in four or five national Republican platforms, and not until the year of our Lord 1934 did the leaders of the Republican Party abandon the faith of their fathers and cast the policy of reciprocity into discard. In view of the traditional support and advocacy of reciprocity by the Republican Party for a generation, it is difficult to comprehend the apostasy of Republican leaders in these later days. It is difficult to escape the conclusion that Republican opposition to the reciprocity tariff bill is purely political. [Applause.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I want to address myself for a moment to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL] and to recall an amendment which I offered during the consideration of this bill in the House under the 5-minute rule to strike out the proviso with respect to Cuba, which amendment was voted down. I claimed at that time that the proviso threw the bars down completely for Cuba and admitted her to the Union to all practical intents and purposes so far as the tariff is concerned.

I now notice the Senate has brought in an amendment which, in my judgment, in different phraseology, affects the same purpose that my amendment would have affected by specifically limiting the range of the raising or lowering of Cuban duties to 50 percent, the same as in all other cases.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. I may say to the gentleman from Colorado that this Senate amendment was simply a clarifying amendment to state more definitely and specifically what the House bill carried.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. The language I wish to call attention to specifically is the last proviso in the Senate amendment:

> Provided, That the duties payable on such an article shall in no case be increased or decreased by more than 50 percent of the duties now payable thereon.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. That is within the general provisions of the bill, but in order to make it absolutely clear and certain and clarify it in the minds of such gentlemen as the gentleman from Colorado and others, they put it in there in specific language.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH].

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, in the short time allotted to me I do not intend to say a single word about the tariff or the general policy involved in this legislation. I do desire, however, to call the attention of the House, in all seriousness, to the implications of the last sentence of amendment no. 14:

> Before concluding such agreement the President shall seek information and advice with respect thereto from the United States Tariff Commission, the Departments of State, Agriculture, and Commerce.

This is a mandatory provision proposed to be put in the statutes of the United States that the President of the United States, while exercising an Executive power extended to him by law, if this is to become law, shall, before exercising it, consult his own subordinates.

I have never seen a proposal of this kind placed in Federal legislation. I think it is not worth the paper it is written on. I think it is not within the power of the Congress to circumscribe the exercise of the Executive function in such fashion. The Congress may prescribe qualifications and conditions under which the Chief Executive may exercise power, but the Congress cannot, in my judgment, fetter the hands of the President to the extent of commanding him to consult his own subordinates before he performs his duty.

Consider a situation which might arise in this connection. Suppose the President proclaims a reciprocal trade agreement with a foreign country, and it should turn out afterward that he had failed to consult the Secretary of Commerce, is the agreement to be deemed illegal or is the President of the United States to be subject to impeachment? Surely, no Member of the House would regard such a thing seriously.

Articles of impeachment could not possibly stand under a situation of that kind, and yet the Congress of the United States is putting upon the statute books a provision of that kind.

Clearly, in my judgment, it is beyond the power of the Congress. If the President of the United States is to exercise power delegated to him by the Congress, then he may exercise it subject only to the will of Congress. I protest against this particular provision as being futile and contrary to our tenets of government.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN].

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to reply to the remarks made by the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH]. Anything that he says on the subject of the tariff, to my mind, represents the policies of the Republican Party, of which he is one of the very ablest members. He will probably be their candidate for President in 1936, provided he is willing to "make the sacrifice."

One of the main things that brought this country to the terrible conditions through which we have been passing for the last few years, was the high protective tariff policies of the party then in power, which enriched the favored few at the expense of the unprotected many. It was simply legalized highway robbery. One of the best informed men on the tariff question has stated that from 1921 to 1929 the tariff cost the people of this country on an average of approximately $4,000,000,000 a year—not $4,000,000, but four thousand millions of dollars—every year that rolled around. That was an average of about $35 per capita for every man, woman, and child under the American flag. Of that $4,000,000,000 he stated that only six hundred million went into the Federal Treasury, while $3,400,000,000 went into the pockets of the favored beneficiaries of this outrageous high protective tariff that was sapping the lifeblood from the masses of the American people, destroying our international trade, and bringing this country to wreck and ruin.

With the exception of a few dairy farmers and a few truck growers, the farmers got no benefit whatsoever from the tariff, and the dairymen and truck growers merely gathered the crumbs that fell from the banquet table. In order to pretend to the wheat growers that they were helping them by the tariff, they put a duty of 30 cents a bushel on wheat, and then raised it by Executive order to 42 cents a bushel, at the very time when wheat was selling for 10 cents a bushel more in Canada than it was in the United States; which shows that the tariff on wheat was ineffective. The wheat and corn growers got absolutely no benefit from the tariff. The cotton growers got none, for the reason that, like the wheat and corn farmers, they ship out more of their products than are shipped in. Yet, every one of these farmers was paying on an average of $35 a year for every man, woman, and child in his family.

It cost the average agricultural county in the United States more than a million dollars a year. No wonder our farmers became bankrupt. It was a system of economic slavery imposed upon a free and enlightened people by the Harding-Coolidge-Hoover regime, that has hardly a parallel in all the history of civilized society. Our farmers were soon bled white. The earnings of a lifetime were sapped away. The prices of farm commodities sank below the cost of production. Farms were foreclosed by the thousands. Young people, and even the older ones, left the farms to seek employment in industrial centers. The tariff had been raised so high that foreign nations could not trade with us. Since they could not sell us their goods, they could not buy the things which we produced. Our international trade languished and perished away, factory shelves became packed with high-priced goods that could not be shipped abroad. Our farmers had nothing to buy with—their resources were gone. Factories closed down and turned their workmen onto the streets, without employment and without bread. Hungry men, women, and children crowded into the bread lines that streamed down the streets of our cities. We were in the midst of the greatest depression this country has ever seen. Yet, what did the Hoover administration do to relieve it? Raised the tariff by Executive order, thereby piling additional burdens onto the backs of a distressed people who were already stumbling and fainting and falling under this cross taxation known as the "tariff" and upon which they and their children were to be crucified.

It is astonishing to hear the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH], and other gentlemen on his side of the aisle, protest so vigorously against giving the present President of the United States the right to enter into agreements with other nations to reduce tariff rates and thereby restore our international trade, when they supported the measure to give their own President, Mr. Hoover, the right to raise the tariff and thereby complete the destruction of our international trade along with the impoverishment of our own people.

Personally, I should prefer to see Congress regulate these tariff rates, but the time has come when, if we are going to deal with other nations, we must let them deal with us. We cannot shut out everything they have to sell without provoking them into doing the same thing toward us. When they shut our foreign trade out, the American farmer pays the penalty, for our balance of trade has always depended on the amount of farm commodities which we export. The opposition complains that we are turning this power over to the President and the Secretary of State. If there are two men on earth to whom I would be willing to delegate the power to regulate our international trade, they are Franklin D. Roosevelt and Cordell Hull—those two great statesmen who are doing so much to restore prosperity, redeem our foreign trade, and to reestablish friendly relationships among nations of the earth. [Applause.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time be extended for 5 minutes, in order that my colleague from New York [Mr. REED] may have an opportunity to speak.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, first of all, I express my thanks to the Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means for his courtesy in asking for additional time so that I may say at least a few words on this bill. I have been opposed to this bill, and I am opposed to it in its present form. I come from the State of New York. We have a large number of industries that are the lifeblood of small communities. What is true in New York State is also true in the northeastern States. If you will go into New England, you will find the whole of New England honeycombed with little industries, and the communities depend upon the pay roll of those industries to support everything of a social and economic character.

A new philosophy has been established so far as the program of our Government is concerned. That philosophy has been voiced in various publications and in public utterances by men who have been called "brain trusters." They believe that a group of officials in Washington should be set up as judges of what constitutes an efficient or inefficient industry. These men have recently stated that it is necessary to eliminate from our economic order the so-called "inefficient industries." Take, for instance, the recent publications with regard to manufactured goods that are coming into this country from Japan. Japan is laying down a first-class bicycle for about $3. She is laying down a first-class automobile in France for about $365. Labor in Japan is drawing a very small pay compared with what labor in this country receives. The women who work in the factories in Japan at the present time, according to official reports, are receiving 20 cents a day. Experts who have studied the question state that within just a very few years, because of the high pressure under which they work and the fact that they are improperly nourished, they are dying of cancer and tuberculosis and various kindred diseases. Yet we are asked to eliminate industries in this country that cannot compete without some tariff protection. This bill will give power to the administration to eliminate inefficient industries under the trade agreements.

Mr. SAMUEL B. HILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REED of New York. In just a moment. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] has just referred to his opposition to a high tariff. I say frankly that I stand for a high tariff, for the protection of our women workers and our men workers in this country, and I am not willing to let any group of people here in the city of Washington, with no business experience, come into my district or any other part of the United States and say, "Here is an inefficient industry and we will enter into a trade agreement and eliminate it. We will eliminate the manufacture of light bulbs and many other industries that are inefficient", because Japan can produce them more cheaply than they can be produced here. Their standard of inefficiency applies to those industries that cannot exist without some protective tariff.

I do not care on what basis you put it, I am for protection, even to the extent of an embargo, if necessary, to protect the industries, the standard of labor, and our agricultural interests in this country. Where is the danger in this bill? It is not the President who is going to carry out this bill. That task is going to be assigned to a group of so-called "brain trusters", who are going to make a study of our industries and agriculture and they will then determine just what they will barter away in this country for products of foreign countries. A statement has been publicly made that many of the industries of New England are inefficient and that they ought to be destroyed. Yet today New England is one of the most economically sound areas in this country. She has specialized, she has had protection, but at the same time her industries are running, and some of the States have no bonded indebtedness. Many of them are succeeding in building up their schools, supporting their churches, and in keeping them open, and were it not for protection, of course, these industries would be destroyed, and because this bill permits the bartering away of those industries and industries in New York State, I am opposed to it. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. VINSON].

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. REED] referred to the Japanese situation. I remind him that under the leadership of our President, our condition with respect to Japanese produced goods is very materially improved. Prior to the devaluation of our dollar, one American dollar would buy five Japanese yen. Since the devaluation of the dollar, and at this time, one American dollar buys two yen. So I think if you will look that matter through you will see that a substantial benefit has accrued to American-produced goods with respect to Japanese competition, because of this present administration policy.

I was glad to hear my friend from New York [Mr. REED] fail to carry in his statement the assertion he made to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] with respect to the purported quotation from Secretary Wallace with regard to efficient industries. I think the gentleman inadvertently overspoke himself in that colloquy. In the debate on the bill it was charged by certain gentlemen that Mr. Wallace said that any industry that had a tariff is an inefficient industry, and therefore would go out of the window. I challenged that statement on the floor, and when the testimony upon which the statement was made was inserted in the RECORD, it did not justify the statement or the conclusion, and I say to my friend from New York that I should be glad to know in what statement or what speech or what paper Secretary Wallace ever said that all small industries are inefficient.

Mr. REED of New York. I ask the gentleman to read Mr. Wallace's book, America Must Choose.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. I have read it, and I say the printed words certainly do not bear out the conclusion of the gentleman from New York, who is always so accurate, splendid, capable vigorous, and persevering in his purposes. Secretary Wallace did not then nor does he now take the position that all small industries in this country are inefficient.

Mr. REED of New York. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. I yield.

Mr. REED of New York. If I said that Mr. Wallace made the statement that all small industries were inefficient, then I will withdraw that statement.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. I am glad of that, because the gentleman is always so painstakingly accurate.

Mr. REED of New York. But I do not say that I made such a statement. I think the gentleman from Kentucky is laboring under a misapprehension. I know that he would not intentionally put those words in my mouth.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. I was listening very carefully.

With reference to the statement of the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] the gentleman complained with reference to amendment no. 14, which provides for the hearings, and the securing of information and advice by the President before final action. I thought that my friends on the Republican side were taking credit for the insertion of this amendment in the bill. I thought it was this amendment that they had fought so valiantly for in the consideration of the bill in the House. Certainly it was not a Democratic pen that said the President of the United States would have to do this. The Democrats of the House and Senate have complete and implicit confidence in the President of the United States without that amendment. That amendment came here in order to still the fears that our Republican friends would stir up in the hearts of industry. It provides that there shall be hearings, interested people shall have an opportunity to present their views, and that before concluding the President shall seek advice and information from certain activities of the Government, and further, "from such other sources as he may deem proper." When the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] says that nothing of this kind has ever been written into law, I refer him to section 336 of the tariff act, which compels the President to act upon the conclusions of the Tariff Commission before he exercises the power of lowering or increasing the tariff.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. VINSON] has expired.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. COOPER].

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, the time has now come for the final passage of the bill H.R. 8687, which is really the capstone in the recovery program of our great President of the United States. Some 22 hours were consumed in general debate on this measure when it passed the House. Certainly, no good purpose can be served by further discussion of the measure at this time. It has come back to the House in substantially the same form as it originally passed this body.

The purpose of this measure can be stated in a sentence, and that is that it confers upon the President of the United States certain broad discretionary authority insofar as the regulation of our international trade is concerned, which compares with the same type of discretionary authority that has been vested in him with reference to our domestic affairs in this country. The measure, as it comes back to us, contains a number of clarifying amendments, all of which, in the opinion of those connected with the administration, strengthen the measure. I feel that there is more real hope for the American people in this measure than any measure that has been thus far passed as a part of the recovery program of our present administration. [Applause.]

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question in my motion to concur in the Senate amendments.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON] to concur in the Senate amendments.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. JENKINS of Ohio) there were ayes 154 and noes 53.

So the motion was agreed to.

On motion by Mr. DOUGHTON, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to was laid on the table.

APPROPRIATION FOR EMERGENCY CONSTRUCTION OF PUBLIC HIGHWAYS

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 8781) to increase employment by authorizing an appropriation to provide for emergency construction of public highways and related projects, and to amend the Federal Aid Road Act, approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTWRIGHT]? After a pause. The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. CARTWRIGHT, WARREN, WHITTINGTON, TURPIN, and KELLY of Pennsylvania.

MEETING OF COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Mr. RUFFIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be permitted to sit during the session of the House for the remainder of this week.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

PULASKI MEMORIAL DAY—GEN. CASIMIR PULASKI, GEN. THADDEUS KOSCIUSKO, AND OTHER HEROES

Mr. SADOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. SADOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, it is with a great deal of pleasure that I cast my vote in favor of Joint Resolution No. 36, authorizing the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11, 1934, General Pulaski Memorial Day. I am proud of the fact that there was not a dissenting vote.

With the passage of this resolution the President will call upon the officials of the Government to display the flag of the United States on all the Government buildings and will invite the people of the United States to observe the day in schools, halls, and churches, with appropriate ceremonies, commemorating the death of Gen. Casimir Pulaski, the Polish patriot who fought and died for the cause of American independence.

Well representing Polish nobility, Pulaski is often referred to as "Count Pulaski" in historical works. He was born in Podolia, Poland, at a time when that nation was undergoing a severe internal political battle. With rapacious neighbors beginning to conspire against the freedom of this people, the boy Pulaski was consumed with an early desire to ward off danger, and evinced a keen interest in military affairs at a very young age. Long before he reached his majority, Pulaski joined the guard of Duke Charles, and thus gained a rigorous and practical experience in the art of warfare.

In 1769 he joined his father, Joseph Pulaski, in what was termed "The Confederation of Bar", this confederation being a conjointure of Polish noblemen, each one of whom pledged his time, his fortune, and his life to the salvation of Poland. Casimir Pulaski and his brother, Francis, became the active leaders in the movement. The older leaders were soon dispersed, some going abroad; others were confined in dungeons. Pulaski's father was one of those confined in a dungeon prison, where he later died.

But despite this, Casimir carried on, and at the head of a small force of cavalry he performed heroic feats. With his brother he became a constant terror to the Russians, who were trying to capture him. Against overwhelming odds for 4 years this great patriotic organization under this great leader fought to oust the enemies of Poland from his country. But all their efforts proved fruitless. During this time one of General Pulaski's brothers was killed before his eyes, the youngest brother taken into captivity, and many of his countrymen were doomed to misery.

Gen. Casimir Pulaski was the leading spirit of his countrymen in this unequal struggle to preserve the country intact. Although but 25 years of age, he was the acknowledged leader and the hero of his countrymen. Heedless of his foe, which was much more powerful, he fought with a zeal and tenacity that made him renowned as a cavalry leader throughout the Continent of Europe.

General Pulaski not only lost his father and brother in this glorious attempt to save Poland from the first of her ignoble partitions, but his estates were confiscated and he was proscribed by King Stanislaus and had to travel to Turkey. Soon thereafter, in 1772, Count Casimir Pulaski issued his memorable manifesto, in which he said in part:

> I am not astonished that the enemies of my country resolved on her ruin, should direct their shares against those who most firmly resist their impetuosity, and that they should regard as such the brave Poles whom they have sacrificed and who are still repelling their most cruel attacks. * * * My destiny was clear, when at the age of 21, far from yielding to the amusements of youth, I regarded every moment as lost which was not employed in repelling the enemies of my country. * * * I have endeavored to mark my course by an invincible fortitude. Neither the blood of one of my brothers, which was shed by the enemy before my eyes, nor the cruel servitude of another, nor the sad fate of so many of my relations and compatriots has shaken my patriotism. * * *

Perhaps no better insight into the sturdy character of Pulaski, who is revered both in Europe and America, could be given than the above excerpt from his manifesto. He traveled to Turkey, but, repelled with the feeble notions of liberty entertained by the Sultan, he journeyed on to Marseilles, France, and from there to Paris. It was in the French Capital that he made the acquaintance of Benjamin Franklin and young America's struggle for independence. Benjamin Franklin, writing from Paris to General Washington on May 29, 1777, said:

> Count Pulaski, of Poland, an officer famous throughout Europe for his bravery and conduct in defense of the liberties of his country against the three great invading powers of Russia, Austria, and Prussia, will have the honor of delivering this into your excellency's hands.

General Pulaski landed in America the middle of July 1777, and after presenting his letters to Washington and Congress, waited for Congress to take action. In the meantime Washington's army passed through the streets of Philadelphia. Spurred by the sight of marching soldiers, Pulaski, restless and eager to aid our cause, decided not to wait for his commission, but to follow the army as a volunteer. In Europe a member of the nobility, an officer of distinguished prestige, in America a private in the ranks. Such was Pulaski. Not self, but service, was his life's motto.

The night of September 8, 1777, Washington assembled a council of war to decide which position the army should take in defense of Philadelphia. The upland, across the brook of Brandywine, was chosen. The army moved to this position at dawn. The enemy's attack was expected on the 11th, and about 9 o'clock of that day the red uniforms appeared. The battle started. The vanguard, under General Maxwell, retreated under heavy pressure. The rest of the army was stretched out lengthwise for a considerable distance along the brook. The right wing was under the command of General Sullivan, and the left wing, to the south, was under the command of General Armstrong.

General Wayne and General Proctor commanded the cannon and the artillery. Washington remained with the reserve, which was commanded by General Greene, and Pulaski was stationed by the side of Washington.

Upon the withdrawal of General Maxwell the British kept up fire, but did not attempt crossing the creek. Washington was about ready to strike a blow at the enemy, but first wanted to be convinced that the opponents' main forces were not circumventing him for an attack at the rear. To that end a detachment was sent out to explore the region. About 2 o'clock an orderly dispatched the news that the enemy could not be seen on any of the roads on the opposite side of the creek. An order of attack was about to be issued when a man in a cart was noticed waving his hat and striving to reach headquarters. The man turned out to be Squire Cheney, with the startling news that the main forces of the enemy has crossed the Brandywine to the north and were fast approaching the Army's rear.

Washington immediately directed the division of Sullivan, together with the brigades of Conway, Stirling, and Stephans to meet the enemy. They hurriedly arrayed themselves for battle, just as the British were spied on the road. Thereupon the British vanguard showed itself on the plain. The American artillery opened fire. Hessian riflemen were playing havoc with the American front ranks. At the same time a column of infantry rushed to the upland occupied by the Americans. The center was holding up under the bombardment but both wings were fleeing. The enemy then concentrated on the center which soon wavered. Chaos reigned.

At this juncture Pulaski secured Washington's permission to use his bodyguard, some 30 horse, and launched a furious attack at the pursuers. With great skill he wedged into the side of the pursuing column. Swinging their sabers from left to right, this small detachment brought confusion to the ranks of the enemy. The pursuit was momentarily checked. Pulaski's forces took shelter with General Greene's army, and together they held the enemy while the rear of the American Army retreated to Dillworth. There the road narrowed and the Americans gained a vantage point where they could withstand the onslaught of the enemy. Thus Washington's Army was saved.

Within 2 months after his arrival, on September 15, 1777, Congress elected Pulaski "commander of the horse, with the rank of brigadier."

General Washington's letter to Congress recommending the appointment of Pulaski read as follows:

> This gentleman has been, like us, engaged in defending the liberty and independence of his country and has sacrificed his fortune and his zeal for these objects. He derives from hence a title to our respect that ought to operate in his favor as far as the good of the service will permit.

Shortly afterward, Washington's army was saved from an almost inevitable destruction at Warren Tavern, near Philadelphia, only by the warcraft of Pulaski. He also engaged in the Battle of Germantown. On the day of the Battle of Germantown he was sorely disappointed and mortified. There were but four regiments of cavalry raised and not one of them completed. Three of them only, such as they were, had joined General Washington's Army, and on the day of the battle, guards were furnished out of those regiments to attend on the Commander in Chief and on other generals. This was a matter of deep regret and bitter chagrin.

When General Washington had taken his winter quarters at Valley Forge, the cavalry were sent over into New Jersey on account of forage and for other service on that side of the Delaware. Pulaski made his headquarters in Trenton.

Weary of the lapse in activity subsequent to these previous battles and dampened by the pettiness of the command under which he was stationed, as well as the tardy tactics of Congress in carrying out his suggestions for the improvement of the infantry, Pulaski expressed a wish to return to Europe. Washington persuaded him to remain, however.

In March 1778 he asked permission from General Washington and Congress to organize an independent corps, later to be known throughout the Colonies as the "Polish Legion." In equipping it he is said to have spent $50,000 of his own funds. These horsemen, among other arms, bore the famous Polish lances, a new weapon on this continent. Rated as the most expert horseman in the American cavalry, his service in leading and inspiring the cavalry was of inestimable value. From the time Pulaski took command it became a notable weapon of offense and defense. It is entirely possible that without it the cause of independence would not have been won.

Then followed the Battle of Charleston, S.C., when the city was sieged by 900 British troops from General Prevost's army. Although not altogether successful in his assault, Pulaski held the city 2 days until the arrival of reinforcements.

Probably Pulaski's most distinguished service was rendered in the siege of Savannah, Ga., although this move was made contrary to the sound advice of Pulaski who pled a delay of a number of days due to their unpreparedness. Pulaski was here made commander of the entire cavalry, both French and American. During the battle their scheme failed. The French became entangled and their Admiral D'Esaing was wounded. Chaos resulted in the ranks. Hoping to rally the men and regain order, Pulaski rushed into the thick of the battle. Leading his men in a desperate charge, he received a wound in his right thigh and was carried from the field of battle fatally wounded. Pulaski died 2 days later while on board the brig Wasp, leaving Savannah Harbor on the way to Charleston. According to his friend and companion in arms, Capt. Paul Bentalou, he was buried at sea, and funeral services were held afterward in the city of Charleston.

In this manner, at the age of 31 years, ended the life of one of the most active and greatest patriots of his time. A man well born, of handsome physique and liberal education, who abandoned a life of ease and complacency for a career of unnumbered hardships and much bitterness. His was a proud and magnanimous personality, but he had to contend with petty men and the crudeness of a Nation in its genesis. His corps of lancers and light infantry, which were recruited mostly in Baltimore, has since become famous under the name of "Pulaski's Legion." He is known as the founder of the American Cavalry. Pulaski, like Washington, could have chosen the easy course. They were both men of large means. But they recognized the responsibility of wealth and rank.

An equestrian statue, which stands between Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets on Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, commemorates this hero of two hemispheres.

The splendid funeral honors paid by the citizens of Charleston to the memory of the brave Pulaski, the united regrets of the people and of the Army at the loss of an officer no less beloved than he was useful, and the last tribute of respect offered to his memory by Congress have already evinced the sensibilities and gratitude of our Nation. The gallant son of Poland had enthusiastically espoused the cause of America. He served that cause with zeal, ardor, and fidelity.

Pulaski died as he had lived—a hero, but an enemy of kings. Since the time of Pulaski others have come from his native land to mix their blood with the blood of other peoples to make one common country and to build a single destiny. Many Americans of Polish extraction have offered their lives in defense of this country on many battlefields—in the Civil War, the Spanish-American War, and in the great World War. The blood of Pulaski still flows in the blood of his countrymen.

To the memory of Pulaski, William K. Palmer dedicated these beautiful words:

> Columbia! He died for thee
> Cheerfully, and for liberty!
> Honored forever more
> On this Atlantic shore
> Palms for Pulaski! Palms!

GEN. THADDEUS KOSCIUSKO

At this time I also want to say a few words on another Polish hero—one of the greatest heroes of the Revolutionary War—a man deserving the praise of every American citizen for the part he played in the war for our independence—Gen. Thaddeus Kosciusko.

General Kosciusko was born February 12, 1746, of an ancient and noble family at the Chateau Mercez-Wczyzua, a dependence of Sienniewicze, near Brezesc, Litenski. In those days to be the son of a nobleman meant to be born to arms, and at the early age of 18 he was graduated from the cadet college at Warsaw, where he proved to be a brilliant student. He was selected by the King and sent to France for a still higher education. As an engineer he studied first at Versailles and then Paris, afterward going to Brest and other ports. Kosciusko also visited England. After 7 years spent in study abroad, he returned to Poland to receive his commission as a captain and was placed in charge of the fortifications and restorations at Kracow.

Early in 1776, when he was on duty near the castle of Somowice, in a manor of that name belonging to a rich nobleman, he fell deeply in love with the daughter, Louise. The haughty parents rejected with scorn this poor nobleman, and an elopement was the consequence. The lovers had escaped in the night and were well on their way to a distant town, where they planned to be married, when the father with his armed soldiers overtook them. A combat ensued, Kosciusko defended himself and his lady love with lion-hearted courage, but one against so many could not prevail. He sank wounded to the ground and was left for dead by the father, who carried his daughter off in triumph. When Kosciusko awoke to consciousness all that he found of his beloved was a handkerchief stained with his blood. Forty years later when he died, his body was found covered with grievous wounds, and that handkerchief was found next to his heart where it had rested during the struggle of our Revolution, during the glorious triumphs in battles for his country's life, during his second visit to America, and during his long years of exile in France.

After the loss of his fiancee, he resigned his commission in the Polish Army. He pledged his share of his parental estates as security for the loan which enabled him to journey to Paris. Here the news of the fight of the Colonies for independence kindled his imagination, and he determined to go to the aid of America—a Polish knight errant in the cause of liberty. He obtained a letter from Benjamin Franklin and journeyed to America, where he sought the camp of Washington. General Washington was at once taken by his dash and placed him on his staff as an aide. On learning that he had had a scientific education, General Washington commissioned him Chief Engineer on October 18, 1776, with the pay of $60 per month and the rank of colonel. In the spring of 1777 he joined the northern army where his ability as an engineer was of invaluable use in the campaign against Burgoyne. His fortifications at Van Schaick and elsewhere, his able judgment in the choice of battle grounds, contributed much to the skillful retreats and firm stands of the Continental Army before Burgoyne's rash advance. He was ordered by General Gates to erect fortifications in the defense of Saratoga, and this task was accomplished with great brilliancy and speed. For a long time the defense of the Hudson had been of paramount importance; the brief respite gained by the defeat of Burgoyne rendered this a favorable moment to make it impregnable. West Point was chosen for its commanding position, and its fortification was finally conferred—over the head of the French engineer, Radiere—upon Kosciusko.

General McDougall wrote to General Washington:

Mr. Kosciusko is esteemed to have more practice than Colonel Radiere and his manner of treating the people is more acceptable than that of the latter.

The map of West Point made by Major Villefanche at the time shows 11 forts at that strategic position, but how many of them were built by Kosciusko is difficult to say. He probably had the direction of all of them. He gave so much satisfaction to the people at West Point that General Parsons and Governor Clinton joined in desiring that he be continued there, and Washington in a dispatch says:

To his care and sedulous appreciation the American people are indebted for the defenses of West Point.

Little is now left of his fortifications, but the monument erected on the elevated parade ground called "Kosciusko's Garden" to his memory by American youth will remain a grateful tribute forever. That America today can regard West Point with pride is, in large measure, due to Kosciusko, who first suggested for a national military school the spot where it now stands.

In September 1778 Kosciusko acted as second to General Gates in a duel fought at Yorktown with General Wilkinson. This duel caused much hard feeling among all concerned and very nearly resulted in a duel between Kosciusko and Col. John Carter, the second of Wilkinson.

In August 1780 Washington offered Kosciusko the appointment of engineer in the army of the south, under General Gates, which he accepted with thanks. But before he could reach there, his old friend had been defeated at Camden and deprived of his command.

General Nathaniel Greene had been appointed as his successor. While awaiting Greene's arrival, Kosciusko spent some time in Virginia among the planters. He saw there the Negroes at close quarters and was brought face to face with the horrors of slavery. It was then that, with his keen susceptibility to every form of human suffering, he acquired that profound sympathy for the American Negro which 17 years later was to dictate his parting testament to the New World. Upon leaving America from his second visit, he gave Jefferson his power of attorney and wrote out the will in which, more than half a century before the Civil War, the Polish patriot advanced the cause of emancipation:

I, Thaddeus Kosciusko, being just in my departure from America, do hereby declare and direct that should I make no other testamentary disposition of my property in the United States, hereby authorize my friend Thomas Jefferson to employ the whole thereof in purchasing Negroes from among his own as any others and giving them liberty in my name, in giving them an education in trades or otherwise, and in having them instructed for their new condition in the duties of morality which may make them good neighbors, good fathers or mothers, husbands or wives, and in their duties as citizens, teaching them to be defenders of their liberty and country and of the good order of society, and in whatsoever may make them happy and useful, and I make the said Thomas Jefferson my executor of this.

T. Kosciusko.

Fifth Day of May 1798.

There was difficulty in putting this testament into effect, as Jefferson was of advanced age at the time of Kosciusko's death. It was never carried out; but in 1826 the legacy went to found the Colored School of Newark, the first educational institute for Negroes in the United States, and which bore Kosciusko's name.

Upon Kosciuszko's death, William K. Palmer wrote the following:

His dust in Poland rests—
His urned heart a shrine!
Poland! He is thy son!
Columbia! Also thine!

Kosciusko was present through the whole campaign of the Carolinas, and was regarded with strong affection and admiration by General Greene. True to his ideals, at the Battle of Eutaw Springs he restrained a carnage which outraged his feelings, and he is said personally to have saved the lives of 50 Englishmen. When the campaign changed to one of guerilla warfare, he fought as a soldier, not as an engineer. At length Charleston fell, and in December 1782 the American Army entered the town in triumphal procession, in which Kosciusko rode with his fellow officers, greeted by the population and cries of "welcome."

Peace soon followed. Kosciusko had fought for 6 years in the American Army. He had become an American landowner by virtue of a grant by Congress. He was elected a member of the Society of the Cincinnati, whose motto, "Omnia reiinquit servare republicam", his own life so perfectly illustrates. General Greene wrote of Kosciusko as follows:

Colonel Kosciusko belonged to the number of my most useful and dearest comrades in arms. I can liken to nothing his zeal in the public service, and in the solution of important problems, nothing could have been more helpful than his judgment, vigilance, and diligence. He was fearless of every danger. He never manifested desires or claims for himself, and never let any opportunity pass of calling attention and recommending the merits of others.

Congress belatedly conferred upon Kosciusko the rank of brigadier general with an acknowledgment of its "high sense of his long, faithful, and meritorious services."

Soon after this Kosciusko returned to Europe with his fast friend, Count Niemcewicz, the Polish poet, who was his college companion, was his aid while in the American Army, was his fellow prisoner in Russia, returned with him to America, and later joined him when an exile in France.

Kosciusko lived quietly on his paternal estate in Poland for the next 4 years, but when in 1788 the Diet authorized the expansion of the Polish Army, his talents were pressed into service of his country and he was commissioned a major general. The Polish constitution passed on May 3, 1791, amidst an outburst of national rejoicing, swept away many of the old abuses. Poland reformed would have been an insurmountable barrier to Russia's designs of conquest. Catherine, seeing this, forced the few nobles she held in her hand to distrust the liberal constitution. In 1792 she declared war on Poland and the Russian Army crossed the frontier. The only Polish General who possessed practical experience of war was Kosciusko.

During the 3 months of desperate fighting Kosciusko figured as one whose bravery and skill time after time preserved the army. Kosciusko's name was covered in glory in the fight at Dubienka, on the banks of the Bug, on July 19, 1792. The Battle of Dubienka was but a week old when the King abandoned himself to the reactionary schemes of Catherine and the Confederation of Targowicz. Kosciusko was made a lieutenant general in recognition of his valor, but the army was ordered to cease hostilities and recalled to Warsaw. Honor forbade the Polish officers to retain commissions in a service that was no longer truly national, but virtually controlled by Catherine and those who were playing into her hands. In his resignation to the King, Kosciusko, in a few laconic words, laid down his command. "Since", his note runs, "the changes in national conditions are contrary to my original oath and convictions, I have the honor to request Your Royal Majesty for the favor of signing my resignation."

When the Russian Army entered Warsaw the Polish Army was reduced to small divisions and scattered throughout the country, thus rendering it powerless. Kosciusko left the country by way of Galicia, but the Austrian Government, alarmed at the popularity of Kosciusko, gave him 12 hours in which to quit the country. He then journeyed to Leipzig and on to France to ask that country's assistance for his beloved Poland. He arrived in France when the European coalition was being formed, and seeing that no help could be obtained from this country, he remained in seclusion during his visit.

When he returned to Leipzig in the summer of 1793 the condition of Poland was lamentable. Secret patriotic societies were being formed by the youth of Poland and Polish delegates journeyed to Leipzig to ask Kosciusko to become the leader of this movement. The great moment of his life had now arrived, and Kosciusko reentered Poland as the champion of her freedom.

On the morning of March 24, 1794, Kosciusko attended Mass in the Capuchin Church, where the priest blessed his sword. At 10 o'clock he walked quietly to the town hall.

Dense throngs had filled the market place. At the head of his soldiers, Kosciusko stood before the crowds on the spot now marked by a memorial tablet. As far as his gaze reached he saw his countrymen and countrywomen with eyes turned up to him as to a deliverer. Many wore his portrait and carried banners with the inscriptions: "Freedom or Death", "For Our Rights and Liberty", and "Vivat Kosciusko."

Drums rolled and the army took the oath of the rising, and then, in a dead silence, Kosciusko stepped forward. With bared head, with eyes lifted to heaven, and his hand resting on his sword, the new dictator of Poland took his oath:

I, Thaddeus Kosciusko, swear in the sight of God to the whole Polish Nation that I will use the power intrusted to me for the personal oppression of none, but for the defense of the boundaries, the regaining of the independence of the Nation, and the firm establishment of freedom. So help me God and the innocent passion of His Son.

He ordered the act of the rising to be read. This act was in part founded upon Kosciusko's remembrance of the American Declaration of Independence. For the first time in Poland, thousands of nobles and peasants side by side signed their adherence to the act. The levy of the military forces, the arrangements for the taxation, and the necessary business of the rising were at once commenced, and Kosciusko spent the rest of the day in these affairs and in his correspondence. On the same day he sent out four proclamations: 1 to the Army, 1 to the citizens, 1 to the Polish clergy, and 1 to the women of Poland. He begged for men, weapons, horses, and provisions for the national army. His appeals soon found response. On the 1st of April he left Kracow at the head of a small army to take the field against the Russians, who were about to attack General Madalinski.

On April 4, 1794, 3 days later, the famous Battle of Raclawice was fought. This great victory over Russia was won by the peasants who, armed with scythes, Kosciusko at their head, swept like a hurricane upon the Russians, carrying all before them. Upon the battlefield, before all the army, he flung off his uniform and donned, in honor of his peasant soldiers, their dress, the sukmana, which henceforth he always wore. The moral effect of this victory was enormous and enabled Kosciusko to realize his dream of an army of the people.

Although Kosciusko had to raise an army, secure money, ammunition, provisions, and horses, he neglected nothing that would insure the success of the rising. Shortly he came forward with his civil reforms. He abolished serfdom, he requested churches and convents to contribute all silver not absolutely necessary for their services to the national treasury, he begged the loyalty of the Greek Orthodox, and enlisted the aid of the Jews. He governed single-handed until May of that year.

The nation, the King, were in his power, but he remained always a simple soldier. Instead of decorations for conspicuous service, he offered rings, snuff boxes, and watches. But this did not last.

On the 7th of June Kosciusko was confronted by the Russian army, to whose assistance the Prussian forces unexpectedly arrived in the night. The overwhelming numbers of the enemy and their superior machines of war carried the day against the Poles. Kosciusko's horse was shot from under him and he himself was wounded. The Poles fought with desperate valor; but retreat was ordered by Kosciusko. The Poles retreated in perfect order while the provisional government of Poland negotiated with France, Austria, and the Porte. But every diplomatic means failed. After this defeat and the defeat of the Poles at Kracow, Kosciusko pushed on to Warsaw. The Russian and Prussian armies advanced on Warsaw. On the 13th of July 1794, the Russian and Prussian armies were seen from the walls of the city. Kosciusko's army numbered 26,000, of which only 16,000 were regulars, while the enemy totaled 41,000 regulars and 235 cannon. Day after day the Poles fought in defense of their city.

During the time of the siege Kosciusko never removed his clothes. His very presence seemed to inspire the soldiers and the civilians alike. Finally the armies of the enemy were no longer seen before the city he had saved. There was no public triumph but Masses were sung in every church in the city.

The triumph, however, was but temporary. The Prussians soon returned. Russia sent a new and powerful army, and Austria also invaded the country. Kosciusko, fighting desperately against Russia and Prussia, had no army to send against this third enemy. The days of the rising were now numbered.

On the 10th of October 1794 the Battle of Maciejowice was fought. For hours the enemy was kept at bay, but superiority in numbers and skill proved irresistible. In the hottest part of the engagement Kosciusko had three horses killed under him. Mounting again, and at the head of his principal officers, he made a grand charge into the midst of the enemy. Again his horse was killed, and most of his officers; others were taken prisoners. At last, exhausted and bleeding, he was wounded by the lance of a Cossack. The great man lay senseless among the dead. Finally he was recognized despite the plainness of his uniform. He was still breathing. His name even now commanded respect. The Cossacks made a litter of their lances and carried him to the general, who ordered that his wounds be dressed and that he be treated with the respect his distinguished position merited.

As soon as he could be carried he was ordered by the tigress Catherine to be brought to St. Petersburg, where she condemned him to prison for the rest of his days. He was confined in a dungeon in the castle "Gregory-Orloff", where he remained 2 years as a state prisoner and until the death of Catherine on November 6, 1796. Her son, Paul, then set him free with the words, "I have come to restore your liberty. I have always pitied your fate, but during my mother's rule I could do nothing to help you."

Kosciusko requested, that if he were released, that all the prisoners scattered in Russia and Siberia also be given their release, and this was granted by Paul, who, in turn, required him and the leading Poles to take an oath of allegiance to himself.

While Kosciusko had been in prison the Third Partition was carried out by Russia, Austria, and Prussia. Poland had ceased to exist as an independent state.

Kosciusko's wounds were still open and unhealed when he was set free. He at once started to England. The whole of London made haste to visit him and he found himself a great hero. He was loaded with presents by the ladies, all of which he returned to the donors. With gaping wounds, unable to walk, and with a mind ill at ease, he did not care for or enjoy the festivities of the great and gay. After staying in England a week he began his journey to America on June 18, 1797. Two months were taken in the journey before his arrival in Philadelphia—his second visit to America. He wrote General Washington of his arrival and, Washington, from Mount Vernon, replied, congratulating him on his safe arrival and welcoming him to the land "whose liberties you have been instrumental in establishing." Although invited by Washington to visit him at Mount Vernon, Kosciusko was never able to accept this invitation.

He traveled from Philadelphia to New Brunswick and from there to New York, where he visited General Gates at Rose Hill. Before leaving New York he received from Congress a grant of 500 acres in recognition of his military services. This property was located on the extreme western border of the United States military lands, the site of the present city of Columbus, Ohio. Kosciusko, whose convalescence was slow, spent nearly all of his time reclining on a sofa, sketching and painting in water colors and India ink. After his visit with General Gates he returned to Philadelphia, where he often saw Thomas Jefferson. Jefferson wrote to General Gates:

I see Kosciusko often. He is as pure a son of liberty as I have ever known, and of that liberty which is to go to all, not only to the few and rich alone.

After receiving a package of letters from France some time in March 1798, Kosciusko made arrangements to sail suddenly for Europe. He gave no explanation for the suddenness of his return. By the end of June of that year Kosciusko reached Paris. His arrival centered upon him the gaze of the whole world. Sympathy for himself and the Polish cause he heard expressed on all sides. At the news of his return the Polish legions awakened to renewed life. In 1800 Kosciusko wrote his Maneuvers of the Horse Artillery, which was sent to America, where it was translated and published. A copy of this was presented to Thomas Jefferson.

About this period Kosciusko became acquainted with a Swiss family by the name of Zeltner, and he moved to their home, at Berville, near Fontainbleau. In 1806 Napoleon, from Berlin, requested the services of Kosciusko as leader of the revolting Poles, but Kosciusko, with little faith in Napoleon, refused this command.

During 1814 Kosciusko communicated with Czar Alexander I frequently in Paris on the independence of Poland, and in a personal interview this was promised to the general.

Alexander stated that with a little patience this would be accomplished. The question of Poland was also before the Congress of Vienna as one of the most pressing problems of the stability of Europe. Kosciusko journeyed there to discuss this with the Czar, but he derived little satisfaction. In May 1815 Russia, Austria, and Prussia signed an agreement for a new partition of Poland. The Czar had betrayed Kosciusko's confidence. Kosciusko refused all offers of office and honor in the newly partitioned Poland. He chose a voluntary exile with his friend Zeltner, former Landvogt of Lugano, who was the Ambassador of Switzerland to the French Republic.

While France was under the banners of a republic many Poles served in the army in Italy. They found in the Casa Di Loretto the sword of Sobieski, the lion-hearted King of Poland, who had saved Christendom from the invasion of the Turks at the great Battle of Vienna, and sent it to Kosciusko as the only man living worthy of such an inheritance.

On October 17, 1817, a voluntary exile in Switzerland, Thaddeus Kosciusko died. The eighteenth century was prolific in great men, but in the long list there were no other two whose characters excited so much admiration, whose deeds called forth such eloquent eulogies from philanthropists, scholars, and statesmen in every country, as were accorded to Kosciusko and Washington. Even in his exile Kosciusko was faithful to Poland—her purest and the greatest of her Poles. And his greatness was the greatest in that it was not his own personal greatness alone—it was the greatness of Poland. There was in Europe no man whose fame was more brilliant, whose patriotism was purer, and whose character for fierce bravery, gentle acts, and virtuous conduct throughout his life was more unsullied, than Thaddeus Kosciusko.

Kosciusko, though honored mostly for his heroic deeds in war, should nevertheless be as greatly honored for his other attributes. He was generous to a fault and never turned a beggar down. In fact, what little money he had in this world was given away to the poor and needy. While living with the Zeltners, Kosciusko rode every day long distances into the Jura Mountains to hunt up cases of charity among the poor peasantry. He never passed a poor man without stopping to give him a few cents, the lowest he ever gave, as he usually gave one or two dollars. His horse soon became used to his master's ways and stopped every time he saw a poor man. On one occasion he sent young Zeltner to carry a message and told him to ride his horse. Young Zeltner soon found that he could not get the horse past a poor man until he had opened his purse and before he got home he found himself entirely out of cash. Kosciusko lived an exemplary life and was one of the strongest characters in history.

An artist of no little ability, the Aquatint, printed in colors, of Thomas Jefferson, is considered one of the finest portraits of Jefferson.

The letter of Kosciusko to Count Segar shows his great love for his country:

When the Polish Nation called me to defend the integrity, the independence, the dignity, the glory, and the liberty of the country, she knew well that I was not the last Pole and that with my death on the battlefield or elsewhere Poland could not, must not, end. All that the Poles have done since then in the glorious Polish legions and all that they will still do in the future to gain back their country sufficiently proves that albeit we, the devoted soldiers of that country, are mortal, Poland is immortal.

Kosciusko's life and record is that of the greatness of the truly great. His deeds will live forever, not only in the hearts of his own countrymen but also in the hearts of every American who loves his country, for the great part Kosciusko played in our fight for independence.

OTHER HEROES

At this time it is well to point out that Kosciusko and Pulaski were not the only Poles who took part in America's struggle for freedom in the Revolutionary War. There was Col. Michael Kowacz, Lieutenant Colonel Botzen, Maj. John Jolereski, Capt. Joseph Baldeski, M. Kotkowski, Litowski, Maciej Rogowski, John Zielinski, John Kwiryn Mieszkowski, Lts. August Krystyn, George Elholm, Michael Grabowski, George Uzdowski—Navy, Capt. Felix Miklasiewicz, and Maurice Bieniowski, Jerzmanowski, Krassowski, and Tarlecki, who also served as officers. Besides these Poles there were a great many who served as privates in the Continental Army.

Daniel Liczko, a naval lieutenant in Holland's Navy, and an early settler, was a Pole. The Poles worked with the Hollanders as farmers, laborers, and merchants, and through their conscientious efforts, added to the wealth of this colony. Peter Stuyvesant, the famous Governor of New Holland, knowing well the qualities and virtues of the Poles, in 1659 brought in as many as possible, settling them around Fort Orange.

They were loyal and fought for the defense of New Holland from the attacks of the English. Dr. Alexander Carol Kurcjiusz (Kurtius) founded the first high school in New York; in 1659 he founded an academy in New Amsterdam. It was a Pole who founded and conducted the first high school in the largest city of America.

Olbracht Zaborowski, a Polish nobleman, settled in New Amsterdam in 1662. He later became the owner of a vast acreage of land along the Passaic River. He became well versed in the Indian language and acted as a sort of judge in the disputes between the white settlers and the Indians, and later he became one of the first judges in New Jersey. This is one of the best known and most famous families in America. As years went by the name gradually changed from Zaborowski to Zabriskie. There are many descendants of this famous family living today.

In 1774 Jacob Sadowski helped in surveying the land in the State of Kentucky. Jacob and Joseph Sadowski, with a crew of 40 people, founded the city of Harrodsburg, the oldest city in Kentucky. Jacob Sadowski was the first white man, after the French and the Spaniards, to navigate the Cumberland, Ohio, and Mississippi Rivers to New Orleans in a small rowboat.

Karol Blaszkowicz, a noted surveyor, was the first to map the sea coast of New England. Even today his work is regarded as having been excellently accomplished.

It was Peter Strawnicki, a rich banker in Amsterdam, who gave financial aid to the United States when America was young and its treasury was empty. He was one of the wealthiest men in the country at that time, owning some 5,000,000 acres of land in New York and Pennsylvania.

There were such learned men as Kajetan Wegierski, Juljan Ursyn Niemcewicz, and others. Adam Kurek was the founder of one of the first brass bands in America and wrote many compositions. Juljan Fontana, a noted musician and friend of Frederick Szopen (Chopin), came here as well as the great sculptor, Henry Dmochowski (Sanders), Alexander Sengteller and Alexander Raszewski, steel engravers. Joseph Podbielski, the noted translator of Polish works into English; Paul Sobolewski, poet and journalist; Adam Gurowski, a noted author; Dr. Ludwig Szpaczek, Dr. R. Thomain of New York, Dr. Henry Kolussowski of Washington, all took part in our early colonial life. The Polish clergy were also represented in America. Around 1800 we find Father Kossack, a Jesuit, Father Boniface Krakowski, and Father Francis Dzierozynaski. This was long before there were any Polish parishes established.

In 1854, Rev. Father Leopold Moczygeba brought over 100 families, who, after suffering great privations, finally established a settlement at Panna Marja, Tex. This settlement was so named in honor of the Blessed Virgin Mary. They even brought with them the cross and the bells from the village church in their own country to peal the glory of God in this new land. This is the oldest Polish parish in the United States.

Col. Casimir Gorowski achieved fame as an engineer in Canada and held high offices. He built the first bridge at Niagara Falls. The lands of Louisiana and Utah were surveyed by Joseph Truskolaski; and Capt. Karol Radziminski helped to establish the boundary line between the United States and Mexico.

The first polytechnical school in America was founded by Leopole Boech. Joseph Karge, Arthur Grabowski, and Joseph D'Alfons became the most noted among the professors of America's institutions of learning. Maj. Henry Glowacki, of Batavia, N.Y., became one of the outstanding attorneys. Dr. Felix Wierzbicki gained renown as the author of the first historical book written on California.

Much could be said about the other Polish heroes of the Revolutionary War, but it is best expressed by the four lines dedicated to them by John A. Joyce, the American poet:

> Polish heroes in their might
> Fought in freedom's holy fight,
> Brilliant as the stars at night
> To maintain the pure and right.

There were about 400 Polish settlers in the colony established by Capt. John Smith. Of this number but 60 survived through the severe winters of 1609 and 1610. These Poles were honest and industrious. Captain Smith said at that time: "The English settlers never knew what a day's work was except the Dutchmen and the Poles." The overseers of the colonies praised the Poles highly for their industry and tried to get more of them to come to Virginia.

When the right of vote and the right of voice in the first Parliament in America, the House of Burgesses at Jamestown, was denied the Poles by English overseers, they unanimously protested and a strike followed. The authorities were finally forced to yield, and the court records of the Virginia Co. of London, under the date of July 31, 1619, show the following decision:

> Upon some disputes of the Polonians resident of Virginia it was now agreed that they shall be enfranchised and made as free as any inhabitant there whatsoever. And because of their skill in making pitch and tar and soap ashes, shall not die with them, it is agreed that some young men shall be put unto them to learn their skill and knowledge therein for the benefit of the country thereafter.

So even before the arrival of the Mayflower the Poles had raised the question of political liberty and equality and were successful in the first fight for this cause on American soil.

The Poles likewise aided in bringing Texas into the Union in the revolution of the Texans against Mexico. Many Poles were killed in the memorable massacre of Colonel Fannin's detachment at Goliad, Tex. One of them, the valiant Piotrowicz, commanded the artillery section. In the War with Mexico, 1846 to 1848, the Poles again played a prominent part. Those who are particularly well known as the result of this war are Capt. Karol Radziminski, Capt. Napoleon Koscialkowski, Sgt. Ignatius Szumowski, and many others.

In the early colonial days the Colonies were settled mostly by the English. The Poles were very few in number at that time; however, we find very many interesting figures of Polish extraction taking an active part in developing America and giving to this new land of liberty the art, culture, and learning that they had brought with them from their native country, Poland. The Americans of Polish extraction may well be proud of their history in this new Nation.

Poland was known as the "bulwark of Christianity in Europe" and has often been called "The Knight Among Nations." America was yet unknown and undiscovered when Poland had universities and led the world in education, science, and culture. No country in Europe enjoyed such freedom as existed in Poland. They had freedom of religion and freedom of speech. It was for this reason that the neighbors of Poland became frightened and set out deliberately to destroy that nation. They were afraid that it would lead the subjects in their own countries to revolution and to demand the same measure of freedom and liberty that the citizens of Poland enjoyed. Very few Poles came to America previous to the partition of Poland. They were contented and satisfied to live in their native country.

However, we find some of them settled in America even long before the arrival of the Mayflower. The English Government, in cooperation with the Virginia Co. of London, brought over many skilled Polish workers for the express purpose of manufacturing ship necessities for export to England, and glass and trinkets for Indian trade.

During the Civil War about 4,000 Poles served in the Union Army and about 1,000 in the Confederate Army. At this time there were about 30,000 Poles in America. Gen. W. Krzyzanowski organized one of the first companies of militia in Washington. Maj. A. Raszewski formed two companies of the Thirty-first Infantry in the State of New York. They wore Polish uniforms at first and were known as the "Polish Legion." In Cincinnati the Poles, under Maj. Maurycy Weselewski, also formed their own company in the Twenty-eighth Infantry of Ohio. The greatest number of Poles who saw service in the Union Army came from the States of New York, Missouri, Ohio, Illinois, and Wisconsin.

The Poles were the first to give up their lives in the Civil War. Thaddeus Strawinski, an 18-year-old student, was killed in the attack on Fort Sumter. The first Union officer to fall on the field of battle was Capt. Konstanty Biedowski on May 10, 1861. Gen. Wlodzimierz Krzyzanowski is without doubt the most famous of the Poles who took part in this bloody war. He rose from the ranks to the position of general. He took part in the Battles of Cross Key, June 8, 1862; Bull Run, 1862; Chancellorsville, May 1863. In July 1863 he was at Gettysburg. He also was instrumental in stopping Gen. Stonewall Jackson. He fought many victorious battles in Tennessee but was always humane and kind in his treatment of Confederate prisoners and toward the people in the Confederate territory where he was in charge.

In 1867, after the United States Government had purchased Alaska from Russia, General Krzyzanowski was appointed as the first Governor. He held Federal positions in Panama and New York. He died in New York January 31, 1887. The men under his command idolized him. As a token of love and respect they presented him with a beautiful sword with the following inscription thereon:

> In deep respect to our beloved commander, from the officers and men of the Second Brigade, Third Division, Third Army Corps.

One of the best-known Union Cavalry leaders was Joseph Karge. He took part in many brilliant military exploits. Congress gave him the rank of brigadier general in recognition of his leadership and bravery. After the war he went back to the profession of teaching and held the chair of professor of languages and foreign literature at Princeton University. He became one of the best-known educators of his time. He died December 27, 1892.

Other famous Poles who took part in the Civil War were Capt. Alexander Bielaski, adjutant to General McClernand, Capt. Joseph Gloskowski, Lt. Julius S. Krzywoszynski, who received honorable mention for meritorious service and gallant conduct. Lt. Wladyslaw A. Wrotnowski, engineer, was killed in action at Fort Hudson in Louisiana, May 27,

1863. Captain W. Kossak, engineer, was a member of General Grant's staff. General Sherman said of him that his plan of the battle of Shiloh was—

The best I have ever seen and his fortifications during the siege of Corinth, Miss., were excellent.

Col. Emil Shoening, Lt. Col. George Sokalski, Capt. Louis Zychlinski, Capt. Teofil Michalowski, Capt. Edmund Zalinski (later professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology), Capt. Peter Kiolbassa, Capt. Maurice Kraszynski, Capt. Edmund Hulanicki, Capt. Thaddeus C. Hulanicki, Capt. Edward Antoniewski, Capt. Edward Radniecki, Lt. Karol Borowski, and Adjutant Wladyslaw Leski may be found among the famous Union officers.

The Poles also gave meritorious service to the Confederacy. Among them were Gen. Kasper Tochman, Col. Vincent Sulakowski, who was also a great engineer, Lt. Col. Hipolit Oladowski, Capt. Peter K. Stankiewicz, Capt. Leon Jastrzembski, Col. Arthur Grabowski, who later became mayor of Baton Rouge, La.

The Poles fought valiantly and bravely in the Civil War. Many of them were veterans who had seen service in the Polish uprisings in their battles for the liberty of Poland. There were about 165 Polish officers in the Union Army and about 30 in the Confederate Army. In the Spanish-American War about 85,000 Poles saw service in the United States Army. This represented about 10 percent of the total Polish population in the United States.

The war records contain numerous Polish names cited for bravery and merit. Of the first 100,000 soldiers who enlisted and volunteered for service in the World War, 40,000 were Poles. The total number of Poles serving in the United States Army during this great conflict amounted to 300,000. The first American soldier to lay down his life was Sgt. John J. Czajka, killed in action November 13, 1917, while leading his patrol of men of Company A, Twenty-sixth Infantry. Two Poles, one a Chicagoan and the other from Milwaukee, captured the first German prisoner taken by the American Army. Sgt. Michael Ellis (Eliasz) captured single-handed 10 machine guns and 60 prisoners.

Besides those who saw service in the American Army, 25,000 Poles enlisted as volunteers in the Polish Army of France. Throughout the history of America the Poles have always proved themselves to be faithful and loyal to the extreme. Although they number only 4 percent of the total population of the United States, the casualty list contains 12 percent of American soldiers of Polish extraction who gave their lives for America on the fields of France.

Without any doubt it was this great loyalty and patriotism of the Poles to the United States which caused this country, and that great Democratic leader, President Woodrow Wilson, to include in his 14 points the mandate that Poland shall be free and independent, with access to the sea.

There are today over 5,000,000 hard-working people of Polish extraction contributing by their efficient and conscientious labor to the development of national resources and to the progress of industry and to the growth of America. They are not rich in money. Their richness lies in their industriousness, loyalty, and that great love of the United States of America that will be an everlasting monument in the hearts of their children after the riches of others will be gone and forgotten.

WHAT WE HAVE ACCOMPLISHED

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, as the present session of Congress is drawing to a close, I desire to take this opportunity to make a brief survey of the progress which has been accomplished by this administration and this Congress. At a later date I hope to comment upon what our future progress should be.

When this administration came into office the country lay stunned, sickened by a prolonged deflation which had adversely affected purchasing power, the value of farms, homes and other real estate, all classes of business, transportation, securities, and even the well-being of government itself. We were beneath a heavy cloud of gloom and despair; confidence had been destroyed; banks were closed; business was prostrate. What has been done to meet this complex crisis must be judged by results. It is not my belief that national recovery is as yet complete, but one has only to look back to those days of March 1933 and compare them with the present situation to realize that under the wise leadership of our President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, a remarkable progress toward national recovery has been made.

The whole program of the administration and of Congress has been one of relief. Relief which will lead to a cure. It is in that light that all our legislation, our expenditures of money and our delegation of powers to the President must be looked upon. We had to start with the relief of banks through the Emergency Banking Act. We followed with legislation to better the credit conditions of farmers and home owners and we have, through direct grants of money, through Public Works allotments, and through loans to industries, endeavored and to a great measure succeeded in putting back to work, millions of unemployed, whose wages in turn have been spent for consumption goods. Thus we have "primed the pump" of both industry and agriculture.

The two outstanding legislative accomplishments of the first session of Congress were the National Industrial Recovery Act and the Agricultural Adjustment Act, both of which I voted for and the latter of which, as a member of the House Committee on Agriculture, I had a share in framing. Among agricultural measures, this Congress has also provided for the reorganization of the Farm Credit Administration, consolidating all branches into one system; has put crop-production associations on a permanent basis and has vastly extended the Federal farm loan system. The aim of the Congress has been to increase prices of farm products and while the administration has not yet reached its goal of parity with 1926 prices, no one can deny that there has been a very considerable increase in the income of the average American farmer.

We must not forget that Congress has also turned its attention to other matters. It settled a 15-year-old dispute of what to do with Muscle Shoals by creating the Tennessee Valley Authority. The beneficial effects which will follow the successful operation of this Authority in curbing the greed of the power trusts have scarcely been shown as yet, but they are bound to be an ultimate result of this legislation. We passed a bill guaranteeing bank deposits in the first session of this Congress. In this session we have passed a bill making available money to buy up assets of closed banks in order to pay off depositors. In the first session we passed a bill which will hereafter prevent the issue of fraudulent securities. In this session of Congress we have passed a bill which will hereafter regulate stock exchanges throughout the country and prevent the victimization of thousands of Americans who have heretofore been led like lambs to the slaughter. We created the Home Owners' Loan Corporation with the purpose of relieving distressed home owners. Because of the necessity of building this organization from the ground up, there was some little delay in getting its operations started, but already thousands of cases of distressed home owners have been relieved. In this session we have passed the Housing Act, designed to insure loans for construction of homes and for renovation of old houses. We have also authorized the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make direct loans to small industries, as well as to the banks and railroads which could previously borrow from it. In every line of industry and agriculture we have endeavored to give relief and aid and to place the protecting arm of the Government over those who have been suffering and cannot otherwise obtain adequate financial help.

When we come to direct relief, this Congress will be remembered, first, for its appropriation of $500,000,000 under the Wagner-Lewis Act; for the money spent in creating the Civilian Conservation Corps, which has been doing wonderful work in reforestation; and for the Civil Works Administration, which was established when these direct relief appropriations seemed insufficient to carry the unemployed through last winter. This second session of Congress has appropriated an additional $950,000,000 to carry on these works until industry and agriculture together can absorb the total number of our unemployed. Yet you must note that all this activity which has taken place and all the benefits which have accrued to the country have been accomplished with an expenditure far less than President Roosevelt believed possible in January of this year. The deficit at the end of this fiscal year will be several billion dollars less than the President predicted when he opened this session of Congress. This in itself is indicative of recovery in the Nation's finances and in the Nation's business activities outside of the Government.

Perhaps it will more clearly emphasize the benefits that the country is receiving from the congressional program if I briefly refer to expenditures which have been made in my own congressional district, the Third California. For instance, benefit payments to wheat farmers under the A.A.A. received there amount to $142,248.99, divided among five counties, as follows:

Napa	$3,460.71
Sacramento	61,820.95
San Joaquin	32,811.62
Solono	17,320.91
Yolo	26,834.80
Total	142,248.99

It may also be appropriate here to point out the Public Works allocations and other Government financial aid that I have been able to secure for the Third District. The history of this is interesting. The first session of this Congress reappropriated all unallocated appropriations back into the Treasury and instead intrusted a lump sum of $3,300,000,000 to the Public Work Administration to be used where most needed for relief of unemployment. It was therefore necessary for each Representative to be alert and vigilant in order to secure even the reassignment of appropriations previously made but canceled by this act of Congress. I secured the following outright appropriations for the Third District:

Sacramento River flood control	$2,000,000
Deepening of San Joaquin River Channel	990,000
New causeway connecting Vallejo and Mare Island	980,000
Magazines, Mare Island Navy Yard	325,000
Extension of Dike No. 12, Mare Island	250,000
Improvement of power plant, Mare Island	150,000
Dredging and filling new quay wall, Mare Island Navy Yard	125,000
Distributing and service lines, Mare Island Navy Yard	180,700
Miscellaneous shore work, Mare Island	523,943
Post-office building at Lodi, Calif	63,750
Post-office building at Woodland, Calif	69,900
Total	5,663,293

In addition to the above outright appropriations, I have obtained the following allocations of money from Public Works Administration for projects in the Third District on the basis of 30-percent outright grant and 70-percent loan, to be repaid by the district affected:

American River Flood Control District	$195,000
Grant Union High School, North Sacramento	164,000
Stockton Port District, cotton compress	230,000
Stockton Port District, dredging and dock improvements	224,000
Sacramento County buildings	49,000
Total	862,000

I have obtained the following Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans for public bodies in the Third District for the purpose of refinancing their obligations. While these obligations must be repaid to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the effect of the loans is to materially reduce overhead expenses and in many cases reduce the personal obligations of the public districts involved:

Reclamation District No. 1000	$1,609,000
Naglee-Burk Irrigation District	675,000
Carmichael Irrigation District	47,500
Banta-Carbone Irrigation District	600,000
Total	2,931,500

Other applications are pending on which I hope to have favorable action taken and, in common with all the members of the California delegation, I am hoping that a way will be found to approve and provide money for a start on the construction of the Central Valley water project.

In addition to the shore work for Mare Island listed above, I have been able to secure both construction and repair work, which has kept the yard busy at all times. Two destroyers have already been assigned the yard and work is in progress on them. The fleet will return to the Pacific waters in November and the yard will again enjoy a maximum load of repair work. Additional construction work for the yard has been promised me, so that the citizens of Vallejo may look forward to relatively less unemployment than any navy yard in the United States.

While the Army has not fared as well as the Navy in Public Works allotments, I have constantly kept before the War Department the availability of Mather Field in the development of our national air-force program. A definite place has been given to Mather Field in the plans of the Air Force. This Air Force development plan has not yet been approved by the War Department or authorized by Congress chiefly because a board headed by Newton D. Baker has been appointed to consider the whole question of a long-time program for the Army, and aviation in particular. I am satisfied that a period of development will follow the present inactivity, and when that time comes I expect to be instrumental in rehabilitating Mather Field. I have touched upon these allocations of the public funds primarily because they show to what an extent our district has benefited from the Roosevelt administration and the activities of Congress. Throughout this Congress I have been a consistent supporter of the administration and I intend to continue that support if I am returned to Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I have not time here, nor do I think it the place to speak of all of my personal activities. The Members of this House know well enough the important place that the Committee on Agriculture holds and the tremendous amount of work which that committee has done in the past two sessions. As a member of that committee my time has been fully occupied. Through that membership I was able to pass the act amending the Perishable Commodities Act, strengthening it in the interest of producers and honest distributors of fruits and vegetables. I was also able to obtain in the agricultural appropriation bill the restoration of funds for predatory animal and rodent control, which is of great importance to our sheep and poultry raisers, and to secure an increase in the funds for Mexican border quarantine control, a matter of vast importance to California in keeping out insect pests. I was on the subcommittee that finally drafted the sugar bill, and was the original author of the amendment to the Bankhead bill which protected the California cotton industry by providing that no State should be limited to an allotment of less than 200,000 bales of cotton. I must pass over numerous other activities.

Most of the accomplishments of a Congressman do not appear in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. It is what he is able to accomplish in his committee or in appearing before others that is of the most benefit to his constituents, for instance: As a result of my appearance before the Committee on Ways and Means, the bill taxing wines contains a schedule which I proposed, making a saving of 6 cents a gallon on dry wines and a larger saving on sweet wines under the amount proposed by the Treasury Department. This means hundreds of thousands of dollars to the wine manufacturers and grape growers of California, whose production last year was in excess of 50,000,000 gallons. In these and other ways which it is not appropriate to record here I have faithfully performed my duties as the Representative of the Third District. I have kept the promise I made to my constituents, that if they elected me I would work as hard for them after election as I was working then to secure election. When I return to California and am asked what I have done, I can point with satisfaction to my record, for which no friend of mine is required to apologize.

It is true that our work is not complete, but we have kept our pledge to try to alleviate human misery by putting the unemployed to work, even though we had to use the entire resources of the United States in our war on unemployment. The people of the United States intend to see that the gains we have made shall not be lost, that the work we have started shall be completed, and they know that it can only be completed by the return of loyal supporters of the administration, who will have the confidence of our President, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

TARIFF AND THE MATCH INDUSTRY IN THE UNITED STATES

Mr. BEEDY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD on the tariff bill.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. BEEDY. Mr. Speaker, let me cite a concrete illustration of the apprehension which established business feels for its future when this bill giving the President absolute power to fix tariff rates and conclude trade agreements has been passed.

In my district we have a match factory. It is located in the little town of Dixfield and gives employment to a great many people. Little thinking that any such power would ever be vested in one man as is proposed in the pending bill, this company enlarged its plant last year and gave employment to additional men and women. Already this industry feels keenly the competition from abroad. The present tariff law is entirely inadequate to protect the American market against the cheap-match imports from abroad. Last year, for example, one-half the entire American supply of matches came from abroad. Almost 2,900,000 gross of boxed matches came into this country from Japan in 1933.

The question now confronting the match industry is, Will the President or somebody delegated by him to decide the issue decide that the match industry in America is an inefficient industry? Will the President follow the policy advocated by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] and cut down the tariff rate on matches upon the theory that this will restore international trade? If so, the match factories of America must close. Tens of thousands of people will be thrown out of employment. The match factory in my district could no longer carry on.

I am thankful that the Senate asserted enough legislative independence to amend the House bill by providing that reasonable public notice of an intention to negotiate a foreign-trade agreement shall be given in order that interested persons may have an opportunity to present their views and that before concluding such an agreement "the President shall seek information and advice with respect thereto from the United States Tariff Commission", and so forth. This is an amendment along the lines of sanity. But I still protest placing the power to decree life or death for any American industry in any one person. No one man under our form of Government ought to have the power to close out industry in this country and open our markets wide to foreign imports at the cost of ruined industries and increased unemployment in this country.

On the 14th of May last the Portland Evening Express, of Portland, Maine, published a brief editorial presenting what appeared to me to be most astonishing figures and facts. I shall insert this editorial in my remarks in order that other Members of this House and the public may be fully informed as to the dangers under this bill which confront the American match industry. This industry is but typical of hundreds of others which must go if the theory of the Democratic Party is to be substantiated in practice.

The United States Tariff Commission has been expostulated with by the American Match Institute, representing the American match industry, which feels itself aggrieved by the Commission's indifference toward appeals for relief from destructive foreign competition, principally Japanese.

The institute points out that one-half of the American supply of matches last year came from abroad. That means more when the figures are translated into their equivalent—13 trainloads of 50 cars each, each car laden with 300,000 gross of boxes of matches. Of these, says the institute, 2,892,299 gross of boxes of matches were imported in 1933 from Japan. The 10-year average, 1923–32, of Japanese match imports was but 215,300 gross per annum, the 5-year average, 1928–32, was but 130,000 gross; the 1933 imports were then approximately 1,345 percent greater than the 10-year average and 2,225 per cent greater than the 5-year average.

This is surely an alarming influx of imports from a single Japanese industry, an influx that may, under present rulings and interpretations of the tariff acts, continue to swell until the American match industry is stifled. The match industry, now more than ever hampered by code restrictions, has asked that all importers of matches be licensed and required to file their prices with the code authority; it has asked that an equalization fee be levied so that the selling price may be brought to some sort of comparable level. Its letter to the Tariff Commission says: "We requested nothing more than a fair and reasonable adjustment of an utterly impossible and unsound condition. No other government in the world would long tolerate a similar situation."

This is undoubtedly true. No other government would tolerate a tariff law that should permit an important industry to be crushed. It is all very well to reestablish world trade and to make some sort of basis for foreign-debt payments; but when we permit foreign nations to supply half the matches used in the United States, when we permit a single country like Japan to increase its exports of matches to the United States by 2,225 percent in a single year, it is time to crack down and to do something, not big and noble, but merely fair and equitable, for our American industry. While the Tariff Commission is acting, it might not be a bad plan for consumers to scrutinize carefully the matches they buy to see if those important words, "Made in America", are on the containers.

The Democratic theory is that to promote international-trade recovery we must sacrifice the American market to further importation of cheap foreign goods. Thus, say the Democrats, foreign producers may increase their sales to us and realize more money with which to purchase more merchandise for themselves; a beautiful theory. But under this scheme the destruction of a certain percentage of American industry is certain. Increased payments of American money by American importers for foreign products is also certain. Whether foreign manufacturers will use any of the added moneys thus realized for the repurchase of goods in this country is entirely problematical.

This bill would give new life to the trade of other nations at a sacrifice of the lifeblood of our local industries. It never should become law.

TOBACCO INDUSTRY

Mr. CLARK of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 420, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 420

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H.R. 9690, a bill to place the tobacco-growing industry on a sound financial and economic basis, to prevent unfair competition and practices in the production and marketing of tobacco entering into the channels of interstate and foreign commerce, and for other purposes. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the Chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Agriculture, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from North Carolina yield for a question?

Mr. CLARK of North Carolina. I yield.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, although personally I am very much opposed to the compulsory feature of this legislation, believing it to be unsound and unnecessary, the House has already established the precedent in the case of cotton, and is, therefore, I think, entitled to consider this legislation.

It is not the purpose of the minority to demand any time on the rule. We are perfectly willing that the gentleman should move the previous question and adopt the rule without debate.

Mr. CLARK of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was adopted.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 9690) to place the tobacco-growing industry on a sound financial and economic basis, to prevent unfair competition and practices in the production and marketing of tobacco entering into the channels of interstate and foreign commerce, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H.R. 9690, with Mr. UMSTEAD in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KERR].

Mr. KERR. Mr. Chairman, this bill is offered in the interest of more than 400,000 tobacco growers in the several tobacco-raising States of the Union.

The Committee on Agriculture was impelled to ask for this legislation in order to protect the contract growers of different types of tobacco. We were able to fix a parity price for our tobacco during the last crop year, which price enabled the tobacco growers of the country to receive for their product for the crop year just past more than twice as much as they received the prior crop year. In terms of dollars and cents, the tobacco growers of the country received $109,000,000 more for their crop of tobacco last year than they did in the crop year 1932–33.

In order that the Department of Agriculture could secure this price the tobacco growers had to enter into contracts with the Department whereby they agreed to reduce their acreage and their poundage 30 percent for the crop year of 1933–34. This action was taken to meet the complaint always made in time of low tobacco prices that the tobacco growers of the country were raising too much tobacco.

This contract arrangement has proved satisfactory, but the Department of Agriculture, as well as the contract growers of tobacco, feel that it is absolutely necessary to enact this law in order to protect them in their endeavor to reduce acreage and production and thereby secure a profitable price for their tobacco.

Had I the time, Mr. Chairman, I should like to tell of the value of the tobacco crop to this country. It has enabled us to keep up our exports and to make the balance in favor of American trade for the last 3 or 4 years when all other trade balances had gone down. The tobacco interest is the source of great income to the country. I think my colleagues will be surprised when I tell them that just a few years ago something like 85 percent of the miscellaneous tax receipts of this country were raised from tobacco.

The farmers who have entered into these contracts are apprehensive that, unless the Government protects them in their genuine and earnest endeavor to carry out the reduction program, that prices will be lower and the program destroyed. It is necessary that they be given protection against the tobacco grower who has refused to enter into a contract with the Government to reduce his acreage. If the outside grower is allowed to do as he pleases, he will engage in the production of tobacco to such an extent that it will destroy the program. Invariably at a time of unsatisfactory prices the growers are faced with the statement that they raise too large a crop for domestic consumption and for export; and it is a fact that you can raise too much. The truth is that last year we produced 250,000,000 pounds of flue-cured tobacco in the four Southern States more than the market could use. By keeping production down we hope to be able to absorb this overproduction of last year and so keep our prices profitable to the man who grows the tobacco.

This bill provides for a sales tax on tobacco grown by those who have not entered into a contract with the Government to reduce their acreage or their production. The tax runs from 25 percent to 33⅓ percent of the sale price of the different types of tobacco which come within contract agreements.

This is not a prohibitive bill. This bill does not prohibit any man from growing tobacco. It simply requires a man who has not entered into a contract to reduce his acreage to pay a tax. Further, the bill gives these outside men 60 days within which to enter into contracts with the Department and thus bring themselves within the program and become entitled to the benefits which will flow from proper cooperation of the tobacco farmers. If he does not enter into a contract then he has to pay a sales tax ranging from 25 to 33⅓ percent; but even in such a case he will get more for his tobacco than he would without the reduction program, because of the limited crop to be grown by 90 percent of his neighbors and the other tobacco producers of the country who have sincerely entered into these contracts with the Department.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. I yield to the gentleman from New York?

Mr. WADSWORTH. May I ask the gentleman this question: If the imposition of this sales tax to the extent of 25 or 30 percent is still to leave unprotected the producer who is outside of the contract category, of what avail will be the tax in deterring the extra production of tobacco?

Mr. KERR. Of what avail it will be?

Mr. WADSWORTH. If the man can pay the tax and get more money than he had before, why should he not go on planting and pay the tax?

Mr. KERR. We allow him to come in in 60 days and share with the contract growers. Of course, the price of his tobacco will be less than if he shared with the contract growers.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I can understand that, of course. I might have misunderstood the gentleman. I understood him to say that even the man who paid the 25-percent tax would be better off than he would be were this scheme not in effect at all.

Mr. KERR. Certainly, but by staying out he may bring down the price of all tobacco; because if he stays out and they pyramid the production of tobacco, it would of necessity bring down the price of all tobacco.

Mr. WADSWORTH. If he stays out he pays a 25-percent tax?

Mr. KERR. Yes.

Mr. WADSWORTH. And still he would make money?

Mr. KERR. He would make more than he would if 90 percent of his neighbors had not reduced their crop.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I should be glad to yield the gentleman some of my time to answer questions from this side of the aisle.

Mr. KERR. I shall be glad to answer any questions of my colleagues.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BLANCHARD. If the principle which was applied in the cotton bill is right and the principle of this bill is right, the gentleman would make the statement it is logical to extend the same principle to every basic agricultural commodity produced in this country? Would the gentleman go that far in connection with the advocacy of such legislation?

Mr. KERR. If the facts and circumstances involved in the others are similar to that existing in connection with the production of cotton and tobacco, I should agree with the gentleman.

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. Can the gentleman tell me what percentage of the tobacco growers of the Nation are in favor of this legislation?

Mr. KERR. I tried to make it clear by saying it is safe to assert here, and I boldly assert, that more than 90 percent of the tobacco growers are asking for this legislation.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. Those who are under contract have agreed to restrict their production by 30 percent, as I understand the report. This tax will apply only to these people if they produce over 70 percent?

Mr. KERR. If they overproduce the amount allotted to them, it will apply to them as well as to the man who did not come under the contract.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. If they produce 80 percent, do they pay the tax on the 80 percent or on the 10-percent overproduction?

Mr. KERR. On the 10-percent overproduction.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. The noncontract grower will pay on the entire output?

Mr. KERR. He will pay on the entire amount marketed.

Mr. KLOEB. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. KLOEB. The gentleman makes the statement that 90 percent of the tobacco growers of the country have requested this legislation. By what authority does the gentleman make that statement?

Mr. KERR. By authority of the Agricultural Department, which has investigated this matter and has been in contact with most of the tobacco sections of the country.

Mr. KLOEB. Has there been inquiry made of the northern tobacco growers?

Mr. KERR. I think so.

Mr. KLOEB. If so, what association?

Mr. KERR. I think so, but I cannot tell the gentleman what particular association.

Mr. KLOEB. May I ask the gentleman this further question? The bill under subsection (b) on page 4 exempts Maryland tobacco, and Virginia sun-cured tobacco, and cigar-leaf tobacco. Why does it exempt those tobaccos?

Mr. KERR. Because they do not grow too much of those particular types. Those tobacco growers do not want this protection and they do not grow more than the market demands.

Mr. KLOEB. But will not this bill disrupt the entire market?

Mr. KERR. No. That is a different type of tobacco. The tobacco produced in Maryland and Virginia, as well as the cigar leaf tobacco, is an entirely different kind of tobacco, and the growers of these tobaccos do not want to come under this act. They produce a very small percentage of the total output of tobacco.

Mr. HOPE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. HOPE. This bill proposes to put a tax on tobacco grown in excess of a certain quantity, on the theory, I assume, that otherwise there will be an overproduction of tobacco this year?

Mr. KERR. That is correct. There may always be an overproduction of tobacco and will always be an overproduction if the price of the tobacco gets very high.

Mr. HOPE. Does the gentleman think that without this bill there will be an overproduction this year?

Mr. KERR. Unless this law is passed preventing those who are noncontract growers from raising tobacco, and it will have a tendency to do that, notwithstanding they can grow some tobacco and still get more for it than they would unless their neighbors have gone into the contract, there will in my opinion be overproduction.

Mr. HOPE. Is it not a fact that practically all of the tobacco has been planted at the present time?

Mr. KERR. No; it is not. Probably half of the crop has been planted at the present time.

Mr. HOPE. As I understand, in planting tobacco you have to buy your plants and make arrangements to get them in advance of planting time. Does not the gentleman think that everyone who intends to grow tobacco this year has already made his arrangements for planting?

Mr. KERR. I do not think so, because from my own experience I have seen tobacco planted in my country, down in North Carolina, late in June; and when there was a good season, they would make the finest type of tobacco.

Mr. HOPE. The gentleman thinks that if we pass this bill, even at this late date, it will result in a decrease in the amount of tobacco planted?

Mr. KERR. I am confident of it and I think this feeling is shared by all the tobacco growers who are endeavoring to carry out the program of this country to decrease production and thereby vouchsafe unto the producers fair prices for their products.

Mr. HOPE. I have been informed that the Department of Agriculture has advised growers they will not be required to make as large a reduction in their planting as was originally contemplated, which would indicate that the Department does not believe there will be an overproduction of tobacco.

Mr. KERR. It looked at one time in the South, that on account of an intense drought they would not be able to plant what they had contracted to plant and therefore the right was extended to them to plant a little more tobacco, but it has turned out that our crop has been planted and we have met the requirements of the law and of our contract with the Government and that we have down there all the tobacco we ought to plant.

Mr. HOPE. They did raise the limit, did they not?

Mr. KERR. They raised the limit, but that limit was not taken advantage of by the growers of flue-cured tobacco of Georgia and South Carolina, who had already planted their tobacco, or by the North Carolina growers of tobacco.

Mr. HOPE. May I ask the gentleman what is going to be the effect of the exemption of every grower who produces less than 2,000 pounds? Will not this largely nullify the effect of the bill?

Mr. KERR. The gentleman, I am sure, wants me to frankly answer that question. I agree with the gentleman, and I may state that that was put in the bill by the committee. The committee considered this bill a long time, as the gentleman knows, and considered it very conscientiously, and that provision was put in by the committee. I do not think it should have gone in.

Mr. STUDLEY and Mr. DONDERO rose.

Mr. KERR. I yield first to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. STUDLEY. Does this bill apply to the producers of tobacco in New York as well as to other producers of tobacco?

Mr. KERR. I think it does.

Mr. STUDLEY. There is a large tract in New York, especially around Syracuse, that produces this tobacco.

Mr. KERR. Yes; I think those gentlemen want to come under the contract.

Mr. DONDERO. What is the percentage of acreage the gentleman expects to reduce by this bill?

Mr. KERR. We expect to reduce 30 percent of our acreage, based on an acreage basis of 3 years, 1931–33.

Mr. DONDERO. It is the percentage of reduction I wanted to know particularly.

Mr. KERR. Not only that, but the Department afterward thought that the reduction of acreage would not reduce the crop sufficiently, and so they went back and horizontally cut the poundage of our tobacco.

Mr. HAINES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. I yield.

Mr. HAINES. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman is mistaken when he says this applies to tobacco grown in New England and in New York State, because that is the cigar type of leaf tobacco.

Mr. KERR. If that is true, I thank the gentleman for the correction. I know it does apply to Connecticut tobacco and the Connecticut growers have come under this plan.

Mr. HAINES. That is a cigar type of tobacco.

Mr. KERR. Yes; that is exclusively the cigar type of tobacco.

Mr. HAINES. Then it does not come under the bill?

Mr. KERR. Yes; I think it comes under the bill.

Mr. HAINES. And they have signed up to reduce their acreage?

Mr. KERR. Yes; they have signed up to reduce their acreage.

Mr. HAINES. I may say to the gentleman I have been in the cigar business for more than a quarter of a century and I am somewhat familiar with the tobacco business. There is a need for the cigar type of tobacco of certain grades, and I think the committee has gone entirely wrong in this matter of trying to reduce the acreage of cigar types of tobacco.

Mr. KERR. The committee and the Department of Agriculture did not undertake to make it apply to any type of tobacco unless those growers wished it to so apply.

Mr. HAINES. On page 4 of the bill, beginning with line 6, you exempt cigar leaf tobacco, and this certainly would include Connecticut tobacco.

Mr. KERR. My impression is that the tobacco raised in the Connecticut Valley is included.

Mr. HAINES. I think the committee is entirely wrong.

Mr. DREWRY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. I yield.

Mr. DREWRY. What method does the Secretary of Agriculture use to determine when he shall issue the proclamation about the tax?

Mr. KERR. When at least 66⅔ percent of the growers of that particular type wish it.

Mr. DREWRY. How does the Secretary get at the wishes of these growers? Do they write him letters, or what is the method pursued?

Mr. KERR. The Secretary is supposed to canvass the situation.

Mr. DREWRY. In other words, the Secretary makes a survey?

Mr. KERR. Yes.

Mr. ARENS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. I yield.

Mr. ARENS. Is not the purpose of the bill to tax those who have not contracted previously 30 percent in order to induce them to come under the contract?

Mr. KERR. Yes.

Mr. ARENS. And if they come under the contract, they will reduce their acreage and thereby prevent overproduction?

Mr. KERR. Yes.

Mr. ARENS. And by doing that, you raise the price of all tobacco, and those who do not consent will get as much for their tobacco after they pay the tax.

Mr. KERR. They will get more perhaps.

Mr. ARENS. The gentleman says that 90 percent have asked for this legislation.

Mr. KERR. That is the estimate after a careful survey by the Agricultural Department.

Mr. ARENS. The gentleman says that 90 percent have signed the contract and there are some who have not signed and have not asked for it.

Mr. KERR. Those not signing the contract have not asked for it, but 90 percent of the tobacco growers have come in under it.

Mr. ARENS. Have 90 percent of the growers signed it?

Mr. KERR. One hundred percent in some localities.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. I yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. Could not the same object be accomplished by plowing under every third row of tobacco?

Mr. KERR. That would be a destruction of property, and we do not want to do it in that way.

Mr. BAKEWELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. I yield.

Mr. BAKEWELL. The gentleman says that 90 percent have agreed.

Mr. KERR. Ninety percent of the tobacco growers. This is the estimate of the Agriculture Department.

Mr. BAKEWELL. A similar statement was made when the Bankhead cotton bill was up, but it turned out that it meant 90 percent of the replies were favorable. Now, I should like to know whether this means 90 percent of all the growers or 90 percent of the replies.

Mr. KERR. The estimate is 90 percent of all the growers. I think I can safely make that statement in regard to my own State of North Carolina.

Mr. DOWELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. I yield.

Mr. DOWELL. Is it not a fact that to a large extent the price of tobacco is fixed by the Tobacco Trust?

Mr. KERR. Well, I am not prepared to say that. When the crop is small, they pay a great deal more for it.

Mr. DOWELL. Is it not true that last year there was a suit in the Supreme Court of the United States involving the salaries of the president of the American Tobacco Co. of $2,500,000, and also there was involved the salary of five vice presidents from half a million to a million and a half dollars each. Of course, those unreasonable salaries ought not to be paid in any company, and the ones who are receiving those salaries are receiving them for the purpose of buying tobacco as cheaply as possible and selling it as high as it can be sold, and that constitutes the basis for their salaries.

Mr. KERR. I do not know on what basis they fix the salaries.

Mr. DOWELL. The salaries and the additional bonus are based on the value of their services, and the value of their services is the value to the stockholders of the company. Is there anything that can be done in this bill to affect the exorbitant salaries that are being paid out of the profits derived from the producers of tobacco?

Mr. KERR. I think if we can control production they will have to pay more for their tobacco, and they will not receive such large salaries.

Mr. CARPENTER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. Yes.

Mr. CARPENTER of Kansas. Is this bill similar to and drawn along the same lines as the Bankhead cotton control bill?

Mr. KERR. It is; but we think it is an improvement over the Bankhead cotton bill.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MARSHALL].

Mr. MARSHALL. Mr. Chairman, I think we all remember that only a few weeks ago we passed the Bankhead Compulsory Control Cotton Act. I opposed that bill on the floor and stated that I was basing my opposition to the principles involved in the bill, and that I would oppose the bill just as strenuously even though it affected products in my district. I rise today, more than for any other reason, to reiterate that statement, because the bill before us affects a product of my district. I represent a district that raises a lot of tobacco, two counties in particular. I also live adjoining districts where the chief crop is tobacco. I feel I have been a fairly good prophet, because in the few remarks that I made against the Bankhead control bill I predicted it was the initial step toward a complete regimentation of the farming industry. We have had to wait only a few weeks to see step no. 2. I do not know how much longer we will have to wait until it is completed.

I was back in Ohio the other day and happened to pick up one of the leading newspapers in southwestern Ohio, a district in the heart of the tobacco-growing industry. It was a daily paper published in Dayton, Ohio. That paper carried an editorial commenting upon the failure of the Bankhead cotton control bill in these few weeks since it has been a law. The paper commented upon it from the angle that it had increased unemployment in the South. I do not know whether the paper exaggerated it or not, and I am giving it just as stated in the editorial, wherein it said that one-third of the share croppers and laborers in the cotton fields in the South were now on the highways hunting jobs.

I was not satisfied there was a universal demand from the cotton producers for the cotton-control bill, and I am not at all convinced that there is a 90-percent demand for this bill, as my colleague from North Carolina [Mr. KERR] just said. I have taken it upon myself to investigate that particular point, and I am informed by each and every Congressman who represents that large tobacco section in southwestern Ohio that not a single letter has come to him from a single tobacco producer in that vast section which produces thousands and thousands of acres of tobacco each year. Where they get the 90-percent demand I do not know, but it does not come from Ohio.

As to the necessity for the bill, if the voluntary control under which we have been operating has benefited the tobacco growers in the last year to the extent that this report indicates, that is, that they received $109,000,000 more than they did for the 1933 crop, we ought to be satisfied with the present program. It is also said in the report that was prepared on the bill:

> There appears to be no opposition to the measure and there has been filed with the committee a large petition from growers of every locality which raises tobacco, requesting the immediate passage of this measure.

I desire to inform the Members of this House that there was considerable opposition in the Agricultural Committee to this bill. The vote for its report was 13 to 5. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KERR] said that the Agricultural Department had endorsed the measure. The only endorsement made by the Agricultural Department of this measure is contained in the printed hearings, on page 8, where there is a letter signed by Mr. Henry Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, and I say to you that it is a very weak endorsement if you can consider it an endorsement at all. One paragraph reads:

> My opinion of the proposed legislation is that it does not seek to compel involuntary compliance, but does permit noncooperatives to grow tobacco, and taxes them in an amount which would result in bringing their net income to an amount which they probably would have received in the absence of any adjustment program. If this can be accomplished in a practical manner, I can see no objection to some such emergency measure.

I do not take that letter to be an endorsement of this program, and I do differ violently with the first part of the paragraph, in which he says that it does not seek to compel involuntary compliance. It does not do anything else. The purpose of the bill, and the only purpose of the bill, is to compel those people who have not joined in the voluntary cooperative plan to join. In other words, it lays a prohibitive tax of 25 percent upon them if they do not join, and I say to you that it will work as a compulsory measure. I have the same objection to it from that standpoint that I had to the Bankhead cotton-control bill.

Mr. KLOEB. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARSHALL. Yes.

Mr. KLOEB. The gentleman has read the provision in subsection (b), on page 4, exempting Maryland tobacco, Virginia sun-cured tobacco, and cigar leaf tobacco from the operations of this act. Most of the tobacco grown in the territory described by the gentleman in the Maumee Valley in Ohio is filler cigar tobacco, is it not?

Mr. MARSHALL. I am not an expert, although the first dollar that I ever made in the world was raising an acre of tobacco.

Mr. KLOEB. I think it is true. That is cigar filler tobacco, and therefore would come within the provisions of this act.

Mr. MARSHALL. In answer to the question I will say that in committee I raised the question about not having received any information in regard to this bill, and it was alleged there that the section I represent and which the gentleman represents was not affected by this bill. I called the Department of Agriculture and contacted the Tobacco Section, and they told me that 98 percent of the farmers down there had signed the voluntary cooperative contract and would be affected by this bill; that they are affected by it.

Mr. KLOEB. I think clearly they are.

Mr. MARSHALL. Yes; I think so.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MARSHALL. I yield.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I want to ask what proportion the Maryland and Virginia sun-cured and leaf tobacco bears to the total?

Mr. KLOEB. Oh; I do not have that information.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARSHALL. I yield.

Mr. WOODRUFF. I wish to call to the attention of the gentleman a provision on page 7 commencing in line 6, the proviso, which reads as follows:

> That no such person shall be entitled to receive warrants unless he shall agree with the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate in the reduction programs of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe.

My friend from Ohio is thoroughly familiar with the several attempts made by the Department, through proposed legislation, to complete the enslavement of the American farmer. The last attempt openly made is now before the Senate of the United States in what is known as the "Smith bill." That particular bill proposes to give to the Secretary of Agriculture complete control of every acre of the farm and every product the farmer raises, whether it is a basic commodity or otherwise, provided always the farmer receives in any degree whatsoever from any source whatsoever, for the growing of any crop whatsoever, one penny in payment from the Treasury of the United States in the way of benefits under the Agricultural Adjustment Act. I want to call to the attention of the people interested in this bill the fact that while this particular provision has not as yet been written into any law of this land, and that no farmers of the country have as yet been completely enslaved, if this provision is left in the bill, every tobacco grower who receives one penny's benefit from this bill will be completely enslaved. He will be completely at the mercy of every whim, every desire of the baron on the hill, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the tobacco growers of the country will have been thrown back to the conditions of feudalism.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MARSHALL] has expired.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. MARSHALL. I am sorry that a bill of such vast importance as this, which affects such a vast number of the citizens of the United States is brought up today without any knowledge or any warning that such measure would come before the House at this time, giving no one any particular opportunity, giving the Membership no opportunity to advise themselves in regard to the measure.

Mr. FULMER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARSHALL. I yield.

Mr. FULMER. I would like to make a statement in reply to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOODRUFF]. The bill to which he has referred has not passed the Senate.

Mr. WOODRUFF. And I am happy to agree with the gentleman, and to say that I hope it never will pass that body.

Mr. FULMER. I wish to say to my friend that if the bill does pass, whether this bill passes or fails to pass would not have anything to do with the bill to which the gentleman referred.

Mr. WOODRUFF. No; but I am calling attention to the provision in this bill which enslaves any farmer in this country who accepts any of the benefits granted by the bill.

Mr. FULMER. The farmers will only be required to comply with the voluntary program. Any farmer who does not want to come in does not have to come in.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Will the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MARSHALL] yield so that I may again read the proviso?

Mr. MARSHALL. If I may have a little more time, I will be glad to yield.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUFF. I do not have the floor.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. Will the gentleman read the entire paragraph?

Mr. WOODRUFF. No. I want to read the proviso, because that is what I am discussing.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. But the proviso certainly refers to further warrants under paragraph (b) on page 6.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Yes; I know all about that, but I want to call to the attention of the gentleman from Kentucky exactly what this proviso is.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MARSHALL] has again expired.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman from Ohio 3 additional minutes.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARSHALL. I yield.

Mr. WOODRUFF. The proviso states:

That no such person shall be entitled to receive warrants unless he shall agree with the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate in the reduction programs of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe.

I wish to remind the House that under the Agricultural Adjustment Act the Secretary of Agriculture can issue any regulation he sees fit, and it has all the power of law. If we are to judge as to what will be done by what the Agricultural Department has by proposed legislation asked the power to do, we can properly assume that if that particular provision is retained in this law it will enslave every tobacco grower in this country who even hopes to get any benefit from this bill.

Mr. FULMER. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. MARSHALL. Yes; I yield.

Mr. FULMER. I just want to state to the gentleman that 90 percent of the tobacco growers are now cooperating with the Department of Agriculture under the voluntary program, and the other 5 or 10 percent can come in and get the benefits or remain out, and this bill would not have anything to do with the folks who remain on the outside.

Mr. MARSHALL. My answer to that is that they can remain out if they want to pay a penalty of 25 percent. In other words, if they sell $1,000 worth of tobacco and give $250 to the Government, they can stay out; but I say they cannot stay out and survive.

It is an absolute control of tobacco production; and I want to warn the members of the majority party in this House that although they have been pasing legislation without giving it consideration, passing it merely because it was advocated by certain administration leaders, the time is coming when you will find that the agricultural interests of the country will feel they are getting deeper and deeper into the mire each day; that while they have been willing to go along with voluntary cooperation, they will not stand for compulsory control and complete regimentation of the agriculture of this country. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BOILEAU].

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that when all the tobacco growers of the country want a certain piece of legislation there must be some benefits for them in the legislation they advocate.

Various representatives of the growers and producers of tobacco appeared before the subcommittee. Not a single witness came before this committee who did not state that this bill, if enacted into law, would be of material help to the tobacco growers of the Nation. With this almost unanimity of opinion it seems to me we should scrutinize any suggestion that this bill might be detrimental to the interests of the farmer. The farmers and those who speak for the farmers all seem to believe it will be helpful to them; and unless someone can point out why it would not be beneficial to the farmers, it seems to me that the bill should have the unanimous support of the membership of the House.

Bear in mind that at the present time about 90 percent of the producers of tobacco in this Nation are cooperating in the voluntary plan submitted by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. About 90 percent of the tobacco farmers of this Nation are now receiving benefits from the A.A.A. It is because of the fact they believe in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration program that they have voluntarily signed up to cooperate and to receive the benefits that flow from that cooperation.

Mr. Chairman, I call attention to the further fact that this bill will not be applicable to the producers of those types of tobacco not embraced in the voluntary plan. So this bill will not alter the situation of a person who lives in a section of the country where there is no tobacco-reduction program in force. The bill provides that only such types of tobacco as are now or may hereafter be embraced in the contracts or agreements with producers shall be subject to the provisions of the bill. There are certain types of tobacco which are not now covered by these voluntary agreements. It must be borne in mind that there are a large number of types of tobacco. I believe I can safely say there are between seventy and a hundred different types of tobacco produced in this country. These various types of tobacco, however, are classified into seven or eight broader classifications. So there are about seven distinct classifications of tobacco produced in this country. Unless the producers of these various types of tobacco signify their desire to have an agreement or a contract put into effect for their benefit they will not receive cash benefits and will not be subject to this tax or to the provisions of the bill.

This bill is not in any sense a compulsory control of production of tobacco. It does contain a provision, however, that those farmers who desire to cooperate voluntarily shall receive the benefits of this act and it does provide that those who do not voluntarily cooperate shall not have the benefits of the higher price brought about as a result of the cooperation of the 90 percent of the growers who have signed these contracts. Ninety percent of the producers have agreed to reduce their production approximately 30 percent; they will have their income reduced to this extent; this is the price they are paying in cooperation. It has been proved that higher prices have resulted because of this cooperation. So it is only fair that those who do not reduce their production should have their income reduced by a proportionate amount, and for this reason the tax is levied to put the noncooperator in just the same position as the fellow who signs up. In other words, you, a farmer, living on one side of the road, not desiring to cooperate, can plant all the tobacco you want, but you will have to pay your price, and that price is the tax of 30 percent, that being the average figure when it is all worked out. In the case of the farmer across the road from you who wants to cooperate, who wants to help in this great movement, who says, "I will do my share not by paying taxes but by reducing my production 30 percent", can operate on that basis. Both of you will get about the same for your tobacco whether you cooperate voluntarily or subject yourself to the tax proposed in this bill.

Mr. MARSHALL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOILEAU. I yield.

Mr. MARSHALL. I take it from the gentleman's statement he believes that because some 90 percent of the farmers have signed these contracts that that is an indication they are for the program and endorse it and want it. Does not the gentleman know that quite the reverse is true? That is absolutely the case in my section of Ohio; the reverse of that proposition is true. The fact of the matter is they are joining up because they have to. For instance, if you are a hog producer and do not join, you do not get anything for your hogs; you do not get anything that the Government is paying.

As a concrete illustration, I know a farmer who took a hog down to market weighing over 500 pounds.

Mr. BOILEAU. I do not want hogs confused with tobacco.

Mr. MARSHALL. It is the same principle. The farmer got $3.25 for his 550-pound hog after he paid a processing tax of $12. That man did not join up because he wanted to. In other words, under the theory of that bill, for the man who does not join the price on hogs has been lowered to the extent he gets nothing.

Mr. BOILEAU. In addition to the price he gets at the market for his hog he gets a cash benefit or consideration from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration on account of his reduction, but I do not want to get into a discussion of that program. I want to stick to the tobacco proposition.

May I say that I have the highest regard for the gentleman's opinion. I know he is honest, capable, and sincere in any proposition he puts forth, but he and I just simply have different views with reference to what this bill will do toward helping the farmers. We have the Agricultural Adjustment Administration program. The gentleman from Ohio stated that although 90 percent of the tobacco growers had signed up in connection with this proposition that was no indication that the same 90 percent felt this was the right way to handle the proposition.

I cannot agree with the proposition. I will say that 90 percent are taking their licking in a reduction of production. They are taking their licking by producing less and it is only fair if they are taking that licking in order to increase the price of tobacco that the chiseler across the street should not get an advantage by doing the very thing that the cooperators are trying to prevent.

Mr. MARSHALL. If they are taking a licking we ought to get rid of the law entirely.

Mr. BOILEAU. They are paying their penalty and in return they are getting a better price, and they are getting other concessions. They are doing their share. They are cooperating as far as they are able in getting better prices for all the tobacco producers, and they should not be penalized for the benefit of those who refuse to cooperate and the chiselers who desire to continue to grow all the tobacco they can and continue to demoralize the tobacco market by creating an oversupply.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FULMER. I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN].

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, in the very brief time allotted to a discussion of this measure it is impossible to go into all its details, and I do not intend to do so at this stage of the proceedings.

The district represented by my colleague from North Carolina, Mr. KERR, and the district represented by myself are the largest raisers of flue-cured or bright-leaf tobacco in the world. In those two districts are located the two largest bright-leaf tobacco markets. It is a commodity and a subject that we are, of course, deeply interested in, because it is the main cash crop of a large section of the State of North Carolina, and in the production of which thousands of our farmers are engaged.

Tobacco is one of the most costly crops that is produced anywhere. Last year just before the season opened on about September 1, with the farmers expecting a price somewhere near a parity, as sought by the bills that we passed last year, after the warehouses had been open for about 10 days we were astounded to find that the crop was selling for around 8 cents or 9 cents a pound, which was certainly considerably less than the cost of production. The farmers of North Carolina are a conservative people, and they met this unexpected situation with a courage and resolution and determination that excited the admiration and deep interest of all of our people. In their distress they turned to the established agencies of their Government—there was no threat of violence, and they declared that they would act in harmony with a program for their relief.

The Governor of North Carolina, Hon. J. C. B. Ehringhaus, in a bold stroke and without legal authority, issued a proclamation closing up all the warehouses in our State. In this he was supported 100 percent by the warehousemen. This proclamation was quickly followed by a similar one from the Governors of South Carolina and Virginia. We then came on here to Washington—and when I say "we", I mean the Members from tobacco-growing districts from the States affected, the Governor of North Carolina, and representatives of the other Governors and committees of tobacco farmers selected by their own mass meetings. We called upon the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and there presented our case. Not a harsh word was used. It was a solemn, serious gathering that came to Washington to save the tobacco farmer from almost complete destruction. A plan was worked out. We knew that the basis of any plan would call for the reduction of acreage for 1934. A tentative reduction contract was drawn. We were told to go back home, and if the farmers would sign it, then we could look for the maximum relief that might be possible.

Returning home, a great campaign was initiated, and in a few days from 90 to 95 percent of all farmers growing tobacco had signed the reduction contract. A wave of enthusiasm swept the Tobacco Belt, and never before have I seen such an exhibition of cooperation on the part of our farmers. After the sign-up had been successfully completed the Agricultural Adjustment Administration imposed a processing tax on the tobacco companies, and after many heartbreaking delays an agreement was finally entered into with the companies that guaranteed to the grower the parity price promised in the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

Shortly after the warehouses reopened there was a different story to tell. Gloom was dispelled and gave way to joy, and an entirely different attitude and outlook permeated the very atmosphere in the Tobacco Belt. To my mind it has proved up to this time to be the most conspicuous achievement of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Great credit must be given to the sympathetic aid of the Secretary of Agriculture, Hon. Henry A. Wallace; George N. Peek; Chester C. Davis; J. B. Hudson; and to Mr. Hudson's very able and brilliant assistant, Mr. J. Con Lanier, who probably knows as much about the subject as any man in the country.

Now, as the gentleman from Wisconsin has so clearly stated, all this bill seeks to do is to give justice and protection to the 90 or 95 percent who have signed the agreement. They have penalized themselves by signing a contract to reduce their acreage by 30 percent, and the 5 percent who did not sign and cooperate ought not to have the opportunity to destroy the 95 percent. There is a provision in the bill whereby the small farmer who did not sign can be allotted a small acreage if he will cooperate with the program, and for next year it is up to the tobacco growers themselves whether or not they wish the provisions continued.

I admit that legislation of this nature has been far away from the views many of us have heretofore held. I wish that it was not necessary. If it is termed by some as "bad legislation", then our answer is that we justify it on the grounds of a great emergency that threatens destruction to the grower. It is again thrown up to us that it is regimentation; and if it is, then it is a regimentation that is desired and asked for by those who desire to be regimented. When the contract was signed the grower was told he would be protected, and we come now to the Congress and ask that this protection be given them and that the program they themselves have entered into be not destroyed. [Applause.]

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN].

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. Chairman, this measure was designed for the protection of that host of tobacco growers who have signed a contract with the Federal Government for the curtailment of their crops this year, and is being supported by every Representative who is a true friend of the growers affected by it. As the Representative of the largest burley tobacco producing district in the world and the district containing the largest burley tobacco markets in the world, I think I can express the wishes of those who have signed this agreement with the Government, insofar as burley tobacco growers are concerned. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] has just spoken from the standpoint of the producers of bright, or flue-cured, tobacco. I speak for the other principal type that is included in the provisions of this bill.

Tobacco growing is the hardest work known to farm life. In addition to that the production of tobacco extracts more fertility from the soil and depreciates the value of farm land more than the production of any other crop. From the time the seed is put in the plant bed until the consumer buys the finished product the only man who comes in contact with tobacco throughout the entire process of planting, cultivating, harvesting, curing, and marketing—the only man who comes in contact with it directly or indirectly who does not receive his adequate proportion of the consumer's dollar is the man who bends his back in the heat of a broiling sun from early morning until the hour when the mocking bird calls and the fireflies light the evening shadows, and spends practically the entire year in producing, harvesting, and marketing his crop.

I may say to the gentleman from Ohio who just spoke that the type of tobacco produced in the vicinity of Dayton is not affected at all by this bill, and we who represent districts where our people depend on tobacco for a livelihood, for money to pay their taxes and insurance, to buy the necessaries and comforts for their families, and to buy shoes for their children to wear to school, stand unanimously for this legislation.

In Kentucky tobacco is our basic product and the basis of whatever prosperity we may hope to enjoy. Not only the tiller of the soil, but every landowner, merchant, banker, lawyer, doctor—men in every walk of life—depend primarily upon the tobacco crop for whatever prosperity they hope for. It is frequently a forlorn hope.

The Government has a real stake in the tobacco crop. It takes its toll from the product of the tobacco growers' soil and toil in nearly half a billion dollars paid annually into the coffers of the Federal Government. That tax ought to be reduced substantially. Recently two or three hundred of the most substantial and outstanding citizens of Kentucky, most of them from the historic and eminent district of which I am the Representative, came to Washington pleading for a reduction of that unjust tax—the only existing tax on a farm product in America—and made the most magnificent impression any delegation has made during the decade that has elapsed since I entered this House.

I hope that the tax will be reduced—I have introduced a bill to that effect in this Congress as well as in the Seventy-second—but, whether it is or not, this bill will bring relief which the tobacco growers deserve, and if there is any group of farmers on this continent entitled to Government protection that group consists of those who on the hillsides and in the valleys produce the tobacco upon which our Government collects nearly half a billion dollars in revenue.

We in Kentucky who have fought the battle of the tobacco growers for years have been shocked indescribably by the utter folly and asininity of a certain little coterie of demagogues who have sought to place a State tax on cigarettes in addition to the tax of 6 cents a package which the Federal Government already collects. If they had any knowledge of taxation they would know that in those States which have a State tax the annual per capita consumption of cigarettes is less than 50 percent of the per capita consumption in the 48 States of the Union. Their efforts have been puerile and futile. When I think of what they would do to the backbone of Kentucky's citizenry, I feel like quoting Isaiah: "Woe is me; woe is me."

When the Agricultural Adjustment Act was pending, the distinguished Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES], and his capable associates, were exceedingly generous and cordial to those of us who sought an amendment to the act which resulted in increasing the parity price of burley tobacco from 10 cents to 16.3 cents, which added millions of dollars to the bank accounts of the burley tobacco producers.

When the plan was under consideration, my colleague from Kentucky [Mr. VINSON] and I made half a dozen trips to Washington trying to help work out a plan to obtain a satisfactory price and the best possible plan for the benefit of the tobacco growers and the hoped-for prosperity of Kentucky citizens. We did not get all for which we hoped and asked, but I went home upon the request of outstanding citizens and tobacco farmers, after the Agricultural Adjustment Administration gave me one of the first contracts that came from the printing press and launched the campaign for the sign-up of the acreage and poundage reduction to prevent a continuance and inevitable increase of the surplus which is hanging like a sword of Damocles over the head of every producer of Kentucky's principal money crop. I continued in that campaign until the necessity of my return to this session of Congress.

More than 90 percent of the burley growers signed that agreement to cooperate with the Government in this great movement designed by this great administration to assist in their emancipation from economic bondage.

I believe that practically 100 percent of that more than 90 percent of burley tobacco growers are heart and soul in favor of this legislation. I have no hesitancy in presuming to speak for them, because I am constantly in close touch with them. They are my friends, correspondents, and associates through years of battling for justice and right for the people in the bluegrass and the highlands who produce the leaf that brings solace to millions of human beings. They need this protection and deserve it. They feel, and as one of them I feel, that we ought to enact this legislation which we believe will make it impossible for the man who refuses to cooperate, the man outside who would not unite in this great movement of this great administration of our great and inspiring President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, for the benefit of the farmers, to milk his neighbor's cow through a crack in the fence.

We have had experience with cooperative movements before. We know how they can spread tobacco territory when they think it will be profitable. They will plant burley in land that is naturally unsuitable for its cultivation.

This administration has promoted a wonderful program of recovery. It has given the American people what they wanted—action. Already we have seen beneficial results; but the burley-tobacco-producing section of Kentucky has received as little benefit as any part of the United States.

We come here and ask you for this relief for the protection of those men and women who are cooperating loyally with the Government in this great beneficent plan.

I stand on a resolution adopted unanimously by a mass meeting of representative growers from all burley-producing States at the Kentucky State Capitol, which I had the honor of addressing during the sign-up campaign, and which resolution is one of a set of resolutions which I had the honor of drafting:

> We pledge ourselves to do our utmost to induce the Agricultural Adjustment Administration to use every legal power at its command to make effective the reduction program, to give support and aid to those growers who participate in the program by signing the reduction agreement, and to protect them against any form of discrimination in favor of those who do not sign, in order that all the financial benefits may go to those who sign the reduction agreements.

Today we present a united front. The representatives of the tobacco-producing sections affected by this bill, interested in this bill, acting unanimously, come to you, our colleagues from other sections of America, and call upon you with whom we have stood when your citizens were in peril, to stand by our people now. Let us enact this bill into law and grant deserved protection to those who have joined in this great cooperative movement of our Government, a protection which we know our people deserve—a protection to the merchants and bankers and business men, to the mothers and fathers and children, to the homes and firesides of thousands who depend, as their fathers before them depended, upon tobacco as their money crop. [Applause.]

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, some question was provoked by the discussion that has been had on this bill thus far and one of the things that is in my mind at the present time is this. There is, apparently, unanimity on the part of the tobacco producers in favor of this bill, and the gentleman from North Carolina talks about 90 percent being for it. I wonder whether the gentleman means 90 percent of all those who signed contracts are in favor of this bill, and if that is the case, what proportion is this 90 percent of the entire number of tobacco producers, because, apparently, all of them have not signed such contracts.

Mr. CHAPMAN. More than 90 percent of the tobacco growers in the sections affected by this legislation have signed and so far as the Burley Belt is concerned, I may say that they are practically unanimous for this legislation.

Mr. DIRKSEN. What is the proportion of the number of signed contracts to the total number of tobacco producers?

Mr. CHAPMAN. More than 90 percent.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Another question which was raised by the gentleman from Wisconsin is the question of compulsion under this bill. It seems to me there is no difference whether you achieve compulsion by indirect means or whether you achieve it directly. I recall the colored man at the front during the war who said, "I do not want to go up there to the front and fight; I have nothing against those Germans"; and the officer said, "Well, we will put you up where the fighting is and you can take your choice."

This seems to be the case here. Under the terms of the bill they do not make you come in, but you are going to pay from 25 to 33 percent if you do not come in. So they achieve compulsion by indirection.

Mr. CHAPMAN. It is not a matter of compulsion; it is a matter of protection for more than 90 percent of the tobacco growers.

Mr. DIRKSEN. There is also a limitation in this bill as to varieties, and I understand that sun-cured tobacco of Virginia, Maryland tobacco, and cigar-leaf tobacco represent a small proportion of all the tobacco raised, and therefore for all practicadl purposes the implication is that this will apply to all the tobacco industry.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I come from a part of the country that for much over 100 years has produced a very considerable amount of tobacco. Last spring business began to pick up and the farmers were moving the crops that they had accumulated for a year or two, and the Department came on, under the A.A.A., and put on a processing tax and stopped the processes of trade.

And the farmers were obliged to let a considerable part of their crop spoil as a result. If we go on with this sort of thing and put more tax on the producers—and every time you have a surplus you put a tax on the producer—the producer is the payer of the tax in the long run, and every time you put the tax on, and there is a surplus, it cannot possibly raise the price. So by this operation you are putting a tax on the producer and raising the price to the consumer a little bit, but the net result is an injury to the producer. There is no possibility of working the farmer out of his economic condition as the result of this sort of thing.

I went over and begged the Secretary of Agriculture not to place a tax in my territory, but it went on, and the result was what I expected.

Mr. BYRNS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. BYRNS. I am sure the gentleman will agree with me that the chief difficulty with the farmer is that he has produced a surplus and our foreign markets have to a certain extent been cut off.

Mr. TABER. No; I do not think that is the chief difficulty. I think the chief difficulty is that by improper economic operations and speculative orgies the channels of trade have been clogged.

Mr. BYRNS. The gentleman knows that for a number of years the farmer's prices have been declining, and that it did not begin with the speculative period—it has been declining for 10 or 12 years. But I want to ask the gentleman this question. The gentleman speaks of the tax which he says will be paid by the producer. If the tax is effective, if it serves to reduce the surplus and increase the price of the product in the hands of the producer, does not the gentleman think it will operate to his advantage, and prove to be a profit to him in the end, and that is the whole purpose of the bill?

Mr. TABER. I do not think it will increase the price to the farmer. I think he will be hurt by this.

Mr. BYRNS. Those who have given the matter study in my section of the country think otherwise.

Mr. TABER. And the farmers in my section think the other way.

Mr. BYRNS. Well, the passage of the bill will demonstrate which is right.

Mr. TABER. I do not believe under any circumstances that the restrictions in the bill will work out.

Mr. BYRNS. I am sure the gentleman will agree with me that it will reduce the surplus and enable the farmer to get a better price for his product. How are you going to reduce the surplus unless you induce the farmer to cut his acreage?

Mr. TABER. By the operation which will create conditions so that the normal consumption can be restored; that is the only way you can successfully do it.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. BANKHEAD. What is the type of tobacco raised in the gentleman's section?

Mr. TABER. It is tobacco used on moderate price cigars.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Wrapper tobacco.

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Are the producers of that tobacco cooperating with the Department of Agriculture in the crop-reduction program?

Mr. TABER. A very large number of them have been paid a very small sum in comparison with the tax that they have had to pay.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HANCOCK].

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, the Kerr bill under consideration, in my judgment, is desirable and necessary both as a matter of justice and protection to that large host of tobacco growers who are trying honestly to cooperate with their Government in an effort to stabilize the tobacco-growing industry. The welfare of this industry is of vital concern to the welfare of North Carolina and a large portion of the South. I come from a section of North Carolina that has been growing tobacco much longer than I can remember. I feel that I am familiar with every phase of the tobacco grower's problem. I also happen to represent the largest tobacco-manufacturing district in the United States. I therefore think that I can speak with some authority regarding the tobacco situation, from the planting through the manufacturing process. Whether you know it or not, the growing of tobacco involves perhaps more hard labor, drudgery, and toil than any other farming operation. There are few things that the Government could do of greater economic importance than to place this great tobacco-growing industry on a substantial financial and economic basis. In view of the splendid cooperation between at least 90 percent of the growers and the Government, it would be tragic if the Government did not use every reasonable means within its power to insure the success of the program outlined. The Congress owes it to the tobacco grower to protect him in his contracts with the Government which were entered into at the request of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The grower has not only signed away certain rights for the year that has just passed, but he has also signed away rights for the year that is ahead of us.

I recognize that many thrusts have been made against this measure because of the quasi-compulsory feature involved which some like to call "regimentation." I also appreciate and am familiar with the old stock argument that it destroys individual liberty. However, those who know the conditions under which the tobacco growers have lived on an average of 3 out of every 4 years will not be misled by these choruses. Liberty can mean little to a man who is bound in economic slavery.

The Kerr bill, in my judgment, represents a splendid plan on the part of the Government to lead the growers into an effective organization for their own protection and welfare.

As I see it, its main purpose is to insure cooperation among the cooperators. I think it is fair, sound, and will prove effective in insuring the success of the voluntary acreage reduction program. Of course, all of us realize that, as a permanent scheme, we cannot continue to reduce production. Much better will it be when we can expand our markets for our products and encourage greater production. It will always be hard for me to accept as sound economics the subsidizing of decreased production. One of the attractive features of this bill is that it does not work a serious hardship on the few who, for one good reason or another, have not been able to secure a contract with the Government. On the other hand, it rightly penalizes the chiseler and the man who thinks only of his own welfare. Under proper regulations by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration the small grower and the tenant can also be protected. By the mechanics of the bill the effort is made to strike a happy balance between the contract grower and the noncontracting grower. It penalizes, by way of a reduction of the income to the noncontracting grower, in the same proportion as the contracting grower by voluntary agreement penalizes himself through a reduction of planted acerage. The contracting growers throughout my State almost unanimously favor this bill, and I sincerely trust that the Members of Congress interested in this great agricultural undertaking will support this measure.

I cannot fail to call attention of the members of the Committee on Agriculture to a gross error which appears in the report. On the first page, and in the first paragraph, the report says that the growers of flue-cured tobacco received, during the year 1933, $109,000,000 more than they received in 1932, and the inference is that this great increase was due almost entirely to the efforts of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. I would not for a minute discount the fine efforts made by the tobacco section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration toward increasing the price of tobacco to the growers. The facts, however, are that in 1932 the flue-cured crop amounted to only 376,000,000 pounds, which sold for an average of 11.6 cents, making a total income to the growers of $43,616,000. In 1933, 735,000,000 pounds of flue-cured tobacco was produced, which brought an average of 15.2 cents rather than the 17-cent parity price fixed by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The 1933 crop was almost double in amount the 1932 crop and at least a third better in quality. If true parity prices, as defined by the Domestic Allotment Act, had been paid the growers for this crop, they would have received approximately $140,000,000 rather than the $111,000,000 which was paid to them. I am giving these figures so that the Membership may know that the tobacco growers have not received any special benefits during the year 1933 from the Federal Government. It should be said, however, that during 1934 a considerable amount in the way of rental and other benefits derived from the processing taxes will be paid to the growers in consideration of their cooperation with the Government.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. SABATH. I am greatly impressed with the gentleman's interest and in his explanation of the bill. I realize the fine interest that he has always taken in every measure designed to aid the tobacco farmers, and especially those living in his home district. But will he not explain what effect this measure will have on the consumers of tobacco throughout the country?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. In my opinion it will have practically no effect whatever upon the consumers. The price of the manufactured product has in the past varied but slightly in relation to the price of the raw product. There are many other factors involved which influence the price. The price of the raw product, with tobacco as with many other commodities such as cotton and wheat, plays but a minor part in the price of the finished or manufactured product. To illustrate—tobacco is sold by the farmer for 15 cents a pound, and after processing by the manufacturer is sold to the consumer for about 15 cents an ounce. As we all know, in a cotton shirt that sells from a dollar and a half to $2, there is only about 15 to 20 cents' worth of raw cotton. But since my good friend from Illinois has raised this question, I want to call to the attention of the House that there is on the calendar a bill known as the "Vinson bill", which will carry more substantial relief to the consumers of this country than any measure which has been proposed in Congress for many years. Time will not permit me to go into an extended discussion of this measure. The Vinson bill, however, proposes to reduce the present excessive and unconscionable tax on tobacco products by a horizontal cut of 40 percent. Tobacco is the only product of the farmer that continues to bear both a prohibition and a war tax.

You will probably be astounded to know that the tax on a pound of tobacco used in the manufacture of cigarettes, for which the grower receives between 15 and 20 cents a pound, pays to the Government in excise taxes approximately $1.08 a pound. The Government is today collecting 6 cents on every package of 20 cigarettes sold in this country, which amounts to a total of $21.90 per year on every smoker who uses a package of cigarettes a day. May I suggest to every Member of the House that they secure a copy of the Vinson report on this bill. I also wish that every Member interested in correcting this gross injustice would take the time to read the hearings conducted by the Honorable FRED M. VINSON, chairman of the subcommittee of the Ways and Means Committee. If the Government would take its foot off of the neck of the tobacco grower, his market would be immediately expanded, and it is doubtful whether there would be any necessity for a curtailment of acreage. Through increased consumption there would be a greater demand for tobacco, with better prices to the growers. In addition to the great benefits which would accrue to the growers, in whose welfare I am principally interested, more than 35,000,000 smokers and users of tobacco products in the United States would be benefited, by way of a reduction in taxes, in the sum of $10 to $35 a year, depending upon the amount of State taxes placed on tobacco products. With the passage of the Vinson bill the consumers—I want to say to my good friend from Illinois—would be saved approximately $150,000,000 per year. The tobacco industry has borne the brunt of excise taxes for many years, and common ordinary justice demands that Congress expedite the consideration and passage of this bill. During the past 10 years the taxes collected on tobacco products has amounted to more than $2,000,000,000. In the final analysis, this is a tax on the land of the growers.

Mr. HOLMES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I yield.

Mr. HOLMES. The gentleman referred to the tobacco growers or the tobacco manufacturers as contributing this tax. It is the consumers of the products, the cigars and cigarettes, who pay the tax.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HANCOCK] has expired.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. HOLMES. I may have misunderstood the gentleman, but I understood the gentleman to say that the grower and manufacturer were contributing these taxes.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Here is my answer to your question. First comes the Federal tax, next the State tax, next the manufacturer's operating cost, and then the farmer.

Mr. HOLMES. But the consumer pays that tax.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Of course I catch your point. This tax in a sense, as all other taxes and duties, is finally absorbed by the consuming public. This same principle would apply even to income taxes. But to my way of reasoning the tax amounts to almost a direct levy on the farmer's land.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HANCOCK] has again expired.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CARPENTER].

Mr. CARPENTER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I recognize the sincerity and earnestness with which the gentlemen representing the tobacco-growing part of this country are pressing this measure in behalf of their constituents. They are representing their constituents according to what their judgment dictates is for their best interests. I asked the author of this bill a few moments ago if this bill was similar to and in line with the Bankhead cotton bill. He said it was, except that in his judgment it was improved over that bill. As I said when the Bankhead cotton bill was before this House, that ordinarily when a measure of this kind is brought up which affects only one part of the country, the general attitude of most Members is that if they want it and it only affects them to let them have it. However, in my judgment, this is merely the second step in establishing the Department of Agriculture and the Secretary of Agriculture as the landlord over all the farms in this country. As I have heretofore stated on this floor, I am in favor of any voluntary means of regulating agriculture surplus or any other kind of surpluses in this country, but I am not for any compulsory plan included in this and in the cotton-control bill.

You may ask me what would be my plan to take care of the surpluses. My reply is, that my plan would be for the Government to set a minimum price for domestic consumption upon all our agricultural products and then provide or build Government warehouses where the surpluses could be stored. These warehouses could be built or supplied by the P.W.A. funds or any other emergency funds and operated by the Government to permit the farmers to store their surplus in these Government warehouses. Such warehouses could be furnished and maintained with very little expense to the Government, almost infinitesimal with the amount that is being collected by processing and other taxes and being spent by the Government according to the present methods in payment of nonproduction of agricultural products.

If such a plan was adopted we would, in cases of drought or other shortage as in the days of Egypt, always have available wheat, foods, and supplies on hand for the country, and we would not run the risk entailed from plowing under and destroying crops, food products, and other surpluses.

My principal objection to this sort of legislation is that the next step would be to bring in a similar bill in regard to wheat and that would affect me directly. Then, the next progressive step would be similar legislation in regard to corn, and then hogs, and then cattle. The farmers out in my country are now objecting to the processing tax on hogs. Their experience has been that instead of increasing the price of hogs it has decreased the price of hogs to the producers. A great deal of working capital of the farmers in my country is raised from the production of hogs, and the present condition of the hog business is the worst thing that we have to combat out there today. The great fear in my country, which is a large cattle-producing country, is that a processing tax may be placed upon cattle. I am absolutely opposed to such a tax, and I am objecting and letting my objections be known in every way possible to such a tax. The price of cattle, and especially heavy cattle, is better now than it has been for several years. Such fact has brought a great deal of encouragement to the cattle industry. All of this without any processing tax or governmental interference in this business. Therefore, the cattlemen arise with fear and trembling every morning as they face the hot sun and the prospects of a drought condition, for fear a processing tax will be placed upon cattle, and that such tax, according to their experience with hogs, will result in the price of cattle being reduced to the farmer and the cattleman.

The reason I am now speaking is, that when the time comes that the Department of Agriculture is the boss of all the farmers, my constituents will not say, "Where were you when this was going on? Why did we not hear from you? Did you sit idly by with your mouth closed when you voice your opposition and sympathy so loudly now out in the district"? In my judgment, such legislation is clearly unconstitutional. To avoid constitutional restrictions, such legislation is based upon an emergency. What emergency is there in this country that is greater than the Constitution? The Constitution was supposed to be emergency proof, and by tearing down these constitutional provisions that have constituted the protection for the individual, the farmer, the laborer, and those in all occupations, the rich and poor alike, the emergency in the future will be a great deal more serious than the emergency at present. As I stated, when discussing the Bankhead cotton bill, this bill may have some temporary measure of success, but if it does, I therefore fear its success more than I do its failure.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. GASQUE].

Mr. GASQUE. Mr. Chairman, I want to take this occasion to express my appreciation to the honorable Secretary of Agriculture, Hon. Henry A. Wallace, for the interest he has taken in helping the tobacco growers of the South and especially in my section of the State.

Since I can remember we have been hearing "fairy stories" about the Department of Agriculture aiding the farmers. As far as Mr. Wallace was concerned this was no fairy story.

Just after the passage of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, I took up the matter of parity prices with Mr. Wallace, and in a short while he promised to place a processing tax on tobacco for the benefit of the growers, provided that they would cooperate with him in reducing their acreage. I assured him that I knew that our farmers would do this and he assured me that the processing tax would be placed on tobacco.

Secretary Wallace's efforts in behalf of the southern farmers, not only the tobacco growers but the cotton growers as well, will stand out in history as a memorial to this great man who heads the Department of Agriculture. In future history Mr. Wallace's name will stand out preeminently among those who have befriended or aided the agricultural interest of the South.

The bill before us today, which has been proposed by my colleague [Mr. KERR] proposed to legalize a statute and to further carry out the efforts made by the Secretary. This bill will mean, if it is enacted into a law, millions of dollars to our farmers in the future. In the past years, the farmers, the tobacco growers of the South, have been robbed to make the manufacturers rich. South Carolina, Georgia, North Carolina, and a part of Virginia grow practically all of the cigarette tobacco that is grown in America, and, as you know, almost everyone now smokes cigarettes. We are paying enormous sums into the Treasury as a tax on these cigarettes. We are hopeful of getting this tax reduced through the Vinson bill which is now in Congress. In the meantime we would protect the farmers and limit this acreage and production so that a surplus of flue-cured tobacco will not be raised, but only enough to take care of the legitimate trade. I hope that those of you who do not live in a tobacco area will support this bill as it means lifeblood to the grower of the flue-cured, bright tobacco.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. VINSON].

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Kansas just stated that this bill would affect only a particular part of the country. I wonder if the gentleman from Kansas knows that 19 States of the Union produce tobacco. I wonder if the gentleman from Kansas knows that there are more commercial tobacco farms in the United States than there are commercial wheat farms, a product in which he is so much interested.

There are 432,000 tobacco farmers in the United States. Taking into consideration the landlord and his family, the tenant and his family, it is a very conservative estimate to say that 3,000,000 people, 3,000,000 citizens of the United States depend upon the price of tobacco for a livelihood. This is not an inconsiderable part of our citizenship.

For years, and at a time when the Federal Government has been gathering into its coffers millions and millions and millions of dollars from tobacco taxes to stem the tide of depression, the tobacco farmers of this country have had to sell their product at less than the cost of production. More than $2,250,000,000 has gone into the Treasury of the United States in the depression years.

And yet the farmers produce the tobacco for less than cost of production. This year burley tobacco brought 10.5 cents. In 1932 it brought 12.6 cents. In 1931 it brought 8.4 cents. Each one of these years the price received was below the cost of production.

The distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] inquired about the increased price to the consumer, were the farmer to get a fair price, and it was a pertinent question. Let me say to the gentleman that in the tobacco tax reduction hearings we were told that the actual price the farmer receives for his product is not an element of importance in the price the consumer pays. The 10-year average price for burley in the years 1919 to 1929 was 23 cents plus. The 10-year average for flue-cured tobacco during the same period was 24 cents plus. This, I submit, is conclusive proof of the need for an increase in the price to the tobacco farmer. Give him a profit; let him sell his commodity for something above the cost of production. It need not increase the price of the manufactured product to the consumer.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. I yield.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I have no objection to the farmers making a profit; in fact, I would like every farmer in the United States to make a profit on everything he produced. I am interested, of course, in the consumer. I think the consumer is overcharged, due to expensive handling methods in many instances, and to the outrageously high cost of advertising, and to the desire for profit on the part of a few people, such as those who control the Duke Co. and other large corporations manufacturing tobacco, men who accumulate millions to enable their daughters to buy foreign titles.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. I have no quarrel whatever with my friend from Chicago in respect of that proposition. I want to call the gentleman's attention, and the attention of the committee, to the fact that when burley and flue-cured tobacco sold for 23 cents and 24 cents a pound standard-brand cigarettes sold for the same price at which they sell today.

Just one further word, Mr. Chairman; I wish that I were able to speak to a bill that I think would meet the approbation of the gentleman from Chicago. It is a tobacco-tax reduction bill which is pending on the calendar. I happen to have the honor to have introduced it. The bill was reported by the Ways and Means Committee, and provides for a 40-percent horizontal reduction, which passes the entire tax reduction to the consumer. In other words, if this tax-reduction bill were enacted into law, the standard brands selling at 12½ cents a pack or two for a quarter would be selling for 10 cents and the 10-cent cigarette would sell two for 15 cents. At these prices there would be no added profit per unit in the so-called "cheap" cigarettes or the standard-brand cigarettes, no added profit per unit to the manufacturer, but there would be a saving to the consumers of cigarettes in the United States of $150,000,000 per year. It is true there would be some loss to the Treasury the first year, but during the second and subsequent years the loss would be made up because of increased consumption of cigarette tobacco and other tobacco products. Operating along well-known lines of economics, increased consumption would raise the prices of tobacco.

The present tax is a war and prohibition tax. Before the war the tax was $1.25 per 1,000 cigarettes. During the war it was raised first to $1.65 and then to $2.05 per thousand. It was not until after the ratification of the eighteenth amendment that the tax was increased from $2.05 to $3 per 1,000, practically 50 percent. Tobacco is the only farm-grown product on which there is an excise tax. Tobacco is the only farm-grown product on which there is both a processing tax and an excise tax. The burden of the tax is a thing that is unheard of in any tax language. Nobody can defend it. The only thing that can be said for it is that we need the money. I submit that if the Vinson bill—if I may be privileged to refer to it as such—is passed, substantial benefits indeed will accrue to the grower, in the long run there will be no material effect on the Treasury; there will be no increased profit per unit to manufacturers; and it will mean a saving of $150,000,000 a year to the consumers of cigarettes.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, I have enjoyed the able speeches that have been made in behalf of this bill. I admire the earnestness and sincerity with which the various gentlemen have spoken in defense of the industry in which they are vitally interested. As I listened to the speeches today I wondered if it would not be worth while to turn back the pages of history about 315 years to a legislative meeting held down in Jamestown, Va.

The first legislative assembly met in Virginia in 1619, and the first bill that they passed was a bill fixing the price of tobacco. They fixed the price at 3 shillings per pound for the best grade and 19 pence per pound for the second grade. In 1628 the price of tobacco was 3 shillings 6 pence per pound in Virginia. As the result of the legislation cultivation increased so rapidly that the price in 1631 had fallen to 6 pence per pound.

The next step came by legislative enactment restricting the amount grown. They restricted the amount to 1,500 plants per pole and they also put a provision in the law that no mechanic should grow tobacco or work in the soil at all. This legislation was enacted, of course, to try to raise the price. The result was that the price fell in 1639 to the point where it was only 3 pence per pound.

Next a law was passed providing that half of the good tobacco should be destroyed; that the crop of 1640 should not be sold for less than 25 pence per pound. Then they enacted a severe penalty. If they did sell for less than 25 pence per pound, they must forfeit the whole crop. This did not maintain the price.

In 1645 tobacco was worth 1½ pence per pound and in 1665 only 1 pence per pound.

They then came to the conclusion in Virginia that the trouble with the fixing of the price and the restricting of the acreage was that it did not cover a sufficient area. So they proposed that a treaty should be entered into. Virginia, Maryland, and Carolina entered into a treaty to restrict the production of tobacco.

In 1683 the price was so low that interested persons petitioned the legislature to stop planting for 1 year in order to increase the price. The legislature refused to grant the petition, and the farmers became so incensed because of the low price that they organized into gangs and went out and destroyed tobacco throughout the country. Finally the situation became so acute, the legislature having denied the petition to reduce the acreage and maintain the price, that it finally enacted a penalty clause that any person who assembled with a group of eight persons and went out to destroy tobacco should be pronounced a traitor and suffer the death penalty. After some 315 years we are here paying no attention to the experience of the past.

The same situation existed years ago in other countries with reference to the currency question. John Law tried his experiment. Finally France adopted his scheme of inflation. Then 70 years later along came the French assignats, backed up by the church property of France. The people would pay no attention to the experience under the scheme of John Law. They said that conditions were different.

Now, conditions are not so different today. Here you are attempting to do the same thing that failed in Virginia. This plan of price fixing and reduction of acreage has been carried on in different countries for centuries. You are going ahead with a plan which will dislocate business. You will injure business. Every time you make a move to correct one situation you throw some other part of the economic machinery out of gear.

Reference has been made here to the hog-processing tax. While you have tried to benefit the farmer in the West who sells his hogs alive, take 95 percent of the farmers in New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maine, and Vermont, all of these Eastern States and many of the Middle Western States, and you are forcing the farmer to pay a processing tax when he kills, dresses, and markets his hogs.

I am not here violently fighting this bill, except to say that I know the farmers of my country want to be free American citizens. They do not want to be regimented. They do not want a man to come from Washington and say, "You are going to put some wheat in here; you are going to put potatoes over there", and tell them what they must do. The farmers of my district have never come to the Federal Government for aid. They are not asking aid now on account of the drought, yet up in New York State our crops have been severely impaired by the drought. The vegetables are destroyed. I doubt if the farmers will come to the Federal Government and ask for relief. All they ask of the Federal Government is to let them alone and stop piling up these taxes.

You have given the President, or the administration, power to handle something like $6,000,000,000. You brought in a census bill here yesterday that would have put 100,000 people on the pay roll. This was unnecessary and uncalled for. Soon there will be a bill in here for $500,000,000 more. Some day these bills will have to be paid and the taxpayers will have to pay them. This bill is not going to benefit the tobacco men. It will only serve to dislocate the industry. You are not going to restrict people from putting in tobacco, because more people are going to raise tobacco, and the harder up the farmers get the more acreage they will put into tobacco. Up in my country, when the price of tomatoes drops, what happens? Next year they double the acreage. Whenever the price falls they put in more acreage hoping to realize enough even with a lower price to pay their taxes.

I think this regimentation should stop. I think the biggest thing this Congress can do is to stop these expenditures and get back to constitutional government and let the economic laws work out the way they always have and always will.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, this bill was considered before a subcommittee of the Committee on Agriculture, of which I am chairman. I may state to the committee that we had extended hearings and we had a full list of witnesses from practically every tobacco-growing State of the Union, and up to this time we have not heard of any witness opposing this legislation, neither have we received a telegram or letter from anyone opposing it.

The difference between the President's voluntary program—and this bill, which is in line with that program—and the operations of the Federal Farm Board is that they tried to fix a price on farm products without having anything whatsoever to do with controlling production. I want to say to you that unless you can control production there is no way on the face of the earth to fix a price or to demand a fair price.

Under this legislation we propose to grant to 90 or 95 percent of the tobacco growers what they have requested to protect them in carrying out the voluntary program. I may say to you, Mr. Chairman, if the farmers of this country were able to organize and control their own business in acreage planted, marketing, and price fixing, they would not be coming before the Congress today and asking this assistance on the part of the Congress.

I may also say to my good friend Mr. REED of New York, who just finished speaking a moment ago, that we would be able to leave the farmers free and independent and they would be able to take care of their business if the other fellows would let them alone, but Congress has passed tariff legislation for every large industry of the country and passed practically every other bill that well-organized groups have wanted that would permit them to monopolize and fix prices both buying from and selling to farmers. Just yesterday in the papers we read where the Federal Trade Commission found, after an investigation of the cottonseed-oil industry of this country, under a trade-practice rule endorsed by the Federal Trade Commission under the Republican Party, they had monopolized and fixed prices and robbed the cottonseed people of the South out of millions of dollars. The Commission has now canceled these trade-practice rules and turned some of these parties over to the Department of Justice, or they should be turned over to the Department of Justice.

Mr. Chairman, this bill is entirely in line with the Bankhead cotton-control bill. Many of the amendments carried in the bill were taken from the Bankhead bill. We have tried to be absolutely fair to every type of farmer, small and large, as well as tenant farmers. I am sure if the bill is administered in line with the purpose and the intent of the bill that it will mean much to all farmers. We find in the cotton States and in the tobacco States that ninety-odd percent of the producers who want to do the very thing that they could not do in the past, that is, to cooperate so as to be able to secure a square deal, are being prevented from doing so by about 5 to 10 percent of the producers who refuse to cooperate. There are a number of farmers, and, perhaps, the large farmers in these States, who refuse to cooperate. These fellows want to stay on the outside and reap any increase in price that may be brought about by the cooperation of the ninety-odd percent of farmers. In the meantime they increase their acreage and new farmers come in so as to take advantage of any increased price. In the next place a great many farmers who come in under the voluntary program, being able to buy additional fertilizer, thereby increasing their production, have an unfair advantage over the average farmer that is unable to buy extra fertilizer.

You can see that all of this is unfair and will tend to break down the whole program. The Government is spending millions to help farmers and unless we have this type of legislation we might just as well put these millions in a "rat hole." Many members object to this type of legislation, stating that this type of legislation is too drastic. I want to state here and now that these bills offer the best solution that has been proposed and if we fail under these bills you can look for more drastic legislation than we have ever dreamed of.

I cannot understand, Mr. Chairman, why any Congressman from any State or any district which does not grow tobacco could stand up here and argue against this bill and even vote against it. If the tobacco producers want this legislation which will make the voluntary program a success and you can make the cotton South and the tobacco States of this country prosperous by putting money into the pockets of the farmers in these sections, it will mean everything to the other sections of the country. I was delighted to hear the speech of the gentleman from Wisconsin a while ago, because it was sane and it was fair.

The bill has for its purpose the protection of the bona fide tobacco growers who have entered into a contract with the Agricultural Department to reduce their acreage and poundage allotment of tobacco to be grown by them for the crop year of 1934. The Agricultural Department, by reason of authority conferred in it by the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1933, was enabled to fix a minimum price of 17 cents upon 250,000,000 pounds of flue-cured tobacco bought by the domestic tobacco manufacturers, and this price, together with the benefit payments which were also paid to the other types of tobacco, enabled the growers to receive more than $109,000,000 more for the 1933 crop than they had received for the crop of 1932.

The crop of flue-cured tobacco raised in the year of 1933 was largely in excess of the demand for this type of tobacco in the world's market, and in order to meet the excuse for low prices of all types of tobacco, namely (that there was excessive overproduction of this great agricultural commodity), it became necessary for the Agricultural Department to enter into a contract with the tobacco growers and its beneficiaries to reduce the crop of tobacco raised in the year 1934. The tobacco farmers and all types of growers who had been the beneficiaries of the regulations and price-fixing power of the Agricultural Department whole-heartedly undertook to cooperate with the Agricultural Department, and more than 90 percent of these tobacco growers have entered into a contract to reduce their production of tobacco during the crop year of 1934, 30 percent of the average acreage production for the crop years of 1931, 1932, and 1933. These contract growers who have enthusiastically entered into this program with the Agricultural Department are demanding that they be protected from all noncontract growers who declined to reduce their acreage or poundage and who can by their unwillingness to cooperate with their fellow farmers and the Agricultural Department wreck the program and defeat the purposes of the law. It is in order to invoke the protection of these bona fide contract signers, who have observed both the spirit and the letter of the law and the rules and regulations prescribed by the Agricultural Department, that this measure is proposed.

EXPLANATION OF THE BILL

Section 1 is a definition of the several words and terms as they appear in the bill.

Section 2 declares the policy of the bill, which is to promote orderly marketing of tobacco in interstate and foreign commerce, and to enable producers of tobacco to stabilize their markets against undue and excessive fluctuations, and to prevent unfair competition and practices in putting tobacco into the channels of interstate and foreign commerce, and to more effectively balance production and consumption of tobacco and to relieve the present emergency with respect to tobacco.

Section 3 refers to the levying and assessment of a sales tax on all types of tobacco which come under the operation of this act, of not less than 25 percent or more than 33⅓ percent of the price for which said tobacco is sold, which was grown and marketed by noncontracting tobacco growers who do not participate in the adjustment program of the Agricultural Administration. This tax applies to all tobacco harvested in the crop year 1934–35 except Maryland tobacco, Virginia sun-cured tobacco, and cigar-leaf tobacco, and tobacco grown by growers who produce less than 2,000 pounds of tobacco a crop year. No type of tobacco which comes within the operation of this act, nor the producers thereof shall be required to pay the aforesaid sales tax unless the Secretary of Agriculture shall determine that the persons who own, rent, share crop, or control two-thirds of the land engaged in the production of any particular type of tobacco favor to levy an imposition of the said tax thereon. This section further provides that the Secretary of Agriculture shall proclaim such determination to levy and assess the tax on the sale of tobacco at least 60 days prior to the next succeeding crop year, and the tax shall thereafter apply to the tobacco of such type harvested during the crop year next following the date of such proclamation.

Section 4 refers to those who are exempt from the taxes imposed under this act.

Section 5 provides that the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to issue to each contracting producer nontransferable tax-payment warrants (each such warrant to be expressed in pounds of tobacco of a particular type), and this warrant held by a contracting producer upon surrender of the same to the agent or tax collector of the Government shall be accepted by said collector and the Secretary of the Treasury in payment of the tax on any sale made by a contracting producer of the type of tobacco specified in the warrant, not exceeding the amount covered by such warrant.

The Secretary of Agriculture is further authorized to issue in any county further warrants covering the amount of tobacco of any type not in excess of 5 percent of the amount of tobacco of such type covered by warrants issued to all contracting parties in the said county, to persons engaged in the production of tobacco of such type in such county as to whom the Secretary determines that no equitable allotment of tobacco acreage or production is possible under tobacco-reduction contracts offered pursuant to the Agricultural Adjustment Act. This is to enable those bona fide tobacco producers who have no base acreage to grow some tobacco and vouchsafe unto themselves a market crop. The warrants issued to this class of growers under the rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture shall also be accepted by the collector and the Secretary of the Treasury in payment of the taxes assessed against the tobacco producers under this act. This section further authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to make rules and regulations protecting the interests of share-croppers and tenants in the issuance of tax payment warrants under this act.

Section 6 of this act provides how the Bureau of Internal Revenue, under the direction of the Secretary of State, shall collect the taxes paid by the sellers of tobacco, and further provides that these taxes are to be paid into the Treasury of the United States. This tax can be easily collected by a warehouseman or any other party who is an authorized agent of the Secretary of the Treasury or the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Section 7 authorizes the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to prescribe such rules and regulations as he may deem needful for the collection of the tax imposed under this act, and further authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to make such rules and regulations as he may deem necessary to carry out the powers vested in him by this act.

Section 8 requires all persons having information in respect to tobacco produced or sold to disclose said information to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and further provides that any person who willfully fails or refuses to make such a return or who shall willfully make a false return shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment not to exceed 1 year, or both.

Section 9 authorizes that no tax-payment warrant issued in accordance with this act shall be transferred either in whole or in part, and further provides that any person who acquires a tax-payment warrant from another person or who transfers a tax-payment warrant to another person, or who violates any provision of this act, shall be subject to a fine or imprisonment as therein imposed, and further provides, that any person with intent to defraud, forge, make, or counterfeit any tax-payment warrant or any stamp, tag, or other means of identification, or make any false entry or statement in the application for said warrant, and so forth, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be subject to a fine and imprisonment as therein set forth.

Section 10 refers to the appropriations of the administrative expenses and the method of the selection of employees and the payment of the compensation to them, as well as provides for other expenses in the administration of this act.

Section 11 refers to the matter of refund of taxes and the time within which the payment of same shall be made, or suit to recover therefor.

Section 12 provides that in the event any section of this bill shall be held invalid that the other part thereof shall not be affected thereby.

Section 13 provides when the tax levied in this act on any type of tobacco shall be discontinued and terminated.

Section 14 provides that any producer of tobacco who has not become a contracting producer may enter into contract with the Secretary of Agriculture within 60 days after the date of enactment of this act and come within the provisions of the same.

Section 15 provides that the Secretary of Agriculture may establish quotas for the importation of any cigar-leaf types of tobacco into continental United States which may come in competition with such type of tobacco to which the tax herein provided is applicable. These quotas to be allotted to the importers of such tobacco by the Secretary of Agriculture—he having due regard for the respective amounts of tobacco imported within the crop years 1932–33 and 1933–34 by said importers.

Section 16 authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to fix an import-tax rate on cigar-leaf tobacco which exceeds the quota allotted to importers. This is done to further protect the American growers of cigar-leaf tobacco and make it impossible for foreign importers to take advantage of domestic reduction of this type of tobacco.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS].

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Chairman, there does not seem to be any real or serious opposition to this bill, and I am not going to take the time of the committee to discuss it.

I come from a district which, I am satisfied, is one of the largest, if not the largest, tobacco-producing congressional districts in the country. My district not only produces more tobacco, but it produces better tobacco than any other district in the country. [Laughter and applause.] In my district there is produced the dark-fired type and also the burley type of tobacco in considerable quantities. A few weeks ago representatives from the two dark-fired tobacco cooperative associations met in the city of Hopkinsville, Ky., and after a discussion of the Kerr bill, passed resolutions unanimously urging that the bill be passed in the interest of the tobacco growers.

As has been stated, more than 90 percent of the tobacco growers have entered into a voluntary agreement with the Government for a reduction of their crop. I think it is the duty of the Government to protect this group of 90 percent of the tobacco growers who have entered into such an agreement.

Of course, we know that unless some protection is afforded, those who have declined to enter into this agreement will increase the acreage of their crops, because they will know that the price of tobacco will be increased; and, in addition to this, there will be those who have no acreage base, who, feeling it will be more profitable in the future to grow tobacco, will put out a crop of tobacco, and in this way those who have voluntarily entered into this agreement will be penalized, I may say, by those who have refused the offer and the request of the Government to sign this agreement.

This measure does not prevent any tobacco growers who have declined to enter into this agreement from continuing to produce tobacco.

It does not prevent any person who has not been growing tobacco in the past from growing tobacco in the future. It simply says to them, "You will not sign the voluntary agreement, and therefore a tax will be imposed on you to the extent you would have to reduce your acreage if you signed the agreement." In other words, the whole plan is to put them on the same basis, and put them under the same conditions as the more than 90 percent of tobacco growers have voluntarily placed themselves in the interest of better prices.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. I have a neighbor who spent 6 weeks in Denmark lately and he told me that the Danish farmers had cut down their production 25 percent on hogs and butter fat because the English market fell down. I am with you on this bill.

Mr. BYRNS. There is no question, I will say to my friend from Minnesota, that when conditions have been brought about whereby there will not be a large surplus of farm products, we will have greater prosperity throughout the whole country. It is necessary to increase the purchasing power of the farmer, and this can only be done by giving him a reasonable value for his products.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. If you or I have an oil well they will regulate that, but they would not let us regulate our own business.

Mr. BYRNS. It is sometimes very hard to get anything for the farmer.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FULMER. I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LOZIER].

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I rise for the purpose of making a few observations suggested by the remarks of my friend, the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED], who, in discussing inflation or expansion of our currency spoke of the issue of assignats during the French Revolution. May I say that those assignats were first issued in 1790 by the French National Assembly after it had appropriated, or confiscated, the church lands throughout the nation. Instead of selling these wrongfully acquired properties at sacrificial prices then prevailing as a result of the unsettled state of affairs, the French National Assembly issued bonds secured by these properties, which bonds were assigned to the purchasers. Bonds or assignats of the value of only 400,000,000 francs were first issued. These were well secured by the confiscated church property and readily sold at their par value. Later, when the revolutionary government confiscated the property of the Emigres or Royalists who fled the country, France continued to issue these assignats far in excess of the value of the confiscated properties, until there were outstanding 46,000,000,000 francs of these securities plus many forged notes amounting to many million francs.

As a result of these reckless issues of unsecured bonds their value declined until in March 1796, a louis d'or (24 francs) bought 7,200 francs in assignats. Soon thereafter these assignats were withdrawn from circulation and exchanged at their face value for territorial mandates, another makeshift paper money which in time became practically worthless and was turned into the Government in exchange for taxes or public lands. The system of assignats and territorial mandates was abolished in 1797.

These assignates and territorial mandates were nothing more or less than bonds issued against confiscated properties. When originally issued the assignats were well secured and worth par, but when they were issued in quantities largely in excess of the value of the lands supposed to secure their payment, their value rapidly declined.

I make these observations because the experience of France with assignats and territorial mandates is not an argument against the legitimate, reasonable, controlled, and normal expansion of the currency of this county. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. There being no further general debate, the Clerk will read the bill for amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.—

DEFINITIONS

SECTION 1. As used in this act—

(a) The term "person" includes an individual, a partnership, association, joint-stock company, corporation, or a firm, and imports the plural as well as the singular, as the case demands.

(b) The term "Commissioner" means the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

(c) The term "collector" means the collector of internal revenue.

(d) The term "tobacco" means any type or types of tobacco specified in any agreement between the Secretary of Agriculture and a contracting producer.

(e) The term "sale" means the first bona fide sale of each pound of tobacco harvested subsequent to the enactment of this act.

(f) The term "tax" means the tax imposed by this act upon the sale of tobacco.

(g) The term "contracting producer" means any person who (pursuant to the provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act) agrees in writing with the Secretary of Agriculture to plant not more than the number of acres of tobacco, and/or to market not more than the number of pounds of tobacco, permitted in such agreement.

(h) The term "crop year" means the period May 1 to April 30.

(i) The term "Maryland tobacco" means the kind of air-cured tobacco classified as type 32 in the United States Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Service and Regulatory Announcements No. 118.

(j) The term "cigar leaf tobacco" means all leaf tobacco classified in classes 4, 5, and 6 in the United States Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Service and Regulatory Announcements No. 118.

(k) The term "Virginia sun-cured tobacco" means all sun-cured tobacco classified as type 37 in the United States Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Service and Regulatory Announcements No. 118.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. While I expect to vote for this bill, I am not doing so with any great confidence in its success. The present plan of attemping to control production by reducing acreage is the most idiotic and fallacious plan that was ever adopted in any country, and it has failed everywhere it has been tried, as it is eventually bound to fail here. What has it done for hogs—the processing tax? The market yesterday in Chicago, top, was $3.60 a hundred. It was more than that 1 year ago. My 12-year-old boy can go out today and survey the garden and back yard and see the plants there, the seedlings, the onions, the lettuce, and everything else drying up, and he knows that we are going to have no crop this year. We are not going to have any corn crop. The farmers will have to cut their hay, as I said the other day, with a safety razor or a lawn mower.

We are not going to have anything, and yet today the Department of Agriculture and the A.A.A. insist on going on with this damnable program of reducing acreage. What is going to happen? I will tell you, and I am going to make a prophesy right here today. This drought is going to burn everything up in the Middle West. The farmers will have nothing to sell. The speculators and the hijackers and gamblers will reap the harvest of their lives. They will jack up the price to the consumers. The consumers in the cities will be penalized to the extent of millions of dollars, and already you have had to appropriate $500,000,000 for the relief of drought-stricken farmers in 15 States, and that does not begin to come into our section of the country at all. When you get into Ohio and Indiana and Illinois you are going to have to appropriate $500,000,000, if you are going to give our farmers their share. Plow under is the program of Mr. Wallace. It is fortunate, my friends, that these quintuplets that we hear about every day up in Canada were not born in this country, because Mr. Wallace would say probably that there are two too many, and he would probably want to plow under two of the five.

Mr. BROWN of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRUAX. Yes.

Mr. BROWN of Kentucky. Does not the gentleman think that the World's Fair committee in inviting that family down here is doing it in conflict with the agricultural program?

Mr. TRUAX. I think the gentleman is correct. We have tobacco growers in 10 or 11 counties in Ohio. I have not received a single line from any of them demanding this bill. I understand that my colleagues on both sides of this House have heard nothing from them, but if the tobacco growers, through their representatives and our distinguished floor leader, think that this will help them down in their States, I am for it, because we all know that these farmers certainly need help.

Mr. MARSHALL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRUAX. Yes.

Mr. MARSHALL. I have asked the gentleman to yield in order to have an explanation of his remarks. The gentleman says that he is going to vote for the bill. I agree with the argument that the gentleman has made, but I am going to vote against it.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Chairman, I was accused a few days ago by my good friend from Texas [Mr. JONES], and I am sure that he meant it in the right way and not the wrong way, of bawling like a sick calf, so in response to that I say that whenever I bawl, I bawl for the farmers who are bankrupt, who are losing their farms and homes. I have supported every measure that he has brought out while Chairman of the Agricultural Committee, and I am going to continue here today. I am going to give him a chance, because I know that away down in his heart on some of this legislation he does not think a whole lot more of it than I do. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

The Clerk read as follows:

DECLARED POLICY

SEC. 2. It is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress to promote the orderly marketing of tobacco in interstate and foreign commerce, to enable producers of tobacco to stabilize their markets against undue and excessive fluctuations, to prevent unfair competition and practices in putting tobacco into the channels of interstate and foreign commerce, and to more effectively balance production and consumption of tobacco, and to relieve the present emergency with respect to tobacco.

Mr. DEEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, between lines 20 and 21, insert the following:

"SEC. 2B. The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to establish official standards of classification for tobacco by which its type, grade, size, condition, or other characteristics may be determined, and to provide for inspection and grading of tobacco under such official standards at all public markets for tobacco where he determines, after investigation and public notice, that such inspection and grading are necessary to determine the relative value of the grades and to stabilize markets against undue excessive price fluctuations. The Secretary of Agriculture is further authorized to license inspectors and samplers, to provide for certification of grades upon inspection, and to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section. Any violation of this section or of any regulation issued under this section shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 6 months, or both. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to provide the inspection and grading service herein authorized."

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the amendment is not germane to the bill.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman reserve his point of order?

Mr. HOPE. Yes.

Mr. DEEN. Mr. Chairman, I should like to be heard on the point of order. On page 3, section 2, of the bill in which the declaration of policy is set out, in lines 14 and 15, we find the following language:

To enable producers of tobacco to stabilize their market against undue and excessive fluctuations.

In my judgment this is a good bill and ought to pass. I am for it. There are some other bills pending that ought to be passed, but perhaps there is nothing that ought to be done for the tobacco growers of the country that is more important than the passage of this amendment that I have offered. It simply provides that the Secretary of Agriculture shall be authorized to provide for inspection and grading of tobacco under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, and he is authorized to license inspectors and growers, who shall grade the tobacco throughout the Tobacco Belt, so that it may be placed on the market and sold, not on a haphazard basis as heretofore and as now exists, but in a businesslike method, after having been graded by the Federal Government.

It also provides that the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to pay for the grading and inspection of tobacco out of funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. Chairman, as an illustration, I notice that every year the growers of tobacco in my district and in the southern part of Georgia, which grows more than half the tobacco in Georgia, carry their tobacco to the warehouses where bids are offered by the buyers, and their tobacco moved to various warehouses the same day, and the price offered to the growers varied anywhere from 40 to 100 percent. As a further concrete illustration, one grower received a bid of 7 cents per pound for a truck load of tobacco in the morning, and on the afternoon of the same day the tobacco was offered for sale on the floor of another warehouse in the same city, where the tobacco brought 15 cents a pound. That policy of buying and selling tobacco is, in my judgment, unfair to the growers. The Federal Government ought, at least for a year or two, to establish a policy of grading and inspecting the tobacco so that the growers will be given a square deal.

I hope, Mr. Chairman, that the committee will accept the amendment. I also want to add that the distinguished leader on this side of the House, Mr. BYRNS, has a bill pending providing for the grading of tobacco, but I cannot agree with one provision of the bill, which provides that the cost of this grading and inspection shall be paid by the tobacco companies or the buyers. In my judgment, that is a bad policy to begin with, because it may perhaps unduly influence buyers against the growers. The growers ought not to have to pay for the grading. I do think that the Federal Government ought to be authorized, through the Secretary of Agriculture, to carry out the provisions of this amendment for at least 1 or 2 years. I hope the committee will accept my amendment. I believe the amendment is germane to the bill.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, I renew my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman on the point of order.

Mr. HOPE. I do not care to make any extended argument on the matter. It seems to me it is very apparent that an amendment which provides for grading and classifying tobacco is not in order on a bill of this kind which does not deal with that subject in particular.

Mr. DEEN. Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask a question. Wherein is the amendment not germane? Will the gentleman be more specific as to his point of order against the amendment?

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Chairman, may I be heard?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of the idea of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. DEEN] with reference to grading, I will say in explanation to him, but I would be opposed to any power given to the Secretary of Agriculture to establish his own rules and regulations with reference to the grading of tobacco or any other crop. I do not think that power ought to be vested in the Secretary of Agriculture, and permit him to establish grading and inspection without any limitation of law.

Now, Mr. Chairman, on the point of order: Here is a bill that relates solely to the reduction of acreage. The gentleman from Georgia offers an amendment which undertakes to provide for the grading of tobacco after it is produced. The amendment goes further and directs the Secretary of Agriculture to prescribe regulations under which the grading and inspection shall be had. It goes further and provides an authorization for money to be appropriated to pay the inspectors and the cost of the inspection. It does occur to me that the point of order made by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. HOPE] is well taken. I can see nothing in the amendment which in any sense is germane to the bill which we are now considering.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES] desire to be heard?

Mr. JONES. Yes, Mr. Chairman; I should like to be heard just a moment.

There is a bill now on the statute books which provides for the grading and classing of the different types of tobacco. I understand it is not sufficient to do the work right, but that subject involves a great many things that this bill does not undertake to cover at all. That is a measure which should be amended and should be amended in complete form.

The amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia, while general in its nature, brings in a wide variety of activities, wholly unrelated to this bill. As I understand the parliamentary rules, they are to the effect that if any part of an amendment is subject to a point of order, it vitiates the entire amendment, and clearly this goes into a field that is not covered by the bill. It may have some features that could be tied on to this particular bill, but it certainly has some features that cannot be so construed.

I understand the same question came up on the Bailey amendment to the cotton bill, and it was ruled not to be in order by the Chair on that amendment on that bill, which is very similar to this bill now pending.

As the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] stated, I am very much in favor of grading and standardizing products. I think that is the only way to have proper marketing and distribution of them, but it is an entirely different subject, or at least launches into a field that goes far beyond the scope of this particular bill.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield.

Mr. MAY. I should like to propound this inquiry: As I understand this bill, its whole design and purpose is to enable the producers of tobacco to market the tobacco at a profit?

Mr. JONES. The design and purpose of this bill is to control the amount of the production. Incidentally, that is done for the purpose of accomplishing the object to which the gentleman refers. All of these other provisions are incidental and ancillary to that purpose. The whole purpose is to control the amount of production of tobacco. There is a bill pending to amend the grading and standardizing act. I think the gentleman's colleague or former colleague, Mr. SPENCE, is the author of the other measure.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield for a further question?

Mr. JONES. I yield.

Mr. MAY. If it is simply to regulate the production of tobacco, and will not result in an increased price. In view of the debates on this bill, the bill would be useless?

Mr. JONES. That, of course, is the sole purpose of the bill.

Mr. MAY. If by separating tobacco into three grades, the top grade will sell for more money than the entire offering of tobacco would bring if sold ungraded, would not the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia be germane to the bill and be a proper part of the legislation?

Mr. JONES. A great many elements might enter into the price. The fact that grading might affect the price does not make that subject germane to a bill which endeavors by an entirely different method to accomplish the purpose stated by the gentleman.

Mr. BROWN of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, may I be heard on the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. BROWN of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, unless section 2 of the bill which purports to set out the policy of the Congress means absolutely nothing, then there can be no question as to the germaneness of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia. Section 2 makes this declaration of policy:

SEC. 2. It is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress to promote the orderly marketing of tobacco in interstate and foreign commerce, to enable producers of tobacco to stabilize their markets against undue and excessive fluctuations, to prevent unfair competition and practices in putting tobacco into the channels of interstate and foreign commerce, and to more effectively balance production and consumption of tobacco, and to relieve the present emergency with respect to tobacco.

There is no practice anywhere that tends so much to defraud the farmer out of the fair market value of his product than the present practice in the sale of tobacco. As the gentleman from Georgia has said, it is nothing unusual for the same pound of tobacco to sell for 10 cents in the morning and for 15 cents in the afternoon. I received a letter from a tobacco farmer in my district citing an instance of this kind which occurred in the sale of tobacco this year. A basket of tobacco in one line in the forenoon was bid at $8 a hundred. Before the tobacco was tagged, the farmer slipped it over to the end of the other line and the same buyer bought it for $18 a hundred.

Now, if we are sincere in wanting to give the tobacco farmer a break in establishing a fair price for his product, there is no question but what this is one of the best things we can do to accomplish this purpose.

I want to call another thing to the attention of the committee: This bill will go to the Senate. Here we are haggling and quibbling over the germaneness of this amendment, when the Senate can put this amendment in the bill, send it back to us, and we will swallow it. Why can we not do something for the farmers ourselves instead of waiting for the Senate to do it?

Mr. DEEN. Mr. Chairman, may I be heard further on the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. DEEN. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BROWN] if it is not true that the main purpose of this bill is to raise the price of tobacco for the grower. Supporting and upholding this purpose is the principle of assessing a tax to control the crop of the non-contractors. That being a subordinating and supporting principle and influence, is it not true, in the gentleman's opinion, that we ought to add the additional means which has been proved the best way of raising the price for the producer, that of proper grading? Acreage control and grading are the two underlying essential principles which ultimately will bring a profitable price to the grower.

Mr. BROWN of Kentucky. There is no question but what the purpose back of this bill is to enable the tobacco farmer to get a decent and a fair price for his product. Whatever will help bring this about falls within the declared policy of the bill.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Chairman, answering the statement of the gentleman from Georgia and likewise the argument of the gentleman from Kentucky, the declaration of policy is set out for the purpose of showing that it affects interstate commerce in order to assure jurisdiction of this particular question. It does not go into the question of grading or standardization of tobacco in any sense.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Chairman, may I be heard on the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Chairman, I agree with the statement made by the gentleman from Kentucky. I am in sympathy with him; but there is now pending what is known as the "Byrns bill", a bill which has been carefully prepared and which provides for the grading of tobacco. I believe we should deal with this question by passing that bill, for it has been considered by experts and those who know something about the tobacco question.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, will the Chair hear me further on the point of order? Apparently those who contend that the amendment is germane do so on the theory that the declaration of policy contained in section 2 of the bill is broad enough to include it.

Mr. Chairman, I submit that the declaration of policy is nothing more or less than a stump speech. If anything covered by the declaration of policy is germane, then it would follow that you could put almost anything relating to tobacco and its production and marketing into this bill.

The determination of whether or not the amendment is germane must rest on the legislative features of the bill and not on the declaration of policy. I think it is very clear that this bill has for its sole purpose the regulation of the production of tobacco and the taxing of all production in excess of a certain permitted amount. Certainly under these circumstances an amendment providing for grading and classifying of tobacco is not germane.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word of section 2.

Mr. Chairman, as I view it, this bill is just one more of those steps which, the first having been taken, must follow inevitably. The administration started out to control, or, rather, to put it I think more accurately, to restrict the productive capacities of the American people and their soil, a thing which few governments have ever attempted to do and no government has ever succeeded in doing, largely because such an attempt is in violation of human nature and physical nature.

The administration started first with the attempt to control the production of wheat by inviting farmers to sign a voluntary contract to reduce their acreage, tempting them with a certain sum of money per bushel to pay for refraining from cultivating the soil which awaits cultivation, the money to be raised by a processing tax. There is already grave doubt that the wheat-control program can be made a success. No government, I may suggest, can anticipate acts of God, and the drought in the Middle West has completely upset the plans and specifications of the all-wise supermen of our bureaucracy.

Next came the hog-control program, coupled with corn control. This subject has been discussed upon the floor here. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRUAX] led me up to high hopes when he denounced that sort of a program, and dumped me off the cliff when he said he was going to vote for this bill. The hog program has already broken down. That might just as well be admitted. The processing tax on hogs has not benefited the hog producer one single nickel. Instead it has hurt the industry and is resulting today in a decreased price of hogs in every stockyard of the country. The tax is being paid by the producer and is not being paid by the consumer, who is showing that element of "consumer resistance" which no government can overcome.

We have gone into the cotton field and resorted to compulsion in a desperate endeavor to reduce the amount of cotton which may be raised and sold and thus increase its price. I myself have heard the Secretary of Agriculture deplore resort to compulsion in the matter of control of agricultural products. He stated it had been resorted to in the case of cotton upon the particular occasion I was listening to him, and hoped it would go no farther, but he was afraid it would have to be resorted to in reference to tobacco.

Already we have quotas on sugar. The element of compulsion lies under these quotas. We have told the people of Hawaii how many tons of sugar they may send here. We have told the people of our Puerto Rico Territory how much they can produce. We are telling our own beet-sugar people how much they may produce. Now, another great field of agriculture is invaded with the long arm of the Federal Government, and at the end of that arm is a mailed fist enclosed in the velvet glove of legislation such as this.

How far are we going in this program? We have already tackled wheat, hogs, corn, sugar, cotton, and now tobacco. All of these efforts show the hand of compulsion. We are moving in the direction of telling the farmers of this country how they shall earn their living.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I particularly address myself to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH], and the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED].

It is one of the duties of an opposition party to subject the policies of the party in power to searching criticism. In doing this it performs a valuable service to the Nation. For if the criticism is sound, it leads to the modification of unsound policies.

But the opposition has another duty as well. It is to propose a program of its own that aims at great constructive results. The Republicans may well pay attention to such utterances as that of Charles H. Tuttle, former Republican candidate for Governor of New York, in a recent address to a local New York Republican club. Mr. Tuttle starts with the assumption that the American people have definitely turned their backs upon "a social and economic order dominated and exploited by ever-augmenting aggregations of wealth and inspired by an insatiable thirst for profits."

Therefore the great body of Republican voters would not accept a leadership that would proceed as if nothing had happened and nothing had been revealed between the years 1929 and 1932. So Mr. Tuttle calls for a program that carries hope for the betterment of the average man and that rejects "the chaotic individualism that spiraled down to the greatest economic smash in our history."

The question is how to work out such a program. There is competent opinion as to how it can be done. But can that opinion find expression in the Republican national leadership?

I have just read an editorial from the great independent newspaper, the Kansas City Star. That newspaper supported Mr. Hoover.

I say that that newspaper sounds the proper keynote to the people of this country today. If you want to destroy, offer constructive suggestions as to what should be done to take the place of that which you would destroy.

Some Republicans are continually criticising, but what are they doing in the way of offering constructive suggestions as to how to end this depression?

Mr. McGUGIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I have but a minute. The gentleman from Kansas well knows the value of the newspaper from which I have read. He knows very well the power behind that newspaper not only throughout the State of Missouri, but in his own State and district.

May I say that it would be well for the Republicans of this House to follow the suggestion found in the editorial I have just read. [Applause.]

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

IMPOSITION

SEC. 3. (a) There is hereby levied and assessed on the sale of tobacco with respect to which the tax is applicable a tax at the rate of 33¼ percent of the price for which such tobacco is sold: Provided, however, That if the Secretary of Agriculture determines and proclaims that the declared policy of this act is best effectuated thereby, the rate of tax shall, for such period as the Secretary of Agriculture designates, be at such lower rate (not less than 25 percent of the price for which such tobacco is sold) as he may prescribe.

(b) The tax provided for by subsection (a) of this section shall be applicable to all tobacco harvested in the crop year 1934–1935, except Maryland tobacco, Virginia sun-cured tobacco and cigar leaf tobacco. Thereafter whenever the Secretary of Agriculture determines that the persons who own, rent, share crop, or control two-thirds of the land customarily engaged in the production of any particular type of tobacco favor the levy of the tax thereon and that the imposition of the tax thereon is necessary for the orderly marketing of such tobacco in interstate and foreign commerce and to effectuate the declared policy of this act, he shall proclaim such determination at least 60 days prior to the next succeeding crop year, and the tax shall thereafter apply to tobacco of such type harvested during the crop year next following the date of such proclamation.

(c) The provisions of this act shall be applicable to the United States and its possessions, except the Philippine Islands, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, the Canal Zone, and the island of Guam.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. JONES: Page 4, after line 20, insert: "The tax provided for by subsection (a) of this section shall not apply to any tobacco harvested after April 30, 1936."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto now close.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina moves that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto now close.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

EXEMPTIONS

SEC. 4. (a) No tax shall be imposed under this act—

(1) Upon the tobacco harvested by any publicly owned experimental station or agricultural laboratory; or

(2) Upon tobacco grown by growers who produce less than 2,000 pounds of tobacco per crop year.

(3) Upon tobacco harvested prior to the crop year 1934–35.

(b) Under such rules and regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may prescribe, every person who, at the time the tax becomes applicable with respect to any type of tobacco, holds for sale (or use in the manufacture or production of an article intended for sale) any tobacco of such type harvested prior to the crop year 1934–35 shall cause such tobacco to be tagged, stamped, or otherwise identified as tax-exempt tobacco.

Mr. PARKER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I want to say that I am greatly disappointed at the action of the committee in refusing to accept the amendment of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. DEEN]. Last year Georgia produced $6,000,000 worth of tobacco. In other words, the producers sold the tobacco grown in Georgia for 11½ cents a pound, which amounted to $6,000,000. It should have brought $10,000,000.

All of that tobacco was produced in four congressional districts in the southern part of the State—the districts represented by Mr. COX, Mr. CASTELLOW, Mr. DEEN, and myself. If this bill is enacted without the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. DEEN], it will amount to little. It will only mean that we will have less tobacco for the manufacturers to steal from our constituents who produce it.

I have gone to these tobacco warehouses and seen one of my constituents bring in two sheets of tobacco grown by the same man, putting one sheet on the floor here and another on the floor there; and the same buyer will pay twice as much for one sheet of the same tobacco as he will pay for the other.

If the purpose of this bill is not to raise the price of tobacco and give the producer a living wage for his work in growing that crop, then I do not know why we are considering the bill at all or why we should attempt to pass it.

If that is the purpose of it, I want to say to you that there certainly can be no better way to get a higher price for tobacco than by having it graded, so that the producer knows when he takes it to the warehouse what it ought to bring. If he does not know whether he should get 10 cents or 20 cents a pound he cannot refuse to sell when the auctioneer offers him a certain price.

The fact that somebody else has introduced a bill which is not on the calendar that will take care of this situation if enacted into law beggars the question.

The bill introduced by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] is a good bill. This being true, why not incorporate it into this bill? Why take two bites at a cherry? If the amendment of the gentleman from Georgia is all right, if it embodies the same principle that is embodied in the bill of the gentleman from Tennessee, which we may or may not vote on, why cannot we incorporate the legislation in this bill and be sure of passing it now? Why should we come back and pass another bill?

Mr. BYRNS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PARKER. I yield.

Mr. BYRNS. I have no pride of opinion in my bill, but I will say that my bill, like the amendment of the gentleman from Georgia, would be ruled out of order if it was offered, and, therefore, it is not possible under the rules of the House and parliamentary procedure to offer it. That is the explanation.

Mr. PARKER. The gentleman helped the chairman arrive at that conclusion by the remarks he made. I think the amendment was germane and clearly in order.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. McGUGIN. Mr. Chairman, I have said on a number of occasions in the last few days that the Democratic Party 2 years ago had as good a platform as any party ever had with which to go before the country. The truth is that that platform carries two provisions, which, if lived up to, would do as much for tobacco, in my judgment, as it would be possible for the Congress of the United States to do. In the first place tobacco is the one outstanding commodity of which the producer is absolutely within the clutches of monopoly. I do not care how much you undertake to regulate production or control prices, in the end the price which the farmer receives for tobacco is going to be controlled by the most outstanding and unconscionable monopoly in the United States. The way to meet monopoly is to prosecute it and dissolve it, if necessary.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McGUGIN. No. In that platform we find the following plank:

We advocate strengthening and impartial enforcement of the antitrust laws, to prevent monopoly and unfair trade practices, and revision thereof for the better protection of labor and the small producer and distributor.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman is not addressing himself to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas will proceed in order.

Mr. McGUGIN. I am going to proceed just as the gentleman before me proceeded upon his motion, which was a pro forma motion. The carrying out of that section, by enforcing the antimonopoly laws, would do some good for the tobacco producers.

Let us see about the policy of restricting production. Again the Democratic Party had a most splendid paragraph on that section, and I can most highly commend it. I quote:

We condemn the extravagance of the Farm Board, its disastrous action which made the Government a speculator of farm products, and the unsound policy of restricting agricultural products to the demands of domestic markets.

This is the platform of the Democratic Party 2 years ago. "We condemn the unsound policy of restricting agricultural products to the demands of domestic markets"—yet this bill and the Bankhead cotton bill and every piece of recent farm legislation is based upon the policy of reducing production of farm products to American consumption.

I can go along with my friend from Texas [Mr. JONES] on the proposition that agriculture has not had a fair shake, selling on an open market and buying on a closed market, but the policy which you are following now does not correct that wrong or start to correct it. Wherein do you equalize the spread between farm and industrial prices by cutting down the cotton production?

To carry out this policy and reduce cotton production down to American consumption, you would have to reduce cotton production 60 percent, and then you would have to apply a processing tax or some other policy to force up the price. There is no way of forcing up the price of a commodity of which we produce a surplus. It is an unsound policy to try to reduce production of American farm products to American consumption, and if this Congress today were keeping faith with those two planks of the Democratic Party, first enforcing the antimonopoly laws and then not try to reduce farm production to American consumption, we might be making headway, but instead of enforcing the antimonopoly laws, what do we find? The setting up of the N.R.A. and giving to monopoly the sheltering hand of Government protection from prosecution.

Mr. SABATH. Is not the gentleman familiar with the hearings of the Federal Trade Commission; does he not know that they are investigating the activities?

Mr. McGUGIN. You do not need any investigation to find the tobacco monopoly. Every newsboy knows that there is a tobacco monopoly. All that is needed is for the Department of Justice to start prosecution.

Mr. SABATH. They are taking testimony and starting prosecutions against monopoly.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has expired.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 5. (a) In addition to rental or benefit payments which under any provision of existing law the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to make in connection with agreements with producers providing for reduction in the acreage or reduction in the production for market, or both, of any basic agricultural commodity, the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized and directed to issue (in each crop-year wherein any type of tobacco is harvested to which the tax is applicable) to each contracting producer nontransferable tax-payment warrants (each such warrant to be expressed in pounds of tobacco of a particular type). Upon surrender of any warrant by any contracting producer to the collector, it shall be accepted by the collector and the Secretary of the Treasury in payment of the tax on any sale by such contracting producer of the type of tobacco specified in the warrant not exceeding in amount the amount of tobacco covered by such warrant. Any contracting producer shall be entitled to receive such warrants covering amounts of any type of tobacco produced by him equal (1) to the number of pounds of tobacco of such type which such contracting producer is permitted to market under any agreement between him and the Secretary of Agriculture, or (2) to the number of pounds of tobacco of such type which the Secretary of Agriculture estimates may be produced on a percentage of a base acreage, which percentage and base acreage shall be determined as provided in any agreement between the Secretary of Agriculture and such contracting producer.

(b) The Secretary of Agriculture may issue in any county further warrants, covering an amount of tobacco of any type not in excess of 5 percent of the amount of tobacco of such type covered by the warrants issued to all contracting producers in such county, to persons engaged in the production of tobacco of such type in such county as to whom the Secretary determines that no equitable allotment of tobacco acreage or production is possible under tobacco-reduction contracts offered pursuant to the Agricultural Adjustment Act: Provided, That no such person shall be entitled to receive warrants unless he shall agree with the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate in the reduction programs of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe. Warrants issued under this subsection shall be accepted by the collector and the Secretary of the Treasury, upon surrender thereof by the person to whom issued, in payment of the tax on any sale by such person of the type of tobacco specified in the warrant not exceeding in amount the amount of tobacco covered by such warrant.

(c) Upon application therefor, the warrants provided for by subsections (a) and (b) of this section may be issued by the Secretary of Agriculture, or his duly authorized agent, in such manner, at such time or times, at such place or places, and in such form as the Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe.

(d) Any tax-payment warrant erroneously issued shall be void upon demand in writing for its return made by the Secretary of Agriculture to the person to whom such warrant was issued.

(e) The right to a tax-payment warrant under this section shall be evidenced in such manner as the Secretary of Agriculture may by regulations prescribe.

(f) The Secretary of Agriculture may make regulations protecting the interests of share-croppers and tenants in the issuance of tax-payment warrants under this act.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BOILEAU: Page 6, line 5, after the parentheses, strike out the period, insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That no such person shall be entitled to receive warrants unless he shall agree with the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate in the reduction program of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe"; and on page 7, line 6, after the word "act", strike out the proviso down to and including the word "prescribe" in line 10.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, I call the attention of members of the committee to the language on page 7 beginning in line 6 and ending in line 10. That language, in my opinion, is in that place because of the fact that it was not brought to the attention of the committee that it is in that particular part of the section.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOILEAU. In just a moment. I want to make this brief statement. That language should properly be on page 6 right after the word "type" in line 5, and my amendment merely strikes out the proviso beginning on page 7, line 6, down to line 10, and inserts that same language after the word "type", in line 5, on page 6.

Now, that is very important, because where that provision is now, it provides that no person shall be entitled to receive warrants unless he shall agree with the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate in the reduction programs of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe. That language in its present position applies only to a very few farmers, because it is connected with subsection (b). Subsection (b) of that section provides that an extra 5 percent can be allotted among the farmers, and its provision refers only to that extra 5 percent that is distributed among the farmers, only those persons are required to agree to abide by the regulations of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

I believe that any person who gets these tax-payment warrants certainly should do nothing less than show a willingness to cooperate in this program. If they want to get these tax-payment warrants, and they are entitled to them, certainly they should be willing to agree that they will comply with the rules and regulations provided by the A.A.A. You may call it regimentation, but I call it common sense. If people are to get the benefits of the act, they should abide by the rules and regulations and should cooperate.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOILEAU. I yield.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. If I understand the gentleman, the language which the gentlemen seeks to transpose, according to his statement, refers, as it stands in the present bill, to the persons referred to in subparagraph (b)?

Mr. BOILEAU. That is my understanding.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. If we transpose that language and place it in paragraph (a), what it does is to make the bill compulsory.

Mr. BOILEAU. I would not say it makes it compulsory. It would provide that any person who got the tax-payment warrant would sign an agreement with the Secretary of Agriculture that he will cooperate in the reduction programs of the A.A.A., and I want to say that nothing less should be expected of him.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. The gentleman will admit that it makes it compulsory? One of the major differences between the Bankhead bill and this bill is the compulsory feature. If the gentleman transposes the language to paragraph (a), the gentleman makes it a compulsory proposition. As it is written, the provision applies only to those who are included in the 5 percent outside the agreement.

Mr. BOILEAU. I would say it makes it as compulsory as the Bankhead bill. I will agree with the gentleman to that extent. If a man gets these warrants, he then agrees to comply with the reduction programs of the A.A.A. I believe he should go that far. If he is to get the benefit of these tax-payment warrants, he should be willing to cooperate to the fullest extent. Let me say further to the gentleman from Kentucky that this language only puts into the written law what the farmers have already agreed to in these reduction programs. It only puts into the law what 90 percent of the farmers have already agreed to.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. There is nothing in the reduction contracts that deals with any tax payments.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOILEAU. Under the agreements that the cotton producers have already signed, they have agreed to control the production of cotton. Is that not a fact?

Mr. FULMER. Under regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. But there is nothing in those contracts that provides for the payment of any excess tax.

Mr. BOILEAU. But these contracts provide that they must reduce their production 30 percent. This bill provides that those people who do not sign will have their tobacco taxed. If a person signs an agreement to reduce his production, and if he lives up to that agreement, there will be no tobacco produced by him that will be subject to the tax. Is that not a fact?

Mr. FULMER. Yes.

Mr. BOILEAU. If a farmer signs an agreement to reduce his production 30 percent, and if he lives up to his agreement—he must sign that agreement before he can get the benefits of this act—and if he lives up to his agreement, there is no tax imposed on any of his tobacco.

Mr. FULMER. No.

Mr. BOILEAU. This bill with my amendment would be no different than it now stands with reference to the compulsory features. There would be no difference in the bill in its present form and as I offered to amend it so far as any compulsion is concerned. If a person lives up to his agreement he will not have to pay a tax. No person should expect to get the benefits of this act unless he lives up to the agreement. Everyone who gets these warrants should sign an agreement that he will comply with all the rules and regulations and cooperate in the Agricultural Adjustment program set out by the Department of Agriculture. I believe it is essential and it is fair, and I do not believe there should be a man on the Democratic side of the House who should object to it, because if you object to this it means you are apprehensive that some people will deliberately violate their agreements, that some farmers are deliberately going to try to cheat the Government and other farmers, and you will be tolerating that action. There should not be a dissenting vote on the Democratic side of the House. I believe this language would have been put in the place I suggest had it been brought to the attention of the committee, as I believe the committee would have wanted that language in the bill, and it was put in its present place entirely through a mistake.

Mr. FULMER. Subsection (b) provides that the Secretary can allot a total of 5 percent to new farmers and to farmers who cannot qualify under the voluntary agreement. Then this proviso was inserted solely for the purpose of having these people who receive a part of that allotment agree to qualify along with those who came into the voluntary program. It does not apply to the farmer who has already joined in the program, but simply gives to the Secretary of Agriculture the right to bring the other fellow under the same rules and regulations that apply to those in the voluntary program. It was carried in the Bankhead bill.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULMER. I yield.

Mr. BOILEAU. If it is desired to have this provision apply to some farmers, why not have it apply to all?

Mr. FULMER. We want all the tobacco farmers brought into this program, for 5 percent could destroy the tobacco-growing industry.

Mr. BOILEAU. This amendment will not in any way harm the bill; it will not prejudice the farmer who signs an agreement and who lives up to it.

Mr. FULMER. How about the fellow who is already in?

Mr. BOILEAU. Neither the fellow who is already in nor the fellow who may come in in the future.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULMER. I yield.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. This amendment would not in any way affect the people who sign an agreement and who live up to it. Is not this a fact?

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin would tend to disturb the orderly arrangement whereby the Department of Agriculture will be able to force the man who comes in after the passage of this bill to comply like the farmer who volunteered before the passage of this bill.

I hope the amendment will be voted down.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield further, is it not a fact that a similar provision was put in the Bankhead bill and was included in the sugar bill—and by similar I mean of the same purport?

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in the interest of the tobacco growers of the Connecticut Valley. I hold in my hand a brief filed with the Subcommittee of the Committee on Agriculture on April 21 of this year by the New England Tobacco Growers' Association, Inc. The first paragraph, if I may be permitted to read it, is as follows:

> The directors of the New England Tobacco Growers' Association, Inc., at a meeting called for the purpose of discussing the Kerr bill voted 17 to 11 to oppose the passage of the bill, and filed a copy of their vote with the Members of the House and Senate from the Connecticut Valley.

That vote still stands as the only official record of the New England Tobacco Growers' Association, Inc., regarding the Kerr bill. Aside from one or two telegrams that is the last message that I have had from the group of tobacco growers in what is known as the "Connecticut Valley", which, as the gentleman knows, extends into the district I represent in Massachusetts.

This brief calls attention to what to them appeared to be defects in the language of the bill and indicates that if those changes were made that very likely they would be favorable toward the bill. I have heard nothing further from this organization since April 21; and I would be glad to have further information as to whether or not the changes in the Kerr bill desired by the Connecticut Valley tobacco growers have been made, whether the objections raised by my constituents at that time have been considered?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. I may say to the gentleman from Massachusetts that since then the growers from the Connecticut Valley have agreed upon an amendment which was accepted by the subcommittee and which is incorporated in the bill.

Mr. TREADWAY. Then, may I further call attention to these statements:

This was at another meeting of this same organization—

> Those present agreed that if the Kerr bill becomes law it should provide that exemptions from the tax on outdoor tobacco be made only under the outdoor acreage reduction contract.

Is there any provision of this nature in the bill?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. I do not think those growers ever came in under the voluntary plan.

Mr. TREADWAY. The gentleman thinks they would be exempted anyway?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Yes.

Mr. TREADWAY. They also said:

Those present agreed that no exemptions from the tax should be made because of the small acreage grown.

I assume that would mean a farmer who uses certain areas of his farm land for tobacco growing perhaps as a little side issue, where tobacco growing does not take up all the occupational use of his farm.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. Certainly; I am looking for information; and I think there are several other Members from adjoining sections who are very much interested in these details.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. Referring to the small-acreage farmer, section 4, on page 5 of the bill, specifically exempts a farmer where the amount of tobacco grown is less than 2,000 pounds per crop-year.

Mr. TREADWAY. How many acres would that mean?

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. I do not know about Connecticut, but in the burley sections it would be something like 3 acres.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. It would not be more than 2 acres, probably.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. I think it would probably be something like 3 acres.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Chairman, if my colleague will permit an interruption, referring to page 4, subsection (b) exempts what is known as "cigar leaf tobacco."

Mr. TREADWAY. That brings up the question of definition, of course. Is that clearly understood?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. KERR. I understand that practically all tobacco grown in Connecticut is known as "wrapper tobacco" for cigars?

If the gentleman will turn to subsection (b) it is provided that the tax provided for by subsection (a) shall be applicable to all tobacco harvested in the crop year 1934–35, except Maryland tobacco, Virginia sun-cured tobacco and cigar-leaf tobacco.

Mr. TREADWAY. That necessitates a definition on somebody's part as to exactly what cigar-leaf tobacco may be.

Mr. KERR. I may say further for the information of the gentleman that the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. KOPPLEMANN] was very much interested in the construction of this bill and proposed the amendment which is embodied in section 16 of the bill. That section covers the importation of cigar tobacco which comes in direct conflict with the cigar tobacco grown in Connecticut. Section 16 provides that after a quota or allotment is made by the Government for the importation of this type of tobacco, the Government shall fix a tax so as to not discriminate.

Mr. TREADWAY. May I call attention to another matter?

Those present agreed that the bill should not be applied to one type of cigar tobacco unless it is applied to all other competing types.

Is that point covered?

Mr. FULMER. I may say that under the administration of this bill any type of tobacco that does not require control of production will be exempted. If the time should come when even those under this bill should not be controlled, that type of tobacco will be protected.

Mr. TREADWAY. May I call attention to a telegram received a day or two later reading as follows:

Unless Kerr bill is passed and proclaimed effective before May 1, 1934, it will not be effective in 1934.

In other words, the tobacco raised in that area would not be covered by the bill unless the bill were enacted into law before May 1. That is nearly a month and a half ago, and I assume this may apply to tobacco raised in other regions, but would not apply to tobacco up there in the Connecticut Valley. Frankly, I am very much confused about this bill, and I am somewhat confused as to the attitude of the growers in my section, and would be very glad to have any enlightenment that the committee may be able to give me.

Mr. FULMER. What time is the tobacco harvested in the gentleman's section?

Mr. TREADWAY. I should say they gather the crop possibly the latter part of September.

Mr. FULMER. They will be covered under this bill.

Mr. TREADWAY. Some do not seem to think so. Of course, their information may not be correct.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Did the gentleman say the tobacco was planted around the 1st of May?

Mr. TREADWAY. That is the planting time in our territory. Probably all of the tobacco is fairly well up now or I assume it is.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. May I say that we had several people before the committee from Connecticut, and probably some from Massachusetts. Mr. Cochran, of Connecticut, appeared with them. I believe the committee adopted all of the recommendations made by the Connecticut committee. The Connecticut growers did not want the small tobacco grower exempted from the operation of the bill.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

COLLECTION OF TAXES

SEC. 6. (a) The taxes provided for in this act shall be paid by the seller and collected by the Bureau of Internal Revenue under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury. Such taxes shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States.

(b) All provisions of law, including penalties (except sec. 1121 of the Revenue Act of 1920), applicable with respect to the taxes imposed by section 600 of the Revenue Act of 1926, and the provisions of section 626 of the Revenue Act of 1932, shall, insofar as applicable and not inconsistent with the provisions of this act, be applicable in regard to all taxes imposed by this act.

Mr. DEEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, may I call the attention of the chairman of the committee to the language in the bill on page 4, beginning with line 6, as follows?—

The taxes provided for by subsection (a) of this section shall be applicable to all tobacco harvested in the crop year 1934–35, except Maryland tobacco, Virginia sun-cured tobacco, and cigar-leaf tobacco.

Does not the committee think it is perhaps not wise to permit the exemption for these States on this particular type of tobacco? Does not the committee think it is a bad precedent for the reason it will be impossible to explain this exemption to the other States that grow tobacco? For instance, in my own district there are perhaps eight to twelve or fifteen thousand growers who will not understand why this tax was not made applicable to the State of Maryland, or to Virginia, or to the tobacco grower in Virginia of this particular type of tobacco.

Mr. FULMER. The tobacco grown in Maryland is a different type of tobacco than that grown in the gentleman's State or in my State. They do not grow nearly a sufficient amount of that type of tobacco to take care of the demand. That also applies to the sun-cured tobacco raised in Virginia. For a number of years they have been producing a less quantity of that type of tobacco than the demand required. Naturally they are not under the voluntary plan and they will not come under this one.

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk concluded the reading of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. UMSTEAD, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 9690) to place the tobacco-growing industry on a sound financial and economic basis, to prevent unfair competition and practices in the production and marketing of tobacco entering into the channels of interstate and foreign commerce, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 420, he reported the same back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HOPE) there were—ayes 66, noes 44.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present, and make the point of order a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently, a quorum is not present.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 206, nays 143, answered "present" 1, not voting 80, as follows:

[Roll No. 177]

YEAS—206

Adair	Darden	Johnson, W.Va.	Richards
Adams	Dear	Jones	Robertson
Arens	Deen	Keller	Robinson
Arnold	Delaney	Kennedy, Md.	Rogers, Okla.
Ayers, Mont.	Dickinson	Kerr	Romjue
Bacharach	Disney	Kleberg	Rudd
Bailey	Dobbins	Kloeb	Ruffin
Bankhead	Dockweiler	Kniffin	Sabath
Beam	Doughton	Lambeth	Sanders, La.
Beiter	Doxey	Larrabee	Sanders, Tex.
Bland	Drewry	Lea, Calif.	Sandlin
Blanton	Driver	Lesinski	Scrugham
Bloom	Duffey	Lewis, Colo.	Sears
Boehne	Duncan, Mo.	Lewis, Md.	Shallenberger
Boileau	Durgan, Ind.	Lindsay	Shannon
Boland	Eagle	Lozier	Sinclair
Boylan	Edmiston	McClintic	Smith, Va.
Brown, Ga.	Ellzey, Miss.	McDuffie	Snyder
Brown, Ky.	Faddis	McFarlane	Spence
Brown, Mich.	Farley	McGrath	Strong, Tex.
Brunner	Fernandez	McKeown	Stubbs
Buchanan	Fitzpatrick	McReynolds	Sullivan
Bulwinkle	Flannagan	McSwain	Swank
Burch	Fletcher	Maloney, Conn.	Sweeney
Byrns	Ford	Maloney, La.	Tarver
Caldwell	Foulkes	Martin, Colo.	Taylor, Colo.
Cannon, Mo.	Frey	Martin, Oreg.	Terry, Ark.
Cannon, Wis.	Fuller	May	Thom
Carden, Ky.	Fulmer	Mead	Thomason
Carmichael	Gasque	Miller	Thompson, Tex.
Cartwright	Gavagan	Milligan	Truax
Cary	Gilchrist	Monaghan, Mont.	Turner
Castellow	Glover	Montague	Umstead
Chapman	Greenwood	Murdock	Underwood
Chavez	Gregory	O'Connell	Utterback
Claiborne	Haines	O'Connor	Vinson, Ga.
Clark, N.C.	Hamilton	O'Malley	Vinson, Ky.
Colden	Hancock, N.C.	Oliver, Ala.	Wallgren
Cole	Harlan	Oliver, N.Y.	Warren
Colmer	Hart	Owen	Weaver
Condon	Hastings	Palmisano	Werner
Connery	Healey	Parker	West, Ohio
Cooper, Tenn.	Henney	Patman	West, Tex.
Cox	Hildebrandt	Pierce	Whittington
Cravens	Hill, Ala.	Polk	Williford
Crosby	Hill, Knute	Prall	Williams
Cross, Tex.	Hill, Samuel B.	Ramsay	Wilson
Crosser, Ohio	Imhoff	Ramspeck	Withrow
Crowe	Jacobsen	Randolph	Wood, Ga.
Crump	Johnson, Minn.	Rayburn	Zioncheck
Cullen	Johnson, Okla.	Reece
Cummings	Johnson, Tex.	Reilly

NAYS—143

Allen	Busby	Connolly	Dunn
Andrew, Mass.	Cady	Cooper, Ohio	Eaton
Ayres, Kans.	Carpenter, Kans.	Corning	Edmonds
Bakewell	Carpenter, Nebr.	Crowther	Eicher
Beck	Carter, Calif.	Culkin	Eltse, Calif.
Beedy	Carter, Wyo.	Darrow	Englebright
Biermann	Cavicchia	De Priest	Evans
Blanchard	Christianson	Dingell	Fiesinger
Britten	Clarke, N.Y.	Dirksen	Focht
Buck	Cochran, Mo.	Ditter	Foss
Burke, Nebr.	Cochran, Pa.	Dondero	Gifford
Burnham	Collins, Calif.	Dowell	Gillespie
Gillette	Lambertson	Nesbit	Swick
Goodwin	Lamneck	O'Brien	Taber
Granfield	Lanzetta	Parsons	Taylor, S.C.
Gray	Lehlbach	Peavey	Taylor, Tenn.
Greenway	Lehr	Perkins	Terrell, Tex.
Guyer	Lemke	Pettengill	Thomas
Hancock, N.Y.	Ludlow	Peyser	Thompson, Ill.
Hartley	Lundeen	Powers	Tinkham
Hess	McCarthy	Rankin	Tobey
Hoeppel	McFadden	Ransley	Traeger
Hollister	McGugin	Reed, N.Y.	Treadway
Holmes	McLean	Richardson	Turpin
Hope	McLeod	Rogers, Mass.	Wadsworth
Jenckes, Ind.	McMillan	Sadowski	Wearin
Jenkins, Ohio	Mapes	Schaefer	Welch
Kahn	Marshall	Schuetz	Whitley
Kelly, Ill.	Martin, Mass.	Schulte	Wigglesworth
Kelly, Pa.	Meeks	Secrest	Wolcott
Kennedy, N.Y.	Merritt	Seger	Wolfenden
Kenney	Millard	Snell	Wolverton
Kinzer	Mitchell	Somers, N.Y.	Wood, Mo.
Knutson	Morehead	Stokes	Woodruff
Kocialkowski	Mott	Strong, Pa.	Young
Kurtz	Musselwhite	Studley

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

Ellenbogen

NOT VOTING—80

Abernethy	Dickstein	Jeffers	Reid, Ill.
Allgood	Dies	Kee	Rich
Andrews, N.Y.	Douglass	Kopplemann	Rogers, N.H.
Auf der Heide	Doutrich	Kramer	Shoemaker
Bacon	Fish	Kvale	Simpson
Berlin	Fitzgibbons	Lanham	Sirovich
Black	Frear	Lee, Mo.	Sisson
Bolton	Gambrill	Lloyd	Smith, Wash.
Brennan	Goldsborough	Luce	Smith, W.Va.
Brooks	Goss	McCormack	Stalker
Browning	Green	Mansfield	Steagall
Buckbee	Griffin	Marland	Sumners, Tex.
Burke, Calif.	Griswold	Montet	Sutphin
Carley, N.Y.	Harter	Moran	Thurston
Celler	Higgins	Moynihan, Ill.	Waldron
Chase	Hoidale	Muldowney	Walter
Church	Howard	Norton	Weideman
Coffin	Huddleston	Parks	White
Collins, Miss.	Hughes	Peterson	Wilcox
DeRouen	James	Plumley	Woodrum

So the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Steagall (for) with Mr. Andrews of New York (against).
Mr. Woodrum (for) with Mr. Bolton (against).
Mr. Peterson (for) with Mr. Bacon (against).
Mr. Lee of Missouri (for) with Mr. Muldowney (against).
Mr. DeRouen (for) with Mr. Doutrich (against).
Mr. Brooks (for) with Mr. Fish (against).
Mr. Carley of New York (for) with Mr. Chase (against).
Mr. Jeffers (for) with Mr. Rich (against).
Mr. Griffin (for) with Mr. Goss (against).
Mr. Gambrill (for) with Mr. Higgins (against).
Mr. McCormack (for) with Mr. Plumley (against).
Mr. Sirovich (for) with Mr. Luce (against).
Mr. Douglass (for) with Mr. Moynihan of Illinois (against).
Mr. Kopplemann (for) with Mr. Simpson (against).

General pairs:

Mr. Allgood with Mr. James.
Mr. Celler with Mr. Frear.
Mr. Browning with Mr. Waldron.
Mr. Lanham with Mr. Thurston.
Mr. Rogers of New Hampshire with Mr. Stalker.
Mr. Smith of West Virginia with Mr. Reid of Illinois.
Mr. Mansfield with Mr. Buckbee.
Mr. Goldsborough with Mr. Kvale.
Mr. Hughes with Mr. Shoemaker.
Mr. Montet with Mr. Collins of Mississippi.
Mr. Parks with Mr. White.
Mr. Sutphin with Mr. Dies.
Mr. Black with Mr. Lloyd.
Mr. Walter with Mr. Sisson.
Mrs. Norton with Mr. Griswold.
Mr. Harter with Mr. Church.
Mr. Hoidale with Mr. Kee.
Mr. Williford with Mr. Marland.
Mr. Sumners of Texas with Mr. Berlin.
Mr. Dickinson with Mr. Brennan.
Mr. Burke of California with Mr. Fitzgibbons.
Mr. Huddleston with Mr. Moran.
Mr. Smith of Washington with Mr. Weideman.
Mr. Auf der Heide with Mr. Abernethy.

Mrs. McCARTHY changed her vote from "aye" to "no."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The doors were opened.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H.R. 8781) entitled "An act to increase employment by authorizing an appropriation to provide for emergency construction of public highways and related projects, and to amend the Federal Aid Road Act, approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes", disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. McKELLAR, Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. McGILL, Mr. SCHALL, and Mr. FRAZIER to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

CONTROL OF CHINCH BUGS

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution (H.J.Res. 352) to provide funds to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate with States in the control of chinch bugs.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, there are a few Members on this side who would like a minute or two to talk on this bill.

Mr. BUCHANAN. How much time would the gentleman want?

Mr. TABER. About 10 minutes altogether.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Then, Mr. Speaker, I shall also ask unanimous consent that all debate on this joint resolution be closed in 20 minutes.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, may I ask my friend from Texas if this matter cannot go over until in the morning? We have been here a long time, and I think the gentlemen understood we were to get away shortly. If this measure is taken up and one or two other matters considered, we will be here until 6 o'clock.

Mr. BUCHANAN. In reply to my colleague and majority leader, I may state that unless this appropriation is made and the money made available within the next 5 or 6 days we might just as well not make the appropriation, and the corn crop of the principal corn-producing States of the Union will be destroyed by the chinch bug. This is an emergency measure.

Mr. BYRNS. I may say to the Members of the House that I hope they will all stay here, because otherwise we will have another roll call.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas for the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas that all debate on the joint resolution close in 20 minutes?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to apply such methods of control of chinch bugs as in his judgment may be essential to accomplish such purposes, in cooperation with such authorities of the States concerned, organizations, or individuals, there is hereby appropriated and made immediately available $1,000,000: Provided, That this appropriation shall be used for expenditures of general administration and supervision, purchase, and transportation of materials used for the control of chinch bugs, and such other expenses as in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture may be deemed necessary, including the employment of persons and means in the District of Columbia and elsewhere and rent outside the District of Columbia: Provided further, That the cooperating State shall be responsible for the local distribution and utilization of such materials on privately owned lands, including full labor costs: Provided further, That, in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, no part of this appropriation shall be expended for chinch-bug control in any State until such State has provided the necessary organization for the cooperation herein indicated: Provided further, That procurements under this appropriation may be made by open-market purchase notwithstanding the provisions of section 3709, Revised States: And provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be used to pay the cost or value of farm animals, farm crops, or other property injured or destroyed.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 7, strike out the words "and made immediately available" and insert "out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to remain available until December 31, 1934, the sum of."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, this appropriates $1,000,000 on the recommendation of the President of the United States, approved by the Budget, to save the corn crop of seven States from the ravages of the chinch bug. The money is only for the Federal Government to buy the material and pay for the transportation of it to the farmers who will do the work themselves of fighting the chinch bug.

We made an appropriation for the Northwest to fight the grasshopper, and if we give an appropriation to one section of the country to fight an insect we ought to give it to another section of the country to fight the insects.

There are 11 States invaded by the bugs, the worst invasion we have ever had in the history of the country. In 1884 the chinch bugs destroyed the entire corn crop in several States. They are now in the wheatfields, they are now in the oatfields and grassland, and the weather has dried up the grass, wheat, and oats so the bugs are unable to feed, and then they will go into the cornfields and take that crop. This amount ought to be appropriated and appropriated promptly.

Mr. TRUAX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Yes.

Mr. TRUAX. Are these 11 States in the drought area?

Mr. BUCHANAN. In the entire Central West.

Mr. TRUAX. In our State we have no cornfields for them to go to.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. DOWELL].

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I want to concur in what was said by the chairman of the committee. It seems to me that it is very essential that we stop the invasion of this chinch bug now. I think the amount provided in this resolution should be given to the Secretary of Agriculture so that we may use it to stop the invasion of these insects. As was stated by the chairman, they take everything green that comes in their path. They are just now entering the cornfields, and unless something is done to stop them we will not have a thing left, even what is left by the drought. [Applause.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON].

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I hope this appropriation will pass. We need it because the corn crop is all that is left. They come from the wheatfields into the cornfields. Another thing, the winter was mild and did not kill the chinch bugs. This appropriation is mighty important to the farmers in this area.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GILCHRIST].

Mr. GILCHRIST. Mr. Speaker, it is said that the Lord helps those who help themselves. The Congress ought to do the same thing so far as Congress has the ability which the Lord is said to have. The bill provides help for those who are willing to help themselves, for the States that have provided some way of handling an infestation of insects such as the chinch bug, which we now have in the West. This infestation follows exceedingly dry weather. The present chinch-bug infestation extends from Oklahoma and then follows to the northeast, up through Kansas, Missouri, some parts of Iowa, Illinois, and Indiana. The farmers will do the work necessary to be done under the bill, the States will supervise it, and the expense is comparatively small so far as the Federal Government is concerned. I hope the legislation will be speedily enacted.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the lady from Kansas [Mrs. McCARTHY].

Mrs. McCARTHY. Mr. Speaker, I shall not need more than a moment to impress upon you the fact that this legislation must be passed immediately, or it will be of no avail. These chinch bugs are multiplied by millions. As one representative of the Department of Agriculture stated today before the Committee on Appropriations, in one of those fields which they treated with creosote they killed 60,000,000 chinch bugs. They had counted a small portion and weighed them and then multiplied the total weight, so that you can see it is a very great menace. The remedy proposed will be unavailing after the chinch bugs get past the crawling stage. When their wings are developed there is no way to stop them. This is the worst chinch-bug infestation that has occurred in our area in 50 years.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, I now yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRUAX].

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I rise only to offer an amendment to this bill—that one-half of the money be spent to exterminate the bugs down in the Department of Agriculture. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to; and the joint resolution as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to—

Mr. DIES (at the request of Mr. THOMASON), for today and the remainder of the week, on account of illness.

Mr. SUTPHIN, for 1 day, on account of official business.

Mr. BACON (at the request of Mr. REED of New York), on account of illness.

Mr. FERNANDEZ, for 10 days, on account of important official business.

LEAVE TO INTRODUCE A BILL AND FILE REPORT

Mr. McKEOWN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have until midnight tonight to introduce a bill and file a report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PROCESSING TAX ON HOGS

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H.R. 9829) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act with respect to the processing tax on hogs.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill H.R. 9829, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk reported the title of the bill.

Mr. LAMNECK. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I will take only a moment or two to make a short explanation. The object of the bill is, first, to relieve the small farmers producing two or three hogs per year, and who are not engaged in the hog business, from the payment of the processing tax. In the second place, it is to centralize the collection of the processing tax on hogs in the peanut area. Down in the peanut area there are hundreds of individual farmers who are producing hogs, and under the present law the tax is imposed upon these hog raisers because of the fact that processing under the act is defined as slaughtering. The amendment with reference to these hogs imposes the tax upon the packer to whom the farmer sells the hogs.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. As far as I am concerned I am opposed to all of it, but is there any reason if we are going to exempt part of them, why we should not exempt all?

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. I yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. Where do you draw the line? How many hogs are you exempting?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Eight hundred pounds, live weight.

Mr. KNUTSON. That is on the hoof?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Yes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. KELLER. Well, reserving the right to object, what is this idea of excluding the peanut areas?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. It does not exclude them. It centralizes the collection of the tax on those hogs. Under the present law, all the farmers who produce hogs in the peanut area have to pay a tax. It simply makes a collection agency of the packing houses in those areas. In other words, the packing houses instead of the farmers will pay the tax.

Mr. KELLER. Does that apply to the corn areas, too?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Yes.

Mr. KELLER. Just so it is fair, I am in favor of it.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Reserving the right to object, will the gentleman repeat to some of us on this side what this limitation is?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Eight hundred pounds, live weight.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Is that to be applied merely to those hogs that are slaughtered and sold by the farmer to his neighbor or to his entire crop?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. It is 800 pounds live weight. It applies alike to all farmers.

Mr. WADSWORTH. And can he sell the dressed carcasses from 800 pounds live weight?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. WADSWORTH. That is about three hogs?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Well, depending upon the weight. I should say that is about right.

Mr. WADSWORTH. You are giving them very, very little relief.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. That is better than we have now. It is the best we could get through, and it will be of inestimable benefit to thousands and thousands of farmers in this country who just raise one or two hogs.

Mr. WADSWORTH. It is the opening of the gate, I suppose, to final repeal. Does the gentleman intend to permit this bill to be open to amendment?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. No; I hope that no amendments will be offered. The Committee on Agriculture has considered the bill and it is the best we can get. We have a chance to get this passed. It will be a great thing for thousands and thousands of farmers.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Yes.

Mr. BRITTEN. Does this bill give any preference to the farmers in the peanut area?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. No, sir.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Reserving the right to object, what effect will this have on such a condition as this: In my district, about 2 weeks ago, a man sold a hog which weighed 400 pounds for 2.75 cents a pound. That would be about $11. The hog brought $11. The Government took $9 and he took $2 home with him.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. This relieves him of the processing tax.

Mr. REED of New York. Reserving the right to object, when you say that this is the best bill you could get at this time, just what do you mean by that? This Congress is here.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. I meant I had to get unanimous consent to call it up, and if I had placed the poundage higher than 800, there would have been objection.

Mr. MOTT. Reserving the right to object, who does the gentleman know of that will object to raising this minimum?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. I know of at least 15 or 20 who would have objected. I have been working on it for several months, and we have gotten it as high as we can at this time.

Mr. MOTT. What is the ground of those objections?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Well, it is useless to go into that. I just know they are going to object, and the small hog raiser will get no relief.

Mr. MOTT. I think that is a legitimate question. I asked the gentleman if he knew the grounds of the objections on the part of those people?

Mr. FLANNAGAN. They think it will destroy the hog program.

Mr. BLANTON. Practically all of us represent some small hog raisers. This bill must be passed to protect them. We are all interested in passing this bill. It benefits all of our small farmers who raise two or three hogs for sale. Farmers are forced to diversify. They must raise a few hogs. Let us all stay here long enough this evening to insure the passage of this bill, either tonight or the first thing tomorrow.

Mr. JONES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOTT. I yield.

Mr. JONES. I would like to state to the gentleman that under the present act every man has exempted what he uses for himself and his household. Then he has the further exemption of 300 pounds, dressed weight. This would practically double that exemption. I think we have a chance to secure final passage of this character of amendment. If the gentleman is going to insist on offering further amendments, I think the bill had better be withdrawn.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsection (b) of section 15 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "No tax shall be required to be paid on the processing, during any calendar year, of hogs by the producer thereof for sale by him if the amount so processed in such calendar year is not in excess of 800 pounds, live weight."

SEC. 2. (a) Paragraph (4) of subsection (d) of section 9 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, is repealed.

(b) Paragraph (7) of subsection (d) of such section 9 is amended to read as follows:

"(7) In the case of any other commodity, the term 'processing' means any manufacturing or other processing involving a change in the form of the commodity or its preparation for distribution or use, as defined by regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture; and in prescribing such regulations the Secretary shall give due weight to the customs of the industry."

SEC. 3. This act shall take effect on the day following the date of its enactment.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read, as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SNELL: Page 1, line 9, strike out "800" and insert in lieu thereof "2,000."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SNELL) there were—ayes 69, noes 110.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be withdrawn.

Mr. MOTT and Mr. BLANCHARD objected.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, if the House should take a recess now, would this roll call be the first order of business tomorrow?

The SPEAKER. It would.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I want to inform the House that it is expected that tomorrow at the earliest possible moment the so-called "Lozier census bill" will be taken up, and after that I hope very earnestly that it will be possible to call the Consent Calendar. I have been promising many Members upon the floor that it will be taken up. Each day they have asked about it. There are bridge bills and other bills of great importance on the Consent Calendar. We have now had 3 days devoted to the consideration of general legislation, and I think the Members are entitled to have the Consent Calendar called tomorrow. In order to do so the House must take a recess.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H.R. 8687. An act to amend the Tariff Act of 1930; and

H.R. 9260. An act relating to deposits in the United States of public moneys of the government of the Philippine Islands.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 620. An act for the relief of Catherine Wright;

S. 1430. An act for the relief of M. Thomas Petroy;

S. 1731. An act for the relief of Marion Von Bruning (nee Marion Hubbard Treat);

S. 2041. An act to amend the act of June 15, 1933, amending the National Defense Act of June 3, 1916, as amended;

S. 2377. An act for the relief of A. E. Shelley;

S. 2692. An act relating to the record of registry of certain aliens;

S. 3170. An act to revise air-mail laws and to establish a commission to make a report to the Congress recommending an aviation policy;

S. 3524. An act to amend an act of Congress approved February 9, 1893, entitled "An act to establish a court of appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes";

S. 3586. An act for the relief of George A. Fox; and

S. 3641. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the St. Lawrence River at or near Ogdensburg, N.Y.

RECESS

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House take a recess until 11 o'clock tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 45 minutes p.m.) the House stood in recess until tomorrow, Thursday, June 7, 1934, at 11 o'clock a.m.

COMMITTEE HEARING

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

(Thursday, June 7, 10 a.m.)

Continuation of the hearings on oil bills.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule III,

Mr. THOMASON: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 2043. An act to amend the act of May 22, 1928, entitled "An act to authorize the collection, in monthly installments, of indebtedness due the United States from enlisted men, and for other purposes"; without amendment (Rept. No. 1890). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. THOMASON: Committee on Military Affairs. H.R. 7257. A bill authorizing the President of the United States to extend the time for awarding decorations to participants of the World War; without amendment (Rept. No. 1891). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. MILLIGAN: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. S. 3493. An act to revive and reenact the act entitled "An act authorizing H. C. Brenner Realty & Finance Corporation, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near a point between Cherokee and Osage Streets, St. Louis, Mo.", approved February 13, 1931; without amendment (Rept. No. 1893). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. RAYBURN: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H.R. 9761. A bill to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Rio Grande at Boca Chica, Tex.; with amendment (Rept. No. 1894). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. DEROUEN: Committee on the Public Lands. H.R. 9788. A bill to aid in providing the people of the United States with adequate facilities for park, parkway, and recreational-area purposes, and to provide for the transfer of certain lands chiefly valuable for such purposes to States and political subdivisions thereof; with amendment (Rept. No. 1895). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia: Committee on Naval Affairs. H.R. 55. A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to make a long-term contract for a supply of water to the United States naval station at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba; with amendment (Rept. No. 1896). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BUCHANAN: Committee on Appropriations. House Joint Resolution 352. Joint resolution to provide funds to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate with States in control of chinch bugs; with amendment (Rept. No. 1897). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. McKEOWN: Committee on the Judiciary. H.R. 9865. A bill to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; without amendment (Rept. No. 1898). Referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. THOMASON: Committee on Military Affairs. H.R. 1122. A bill for the relief of Uldric Thompson, Jr.; with amendment (Rept. No. 1892). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. PATMAN: A bill (H.R. 9855) to regulate the value of money in pursuance of article I, section 8, paragraph 5, of the Constitution of the United States; to create a Federal monetary authority; to provide an adequate and stable monetary system; to prevent bank failures; to prevent uncontrolled inflation; to prevent depressions; to provide a system to control the price of commodities and the purchasing power of money; to restore normal prosperity and assure its continuance; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. WILSON: A bill (H.R. 9856) to amend the act entitled "An act for the control of floods on the Mississippi River and its tributaries, and for other purposes", approved May 15, 1928, as amended; to the Committee on Flood Control.

By Mr. RAMSPECK: A bill (H.R. 9857) to amend the act entitled "An act for the retirement of employees in the classified civil service, and for other purposes", approved May 22, 1920, and acts in amendment thereof, approved July 3, 1926, and May 29, 1930, as amended; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. WOOD of Missouri: A bill (H.R. 9858) to provide homes and farms for the tenant farmers of the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. CARMICHAEL: A bill (H.R. 9859) to amend section 24 of an act entitled "An act to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River; to provide for reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley; to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley; to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at or near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama, and for other purposes", approved May 18, 1933; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina: A bill (H.R. 9860) to finance the construction, repairing, and improving of homes and small business properties, provide employment, and stimulate industry; to insure investments in thrift and home-financing institutions; to improve conditions with respect to home-mortgage financing; to promote thrift and protect savings; to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act; to amend the Federal Reserve Act; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. CROSSER of Ohio: A bill (H.R. 9861) to amend the Railway Labor Act approved May 2, 1926, and to provide for the prompt disposition of disputes between carriers and their employees; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. IGLESIAS: A bill (H.R. 9862) to amend the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, to exempt persons traveling between Puerto Rico and the continental United States from the payment of a stamp tax on steamship tickets; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. McKEOWN: A bill (H.R. 9865) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CULLEN: Resolution (H.Res. 422) providing for additional compensation to certain employees of the House of Representatives; to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. HARTLEY: Resolution (H.Res. 423) for the relief of the city of Newark, State of New Jersey, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DOUGHTON: Joint resolution (H.J.Res. 365) to amend the Settlement of War Claims Act of 1928, as amended; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MEAD: Joint resolution (H.J.Res. 366) to simplify the administration of air-mail routes and contracts; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. WOODRUM: Concurrent resolution (H.Con.Res. 42) to print and bind the proceedings in Congress and in Statuary Hall upon the acceptance in the Capitol of the statues of George Washington and Robert E. Lee, presented by the State of Virginia; to the Committee on Printing.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mrs. McCARTHY: A bill (H.R. 9863) for the reinstatement of Harding Palmer in the United States Army; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WEST of Texas: A bill (H.R. 9864) for the relief of Era I. Sexton and minor children; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

4995. By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of the Triangle Ink & Color Co., Inc., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing Senate bill 2926; to the Committee on Labor.

4996. Also, petition of W. D. Huntington, New York City, urging consideration of the revised Wagner labor-disputes bill in the next session of Congress; to the Committee on Labor.

4997. Also, petition of the Turner Halsey Co., New York City, requesting reconsideration of tax on coconut oil at this session of Congress; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4998. Also, petition of Samuel Wildman, New York City, opposing tax on coconut oil; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4999. Also, petition of the Jacobs Bros. Co., Inc., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the Wagner labor bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5000. Also, petition of the Callahan Can Machine Co., Inc., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the Wagner labor disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5001. Also, petition of the Gleason-Tiebout Glass Co., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the Wagner labor bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5002. Also, petition of the Burton-Dixie Corporation, S. R. Vannaman, superintendent, Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the Wagner labor bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5003. Also, petition of the Burton-Dixie Corporation, Frank Buck, eastern sales manager, Brooklyn, N.Y., protesting against the passage of Senate bill 2926; to the Committee on Labor.

5004. Also, petition of the Burton-Dixie Corporation, F. O. Swanson, production manager cotton felt division, Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the Wagner labor bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5005. Also, petition of Francis Brewster, vice president, Asia, New York City, opposing the Wagner labor bill; to the Committee on Labor.

insure the passage of this bill, either tonight or the first thing tomorrow.

Mr. JONES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOTT. I yield.

Mr. JONES. I would like to state to the gentleman that under the present act every man has exempted what he uses for himself and his household. Then he has the further exemption of 300 pounds, dressed weight. This would practically double that exemption. I think we have a chance to secure final passage of this character of amendment. If the gentleman is going to insist on offering further amendments, I think the bill had better be withdrawn.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsection (b) of section 15 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "No tax shall be required to be paid on the processing, during any calendar year, of hogs by the producer thereof for sale by him if the amount so processed in such calendar year is not in excess of 800 pounds, live weight."

SEC. 2. (a) Paragraph (4) of subsection (d) of section 9 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, is repealed.

(b) Paragraph (7) of subsection (d) of such section 9 is amended to read as follows:

"(7) In the case of any other commodity, the term 'processing' means any manufacturing or other processing involving a change in the form of the commodity or its preparation for distribution or use, as defined by regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture; and in prescribing such regulations the Secretary shall give due weight to the customs of the industry."

SEC. 3. This act shall take effect on the day following the date of its enactment.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read, as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SNELL: Page 1, line 9, strike out "800" and insert in lieu thereof "2,000."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SNELL) there were—ayes 69, noes 110.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be withdrawn.

Mr. MOTT and Mr. BLANCHARD objected.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, if the House should take a recess now, would this roll call be the first order of business tomorrow?

The SPEAKER. It would.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I want to inform the House that it is expected that tomorrow at the earliest possible moment the so-called "Lozier census bill" will be taken up, and after that I hope very earnestly that it will be possible to call the Consent Calendar. I have been promising many Members upon the floor that it will be taken up. Each day they have asked about it. There are bridge bills and other bills of great importance on the Consent Calendar. We have now had 3 days devoted to the consideration of general legislation, and I think the Members are entitled to have the Consent Calendar called tomorrow. In order to do so the House must take a recess.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H.R. 8687. An act to amend the Tariff Act of 1930; and

H.R. 9280. An act relating to deposits in the United States of public moneys of the government of the Philippine Islands.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 620. An act for the relief of Catherine Wright;

S. 1430. An act for the relief of M. Thomas Petroy;

S. 1731. An act for the relief of Marion Von Bruning (nee Marion Hubbard Treat);

S. 2041. An act to amend the act of June 15, 1933, amending the National Defense Act of June 3, 1916, as amended;

S. 2377. An act for the relief of A. E. Shelley;

S. 2692. An act relating to the record of registry of certain aliens;

S. 3170. An act to revise air-mail laws and to establish a commission to make a report to the Congress recommending an aviation policy;

S. 3524. An act to amend an act of Congress approved February 9, 1893, entitled "An act to establish a court of appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes";

S. 3586. An act for the relief of George A. Fox; and

S. 3641. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the St. Lawrence River at or near Ogdensburg, N.Y.

RECESS

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House take a recess until 11 o'clock tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 45 minutes p.m.) the House stood in recess until tomorrow, Thursday, June 7, 1934, at 11 o'clock a.m.

COMMITTEE HEARING

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

(Thursday, June 7, 10 a.m.)

Continuation of the hearings on oil bills.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule III,

Mr. THOMASON: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 2043. An act to amend the act of May 22, 1928, entitled "An act to authorize the collection, in monthly installments, of indebtedness due the United States from enlisted men, and for other purposes"; without amendment (Rept. No. 1390). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. THOMASON: Committee on Military Affairs. H.R. 7257. A bill authorizing the President of the United States to extend the time for awarding decorations to participants of the World War; without amendment (Rept. No. 1891). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. MILLIGAN: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. S. 3493. An act to revive and reenact the act entitled "An act authorizing H. C. Brenner Realty & Finance Corporation, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near a point between Cherokee and Osage Streets, St. Louis, Mo.", approved February 13, 1931; without amendment (Rept. No. 1893). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. RAYBURN: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H.R. 9761. A bill to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Rio Grande at Boca Chica, Tex.; with amendment (Rept. No. 1894). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. DEROUEN: Committee on the Public Lands. H.R. 9788. A bill to aid in providing the people of the United States with adequate facilities for park, parkway, and recreational-area purposes, and to provide for the transfer of certain lands chiefly valuable for such purposes to States and political subdivisions thereof; with amendment (Rept. No. 1895). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia: Committee on Naval Affairs. H.R. 55. A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to make a long-term contract for a supply of water to the United States naval station at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba; with amendment (Rept. No. 1896). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BUCHANAN: Committee on Appropriations. House Joint Resolution 352. Joint resolution to provide funds to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate with States in control of chinch bugs; with amendment (Rept. No. 1897). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. McKEOWN: Committee on the Judiciary. H.R. 9865. A bill to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; without amendment (Rept. No. 1898). Referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. THOMASON: Committee on Military Affairs. H.R. 1122. A bill for the relief of Uldric Thompson, Jr.; with amendment (Rept. No. 1892). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. PATMAN: A bill (H.R. 9855) to regulate the value of money in pursuance of article I, section 8, paragraph 5, of the Constitution of the United States; to create a Federal monetary authority; to provide an adequate and stable monetary system; to prevent bank failures; to prevent uncontrolled inflation; to prevent depressions; to provide a system to control the price of commodities and the purchasing power of money; to restore normal prosperity and assure its continuance; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. WILSON: A bill (H.R. 9856) to amend the act entitled "An act for the control of floods on the Mississippi River and its tributaries, and for other purposes", approved May 15, 1928, as amended; to the Committee on Flood Control.

By Mr. RAMSPECK: A bill (H.R. 9857) to amend the act entitled "An act for the retirement of employees in the classified civil service, and for other purposes", approved May 22, 1920, and acts in amendment thereof, approved July 3, 1926, and May 29, 1930, as amended; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. WOOD of Missouri: A bill (H.R. 9858) to provide homes and farms for the tenant farmers of the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. CARMICHAEL: A bill (H.R. 9859) to amend section 24 of an act entitled "An act to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River; to provide for reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley; to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley; to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at or near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama, and for other purposes", approved May 18, 1933; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina: A bill (H.R. 9860) to finance the construction, repairing, and improving of homes and small business properties, provide employment, and stimulate industry; to insure investments in thrift and home-financing institutions; to improve conditions with respect to home-mortgage financing; to promote thrift and protect savings; to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act; to amend the Federal Reserve Act; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. CROSSER of Ohio: A bill (H.R. 9861) to amend the Railway Labor Act approved May 2, 1926, and to provide for the prompt disposition of disputes between carriers and their employees; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. IGLESIAS: A bill (H.R. 9862) to amend the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, to exempt persons traveling between Puerto Rico and the continental United States from the payment of a stamp tax on steamship tickets; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. McKEOWN: A bill (H.R. 9865) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CULLEN: Resolution (H.Res. 422) providing for additional compensation to certain employees of the House of Representatives; to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. HARTLEY: Resolution (H.Res. 423) for the relief of the city of Newark, State of New Jersey, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DOUGHTON: Joint resolution (H.J.Res. 365) to amend the Settlement of War Claims Act of 1928, as amended; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MEAD: Joint resolution (H.J.Res. 366) to simplify the administration of air-mail routes and contracts; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. WOODRUM: Concurrent resolution (H.Con.Res. 42) to print and bind the proceedings in Congress and in Statuary Hall upon the acceptance in the Capitol of the statues of George Washington and Robert E. Lee, presented by the State of Virginia; to the Committee on Printing.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mrs. McCARTHY: A bill (H.R. 9863) for the reinstatement of Harding Palmer in the United States Army; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WEST of Texas: A bill (H.R. 9864) for the relief of Era I. Sexton and minor children; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

4995. By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of the Triangle Ink & Color Co., Inc., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing Senate bill 2926; to the Committee on Labor.

4996. Also, petition of W. D. Huntington, New York City, urging consideration of the revised Wagner labor-disputes bill in the next session of Congress; to the Committee on Labor.

4997. Also, petition of the Turner Halsey Co., New York City, requesting reconsideration of tax on coconut oil at this session of Congress; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4998. Also, petition of Samuel Wildman, New York City, opposing tax on coconut oil; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

4999. Also, petition of the Jacobs Bros. Co., Inc., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the Wagner labor bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5000. Also, petition of the Callahan Can Machine Co., Inc., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the Wagner labor disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5001. Also, petition of the Gleason-Tiebout Glass Co., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the Wagner labor bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5002. Also, petition of the Burton-Dixie Corporation, S. R. Vannaman, superintendent, Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the Wagner labor bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5003. Also, petition of the Burton-Dixie Corporation, Frank Buck, eastern sales manager, Brooklyn, N.Y., protesting against the passage of Senate bill 2926; to the Committee on Labor.

5004. Also, petition of the Burton-Dixie Corporation, F. O. Swanson, production manager cotton felt division, Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the Wagner labor bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5005. Also, petition of Francis Brewster, vice president, Asia, New York City, opposing the Wagner labor bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5006. Also, petition of the Durable Goods Industries Committee, Washington, D.C., opposing the enactment of the Wagner labor disputes bill at this session of Congress; to the Committee on Labor.

5007. Also, petition of the Indian Rights Association, Philadelphia, Pa., concerning Senate bill 3645; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

5008. By Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts: Petition of the Society for Propagating the Gospel Among Indians and Others in North America, urging passage of the Wheeler-Howard bill; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

5009. By Mr. RUDD: Petition of the Brooklyn Eastern District Terminal, Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the Wagner labor disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5010. Also, petition of Francis Brewster, vice president, Asia, New York City, opposing the Wagner labor bill in its present form; to the Committee on Labor.

5011. Also, petition of the Jacobs Bros. Co., Inc., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the Wagner labor board bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5012. Also, petition of the Burton-Dixie Corporation, Frank Buck, eastern sales manager, Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the Wagner labor bill (S. 2936); to the Committee on Labor.

5013. Also, petition of the Seabrook Bedding Co., Inc., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the Wagner labor bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5014. Also, petition of the Turner Halsey Co., New York City, favoring the repeal of the tax on coconut oil; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

5015. Also, petition of the National Building Granites Quarries Association, New York City, favoring the passage of House bill 9696; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

5016. Also, petition of the Callahan Can Machine Co., Inc., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the new Wagner disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5017. Also, petition of the Manufacturers Trust Co., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the new Wagner disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5018. Also, petition of the Gleason-Tiebout Glass Co., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the Wagner disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5019. Also, petition of the Scranton & Leigh Coal Co., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the new Wagner disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5020. By Mr. SADOWSKI: Petition of the Oil and Gas Producers Association of Michigan; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

5021. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the Ukrainian Workingwomen's Educational Society, supporting House bill 7598; to the Committee on Labor.

SENATE

THURSDAY, JUNE 7, 1934

(Legislative day of Wednesday, June 6, 1934)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On motion of Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day, Wednesday, June 6, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1358) to provide for the improvement of the approach to the Confederate Cemetery, Fayetteville, Ark., with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bill and joint resolution, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 9690. An act to place the tobacco-growing industry on a sound financial and economic basis, to prevent unfair competition and practices in the production and marketing of tobacco entering into the channels of interstate and foreign commerce, and for other purposes; and

H.J.Res. 352. Joint resolution to provide funds to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate with States in control of chinch bugs.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H.R. 9690) to place the tobacco-growing industry on a sound financial and economic basis, to prevent unfair competition and practices in the production and marketing of tobacco entering into the channels of interstate and foreign commerce, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

CONTROL OF THE CHINCH BUG

The joint resolution (H.J.Res. 352) to provide funds to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate with States in control of chinch bugs was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. GLASS subsequently said: From the Committee on Appropriations I report back favorably without amendment House Joint Resolution 352, appropriating a million dollars to arrest the progress of the chinch bug in the Western States. It has been approved by the Director of the Budget for the President and is immediately needed. So I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the joint resolution will be read.

The joint resolution was read, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to apply such methods of control of chinch bugs as in his judgment may be essential to accomplish such purposes, in cooperation with such authorities of the States concerned, organizations, or individuals, there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to remain available until December 31, 1934, the sum of $1,000,000: Provided, That this appropriation shall be used for expenditures of general administration and supervision, purchase and transportation of materials used for the control of chinch bugs, and such other expenses as in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture may be deemed necessary, including the employment of persons and means in the District of Columbia and elsewhere and rent outside the District of Columbia: Provided further, That the cooperating State shall be responsible for the local distribution and utilization of such materials on privately owned lands, including full labor costs: Provided further, That, in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, no part of this appropriation shall be expended for chinch-bug control in any State until such State has provided the necessary organization for the cooperation herein indicated: Provided further, That procurements under this appropriation may be made by open-market purchase notwithstanding the provisions of section 3709, Revised Statutes: And provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be used to pay the cost or value of farm animals, farm crops, or other property injured or destroyed.

INVESTIGATION OF RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN CONTRACTORS AND EMPLOYEES

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, for the information of the Senate, I desire to state that the following members of the Committee on Education and Labor have been appointed a subcommittee under Senate Resolution 228 (agreed to on the calendar day of May 30, 1934), authorizing an investigation of the relationship existing between certain contractors and their employees engaged in the construction of public projects in the United States:

Mr. WALSH, of Massachusetts, chairman; Mr. COPELAND, of New York; Mr. MURPHY, of Iowa; Mr. THOMAS, of Utah; Mr. WALCOTT, of Connecticut, and Mr. DAVIS, of Pennsylvania.

PAYMENTS OF JUDGMENTS AND CLAIMS AND SUPPLEMENTAL ESTIMATES

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate eight communications from the President of the United States, together with accompanying letters and related papers from the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, transmitting, pursuant to law, the following matters, which, with the accompanying papers, were severally referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed:

A supplemental estimate of appropriation pertaining to the legislative establishment, under the Architect of the Capitol, for maintenance of the Senate Office Building, fiscal year 1935, amounting to $31,800 (S.Doc. No. 195);

Schedules of claims, amounting to $212,001.18, allowed by the General Accounting Office under appropriations the balances of which have been carried to the surplus fund (S.Doc. No. 197);

Records of judgments rendered against the Government by district courts, as submitted by the Attorney General through the Secretary of the Treasury, amounting to $18,518.60 (S.Doc. No. 198);

Estimates of appropriations submitted by the several executive departments and independent offices to pay claims for damages to privately owned property, amounting to $16,920.08, which have been considered and adjusted and require appropriations for their payment (S.Doc. No. 201);

A list of judgments rendered by the Court of Claims, which have been submitted by the Attorney General through the Secretary of the Treasury and require an appropriation for their payment, amounting to $193,143.43 (S.Doc. No. 196);

Schedules of claims allowed by the General Accounting Office, covering judgments rendered by the district courts against collectors of customs, amounting to $6,105.40 (S.Doc. No. 194);

An estimate of appropriation required by the Department of the Interior for the payment of a claim allowed by the General Accounting Office, amounting to $130.13, for return of funds of deceased patients, St. Elizabeths Hospital (S.Doc. No. 199); and

A supplemental estimate of appropriation required for the Treasury Department, amounting to $11,866.27, for the payment of claims allowed by the General Accounting Office for interest on amounts withheld from claimants by the Comptroller General of the United States (S.Doc. No. 200).

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Louisiana, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys:

Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 6

By Messrs. A. Sidney Nunez and Charles A. Byrne

Concurrent resolution petitioning and memorializing the President of the United States and the United States Congress to establish a national memorial park on the battlefield of Chalmette in commemoration of the Battle of New Orleans

Whereas the Battle of New Orleans on January 8, 1815, definitely destroyed all hopes of the victorious British to undo the American Revolution and to encompass the United States by British domination from Canada to the Gulf and made secure the American control of the Mississippi outlet to the sea and all of the Louisiana Purchase; decided the destiny of the South, the Floridas, and the Middle West; and made possible the extension of our boundaries to include Texas, the Southwest, California, and the Oregon country; and

Whereas this battlefield typifies the indomitable courage, resourcefulness, enterprise, skill, and fearlessness of the true American spirit in the face of an overwhelming army, and should express the sentiments and high purpose of the whole Nation for living generations to comprehend, respect, and emulate according to the concepts, principles, and deeds of our forefathers, and worthily to transmit to future generations untarnished and undefiled our splendid heritage; and

Whereas the said battlefield is rapidly being occupied by industrial and port developments, which are attended with present and larger future enhancements in land values and with almost ruthless obliteration of objects of great historic interest to all parts of the Nation and to all future generations, much to the discredit of the vision and patriotism of the present generation; and

Whereas to identify that part of the battlefield on which the actual battle occurred, the Legislature of Louisiana in 1852 purchased the site on which the Chalmette Monument is located, and in 1907 transferred it to the United States, and the city of New Orleans in 1868 donated to the United States the Chalmette National Cemetery site, both sites comprising approximately 29 acres and an area totally inadequate to commemorate the importance of this historic battlefield; and

Whereas the War Department in 1931 authorized a survey to be made, the results of which were later included in a message from the President of the United States to Congress, recommending the expenditure of $468,000 for the purpose of acquiring all of the area adjacent to and embracing the Jackson breastworks and that part of the battlefield on which the actual battle occurred; and

Whereas there now exists an unemployment emergency affecting the entire Nation, which makes necessary a great public-works program, and since this project is a most worthy part of that program and one which will give employment to a large number of the unemployed of our State: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Legislature of Louisiana, assembled in regular session this 24th day of May 1934, do hereby petition, memorialize, and urge the President of the United States and the United States Congress to authorize the establishment of a national memorial park on the battlefield of Chalmette and to acquire the necessary acreage to provide a park commensurate in size with the importance of the said battlefield and one which will properly commemorate the memory of our immortal hero, Gen. Andrew Jackson, and the men who fought under him to preserve this Nation for the American people; be it further

Resolved, That it is also recommended that this proposed national memorial park be made a Federal Public Works project, so as to provide employment to those of our citizens who presently are unable to procure employment owing to the existing economic conditions affecting the entire Nation, and that House Report No. 8625, introduced by Congressman J. O. FERNANDEZ, and Senate bill 3577, introduced by Senator JOHN H. OVERTON, authorizing the establishment of the said national park, and now pending before Congress, be duly adopted; be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be transmitted to Hon. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, President of the United States; to the United States Congress; the Senators Huey P. Long and John H. Overton and to the Louisiana congressional delegation; to Mr. Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Department of the Interior and Public Works Administrator; to Mr. Arno B. Cammerer, Director of National Parks, Buildings, and Reservations, of the Department of the Interior; and to Mr. Verne Chatelain, Chief Historical Division, of the Department of the Interior.

JNO. B. FOURNET,
Lieutenant Governor and President of the Senate.
ADLER J. GELLENDER,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
OSCAR K. ALLEN,
Governor of the State of Louisiana.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a telegram in the nature of a petition from Jos. J. Miller, president of the Twenty-ninth Ward Democratic Club, of Philadelphia, Pa., on behalf of the club, praying that Congress do not adjourn the present session until all of the legislation recommended by the President is enacted into law, and also that a central United States bank be created and Federal Reserve privately owned banks be abolished, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

He also laid before the Senate the petition of E. A. Tippins, on behalf of certain unemployed persons of Seminole County, Fla., praying for the enactment of unemployment relief legislation, especially the extension of aid and work to the heads of families, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the common council of the city of Milwaukee, Wis., favoring the enactment of legislation to relieve the delinquent-tax situation through discount operations of member banks of the Federal Reserve System, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate the petition of L. H. Johnson and sundry other citizens of Minneapolis, Minn., praying for the prompt passage of the so-called "Patman bill", providing cash payment of the balance due World War veterans on their adjusted-service certificates, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also laid before the Senate a telegram signed by members of the Texas Good Roads Association, Houston, Tex., favoring the making of appropriation in pending legislation of at least $200,000,000 for highways as provided in the so-called "Cartwright bill", which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also laid before the Senate a telegram in the nature of a petition from the executive committee of the Brotherhood of Railway Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, and Express Station Employees, Wabash Railway, of St. Louis, Mo., praying for the passage of the bill (S. 3231) to provide a retirement system for railroad employees, to provide unemployment relief, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas presented a telegram from Walter Parker, of New Orleans, La., relative to the so-called "commodity exchange control bill", which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. NYE, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, to which was referred the bill (S. 3705) to extend the boundaries of the Grand Teton National Park in the State of Wyoming, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1286) thereon.

Mr. BAILEY, from the Committee on Claims, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H.R. 471. An act for the relief of Physicians and Surgeons Hospital, Ltd. (Rept. No. 1272);

H.R. 529. An act for the relief of Morris Spirt (Rept. No. 1273);

H.R. 1306. An act for the relief of Clarence A. Wimley (Rept. No. 1274);

H.R. 1308. An act for the relief of John Parker Clark, Sr. (Rept. No. 1275);

H.R. 1345. An act for the relief of John Parker Clark, Jr. (Rept. No. 1276);

H.R. 1354. An act for the relief of C. V. Mason (Rept. No. 1277);

H.R. 1792. An act for the relief of Michael Petrucelli (Rept. No. 1278);

H.R. 2038. An act for the relief of Jeanie G. Lyles (Rept. No. 1279);

H.R. 3791. An act for the relief of Gustav Welhoelter (Rept. No. 1280);

H.R. 5584. An act for the relief of William J. Kenely (Rept. No. 1281);

H.R. 7816. An act for the relief of Oswald H. Halford, Hunter M. Henry, William C. Horne, Rupert R. Johnson, David L. Lacey, William Z. Lee, Fenton F. Rodgers, Henry Freeman Seale, Felix M. Smith, Edwin C. Smith, Robert S. Sutherland, and Charles G. Ventress (Rept. No. 1282);

H.R. 7893. An act for the relief of Ralph LaVern Walker (Rept. No. 1283); and

H.R. 8328. An act for the relief of the heirs of C. K. Bowen, deceased (Rept. No. 1284).

Mr. BAILEY also, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H.R. 434) for the relief of Bernard McShane, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1285) thereon.

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Civil Service, to which was referred the bill (S. 2702) to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1287) thereon.

Mr. PITTMAN, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 574. An act for the relief of Lillian G. Frost (Rept. No. 1288); and

H.R. 5357. An act for the relief of Alice M. A. Damm (Rept. No. 1289).

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on today, June 7, 1934, that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 620. An act for the relief of Catherine Wright;

S. 1430. An act for the relief of M. Thomas Petroy;

S. 1731. An act for the relief of Marion Von Bruning (nee Marion Hubbard Treat);

S. 2041. An act to amend the act of June 15, 1933, amending the National Defense Act of June 3, 1916, as amended;

S. 2377. An act for the relief of A. E. Shelley;

S. 2692. An act relating to the record of registry of certain aliens;

S. 3170. An act to revise air-mail laws and to establish a commission to make a report to the Congress recommending an aviation policy;

S. 3524. An act to amend an act of Congress approved February 9, 1893, entitled "An act to establish a Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes";

S. 3586. An act for the relief of George A. Fox; and

S. 3641. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the St. Lawrence River at or near Ogdensburg, N.Y.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. JOHNSON:

A bill (S. 3752) granting a pension to Mary Harrington Niblack; to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (S. 3753) granting to the Water Project Authority of the State of California, a body politic and corporate of said State, certain lands, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

By Mr. McKELLAR:

A bill (S. 3754) for the relief of C. T. Mingle; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

By Mr. BULKLEY:

A bill (S. 3755) for the relief of H. A. Taylor; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. NEELY:

A bill (S. 3756) authorizing the Brookewell Bridge Co. to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Ohio River at or near Wellsburg, W.Va.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. WAGNER:

A bill (S. 3757) for the relief of Harriet V. Schindler; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WHEELER:

A bill (S. 3758) for the relief of Robert D. Baldwin; and

A bill (S. 3759) for the relief of Charles E. Dagenett; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. PITTMAN:

A bill (S. 3760) to authorize the President to transfer to the Government of Haiti without charge to that Government certain property of the United States in Haiti; and

A bill (S. 3761) to authorize an annual appropriation of $10,000 to pay the pro rata share of the United States of the expenses of the Pan American Institute of Geography and History at Mexico City; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. HARRISON:

A joint resolution (S.J.Res. 135) to amend the Settlement of War Claims Act of 1928, as amended; to the Committee on Finance.

SALLY D. THOMAS

Mr. GLASS submitted the following resolution (S.Res. 262), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the contingent fund of the Senate to Sally D. Thomas, widow of Madison Thomas, late a laborer of the Senate under supervision of the Sergeant at Arms, a sum equal to 1 year's compensation at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered inclusive of funeral expenses and all other allowances.

ELSA M'GUIRE

Mr. BARKLEY submitted the following resolution (S.Res. 263), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the contingent fund of the Senate to Elsa McGuire, widow of E. E. McGuire, late an assistant clerk to the Committee on the Library, a sum equal to 6 months' compensation at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered inclusive of funeral expenses and all other allowances.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Costigan	Kean	Reynolds
Ashurst	Couzens	Keyes	Robinson, Ark.
Austin	Cutting	King	Russell
Bachman	Davis	La Follette	Schall
Bailey	Dickinson	Lewis	Sheppard
Bankhead	Dieterich	Logan	Shipstead
Barbour	Dill	Lonergan	Smith
Barkley	Duffy	Long	Steiwer
Black	Erickson	McCarran	Stephens
Bone	Fess	McGill	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Fletcher	McKellar	Thomas, Utah
Brown	Frazier	McNary	Thompson
Bulkley	George	Metcalf	Townsend
Bulow	Gibson	Murphy	Tydings
Byrd	Glass	Neely	Vandenberg
Byrnes	Goldsborough	Norbeck	Van Nuys
Capper	Gore	Norris	Wagner
Caraway	Hale	Nye	Walcott
Carey	Harrison	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Clark	Hatch	Overton	Wheeler
Connally	Hatfield	Patterson	White
Coolidge	Hayden	Pittman
Copeland	Johnson	Pope

Mr. LEWIS. I announce the absence of the Senator from California [Mr. McADOO], occasioned by illness, and the absence of the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL], who is necessarily detained from the Senate.

Mr. FESS. I desire to announce that the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. ROBINSON] are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. REYNOLDS in the chair). Ninety Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

CONFEDERATE CEMETERY, FAYETTEVILLE, ARK.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1358) to provide for the improvement of the approach to the Confederate Cemetery, Fayetteville, Ark., which were to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Highway Department of the State of Arkansas is hereby authorized and directed to expend not to exceed $12,800 out of any sums heretofore or hereafter granted to such highway department under the provisions of title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act, in the construction of an 18-foot concrete pavement on approaches to the Confederate Cemetery and the National Cemetery at Fayetteville, Ark., as follows: (1) From Mill Avenue in said city east on East Rock Street to the east side of the Confederate Cemetery, a distance of approximately 1,300 feet; and (2) from West Fourth Street in said city south on Government Avenue extended to the main entrance of the National Cemetery just south of the southern limits of said city, a distance of approximately 1,060 feet.

And to amend the title so as to read: "An act to provide for the improvement of approaches to the National Cemetery and the Confederate Cemetery at Fayetteville, Ark."

Mrs. CARAWAY. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT OF SENATE RESTAURANT

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the financial statement of the Senate restaurant from March 1, 1933, to May 31, 1934.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Financial statement of the Senate restaurant, Mar. 1, 1933, to May 31, 1934

Mar. 1, 1933, deficit	$1,540.74
May 31, 1934:
Food profit	20,371.36
Cigar profit	1,564.70
Actual food and cigar profits	21,936.06
Actual cash on hand as of May 31, 1934	21,711.98

SENATE RESTAURANT, UNITED STATES CAPITOL,
J. E. MEANEY, Manager.

THE SCHOOLS IN LOCAL REVIVAL—ADDRESS BY C. R. MANN

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a radio talk June 5, 1934, by Mr. C. R. Mann, a noted leader in educational matters, on the subject The Schools in Local Revival.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE SCHOOLS IN LOCAL REVIVAL

Most of the previous talks in this series of radio discussions on reviving local government have dealt with financial aspects of the problem. They have told, for example, how various communities have reduced salaries and have struggled to cut out wastes and unnecessary duplications in public service in order to reduce expenditures; and have waged pay-your-taxes campaigns in order to increase income. We have thus been shown how by such devices as these it is possible to maintain essential public services within available resources even though income is sharply reduced.

The topic of this broadcast is the schools in local revival. If we were to treat it from the point of view of the previous broadcasts, the story is soon told. For, by and large, schools have taken their share of the budget cuts that have been made. In some cases these cuts have reduced school expenditures to zero. Then, either schools have been closed, so that several million children had no chance for schooling; or teachers have worked without pay. In other cases, where the cut has not been so drastic, some teachers have been let out, and schools have carried on as best they could with worn-out equipment to care for increasing numbers of pupils who came back to school because they could find nothing else to do. In short, though the financial debacle has put the teachers on short rations, their devotion to the children has kept the school system in operation with relatively little change.

If temporary budget cuts and meager material subsistence were all that school men and women had to endure, the situation would not be serious. For the struggle for existence is a perennial source of discipline and of strength. But the sad fact of the past few years is the increasing evidence of the weakening of the faith of the people in their schools. In pioneer days the building of a school was one of the first concerns of every newly settled community. The little red schoolhouse became, like the Stars and Stripes, a symbol of American aspiration. But now not only a scattered community here and there but even whole States permit their schools to close for lack of support because debt service and road building are regarded as prior claims on such resources as they have.

Of similar significance are the organized drives of taxpayers' associations to reduce school budgets, cut out the fads and frills, and return to the good old days when the three R's were good enough schooling for anyone. Only recently a well-known and prosperous banking house refused to renew some school bonds of a solvent residential community unless they would reduce teachers' salaries and cut out music and art, though the town could well afford to maintain both.

The emergency relief work of the Federal Government has brought to light much evidence of the growing distrust of the people for current schooling. For example, the C.C.C. camps, by making a detailed inventory of hundreds of thousands of unemployed young men, have brought to light some of the specific reasons why the public question the value of present-day schooling for these thousands of young men. A recent editorial in Happy Days, a weekly newspaper written by the C.C.C. for the C.C.C., contains an editorial on this subject. After describing the sense of futility that haunted the enrollees before enlisting in the camp, that editorial ends with these words: "Here we are in the C.C.C. We're 300,000 fellows out of work, unfit to handle a job, to vote intelligently, to choose a wife, or to raise children. Yet, in 10 years, most of us will have made a stab at all of them. And we'll have made a mess of it! Is America going to let our kids grow up to be the impractical, untrained, and ignorant drifters that we are?"

How many Americans are now asking this same question? Probably most of those who are employed in the school system are not inclined to take it seriously. But this C.C.C. enrollee is 1 of 10,000,000 unemployed. They all know the pangs of hunger in the midst of plenty. They are familiar with the fear of losing a job that haunts the 45,000,000 artisans who work for wages. In addition, many other millions are wondering how men who are products of our schools could be so illiterate economically as to lead or be led into such a depression as this. They note also the steady increase of racketeering, of bootlegging, and of kidnaping by men and women whose schooling was presumably designed to help them become law-abiding citizens rather than lawless drifters. No; we protected pedagogues must not make the mistake of ignoring the seriousness of this question. Millions are asking it in all sincerity.

What can be done about it? School teachers know even better than does the public that conventional schooling does not meet the needs of a large proportion of the pupils, particularly at the high-school level. But they are not allowed to do anything effective about it. If a school allows controversial subjects, such as public ownership of public utilities, to be freely discussed in schools, pressure is brought by big business on the school board to stop it. If high-school youngsters are encouraged in school to find out how municipal government is actually run instead of learning from a book a paper theory of government, local politicians apply pressure to stop it. If the superintendent protests against padding of the pay roll with salaries for the sisters and the cousins and the aunts of school-board members, the school board will get him. If a few graduates of the school fail to meet requirements for admissions to college, pressure from angry parents soon forces the return to conventional paths. So the school teachers, though many of them know better; yield to one after another of these vociferous minority groups and the school program retains its traditional content and form which experience has shown offends none but the children, who cannot speak for themselves.

Recently the board of education in a well-known city invited a small group of educators to consult with them about their schools. The town was facing bankruptcy. The budgets for all public services had been cut to the bone. The question was, Can the school budget be cut further without serious educational injury to the children? After careful investigation the consultants recommended a reduction in the number of subjects required of students and the introduction of activity programs that would tend to make the pupils do more work and the teachers less. By these changes the educational value of the work would be increased and the cost reduced some 10 percent. The proposals were rejected by the school board. The reduction in teachers' work would have made superfluous some teachers who were friends of members of the school board and the activity programs would have made their program look queer when compared with the conventional programs of neighboring towns. The best interests of the children were of secondary importance.

So long as such conditions persist schools will continue to turn out economic illiterates, dependents, and drifters who will surely help little in local revival. If you like that sort of thing, then you need do nothing about it. But if you want your children to have a better chance in life than you had, you better get busy and help break the vicious circle in which the teachers and the taxpayers have been chasing each other around for lo these many years, the former saying we cannot give better schooling until we have more money and the latter retorting we won't give you more money till your schooling is worth more.

Numerous schools have tried and are trying to break this vicious circle by giving better schooling for less money. For example, on the college level the University of Minnesota established 2 years ago what it calls the general college. Under the conventional college system it has been the habit there to weed out three or four hundred freshmen annually because of their failure to measure up to traditional academic standards. That flagrant waste of youthful energy and of public money at last so arrested the attention of the faculty that it voted to scrap its ordinary requirements and offer these students a chance to come to grips with current problems that bear directly on the struggle for existence. During the first year over 500 students were enrolled in the college. Instead of failing as they would have done under the old curriculum, most of them became enthusiastic workers in lines that interested them vitally. The responsibility for learning was transferred from the teacher to the student. They made good. The cost to the State of Minnesota for this more vital instruction is much less than is the cost of the conventional instruction.

Another significant example of effective efforts of schools to give better schooling at less cost is the experiment which the State of Nebraska is making with two- and three-teacher rural high schools. Ordinarily in such high schools the content of the curriculum is limited to the subjects which the teachers can teach. In Nebraska any high school can secure from the State university extension department correspondence courses in whatever subjects any student desires to study. The student attends high school regularly and devotes a portion of the school time to the correspondence course under supervision of the high-school teacher. In this way opportunity is given each student to work at something in which he is vitally interested. The students take the responsibility for their own learning and become interested workers, instead of discouraged drifters. And, as in the case of the Minnesota experiment, the cost of such instruction is about half the cost of conventional instruction.

More such experiments as these would soon break that vicious circle. But such dynamic schooling cannot become general if schools are constantly repressed by minorities who fear their vested interests may suffer if the public knows too much. So look into your local situation. Find out if your schools are slaves of tradition and vested interests, turning out impractical, untrained, ignorant drifters, or whether they have defied tradition and the pressure of minority groups and are honestly trying to help children grow into constructive citizens. No school can achieve this latter end and become a vital factor in local revival without the vigorous support of public opinion. The outcome rests in your hands.

FEDERAL BANKRUPTCY ACT—ADDRESS BY HON. CHARLES M. JOHNSON

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD an address on the proposed amendment to the Federal Bankruptcy Act providing for the refinancing of the debts of local government units, by the Honorable Charles M. Johnson, State treasurer of North Carolina.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Public debt is acknowledged to be one of the most outstanding of our present-day economic problems. It is one of the primary causes of the social and economic revolution through which we are passing. If I may, I would define credit as the measure of ability to pay a debt which might be incurred, but it has been frequently and abusively regarded as mere ability to incur a debt without due regard to probable ability to pay. We have often heard the use of the term "unlimited credit." This term has undoubtedly passed out of the vocabulary of sound business and will remain out for some time to come. Nevertheless, when we review the conduct of high finance through the 10-year period prior to 1930, this term "unlimited credit" was indiscreetly and, sad as have been the effects, literally applied.

With respect to local government debt in North Carolina, we are not occupying a very envious position. We have many counties, cities, and towns now in default in the payment of principal and interest on their bonds. Although our State is not the only one confronted with similar difficulties, we should not minimize the gravity of our situation by exercising a feeling of unconcern because some of our sister States are in as deep as we. It is our problem to solve, with the least possible sacrifice of future credit, and without blot on the name of our great State.

Two main factors have contributed to this condition. First, for a number of years leading up to the depression there was a ready market for the sale of State and local government bonds, in most cases at a price above par. The investors sought them generally because they fell within the classification of tax-exempt securities. The only collateral furnished with these bonds was a recital in the bonds themselves that the full faith and credit of the governmental unit issuing them was pledged to the payment of principal and interest at maturity. Further information about their true value was meager, and obviously they were sold in many instances through high-pressure tactics, the seller shielding himself behind the legal doctrine, "Let the buyer beware."

Second, local government units enjoyed a wide credit margin by reason of the fact that their bonds were readily marketable. It would be unjust and erroneous to suggest that their bonds were issued with intent to defraud investors or with any intent to abuse public credit. Nevertheless, such an abuse of credit was committed, not altogether by the incurring of debt beyond ability to pay, but by failure to adequately provide for the cost of carrying this debt along with the increasing costs of governmental functions largely incident thereto.

I think the greatest blunders made in the administration of local government—and these are directly responsible for the condition in which so many local units find themselves today—were unbalanced budgets and laxity in the collection of revenues. Had there been balanced budgets and rigid enforcement of tax collections coincident with public demands for improvements and conveniences, public reaction would have been in opposition toward further incurring of debt, and our troubles of today would have been greatly minimized.

Of course, excessive issuance of bonds or abuse of public credit are not the only causes of the difficulties in which so many of our local units find themselves. Collapse of industry, unemployment, and deflation in property values are also contributing factors. Extensive refinancing and readjustment of local government debt has now become imperative, and this presents one of the most formidable problems which we must solve. There are many complex conditions to be considered in its undertaking, and for the purpose of considering these conditions I would place our local governmental units, which are in financial difficulties, in one of two main classes.

First. Units which, with a reasonable extension of time, will be able to pay their debt in full, contingent, of course, upon the further improvement in economic conditions.

Second. Units which cannot pay their debt in full even under greatly improved conditions.

Units of the first class have the potential wealth with which they may be expected to pay their debt in full, and it is reasonably assumed that a large majority of their creditors will agree to a refinancing plan. One of the most common causes which give rise to the necessity of refunding this debt is the present arrangement of maturing principal, large annual installments of principal falling due now and during the next 10 years. Units of the second class present a much more complex problem of refunding. These units must approach their creditors with a proposition to curtail or compromise their debt, which will not be received with much enthusiasm unless creditors are convinced that conditions require such a proposition. Many units of local government of our State—35 counties and 28 cities and towns—have undertaken plans for refinancing their debts under the advice and direction of the local government commission, and a great volume of work incident thereto has devolved upon the commission, as all issues of bonds are required to be approved by it and exchanges are made jointly by this office and that of the State treasurer. Therefore, much progress has already been made in relieving our local units, and many others are giving consideration to similar plans. All such plans of refinancing municipal debts, however, are subject to the hazardous opposition of a small percentage of bondholders, over which, at the present time, we have no control.

This brings me to the discussion of the bill which is now before the Congress of the United States, which is designed to bring about an orderly adjustment of debts of local governments. This municipal debt refinancing bill, referred to as the "Wilcox bill", which was introduced in the Seventy-second Congress, was one of the important pieces of legislation proposed at that session. The bill was redrafted and is now before the United States Senate, having just been reported favorably by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The bill as introduced is an amendment to the Federal Bankruptcy Act and provides for the readjustment of the debts of cities or other political subdivisions of a State now in default, or threatened with default, by reason of inability to meet its maturing obligations out of sinking funds or greatly reduced current tax revenues. Default on municipal debts, once confined to small communities and special districts, is now a matter of Nation-wide interest and concern, since some of our larger cities have found it impossible to meet their obligations. As I have already intimated, suggestions have been made as to the causes of the epidemic of defaults by municipalities, and, of course, many influences have exerted themselves in the downward trend; but, after all, the primary cause of the present municipal debt situation is due to the overexpansion of municipal credit during the prosperity period following the war, to which may be added all of the attendant circumstances of the economic depression.

But, regardless of the causes, our main objective now is to find a way to check the tide of municipal defaults which, sooner or later, will bring untold distress to the unfortunate taxpayer by the loss of his holdings through confiscatory taxation.

A readjustment of this load of excessive, and, in some cases, uncollectible debt, is the quickest road to recovery for bondholders and taxpayers. These two classes of debtors and creditors should have a common interest in adjusting their debt problems on the basis of capacity to pay. I wish to be distinctly understood that I have never favored repudiation in any form, and do not advocate it now, even in the most hopeless cases of insolvency, but I do know that the need for an amicable readjustment between bondholders and municipalities is a very present one.

Under the terms of the proposed amendment to the Federal Bankruptcy Act, known as the "Wilcox bill", cities, towns, counties, and other taxing districts, acting in cooperation with a majority of their creditors, are accorded the right to negotiate a settlement and readjustment of its debts upon terms and conditions which the taxpayer can meet. This privilege is already extended to individuals and private corporations under the Bankruptcy Act, so why would it not be fair and equitable to provide, also, the means by which the creditors of a municipality and its taxpayers may work out plans for refunding and adjusting the debt to conform to the paying ability of the taxpayers?

Critics and opponents of the bill would, in all probability, be in accord with all I have said thus far. They are aware of the fact that the debts of many governmental units are greater than the present ability to pay, and that readjustment is necessary in order to stabilize local government credit, for it is recognized that so long as a local unit is in default its obligations are next to worthless, marketable in every case at prices far below their real value, and the property of its citizens is generally unsalable. But they say that each State should handle the problems of its subdivisions by appropriate legislation and not resort to the Federal Bankruptcy Act for the desired relief. Personally, I think this would be satisfactory if it could be accomplished by a State with a sufficient degree of effectiveness; but it so happens that, under the Constitution, it is doubtful that State legislatures could enact legislation which would bind the menacing minority bondholder to a readjustment plan which had been accepted by creditors representing two-thirds or three-fourths of the indebtedness. No refinancing plan is ever safe with even a small percentage of creditors antagonistic and unwilling to cooperate with the unit and join with a majority of the creditors for the common good of all.

As director of local government of North Carolina I have contacted many large holders of municipal bonds, and my experience has been that, in almost every case, they have been favorable to refunding or refinancing plans which are fair and equitable, and are willing to accept adjustments upon the basis of capacity to pay. This class of municipal creditors represents a decided majority, but it is the small minority of bondholders, usually less than 10 percent, which is a constant menace to any refunding plan. Many of this small minority have purchased single bonds, or small blocks of bonds, for practically nothing, from individuals who were forced to sell, and who refuse to join in any refunding plan but insist on immediate payment of the debt. Under the Wilcox bill, the minority would be bound by any plan of readjustment which had been accepted by two-thirds in amount of the outstanding claims. This would put an end to litigation by the minority and resolve itself into an orderly readjustment. Some municipalities need only extension of maturities, while others may be forced to seek temporary reduction of interest rates, and in extraordinary cases, some may require a scaling down of principal. This may seem somewhat drastic, but it is the only common sense thing to do in view of the excessive debts contracted during the period of financial revelry in the belief that it was permanent prosperity.

Under this bill any taxing district may file a petition in the United States District Court in whose jurisdiction such district is located, stating that the district is insolvent or unable to meet its debts as they mature, and that it desires to effect a plan of adjustment of its debt upon the basis of capacity to pay. As a condition precedent to the filing of the petition, the unit must show to the court that the consent of creditors of such unit owning more than 30 percent in amount of its bonds, notes, or certificates of indebtedness, have agreed in writing to a plan for composition and adjustment of their claims.

Upon the filing of the petition the court shall enter an order either approving it or dismissing it. Upon approving the petition the judge may require the petitioner to give notice direct to all creditors and to cause publication thereof to be made of a hearing to be held within 90 days after the entry of such order, and all creditors objecting to the petition to answer the same within 60 days. At the hearing those creditors who may object to the plan submitted with the original petition have the right to propose a different plan, provided it has been approved by not less than 10 percent in amount of all creditors of the unit.

Such additional plan will, of course, be considered by the court in the light of the facts presented by the petitioner and its creditors. A final composition or adjustment plan will not be confirmed by the court, however, until it has been accepted in writing by creditors holding two-thirds in amount of claims allowed and which would be affected by the plan. Upon such confirmation the provisions of the plan shall be binding upon the taxing district and all creditors. As a safeguard against the court assuming control of, or interfering with, the governmental powers of the unit, the bill provides:

"The court shall not, by any order in the proceeding or otherwise, interfere with the exercise of any of the political or governmental powers of the taxing district; nor shall the court, by order or otherwise, assume control of or interfere with any of the property or revenues of the taxing district, unless the plan of readjustment so provides."

Could any legislation be fairer to all those who are concerned in the question of municipal defaults? The right to be heard is accorded the minority, but when creditors representing two-thirds of the indebtedness agree upon a proposed plan, it is to be assumed that such a plan is fair and equitable, and should not be thwarted by a small minority. The holder of one bond out of a hundred thousand bonds can, unless this bill is passed, refuse to accept the terms of settlement of readjustment, and thereby defeat the entire plan, even though it had been approved and agreed to by a majority of the holders. This is not only a possibility, but there have been many instances where this has actually happened.

The purpose of the bill is to give the court jurisdiction of these minority creditors, who by refusing to accept the terms of settlement agreed to by the majority creditors, keep local units from refinancing their debts.

The statement has been made by the opposition to the bill that if local units of government would practice economy in the administration of their affairs they would be able to meet their debts. To those of us who are in position to know, this argument is ridiculous, as most of our local units have already reduced their operating expenses to the minimum, and still they cannot raise sufficient tax money to pay the expenses of government and meet the demands of creditors. Statements of some of our local governments reveal that in many instances operating expenses have been reduced as much as 50 percent within the last few years and yet the units have been unable to even meet the interest on their debts. Unfortunately for the taxpayers in these units, the reduction in operating expenses has not resulted in a reduction of taxes. As appropriations for operating expenses decrease, the appropriations for debt service have increased. The local taxpayer, therefore, has received no benefit from the reduction of expenses, but has found himself with a less efficient government.

Some opponents of this proposed Federal legislation suggest the possibility of the abuse of the privileges granted thereunder, and that repudiation of debts would be increased. But it should be distinctly understood that this bill does not seek to repudiate any of the obligations of local units nor to provide a way for such. It does not provide for any arbitrary scaling down of the debts, nor does it leave to the discretion of the municipal officers or to the court the right to determine the paying ability of the unit. It does provide, however, for the final readjustment of the debts by agreement entered into between the governing body and the holders of two-thirds of its debts. It should also be borne in mind that the local taxing unit cannot file a petition with the court unless it has been consented to by 30 percent in amount of its claims. There is nothing new in a proposal to settle a public debt on the basis of ability to pay; in fact, that is the limit of the collateral back of the debt. The very existence of our local governments is seriously threatened, and something must be done.

MEMORIAL DAY ADDRESS BY CHIEF JUSTICE PATTANGALL, OF MAINE

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, on May 30, 1934, Chief Justice William R. Pattangall, of the Supreme Court of the State of Maine, delivered a very remarkable Memorial Day address at Skowhegan, Maine. I ask unanimous consent to have the address printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

President Lincoln, on the field of Gettysburg in the fall of 1863, furnished the text for all future Memorial Day addresses. In that matchless oration he struck the high note of patriotism and made clear the motive and purpose of the war then going on between the States, calling on his and future generations of American citizens to maintain the principles for which the Union armies were contending. The Northern States, under his guidance, were not conducting a war of conquest; their primary object was not to abolish slavery. That was incidental only. They were engaged in demonstrating to mankind that a nation, conceived in liberty and devoted to the Christian conception of human brotherhood and the preservation of equality of opportunity for every child born within its borders, possessed the strength to maintain its integrity even against the shock of civil war.

The underlying thought of the statesmen who formulated the Federal Constitution and the constitutions of the respective States was that government could safely rest upon the broad base of popular approval, and that to a self-governing people must be given that measure of individual freedom and liberty which would develop the ability to sustain the responsibilities placed upon them.

The authority of the Government was to be exercised through three great coordinate branches—executive, legislative, and judicial—the membership of which should be in part selected by popular vote, in part by agencies so selected, and in part by Executive appointment, approved by the Members of the senior legislative body, none of these branches of Government exercising powers granted to another. The administration of governmental powers was further subdivided between the Union of States, the States themselves, and the subdivisions thereof, each operating in the field of greatest usefulness and efficiency, cooperatively in certain lines but independently in others.

Such a form of government was an experiment. It was a complete departure from government by divine right or by an aristocracy based upon inheritance or wealth, or by an oligarchy or bureaucracy or theocracy. Nurtured in revolution, it had not only survived up to Lincoln's time, it had thrived and grown to maturity. During that period it had passed through the disappointingly unsuccessful War of 1812 and the unconscionable but materially successful war with Mexico, had endured the terrible financial depression following the Napoleonic Wars and survived the panic of 1837, involving as it did the bankruptcy of nearly every business house in America, a shrinkage in real-estate values which made paupers of thousands of hitherto prosperous land owners and caused municipalities, counties, and even some of the States to enter upon a disgraceful policy of repudiation.

From all of these it had suffered and slowly but finally recovered and, after all, had in the main remained true to the fundamental principles upon which it rested.

All through the years, the black cloud of slavery had threatened the stability of a nation founded on freedom. Jefferson hated the idea of human bondage with all the force of his great mind, with every drop of blood that flowed through his great heart, and in the charter of the Northwest Territory excluded any possibility of its spread into that section of the country. Washington and Madison and Monroe, Virginians all, sympathized with Jefferson's views, but the successful culture of cotton seemed to demand slave labor, and gradually the Southland, urged onward by an economic tide, unconsciously drifted from democracy to aristocracy and came to regard the right to ownership of slaves as something too sacred to even admit of discussion.

High tariffs and the negro question might have disrupted the Union 30 years before the Civil War, had it not been that the White House at that time housed a fearless patriot and a real Democrat. Secession ceased to be popular after President Jackson had proclaimed hanging a remedy for treason. But after his time, the propaganda in its favor became insistent. Born in Massachusetts in the embargo days, boldly proclaimed at the Hartford convention, the doctrine finally took deep root in South Carolina and Calhoun became its prophet.

Lincoln watched the growth of sentiment in its favor with a full realization of all of its implications. He hated slavery but he was not an abolitionist. He loved the Union. He was determined that it should not be destroyed. He believed in the right of each State to govern its own internal affairs. He fought against the extension of slavery beyond the limits which it had reached in 1850, but he denied the right of the free States to interfere with it within those limits as emphatically as he denied the right of the slave States to force their peculiar institution on the people of the Territories.

He met the attempt of the hot-headed politicians of the South to dismember the Nation with firmness, but kindly. He tried to avert war, but when peace could no longer be maintained, he summoned to the aid of the national cause every loyal man and woman. Regardless of party affiliations, past or present, he gathered about him those who like himself saw in the American flag the symbol of human freedom and read in the law of the land the charter of human liberty. He led the fight for the constitutional rights of the common people.

A loyal member of the Whig Party from boyhood until late middle age, a follower of Henry Clay, his underlying political philosophy was that of Jefferson; and the new party, which he was instrumental in organizing and which first entered national politics in 1856, adopted the name which the Sage of Monticello had given to his followers. His faith in the common people was as strong as was that of his great prototype, and they justified that faith. It is due to the manhood and womanhood of his generation that the great war ended successfully and that the world learned the inherent strength of a free people to solve the problems of government even at a tremendous sacrifice.

Lincoln spoke at Gettysburg not only to the people of his day but to their children and their children's children. He asked those yet unborn to dedicate themselves to the cause of freedom and equality. Echoing down through the years, his words stirred the hearts of the men who fought to free Cuba and, later on, the men who crossed the seas to prevent the destruction of civilization by arbitrary force; and are as potent and carry as earnest a message today in time of peace as they carried in days of war.

The American people have grown so accustomed to the enjoyment of civil and religious liberty, so used to living their own lives in their own way, to being protected in their property rights, to looking upon government and law administered by government as a protective force, rather than as an imposition of the will of others on them, that just as men forget the value of the air they breathe, the water they drink, the health that they enjoy, they have ceased to regard the great privileges of American citizenship in their true light or to appraise them at their true value.

The need of the times is a readjustment of the public mind in that respect. The danger of today is not the loss of liberty by use of force. Rather it lies in a supine surrender of the rights of freemen to a seductive program of paternalism, gradually changing the form of our Government from a representative republic to a bureaucratic state, mildly despotic in action, dangerously experimental, in which human rights and property rights cease to rest upon the firm foundation of established law and come to depend upon the whim of the temporary majority.

When legislative powers are surrendered to executives who are but too willing to accept them; when the judiciary strive to find reasons for upholding laws enacted at the behest of noisy minorities; when the plain and simple language of Federal and State Constitutions is given new and strange meaning in order to meet assumed existing emergencies; when debasement of the currency is adopted as a sound financial policy; when the sovereignty of the individual States is disregarded and local self-government becomes an obsolete phrase; when individual initiative is discouraged, the lessons of experience cast aside, and personal liberty in a great measure becomes a thing of the past; when men are denied the right to buy and sell the products of their labor in the open market place, fixing the prices of the goods in which they deal by bargain with their fellows; when the farmer is forbidden to sow and reap on the land he owns according to his own best judgment; when every detail of the daily business life of the citizen is ordered by officials, not of his choosing; when written agreements cease to have a binding force, even upon government itself—the Nation which the Civil War was fought to preserve will have ceased to be.

Our Nation and our State were organized for one great purpose—to secure to the citizens thereof the blessings of liberty. Washington and his soldiers fought in that great cause. Lincoln and the armies of the North maintained the standard which their fathers raised. All that they lived and died for becomes a sad and futile waste if we of this generation are to surrender the heritage they bequeathed us because we lack the courage, the independence, the manliness, to work out our individual salvation, but prefer to become paupers to the State, depending upon its bounty to supply our needs.

We are being taught new doctrines today. Theories of government undreamed of by the statesmen of the past are urged upon us by present-day leaders of public thought. Thrift, industry, economy, are no longer regarded as essential to the well-being of our people. With millions unemployed, we are instructed that factories and workshops, mines and quarries, shall be closed in order that a scarcity of their products may enhance their price. With hundreds of thousands of the poor suffering the pangs of hunger, it is made an offense against the law to plant more than a modicum of crops in order that food may not become too cheap. Not too much milk must be produced, though the pale faces of undernourished children haunt the dreams of those who come in contact with the poor.

Millions—yes, billions—of dollars, representing wealth dug from the earth and wrested from the sea, brought to the public treasuries by the taxgatherers, are being wasted in unprofitable expenditure, in an attempt to create a prosperity as unreal and unsubstantial as the dreams of an opium eater. Gigantic debts are being created to burden generations to come.

Is it not time to stop? Ought we not, on this day of all days, in memory of the loyalty of those men who preserved our national unity by force of arms, rededicate America to the ideals which they worshiped? The great mass of the people of this Nation are sane. Should they not assert their sanity? Should they not make one more stand for individual freedom and a preservation of the form of government they inherited?

We want no Fascist government in America. This Nation of ours is not to become a communistic state. We need no dictator. We are a free people, capable of self-government, as able to solve the problems of our generation as those who preceded us solved the problems of their time. Let us undertake the task. Let us carry on the work in the spirit of Lincoln. Let us, with him, highly resolve that government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth.

MONETARY USE AND PURCHASE OF SILVER

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H.R. 9745) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase silver, issue silver certificates, and for other purposes.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, the issue pending before the Senate is an amendment proposed by myself yesterday to strike from the bill section 2 and to insert in lieu thereof a substitute section. Section 2 of the bill as it is now before the Senate provides that it shall be the policy of the United States to buy some more silver or to trade for some more silver or to get some more silver any way we can get it, and to add it to our present monetary stock. Neither section 2 nor the bill itself pretends to make of silver a primary money.

We have at least two kinds of money in this country. We have primary money or standard money or basic money, and that is gold. That is all the primary, standard, basic money we have. All other forms of money are secondary forms of money, nothing more nor less than token money. That embraces silver, it embraces subsidiary coinage, and likewise embraces the forms of paper money which we have in circulation.

Yesterday I tried to distinguish between basic money and secondary money. I think I failed in making my colleagues understand what I mean as to the difference between basic money and secondary money. So this morning I am going back to the lessons I learned many years ago when I taught school. I used a block system. I have brought some blocks here this morning. It may be I can make my point clear by using the blocks.

Mr. President, this is a most important issue—money. It is what we all work for; it is what everyone works for; it is what the farmer strives for, what he gets up early in the morning and toils all day all year long for—money. It is what the wage earner works for; it is what the professional man works for. It is what the business man works for; it is what the banker works for; it is what every one works for—money, the most important thing in the world.

America is presumed to be the leader in fixing the financial policies of the world, yet I find that the United States Senate apparently has but very little interest in the money question.

I am going to exhibit to the Senate a small block of wood. I am going to call it "gold." It represents all the gold there is in America. This block of wood is intended to represent our stock of gold. This block, if weighed, would be found to weigh 222,000,000 ounces. This storehouse of gold, 222,000,000 ounces, at $35 per ounce, is worth in money, in gold, in dollars $7,750,000,000 in round numbers. That is all the gold we have, and we have that much monetary gold in the United States.

I exhibit this entire stock of our gold. That is primary money. This stock of gold is worth just as much unstamped as if it be stamped. Every time we have 15 grains plus of gold it is worth a dollar whether or not it is stamped. That is only the gold, 222,000,000 ounces, worth $7,750,000,000 plus. That is primary money; that is standard money; that is basic money, because it is worth intrinsically the amount of the stamp contained on the block, whether or not the stamp is worth a cent.

That is what I mean by basic, standard, primary money. That is the only standard, basic, primary money we have. There is nothing else that is the ultimate metal of redemption save gold. Of course, we can redeem money in silver, but we have less in value when we redeem it than we had when we started. A silver dollar is worth a little more than a paper dollar, but only relatively. A silver dollar is worth only a fraction of 100 cents, thirty-five one-hundredths. A paper dollar is worth a little less. A silver dollar and a paper dollar are token money—nothing more.

Mr. President, if I have made myself clear as to what I mean by standard, primary, basic money, I shall pass from that point.

We have at the present time some silver. We have approximately $840,000,000 worth of silver—$540,000,000 of standard silver dollars, and $300,000,000 of subsidiary money made up of halves, quarters, and dimes. We have in ounces of silver only about 666,000,000. Of gold we have 222,000,000 ounces.

I have and exhibit now a block of wood three times as large as the gold block. At the present time our store of silver is three times in size, and in weight, our store of gold. So the blocks of wood which I now exhibit represents the relative proportion in weight of silver and gold. Yet silver is not a basic money; it is not primary money; it is not standard money. It is only token money.

The bill does not change the legal status of the silver one iota. If the bill should pass, we would buy some more silver and add to the silver block and make it larger; but silver would still be secondary money, it would still be token money, it would still be a commodity, measured in terms of gold, under the provisions of the bill.

Mr. President, if we could find some more gold and increase the size of our gold stock, we could increase our stock of standard, primary, basic money; but so far as I know, there is no particular source of increasing our gold stock excepting the movements of gold from other countries. Unless we can use silver in some way, make silver basic, primary, standard money, I can see no particular benefit in buying and increasing the stock of secondary, subsidiary, token money in the form of silver.

The bill now before the Senate does nothing more than provide for increasing the size of the silver block we have. It does not in any sense make the silver standard, primary, or basic money. I propose to strike out that section and to insert a new section which will convert silver into basic, standard, primary money.

The bill now before the Senate measures silver arbitrarily, fictitiously, purely through the imagination, and calls each ounce of silver worth $1.29, when we all know that an ounce of silver is worth only about 45 cents. The bill pretends on the face of things to revalue silver and increase its value by fiat from 45 cents an ounce to $1.29 an ounce.

Those of us who care to believe that may do so, but we have no foundation whatever for our belief. The only way in which we can raise the value of this silver to $1.29 an ounce is to raise the price of silver throughout the world. We cannot raise the price of this silver in America intrinsically except as silver rises in value on the world market. I am trying so to change section 2 as to raise the price of silver so that throughout the world silver will have a higher price than it has now.

Section 2 of the pending bill, I am afraid, will not raise the price of silver. Under section 2 of the bill as it now appears before the Senate, we can buy only about a billion ounces of silver. When we buy a billion ounces of silver we shall have our allocation completed. We shall have our quota filled. Then we cannot buy any more silver, because another billion ounces will make 2,000,000,000 ounces, and 2,000,000,000 ounces measured at $1.29 an ounce makes two and a half billion dollars' worth of silver in terms of monetary value; but in terms of real value it is worth only a billion dollars.

Therefore I am trying so to change section 2 as to make this silver into basic, primary, standard money by giving it a value in accordance with the value of the world. If we can consider this block of silver from a world-value standpoint, it is worth today $840,000,000 in fiat money, in token money; but if we can revalue silver and value it on the basis of what it is worth as bullion throughout the world, it is worth only $350,000,000. Our stock of silver, valued at $1.29 an ounce, is worth $840,000,000. That is token money; but if we will step back and value this silver at its world value, at even 50 cents an ounce, then this stock of silver becomes worth $350,000,000.

I propose to revalue silver and put it in our reserves at its world value, whatever that world value is. If that is done, this block of silver becomes worth $350,000,000 in gold, just as good as gold here, just as good as gold in England, just as good as gold in China, just as good as gold in Asia, Africa, South and North America, or anywhere else in the world.

Then when we value silver in terms of gold it is worth $350,000,000. We can set it alongside of gold. Here we have $7,500,000,000 in gold. We have $350,000,000 in silver. Either one is good for those figures anywhere in the world.

Mr. President, I do not know how much silver it will take to make a dollar. That is immaterial. At the present time it takes more than 2 ounces of silver to make a dollar; and if one of us had a silver certificate and desired to cash this silver certificate under the rules and regulations provided for the purpose, he would get today more than 2 ounces of silver for his dollar. He can go into the market and buy silver, and that is what he will get. So I propose to revalue silver and give it a world-price value rather than a fiat value of $1.29 an ounce. It is a commodity now. Under the terms of the pending bill it remains a commodity; and under the terms of the bill it is no better than paper from any standpoint in the world.

The enactment of the pending bill will help the silver miners; it will help the silver States somewhat; but I am not interested in this matter from the standpoint of the silver States. I do not come from a silver State. I care nothing for this matter from the standpoint of the silver States. I am glad to help them; I am helping them to the best of my ability, but that is not my motive. I shall come to my motive later on. I am trying to help the people in my State through silver. I am trying to help the people in Maryland through silver. I am trying to help the people throughout the United States through the use of silver. I am trying to help the people of the world through a reclassification and a revaluation of silver.

Mr. President, I am not yet sure that I have made my position clear. Under the Pittman bill we buy more silver and add this silver to our stock of money—not to our reserves, not to our basic money, not to our standard money, not to our primary money, but to our stock of money. The stock of money embraces gold. It embraces eight forms of paper. It embraces nickels, and it embraces pennies. Under the terms of the Pittman bill, if it shall pass, silver will be no more important in our monetary system than the pennies coined from copper or the nickels coined from nickel.

I realize that this subject is somewhat hard to understand, because I talked yesterday for an hour, and one of the distinguished Senators from a silver State sent me a letter last night and asked me to modify my amendment in a certain way; and if I had done so I would have put it right back to the Pittman bill. So I am not sure that I shall be able, even now, to get my ideas over; but perhaps I can do it in another way.

Under the bill which is now before the Senate, if it shall pass and be carried out by the executive department, the executive department will be required to acquire an additional amount of about 1,300,000,000 ounces of silver. That is all it can acquire, because under the bill each ounce is worth $1.29 in fiat money, and 2,000,000,000 ounces multiplied by $1.29 for each ounce makes approximately $2,500,000,000, and that is the 25-percent quota. We cannot buy any more silver than the total of 2,000,000,000 ounces, because that, when measured by a fiat standard, makes up the two and a half billion dollars; but under my proposal we buy the silver and put it in our reserves, not by its fiat value, but by its bullion value.

We have two and a half billion dollars with which to buy silver. If silver does not increase in value, and we can still buy it at 50 cents an ounce, in order to get two and a half billions dollars' worth of silver we may have to buy as much as 5,000,000,000 ounces. I do not care how much we have to buy. When we buy it, it is worth what we pay for it. It will be worth more after we start to buy than it is now worth. The silver we now have will increase in value. The more we buy the more silver will increase in value, and it is my judgment that if my substitute section should go through, having two and a half billion dollars to spend for silver at its market price, we could so bid for silver that the price would go up to $1.29 an ounce. If it did not, we should get the major part of 5,000,000,000 ounces of silver to add to our reserves; and I will come later on to the question as to whether or not we can get 5,000,000,000 ounces of silver.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. GLASS. Would it interrupt the Senator if I should ask him a question?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I shall be only too glad to have any Senator ask any question he sees fit at any time.

Mr. GLASS. The Senator is undertaking to define for the information of other Senators what is primary money and what is token money. He says gold is now primary money. I do not exactly understand how he arrives at that conclusion under existing conditions. If that be true, nobody has any primary money.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Nor much secondary money.

Mr. GLASS. Nobody has any primary money. If a citizen is caught with any gold on his person, he is a statutory felon; and under existing circumstances gold cannot be used for the redemption of token money. So we are in a situation in which gold is actually demonetized, while, as I understand, the Senator in a sense is pleading to have silver remonetized.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator is exactly correct from a practical standpoint. There is virtually no gold now in circulation. If there be any gold in circulation it is only in very small quantities. I think it is legal for anyone to have not exceeding $100 in gold. Nevertheless, we have in our strong boxes throughout the country this hoard of gold which totals something like $7,776,000,000. It is somewhere. It is in the possession of the United States.

Mr. GLASS. It is just so much lumber. It is not used for monetary purposes. It is not even used for reserve purposes; because, what is a reserve? A reserve is a redemption fund, and nothing now can be redeemed in gold, because if a man should take to the Treasury his token money, whether it be a silver certificate or whether it be a Treasury note, and demand that the Government comply with its promise printed on the face of the token money and get gold he would be arrested right on the spot for a felony, and fined and put in jail.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator is correct from a practical standpoint. We each understand the proposition, and I hope everybody else does. We have the gold, but it is in our strong boxes. It cannot be had except for the purpose of paying for international transactions.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. WHEELER. I think the Senator has correctly stated the matter, but I assume that eventually we shall come back to the gold standard, so that gold will be money of ultimate redemption; and what we desire to do is to put silver in the same position in which gold will be when we come back to the point where we have it as money of ultimate redemption.

If the Senator will pardon me for a brief further statement, one of the reasons why I have been for the remonetization of silver has been because it must be apparent to any thinking person at the present time that not only has there been a shortage of gold, but likewise there has been a maldistribution of gold, or a corner upon gold by two or three countries; and because there is a corner upon gold by two or three countries, most of the other smaller countries have had to go off the gold standard. In my humble judgment it is necessary to remonetize silver in order to break the corner upon gold, and to have more money of ultimate redemption.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. GLASS. My contention is that we now have no primary money, nor have we any money for redemptive purposes.

Mr. WHEELER. I think the Senator is entirely correct. There is not any question about it.

Mr. GLASS. In other words, we are on a flat bond basis, and we are on a flat money basis.

Mr. WHEELER. Why, of course.

Mr. GLASS. Of course we are.

Mr. WHEELER. There is not any question at all about it. I agree entirely with what the Senator says. What I am seeking to do by the remonetization of silver is to break the situation in which we find ourselves and put us back upon a sound monetary basis. I think the way to do that, so that we may have money of ultimate redemption, is to remonetize silver, and adopt silver as money of redemption along with gold.

Mr. GLASS. I concede that the most plausible argument that has ever been made for the remonetization of silver is now made, because silver is certainly worth more than irredeemable paper.

Mr. WHEELER. There is no question about that.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I agree with the statement made by each of the Senators. I am trying to modify the bill so that our silver may be used as primary money, since we do not have the gold and cannot get the gold, from a practical standpoint. Otherwise we will have no primary money; otherwise we will have no basic money; otherwise, from a practical standpoint, we will have no standard money, unless we go to silver. We have the gold, but it is tied up; we cannot get it. The law we passed a year ago provides that gold is still the standard of value.

An amendment was placed on the agricultural bill last year containing the following language:

> The President may fix the weight of the gold dollar in accordance with the ratio agreed upon, and such gold dollar, the weight of which is so fixed, shall be the standard unit of value.

So in the law we passed last May the gold dollar is fixed as the standard of value. Yet these gold dollars are not where we can get them. The public cannot get them. We have the gold, and I am trying to make it possible to get the gold back into circulation, and I am trying to make it possible, by using something else temporarily to take the place of gold, to break the corner in gold. Later on silver will go up in value and gold will come down in value, and the two will reach a parity. Then we can come to an agreement, either among ourselves or with the nations of the world, whereby we may circulate silver and gold on a ratio. But I am not now arguing for that.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. FESS. While the law provides that gold shall be the standard of value, the interdiction of the law that we cannot redeem in gold whatever medium is in circulation rather nullifies that, does it not?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Temporarily that is correct. We are on a gold standard today, I will say to the Senator from Ohio, in this way: As I understand, we are using a large fund which we have to keep the American paper dollar on a parity in value with what it should be in gold. That is done through the buying and selling of gold currency, mainly the French franc. France is on a gold basis. The franc is a stable piece of money as per its weight in gold. We have tied our dollar, practically, to the French franc, and we are using a large fund to buy and sell francs, to buy and sell dollars, to keep our dollar with a stable purchasing value. So I take it that today the United States is on a gold standard, practically.

We are using gold in international settlements. If we owed some foreign nation a sum of money, we would pay it in gold. If some State or some city or some corporation owed some foreign nation or some foreign corporation a sum of money, it is arranged so that they could get gold and make the settlement if they had to do it. So in a way we are on a gold standard today, although the gold is not in actual circulation.

Mr. FESS. I would assume, while what the Senator says may be regarded as a practical operation, from the fact that all our money is inconvertible we do not have any metallic basis at all today.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. None whatever.

Mr. FESS. And if the pending bill shall be enacted, if we will have any standard, it will be the silver standard.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Unless the bill shall be amended, if it shall pass, we will still not have any metallic standard for our money, from a practical standpoint, which the public can get hold of, because the status of silver will not be changed. It will still remain nothing more than token money, nothing more than paper, except that silver is worth a little more as a commodity than paper is worth as a commodity.

Mr. FESS. I think the Senator is correct in that statement.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I am proposing an amendment to change that section so that we can make silver basic, standard, primary money. To do that we will have to consider silver from the standpoint of its intrinsic value rather than from the standpoint of its fiat value.

Mr. President, the bill is fatally defective, in my judgment, in three important particulars. The first is as to section 2. The second point is that the Treasury Department, in my judgment, would not be required to put silver certificates into circulation, even though the Department bought silver.

I understand that the author of the bill takes a different viewpoint. The law provides that if the Government shall buy silver it shall issue silver certificates to the amount of the cost of the silver.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. LONG. Just what is the value?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. At the present time silver is worth 45 cents an ounce.

Mr. LONG. Will they issue silver certificates?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Government will buy an ounce of silver for 45 cents, and they will issue a silver certificate to the value of 45 cents for each ounce. That is all it is worth. But from a monetary standpoint it is worth $1.29.

Mr. LONG. That is the difficulty I had with this bill on that point. If they are going to issue only a certificate representing what they pay for the silver, that does not mean anything.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, if we assume that we have approximately a billion ounces, and we buy another billion, and pay 50 cents an ounce for the billion, it would take $500,000,000 to buy the billion ounces. If the Department issued silver certificates to the extent of the $500,000,000, and placed them in circulation, it would increase the currency to the extent.

Mr. LONG. I understand; but what are we to do with the $850,000,000 worth of silver we already have, which is issued at $1.2929, if we are to issue the balance of it on the basis of 50 cents an ounce?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That will take care of itself, naturally.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield to me?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. PITTMAN. I could not let that erroneous suggestion or understanding pass unnoticed. The Government would not issue a silver certificate against 50-cent silver under the bill. In other words, if we bought a hundred million ounces of silver at 50 cents, it would cost us $50,000,000. We would issue $50,000,000 worth of silver certificates. We would issue fifty million $1 silver certificates.

Mr. LONG. Very well.

Mr. PITTMAN. As there is seventy-eight hundredths of an ounce of silver in a silver dollar, we would coin the hundred million ounces into silver dollars, but we would first coin only 50,000,000 of standard silver dollars. The purchase price is $50,000,000 for the 100,000,000 ounces. Then we issue $50,000,000 in certificates. Behind that $50,000,000 in silver certificates are the 50,000,000 standard silver dollars, which means 39,000,000 ounces of silver to coin such silver dollars. Then there is left a surplus of 61,000,000 ounces of silver against which we are not required to issue silver certificates, but may at any time we see fit to do so.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma permit me to ask the Senator from Nevada a question?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. LONG. If I understand the Senator from Nevada, he states that if we buy silver, whatever the number of ounces is, at 50 cents, we would issue only 50 cents' worth of money in currency to cover 50 cents' worth of silver we bought.

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes.

Mr. LONG. We have $850,000,000 worth of silver now, have we not?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is correct.

Mr. LONG. That is, we issue on a basis of $1.2929, on 16-to-1 basis.

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes; old basis.

Mr. LONG. I do not see how that would work out.

Mr. PITTMAN. The certificates which are issued against the 50-cent silver would be on the same basis. There would be only that many issued, but they would be on the same basis with our old silver certificates. Otherwise, we would have to melt up our old silver dollars and call in our silver certificates, if we changed the ratio.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I will try to make that a little clearer, if I can. I said a moment ago that our silver stock was worth $7,750,000,000. That is approximately correct. The gold block before me represents in value, then, three-fourths of our total metallic reserve, provided we dignify silver and make it a part of our metallic reserve. The pending bill, in my opinion, would not do that. So I am conceding that this block of gold before me in the future will form three-fourths of our metallic reserve. That leaves one-fourth vacant. I propose to fill that vacancy of one-fourth with silver. The bill does not do that.

The only thing section 2 in the bill does—and it is misleading—is to set a yardstick as to how much silver we may buy. It does not say silver is to be basic money. It says that we will have one-fourth of our stocks, if of metal, in silver, but it does not make silver basic money, standard money, or primary money. The only thing section 2 in the bill does is to put an arbitrary limit upon the amount of silver we may buy, and it does not change the status of silver a particle.

If we concede that the gold is three-fourths of our metallic reserve—and I am proceeding as if silver and gold will form, jointly, a hundred percent of our metallic reserve, gold 75 percent, silver 25 percent—the bill will not make that 25-percent vacancy fillable with silver, unless it shall be amended.

If $7,500,000,000 is the gold reserve, then we must make silver fill up that vacuum of $2,500,000,000; but we must make silver basic, standard, primary money, or that gap cannot be filled by silver.

We have two and one-half billion dollars of value there that we must put into silver. If we simply buy some more silver and add it to our stock, that does not fill this vacuum; but if we buy silver and put the silver in our reserves at its bullion value, at its world value, then we commence to build up the reserves to make up the 25 percent, and we have two and one-half billion dollars of money with which to buy silver to fill up this vacuum.

Under the bill as written we can buy only 2,000,000,000 ounces of silver. If that does not raise the price of silver to $1.29 an ounce, we still have a vacuum left there in value.

Under my proposal we have two and one-half billion dollars with which to buy silver to fill up this vacuum, and if we spend the two and one-half billion dollars we will fill up the vacuum with silver worth dollar for dollar with gold, or we will buy 5,000,000,000 ounces of silver. There is no one on the floor of the Senate who will deny that before we get our 5,000,000,000 ounces of silver we shall have silver which is worth throughout the world more than two and one-half billion dollars, and we shall fill up the vacuum.

I still do not think I am making myself clear.

Mr. President, the difference between section 2 of the pending bill and the section which I present is the difference between the purchase of 1,000,000,000 ounces of silver and the purchase of enough silver to make what silver we have worth two and one-half billion dollars throughout the world.

This bill does not in any sense change the present existent status of silver. I pause for anyone to challenge that statement.

Mr. President, this bill does not provide any certain increase in the amount of money in circulation. I pause for anyone to challenge that statement.

The bill does not require anyone to buy a single ounce of silver. If it requires them to buy it, it will only do so ultimately. What is the definition of "ultimately"? It may mean today; it may mean tomorrow; it may mean next year; it may mean 100 years from now. "Ultimately" is a time indefinate in the future.

This bill does not automatically, mandatorily, provide for the purchase of a single ounce of silver. Suppose this bill should pass, and the executive authorities should say that it is not in the interest of public policy to buy any silver now; that we have all the silver we need; no silver would be purchased. Unless silver were purchased, no certificates would be issued. If no certificates should be issued, the currency would not be expanded.

I pause for anyone to challenge this line of reasoning.

Mr. President, the third proposition I submit is that if this bill shall pass there will be no necessary increase in the value of silver. On yesterday I tried to show that under the Bland-Allison Act, passed in 1878, the Treasury Department was to buy two and one-half million ounces of silver a month—I think, indefinitely. It is presumed that the Department bought this silver. Silver kept on going down.

So unsuccessful was the operation of the Bland-Allison Act that the Congress in 1890 passed the Sherman Silver Purchase Act. Under that act, the Treasury Department was obliged to buy four and one-half million ounces per month. The Department bought the silver. It had no perceptible effect upon the price of silver. Silver kept on going down.

It culminated in the fight for the free and unlimited coinage of silver in the campaign of 1896.

Then, Mr. President, in 1918 we passed the Pittman Act, which likewise provided for the purchase of silver; and again the bill had no perceptible effect upon the price of silver. It kept on going down.

The more purchase bills we have passed, so far, the lower silver has gone. It culminated last year, when silver reached a price of about 24½ cents an ounce.

Mr. President, I am not interested in increasing the price of silver because of the fact that my State produces silver. It does not produce silver. I admit that if this bill shall pass in its proper form it will help the mining States, and I should like to see them helped; but unless we can raise the price of silver it will not help the silver-producing States. I do not believe that this bill as now written necessarily, arbitrarily, or mandatorily, will increase the price of silver. I hope it will, but it may not.

Under the bill we would have to buy only a billion ounces. The Treasury could buy these billion ounces of silver in such places and in such a way as not perceptibly to raise the price of silver. When we get the billion ounces purchased we must stop, because if we have two and one-half billion ounces of silver measured on the flat basis, we cannot buy any more.

Mr. President, it may be that some of those who are doing me the honor of listening to me do not believe that my position is well taken. I shall call the attention of the Senate to some of the financial writers, some of the so-called "experts", and see what they have to say about this bill.

I call attention first to an article by Mr. Walter Lippmann, published recently, under the title of "Silver." Mr. Walter Lippmann is a widely known newspaper writer, and I think one of the most widely read, perhaps, in the country. Mr. Lippmann had the opinion, apparently, that we were going to make silver into basic standard primary money. I read from his article:

> The essential principle of the program—

That refers to the silver program—

> as indicated by the newspaper reports of Washington, is that silver is to be transformed in the United States from a commodity like coffee or zinc into a monetary instrument like gold.

Mr. President, that is what I thought we had in mind. That is what I stood for. That is what I stand for now; but when this bill was drawn it did not so provide. Under this bill silver remains just like coffee, like lead and zinc and copper and silk and other commodities. Mr. Lippmann thought we were going to make silver into money, standard, primary money like gold.

Reading further:

This is not a mere matter of raising the price of silver so that silver miners will have more income. It is not a price-raising scheme such as is being used to help wheat, cotton, or hogs. This is a change in the legal status of silver which establishes it as basic money in the United States.

That was the opinion Mr. Lippmann had. That was the opinion of the silver group, so called. We had many conferences, and we decided to make silver into money, standard, basic, primary money, like gold. When the bill was prepared, however, it did not change the status of silver. It just provided for adding some more silver to our stock of money.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. PITTMAN. I do not think the Senator intends to state that the so-called "silver bloc" were deceived. The silver bloc may have been ignorant, but I wish to state emphatically that they were not deceived.

I have already named the Senators who were present at those meetings. There were present the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], the Senator from Colorado, the junior Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], the Senator from South Carolina, and other Senators. We were in several conferences for 5 weeks about this matter.

On the morning of the 16th day of May we met again in conference with the Secretary of the Treasury and with the general counsel to the Secretary, Mr. Oliphant, and discussed the defects in a bill. They then presented a tentative bill for our consideration. We were called down to the White House that afternoon with a bill completed.

Am I interfering with the Senator in his discussion, Mr. President?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. No; go right ahead.

Mr. PITTMAN. The question was raised in the very beginning of this debate as to whether or not the Treasury Department had carried out the agreement had at the White House. It was suggested that a joker had been put into this bill; that we had been deceived.

I now wish to read this very short letter from Mr. Herman Oliphant, general counsel to the Secretary of the Treasury, who was present at one of our conferences:

JUNE 5, 1934.

MY DEAR SENATOR PITTMAN: I enclose herewith one of the mimeographed copies of the silver bill which was read in the final conference with the President on this subject. It was the same mimeograph run which was sent to the Congress, one change only having been made. Page 4 was remimeographed to make a grammatical correction in the nineteenth line of that page. The words "for payment of" were substituted for the words "to pay."

That is the exact bill which the Senate is now considering, in haec verba, with the exception of the first two lines, which were put there for the purpose of substituting them for an amendment which I offered when I presented the bill.

I contend, sir, that it would be totally unfair to the administration to allow any impression to remain that we gentlemen did not agree about this bill. The Senator from Oklahoma at the last meeting at the While House stated emphatically that, in his opinion, the bill did not make silver basic money. I do him justice in stating that. I wish to state, however, that no other voice was raised to that effect at that meeting. If there is a difference of opinion, it is a difference of opinion between the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma and all his other colleagues who participated in all those conferences, and who approved and accepted this bill at the White House just as it was sent in here.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, there are other Senators present who attended that conference, and I think they will agree that what has been stated is substantially correct. I have been alone so often on the money question that that situation does not alarm or worry me in the least. The facts are, since the matter has been brought up, that the Treasury Department did bring us a bill and started to read it to our group, but the reading was never finished; we turned the bill down before the reading had been concluded. Much to my chagrin, when it turned up again it was the same bill. We had no chance to discuss the matter. I voiced my protest against it as strongly as I could.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. PITTMAN. I interrupt only because my understanding of the bill they brought to us and the reason we turned it down are different from that of the Senator. They brought in a bill which pretended to have a mandatory provision in it such as we had drafted and demanded, but they had inserted a line to this effect:

Directed to buy silver, subject to the approval of the President.

At that meeting we called the attention of the Secretary to the fact that that was not mandatory, and he said:

So far as I am concerned I will take it out if the President is willing.

They did take it out.

There was, as the Senator will recollect, still another provision in the bill which we did not think was in accord with our understanding. That was with regard to the issuance of silver certificates. We had demanded all the time that silver certificates be issued against the silver purchased. There was a provision in there that it might be purchased with anything, but there was no provision there that silver certificates should be issued against the silver. We demanded that such a provision be put in, and it was put in.

So it seems to me that every complaint we made at the last meeting was heeded in this bill, and if it were not heeded, then, I say it was due to the ignorance or inadvertence of 10 or 15 Senators who had been working on this problem for months and was not the fault of the Treasury Department.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The sole issue revolves around whether or not we are going to make silver into money or keep it token. It is up to the Senate. If they want to consider silver just the same as copper, the same as nickel, the same as paper in our monetary system, of course, I cannot prevent it; but I am trying to make silver into basic standard money, and there is no use passing this bill unless that is done, for silver is no better than paper unless silver is basic money. Nobody carries silver any more except for the smaller coins; nobody carries silver dollars; such dollars are not seen in the East. So unless we are going to make silver such a metallic money as to be a means of redemption for our paper money, in value equal to gold, then, I am not interested in silver; paper money is just as good as silver to me and just as good to the people of America, and to the people of the world, for that matter.

I am trying to convert silver in basic standard money on an equality with gold, and I am trying to do it by putting it on a bullion value, so that a silver certificate will be worth a dollar in silver measured by gold. If we will do that, then this block of silver becomes a reserve to the amount of $350,000,000 in value, and a silver certificate any place in the world, backed by its part of that silver, will be just the same as the gold certificate any place in the world. Then we can make a demand that our silver be used in the transaction of business throughout the world. They will take our silver then, because it will be on the bullion or real-value basis. They will not take it now.

Mr. Lippmann understood we were going to try to make silver into basic standard primary money. Listen to what he says further in this article:

For that reason—

The reason we were going to make silver into basic standard primary money—

For that reason it will, if adopted, mark an epoch in the history of money.

If we make silver standard, basic, primary money, so says Mr. Lippmann, it will mark an epoch in the history of money. It is not now standard, primary, basic money, and under the terms of this bill it is not to become standard, primary, basic money unless the bill shall be amended.

Mr. Lippmann says if we shall do what we intended to do, and what we thought we were going to do, it will make an epoch in the world's monetary history.

Reading further:

Its effects will be world-wide. For it reverses the course of monetary policy during the past hundred years.

That is what I am trying to do. This bill does not do it. This bill makes no change in our financial policy; it makes no change in our metallic money policy; it makes no change whatever in our policy save that we may go out and buy some silver and add it to our stock of silver along with pennies, along with nickels, along with the eight various kinds of paper money we have, and silver will be no more important than are they.

Reading further from Mr. Lippmann:

The fundamental monetary problem of the world is to deflate gold—

That is what I have been saying upon the floor of the Senate for 2 days. I want to take some of the fictitious value out of gold. I want to give some actual value to this block (indicating) of silver. I am trying to arrange some system whereby we will lessen the demand for gold, and when we do so gold in value will go down. I am trying, as best I can, to arrange for an increased demand for silver, and when that shall be done silver will go up in buying power and in value. If we can increase the demand for silver sufficiently and decrease the demand for gold, silver will go up, and the buying power of gold will come down. They will meet half-way. Then we can pass a law in the Congress, if we cannot get an international agreement, establishing some parity or some ratio between these two metals. We cannot have that now, for they are too far apart in value.

Reading further:

It is to this problem that the silver policy is addressed.

Making silver standard basic primary money—those are my words.

Reading further:

By restoring silver to the status of money in the United States—

Silver must not now have a status of money in the United States, in the opinion of Mr. Lippmann—

By restoring silver to the status of money in the United States the weight of America will be exerted to break down the monopoly value of gold. Just as gold became more valuable when silver was demonetized, so it is expected that gold will become less valuable when silver is remonetized.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator please tell me what he means by the remonetization of silver?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I mean making silver basic, standard, primary money. Imprinting the stamp of the United States on a piece of silver and calling that a dollar makes it a dollar in the United States, but it does not make it worth any more intrinsically. Elsewhere it is worth what its value is in bullion or intrinsically, and it is worth no more among our people than a piece of paper with the Government's stamp upon it, because each in the United States has the standard value of one dollar.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, we cannot remonetize anything in other countries; every government has a right to make its own money; and we cannot force them to accept ours. When we are speaking of remonetization we are speaking of our own currency. We demonetized silver in 1873.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. And it never has been remonetized.

Mr. PITTMAN. Let us see whether it has been. We demonetized it in 1873 by taking away from it its money quality, and its money quality was the right to compel a man to accept it for a debt. We have compelled its acceptance for debts in this country, both public and private, and for public dues. We took away its function as money in 1873, but we have replaced its function as money in this country. Now there are some of us who are trying to do two things—not only to remonetize it, which has been done, but to compel our Government to use it after we remonetize it; that is, by building up our reserves and our stocks in this country. That is one thing. Another thing we are trying to do is to bring it as close as possible to its natural ratio with gold. It cannot be brought to its natural ratio with gold until its price is raised by reference to the price of gold. We are not doing that entirely, but we are approaching it as rapidly as seems practicable.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President we have been using silver since the Constitution was adopted. It is true that in 1873 we provided that gold should be the standard of value; it is true that in 1873 the law provided that silver could only be used as legal tender in a very small sum, I think $5 or $10; it is true that from 1873 to the present time we have had silver in circulation as token money; it is true that more than a year ago we restored to silver the full legal tender quality, so that since May of last year one can pay a bill of $1 with a silver dollar; he can pay a bill of $5, $10, $100, or $1,000, $1,000,000 with silver, or he can pay $1,000,000,000 with $1,000,000,000 with silver. Silver today is full legal tender for all debt-paying purposes, public and private, but it has not increased the value of silver perceptibly.

The silver in the silver dollar, gaged by the standard world price of silver, is worth but very little more today than it was a year ago. I am trying to make silver a part of our reserves, 25 percent of them, and it cannot be done with fiat. We cannot take silver and stamp silver and say it is worth two and a half billion dollars and make the world accept it. That is what this bill proposes to do, to make 2,000,000 ounces of silver into two and a half billion ounces of fiat money.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McGILL in the chair). Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. KING. The Senator does not mean to state, does he, that the silver certificates issued by our Government do not have all the validity and prestige and debt-paying power here and throughout the world as do gold certificates?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. No; I do not.

Mr. KING. Silver is made "standard money", using the Senator's phrase, in the sense that it is just as good as gold, indeed, better than gold, because one cannot get a dollar in gold or a grain of gold out of the Treasury with a gold certificate, but he can get, under the terms of this bill, silver out of the Treasury in redemption of the silver certificates which are issued.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. One can do that now.

Mr. KING. So that the silver certificates have a greater redemptive power in metallic money than have the gold certificates.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Everyone understands that proposition. Under the terms of the existing law, one can pay a debt of a thousand dollars in pennies. So pennies have the same effect in our monetary system today that silver has. This bill does not increase or change the position of silver one iota from what it is now. Our copper pennies stand today in our system of finance on a par with silver.

Nickel nickels stand on a par today in our financial system with silver. One can take a paper dollar down to the bank and get 100 pennies for it or get 20 nickels for it or get a silver dollar for it, but when he gets them, when the transaction is completed, he has less value in bullion than he had in paper as a token. They will buy the same, of course. The bill does not change either of them, and that is one reason why I object to it.

Let me invite attention to some other financial writers. They are well-known gentlemen who write for responsible publications. They would not dare make statements unless they thought they were true, and these statements are not controverted. I quote from the Washington Post, a paper which no one can say is friendly to silver. I think they tell the truth, that they understand the truth. The article states in the headline:

Silver money issue optional with Treasury.

If we pass the bill they may get some more silver and they may not. The next headline is:

Billion and a half, or none, would be permitted under new measure.

That means they may buy a billion ounces of silver and coin it into silver dollars, which makes one billion five hundred million silver dollars. That, however, is optional under the terms of the bill.

Further down in the article I find this statement:

Since the bill is largely permissive as to silver purchases, it also is possible that little or no silver would be bought, which would call for little new silver money.

Again I read:

Meantime the administration silver program is not expected to affect the average man's pocketbook, his silverware, or his economic status.

Again I read:

Under the new silver bill the Treasury is to issue silver certificates at its discretion against all silver bought.

The Treasury Department is not required to issue them. It may be done at the discretion of the Treasury; so there might be bought the entire billion ounces of silver, and they would not be required to put out a single new silver certificate, in which event there would be no increase of circulation. I want to increase the circulation. I want more money in circulation, and I want it to come through the issue of certificates against the silver we are to buy.

I read further from a headline:

Monetary system unchanged.

That is a black headline.

Herman Oliphant, Treasury general counsel, who aided in the drafting of the new silver legislation, said "the program makes no change in the monetary system of the United States", described by Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau as a "1934 model gold standard." In no sense, he said, is it a bimetallic or symmetallic monetary standard.

That is the opinion of the financial writer of the Washington Post.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LOGAN in the chair). Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I am interested in clearing up one point which the Senator has just been discussing. In yesterday's debate I interrupted the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] with this question:

They do not have to circulate the silver at all under the terms of the bill, do they?

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes; they have to circulate it as silver certificates.

Do I understand the Senator from Oklahoma disagrees with that answer?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator from Nevada construes that portion of the bill which says that "the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to issue silver certificates." He construes that to means the Secretary must place those certificates in circulation through the payment of some governmental obligation. I say that is the correct construction, but there will be an amendment offered from the floor to make it clear that in the event they do purchase silver they must issue the certificates and, further, place those certificates in circulation.

Under the terms of the bill the Treasury may trade gold for silver, they may trade currency for silver, they may trade coin for silver, they may trade credit for silver. The bill directs the Department to issue certificates. I want the bill so amended that there will not be any doubt that the moment they get the silver—I do not care how they get it, if they convert currency into silver or coin into silver or gold into silver or credit into silver—they shall issue certificates to the value of the silver and place those certificates in circulation through the payment of some Government obligation.

In other words, the Treasury Department, instead of paying the salaries of some of its officials with checks, will hand out silver certificates; in place of paying some contractors with checks, they will hand out silver certificates, and thus get them into circulation outside of the Treasury.

I contend the certificates might be issued under their construction and laid upon a shelf some place and not paid out. They would have them, but the certificates would do no good, so far as I am concerned, because I want circulation increased so that money will be made more plentiful, thereby cheaper, and prices thereby raised.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator's theory is that it might be possible under the terms of the pending bill for these certificates to become part of that same sterile factor which is now represented in the difference between $5,500,000,000 and $13,000,000,000 of existing money.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I take the newspaper financial writers for my authority, largely, and I am afraid that might be true. They have stated that it is true. I want to clarify that matter so there can be no doubt about it. If the proponents of the bill are not willing to accept an amendment to that effect, I am constrained to believe it is because they may not want it to be put in circulation; otherwise they would be glad to accept a clarifying amendment to provide that when the certificates are issued they shall be placed in circulation. We want to make that clear.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I am glad to yield.

Mr. ADAMS. On that same point it seems to me the declaration of the bill, to the effect that the Secretary of the Treasury is directed to issue silver certificates to not less than a certain amount, can only be complied with by putting out the silver certificates. The term "issue" has a very definite meaning. I think the Senator from Michigan, who has just made inquiry, recognizes that.

For instance, in criminal procedure in a forgery case, we have the term "utter" and the term "issue." Issue means to put out. We have it in connection with our Securities Act. We speak of a "new issue." We have not issued securities when we print them and put them upon the shelf. It seems to me the language of the bill is perfectly clear in its intent, though I am among those who, if there could be any doubt about it, would be perfectly willing to vote for a clarifying amendment.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator places a construction, but I am not sure that it does not defeat his own interpretation. A corporation may issue bonds and then never sell them, in which event they never go into circulation. Is not that true?

Mr. ADAMS. I would not call them issued.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is a distinction and difference upon which the Senator and I might disagree. I am sure he and I would agree that we should make the bill so positively clear and plain that no one could misunderstand it.

Mr. ADAMS. I think it might be said that the Senator and I largely differ in the matter of definition. I think a good deal of the argument in this matter is due to a difference of definition rather than a difference of purpose or intent.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. If it is the intent not only to issue the money, but to put it in circulation, then certainly the authors of the bill ought not to object to a provision that the money shall be paid out in meeting governmental obligations. Let us make it clear and then there cannot be any misunderstanding. That is another defect in the bill which I think should be corrected.

The bill contains a section that proposes to tax all those who deal in silver. It proposes, if anyone bought silver in the past and still owns that silver and later on sells it and makes a profit on the silver, that automatically a tax of 50 percent of the profits must go to the Treasury. In other words, the owner of silver cannot transfer title to his silver without having some paper bill of sale made out, and attaching to that bill of sale stamps to the amount of one-half of his profits as represented by the stamps.

Mr. President, if that be so, this, in my opinion, is the effect of it. Naturally, if we should get an added amount of income for the Treasury I should be inclined to look with favor upon the tax, but those who deal in silver are presumed to be, reasonably good business men. If anyone has silver now and is afraid the bill is going to pass, he will sell the silver, get it out of his hands, and get what profit he has before the bill becomes effective so he will not have to pay a tax. The person who buys the silver will transfer the silver or the title or sell the silver itself. That is what is being done, because the bill cannot tax foreigners for their dealings in silver.

Spot silver can be physically transferred to Canada or transferred abroad, placed beyond the jurisdiction of our Government. If not actually transferred physically, it can be transferred by virtue of bills of sale to foreigners.

If the bill passes we will get very little income from the profits on silver, so it will be defeating the end we have in view to increase our income in the Treasury by virtue of a tax on silver. If the bill should pass with that tax provision in it, in my judgment it would destroy the commodity silver exchange in New York City. When silver is bought and sold on this exchange we do get a small tax on the sale. If the commodity exchange should be destroyed that tax would cease.

It is my construction of the bill that if section 8 should remain in the bill, and a tax should be levied, the Treasury would get but very little money from that source. Not only would the Treasury get very little money but it would lose, over the long run, a great deal of money on the future sales of silver through such exchange.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. LONG. I desire to submit to the Senator a further idea. We are undertaking to elevate the price of silver through trade and exchange. If we are to banish silver from our own market, it seems to me that we shall kill the very purpose we are trying to bring to life.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, as I have said many times upon this floor, our whole economic system, as well as our system of government, rests upon profits. Unless the citizens of the country can make money, they cannot keep the property they now own. They must pay taxes upon that property; they must pay insurance upon it; they must maintain it. That costs money. So, unless the people of the country can make money in some way, they cannot retain their property. They will lose it. They cannot keep it. So our economic system, called the "capitalistic system", depends primarily upon the ability of the people to make money. If we deprive them of their ability to make money, the capitalistic system fails.

Our system of government depends upon the fact that the people must make money. The people must pay taxes to support the Government, and it takes a large sum. Unless the people can make money in some way, they cannot pay their taxes. If they cannot pay their taxes, city governments fall; township and county governments fall; State governments fall; the National Government likewise eventually will fall. So I am not one of those who argue that no one should ever make any money. I see a very distinct development in some parts of the country, however, from the sentimental standpoint that the people of the Nation should not live to make money; they should live for a more abundant life.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Does not the Senator think, however, that something may be said, ethically, for the proposition that when a profit is arbitrarily created by the action or fiat of the Government, it is a different type of profit than the normal commercial profit to which the Senator adverts, and that it is a profit upon which the Government has a right, substantially, to take commission?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. If we should make this bill read that after the passage of the bill all profits made in the purchase and sale of silver should be taxed at a certain rate, I should have no objection; but the bill does not so state. If the Senator from Michigan should happen to have some bar silver now, he may have bought that bar silver many months ago. He may have brought it when it was down to 24 cents an ounce. It is now worth 45 cents an ounce—a nice, substantial profit. If he keeps that silver, with this nice profit, until the bill becomes effective, and then sells it he has to pay one-half—50 percent—of that profit to the Government. Using the Senator only for illustrative purposes, being a good business man, if he sees that the bill is about to pass, he most certainly will sell his silver and take his profit and let the other fellow do the speculating and worrying over the tax. Would not that be the effect?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Perhaps it would. Nevertheless, when we devalued gold, is it not a fact that we first nationalized it and arranged to have the full profit of the governmental action respecting its value accrue to the benefit of the Public Treasury?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is exactly true; and it is rather strangely significant that the matter of taxing was not thought of in connection with the nationalization of gold.

I am not prepared to prove this statement, but I have information which is authentic that many hundred million dollars in gold were sent abroad when it became known that we were about to nationalize gold. It went abroad worth $20.67 an ounce. Later on that gold came back to America worth $35 an ounce. Someone made that difference. No tax was imposed upon the gold profit; and it is significant that someone did not think about taxing the profit on gold which was bid up from $20.67 an ounce to $35 an ounce.

I should have no objection to modifying that section so that after the enactment of the bill anyone who buys silver and makes a profit shall pay this tax, because that will stop anyone from buying it. There will be no tax, and it will not have any effect anyway.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Except as there were some such arrangement, this provision would clearly invite the silver speculator to an unlimited participation in dividends from an action of Government itself; would it not?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. No more so than the legislation which raised the price of cotton. During the past year we have enacted legislation which had the effect of raising the price of cotton from 5 or 6 cents a pound to 12½ cents a pound. No one proposed to tax the profits of the gentlemen who made profits on the increased price of cotton.

We did the same thing with regard to wheat. We took 10,000,000 acres of wheat land out of production, and to some extent raised the price of wheat. We did not propose to tax the folks who made some money out of wheat.

We did the same thing with regard to hogs. We did the same thing with regard to oil. This is the first time we have proposed to tax those who have made some money out of Government action, if I may put it that way.

As I have said, I have no objection to making it so that those who make profits after the bill becomes effective shall pay their tax; and I may state in this connection that it is my judgment that we cannot make the taxing section retroactive. I doubt if we can tax anyone who makes profits prior to the passage of the bill. That is a legal question. It will come before the courts, no doubt, in due time. The pending bill provides that anyone who has dealt in silver since May 1, 1934, and sold or bought and made any money on either side of the exchange, up or down, will have to pay this tax.

It is my judgment at this time that after the bill shall have been finally approved, if any money shall be made in silver through buying or selling, the Government may collect a tax on the transactions; but I doubt if they can collect it on transactions prior to the date of the approval of the measure.

Mr. President, I now desire to call attention to some more clippings, and see if my interpretation of this measure is accurate or wholly fallacious.

I now quote from the Associated Press. I have always regarded the Associated Press as a highly responsible news-gathering agency. I know from personal experience that the gentlemen who write for the Associated Press are in the "big league" of reporters. When a bright newspaper man develops and attracts attention by writing articles that hit the truth and explain proposals with accuracy, if he desires—and he usually does—he becomes tied up in some way with the Associated Press. I regard the Associated Press writers, as I say, as the "big league" of newspaper reporterdom. So when I quote the Associated Press I do so with confidence that I am giving an intelligent viewpoint.

Here is an article which appeared in the newspapers not so very long ago under the headline:

What! Worthless silver?

The second headline reads as follows:

Huge supply of bars of metal will be stored away at Treasury as valueless commodity if present purchase plan works out.

Mr. President, if we are to make this silver into money, it certainly will not be stored away in the Treasury as a worthless commodity. The Associated Press construes this bill to be a measure providing for the purchase of silver and then storing that silver away in the Treasury as a worthless commodity. If I thought that was the purpose of Congress, I should not take any time here; I should just vote against the bill and be satisfied. That will be the effect of the bill, however, and I think it is the purpose of the men who drew the section.

I now read from the Associated Press article as follows:

A lot of shiny silver bars may be carried in Treasury inventories along with desks and chairs as a "worthless commodity" if present plans for administering the Pittman silver bill are carried out.

Mr. President, there is a verification of my interpretation of the pending bill. The bill, if passed, will provide for the purchase of silver; but when the silver is purchased it will go into the Treasury on the same basis as worthless desks, worthless chairs, worn-out typewriters, and will be carried there as a worthless commodity. It will not be a reserve for the issuance of currency. It will not be basic money. It will not be standard money. It will not be primary money.

Again I read, speaking about silver:

It would not be entered on Treasury books as having any value, but would be carried simply as worthless commodity.

Here is a question propounded to someone in the Treasury Department. The question is as follows:

Q. How much money will be added to the monetary supply?
A. The bill directs the issuance of silver certificates in an amount not less than the cost of the silver purchased. Since new money would depend on the amount paid for the silver, experts said it was impossible to forecast how much currency will be added to the present monetary supply of $13,542,000,000. As the price of silver advances, the amount of new money declines. Treasury advisers do not expect any increase in the amount of money in circulation to result from silver purchases.

Mr. President, if this bill does not provide for more money going into circulation then I am opposed to it. That is the only good I can see in it, from my standpoint. It might help the silver-producing States, it might help the miners of the West by increasing the price of silver, but if silver merely goes into the vaults of the Government, to be measured along with chairs and typewriters and other commodities, it does the country no good whatever.

I am interested in the bill, not from the standpoint of the miners of the West, though I am for them, but I am for the bill because I hope through its operations to get more money into circulation, to make money more plentiful, and give the people a chance to see more money. In some sections of this country money is an antique. The people used to see it, but they see it no more. They cannot borrow it and they cannot earn it—there are no jobs. I am for the bill in the hope that through its enactment we may buy some silver, then issue certificates against that silver, put those certificates into circulation, and make money more plentiful, make money cheaper, and, as money is made more plentiful and made cheaper, automatically prices will go up.

I see no salvation, I see no hope of working out of the depression, except through the plan of putting more money into circulation, making money plentiful, making it cheaper, and automatically raising the prices of the things the people produce.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I understood him to say that he was hoping to make silver more valuable.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I hope it will become more valuable.

Mr. BAILEY. Yet the Senator is now arguing that we must have cheaper money.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I am trying to make silver bullion more valuable and money cheaper; that is true. They have no connection whatever.

Mr. BAILEY. How does the Senator propose to make silver higher in value than gold?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. By bidding up for silver, making silver higher, and by decreasing the demand for gold, making gold lower. After a while, if the demand for silver is sufficiently increased and the demand for gold decreases sufficiently, they will be on a parity. Fifteen grains of gold in one dollar and 371 grains of silver in one dollar; each will be worth intrinsically throughout the world 100 cents.

Mr. BAILEY. I am trying to ascertain if the Senator can reconcile his statements. He proposes to make silver worth $1.29 an ounce?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is, the silver dollar.

Mr. BAILEY. Then the monetary value would be the same?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. When it gets to be $1.29 an ounce; that is correct.

Mr. BAILEY. That would make silver nearly three times more valuable than it is today, would it not?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is correct.

Mr. BAILEY. So the Senator's proposition on this end of the matter is to make money, in the form of silver, more valuable.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. No; the Senator is wrong.

Mr. BAILEY. Let us see. If the price of silver is raised from 45 cents an ounce to $1.29 an ounce, does not that make silver more valuable?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It makes silver bullion more valuable, but it must be raised to $1.29 an ounce before the silver in a dollar is worth 100 cents.

Mr. BAILEY. Then that makes the silver dollar, now worth 35 cents, worth 100 cents.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is correct, and that is the point I am driving at. I am trying to raise the price of silver in the silver dollar from 35 cents intrinsically to 100 cents intrinsically.

Mr. BAILEY. Then, that does not cheapen the dollar; it increases the value of the dollar.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I am sure the Senator understands this matter, and he may be trying to get me in a hole.

Mr. BAILEY. I am not trying to get the Senator in a hole. I am trying to get him to reconcile his statements.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. When we get silver bullion up to the point where it is worth 100 cents intrinsically, then it will be on a parity with the gold dollar in purchasing power.

Mr. BAILEY. And more valuable?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is correct; but the silver dollar will then have the same buying power the gold dollar has.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator does not reconcile his statement that he is trying to make money cheaper with the fact that he is trying to make silver dearer.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. After we get the silver in the silver dollar worth 100 cents and on a parity with gold, then silver and gold will be equal. Does the Senator agree to that?

Mr. BAILEY. I agree to that.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Then, by putting more silver dollars into circulation and putting more paper dollars into circulation we will make all forms of money cheaper; gold comes down, silver comes down, paper comes down in buying power to the extent to which more money is put into circulation.

Mr. BAILEY. Still, we have raised the value from 35 cents——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Raised the bullion value; that is correct.

Mr. BAILEY. So the money is not cheaper. There may be more of it, but it would still be worth 100 cents.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Oh, yes; it is always worth 100 cents. Let me remind the Senator that in 1920 the gold dollar was still the standard but was not in circulation. The silver dollar was still in circulation. Paper money was in circulation. All of these dollars were on a parity, because one was supposed to get a dollar in gold for a dollar in paper. At that time the dollar was worth 50 cents in buying power. The gold dollar was worth 50 cents in buying power, although it had 100 cents in it.

Mr. BAILEY. Relative to the commodity price.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes; that is what I mean. All money was worth 50 cents in buying power, and it is my contention that after we get these metals to a parity, or even before we get them to a parity, if we put enough money in circulation we will bring down the buying power of the dollar. It will still have a hundred cents in it, but the cents will not buy so much.

Mr. BAILEY. Does the Senator mean to say that making silver worth $1.29 an ounce brings down its buying power, or increases its buying power?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, we might make the silver worth $1.29 an ounce, and yet the ounce of silver would not be worth a nickel based upon the present level of value.

Mr. BAILEY. Which has the more buying power, 35 cents or 100 cents?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, the 35 cents might have more buying power than a hundred dollars. Suppose we got inflation in this country, suppose we commenced issuing money as Germany did, putting money into circulation by the bale. After a while the dollar would not buy as much, perhaps, as a nickel would buy now. So 35 cents, the present value, might be worth $35,000,000,000 in the cheap paper money Germany had. The Senator understands this matter, I am sure.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator shifts from silver to paper money. On yesterday he repudiated all conceptions of paper money as primary currency.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I did.

Mr. BAILEY. Why carry the argument into that field? I am confining myself to the simple question: Which has the more buying power, as matters stand, not by way of possibility or reference to paper but as a matter of fact, 35 cents or a hundred cents?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. A hundred cents.

Mr. BAILEY. Yet the Senator proposes to put the value of silver at 100 cents and at the same time cheapen currency.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Absolutely I do; and I am sorry the Senator cannot see that. The time will come when he will.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GEORGE in the chair). Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. LONG. All the Senator has to do is to reflect that the quantitative theory of money means cheapening money. If we had $10,000,000,000 worth of gold, gold would be cheaper. The quantitative theory of money is something the Senator from North Carolina understands. He is not nearly so dense in the matter as he might appear.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I join with the interpretation of the Senator as to the lack of density of the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. President, I want to call attention now to another article, to see whether or not I am wrong in my interpretation of the bill. I refer to an article appearing in the New York Times. I think no one can state that the New York Times is favorable to silver, but the New York Times does have some very able writers, and what we see in the New York Times will at least bear investigation.

The article to which I refer is of date May 24, 1934. It is an article signed by Mr. Arthur Krock. I read this in the article:

> How much new currency will be issued if the Pittman bill becomes law?

He answers that question as follows:

> The best reply obtainable is: From $1,500,000,000 down to nothing at all.

I do not think my interpretation was far wrong. It may mean nothing at all. That is the opinion of the financial writers, financial experts, the best analysis of news that we have. It might mean more; I hope it does. But it does not necessarily mean anything.

Further on I find that Mr. Krock quoted the Associated Press, or the Associated Press quoted Mr. Krock, I am not sure which, but I find the subhead "Surplus a Worthless Commodity." I want to read part of this interpretation by Mr. Krock:

> Only 371¼ fine grains of silver will be held in back of each silver dollar. Therefore, in the case of purchases at 50 cents an ounce or less, there will be a left-over in each ounce for storage in the Treasury. This will not be carried in the Treasury inventory as bullion with a monetary value. It will be listed along with Government desks, buildings, and office supplies as a "worthless commodity." In a purchase of 1,000,000 ounces of silver at 50 cents an ounce, only 387,596 ounces are legally required for the coinage of $500,000. The remainder, 612,404 ounces, is for storage. Only if and when the world price of silver goes above 50 cents an ounce, and if and when the Treasury should sell some of its silver, would a "dollar profit" on the silver be realized.
>
> The Treasury has about 700,000,000 ounces of silver. To arrive at a 25–75 ratio with the Treasury holdings of gold (now valued at $7,758,000,000) purchases of 1,300,000,000 ounces of silver must be made, listed at a coinage value of $1.29 an ounce. If the price of gold or the amount held by the Treasury varies, however, the amount of silver needed to be purchased to reach the 25–75 ratio will change with these.

Mr. President, that is a correct statement of the situation. Under the pending bill, if it shall be enacted, we will have to buy silver to the extent of about a billion three hundred million ounces. It will be valued at $1.29 an ounce. That makes up the monetary value, the sum of $2,500,000,000. That fills our 100-percent reserve—25-percent reserves in silver. But the silver is worth only a billion dollars. I contend that $2,000,000,000 in silver, stamped, does not fill the requirement of $2,500,000,000 in reserve, upon which we are supposed to issue currency and credit of a nation.

I read a little further:

> Treasury experts do not believe that the silver program, even if finally completed, will make much difference in the earnings or holdings of citizens generally.

That is my construction exactly. If the bill shall become a law, or whether it shall become a law or not, it will have no perceptible or particular effect upon our financial system.

The Government will not buy enough silver to make any difference. If it buys a billion ounces at 50 cents an ounce, it will put $500,000,000 into circulation, and, in my judgment, that would be only a part of what it should put into circulation. I think we should put into circulation enough added money to bring the buying power of the dollar down to 100 cents, based upon the best yardstick of measurement we have, and that is the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which shows that in 1920 the dollar was down to 50 cents, and it showed that in February 1933 the dollar was worth $1.69. Although we have cheapened the dollar somewhat after a year's trying, it is still worth $1.36 today.

I am opposed to retaining that excess value of 36 cents in the dollar. I want to take it out, and I am trying so to amend this bill that it will take out of the present buying power of the dollar that excess value of 36 cents, and if that is done, that will be reflected in the price paid for tobacco in North Carolina; it will be reflected in the price paid for apples in Michigan; it will be reflected in the price of steel in Pennsylvania; it will be reflected in the price of wheat in Kansas and in the Dakotas; it will be reflected in the price of cotton in the South; it will be reflected wherever raw materials are produced.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator interests me very much in his statement that the increase in the value of silver by way of purchases under the amendment he proposes would favorably affect the prices of tobacco in North Carolina and of cotton throughout the South.

Tobacco is sold in North Carolina to the extent of 60 percent of the crop, in round figures 300,000,000 pounds, abroad; that is, in the foreign market, and the cotton generally throughout the South is sold abroad to the extent of about 50 to 55 percent—probably more. Eight million bales are sold abroad to 6,000,000 bales sold in this country on the average.

I asked the Senator on yesterday, not to get him in a hole, as he just now intimated, but wholly for the purpose of enlightening myself, and I hope my constituents, to discuss how the increase in the value of the silver would affect the prices of our agricultural export crop in the silver countries. The Senator answered that he was glad that I had asked the question. Unfortunately, he was diverted by other questions and did not answer that question. I request him now to discuss that for my enlightenment.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I am not familiar with the price of tobacco——

Mr. BAILEY. I will inform the Senator that the average price for the bright tobacco was 16½ cents.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Inasmuch as I am not familiar with tobacco. I will take cotton.

Mr. BAILEY. Very well.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Last year when the Congress was in session cotton was selling in my State for 5½ cents a pound. We cheapened the dollar in terms of gold content. We did some other things which made cotton more scarce. We have done things to date which have taken 31 cents of the excess buying power from the old dollar that we had a year ago, because at that time, measured by 800 articles, the dollar had a dollar and 69 cents buying power. We have reduced the buying power of that dollar down to $1.35. We have taken out of it something like 32 cents. Cheapening the dollar and restricting the production of cotton have increased the price of cotton from 5½ cents to something like 11½ cents, and I assume the same effect has been had upon tobacco.

Mr. BAILEY. Permit me to interrupt the Senator one moment to make a contribution. I understand the gold value of American cotton and American tobacco is today in the markets of the world practically the same as it was prior to the time when we went off the gold standard, and undertook and nearly succeeded in devaluing our currency in the world markets. Is that correct?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I can explain that by using an illustration. If the Senator were in London today he could take 60 cents of gold and go to the bank and buy an American paper dollar. With 60 cents of the old-value dollar, in other words, 15 grains plus of gold, the Senator could buy an American dollar in London. You take your American paper dollar and buy a bushel of wheat, which a few days ago you could get for 80 cents. It is higher now. The drought has come, and the price of wheat has gone up. You could have gotten the bushel of wheat 2 weeks ago for 80 cents. You start with 60 cents, buy an American dollar, pay 80 cents for a bushel of wheat and have 20 cents left. How much does the bushel of wheat cost you in England?

Mr. BAILEY. That would have to be determined by the value of the pound in exchange for dollars rather than gold.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. There is no element of pounds in this, Mr. President. It is simply American money.

Mr. BAILEY. So far as that is concerned, it remains the same in gold. Nothing has happened to change that. Am I right about that?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, answering my own question: We start with 60 cents in gold. With the 60 cents we bought an American dollar. With the American dollar we bought a bushel of wheat and got 20 cents in change in money. We have to reconvert that 20 cents into American gold. Sixty percent of 20 cents is 12 cents. Take 12 cents from 60 cents, and it is found that the wheat cost 48 cents a bushel. I will say that 50 cents a bushel will be approximately correct. So 2 or 3 weeks ago wheat was selling in America for 80 cents a bushel, and selling in England and gold-using countries for 50 cents a bushel.

I contend that the only way to help the prices here domestically—we cannot change the world prices—the only way to help the prices here domestically is through the manipulation of our money, and if we take that excess 31 cents out of the dollar it will still further help the price of wheat, it will still further help the price of cotton and of tobacco domestically. As to the portion we sell abroad, that is another question.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, there is the point at which I was driving. The Senator said we can affect the price domestically, but we cannot affect the price in the world market. My question—I will go back to it—was, How would the proposed increase in the value of silver affect the price of cotton and tobacco in the world market?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, we are never going to have silver as basic, standard, primary money until 371¼ grains of fine silver are worth 100 cents on the parity with the gold dollar, whatever weight the dollar has in gold, and I am trying to do what I can to provide a system which will raise the price of silver, 371¼ grains, so that that many grains of fine silver will be worth on the world market the equivalent of the grains of gold in a gold dollar—I do not care what those grains are—15 plus, or cut them down to 11, as the President may do when we finally go back on the gold standard officially.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, the Senator seems to argue that the higher the value of the money the lower the commodity price. Is that right?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes, Mr. President.

Mr. BAILEY. The higher the value of gold——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I will have to get some more blocks, Mr. President, to argue with the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. BAILEY. I will wait until the Senator gets them. I cannot do anything but wait until the blocks come in.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. If my interpretation of this bill and the interpretations given by financial writers do not appeal to the Senator, then, of course, I must submit that I am unable to make my point clear to the Senator—conceding that I have a point.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I do not want to harass the Senator, but I will say that I asked him a question, and he said on yesterday he was glad I asked him the question. I repeated the question today. Now, very respectfully and in all courtesy, I must say he has not answered my question, and I believe it is a pertinent question. That he must get some more blocks in order to answer as to the effect of the increase of the value of silver upon American export prices does not answer my question.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator can read what I have to say. If that answers the question, then I will not have to go over the whole matter again.

I now call attention to a news story appearing in the New York Times of recent date under the heading "Silver Plan Held No Threat to Gold." I made the statement yesterday that if we passed this bill we would not make silver part of our reserves; we would not give silver any quality of gold. We would simply add some more silver to our stock of money. So, if this bill passes without amendment—if we buy billions of ounces there is no threat to gold whatever. Gold is still the standard of value. It is still the unit of currency in the United States. There is no lessening of the demand for gold, because silver does not take its place.

I am trying to amend this bill so that silver may be used in the place of gold in the settlement of international balances. At the present time if we deal with China or Japan or India or Mexico we cannot pay them in silver, excepting in silver bullion. They will not accept our silver dollars for 100 cents because they have no use for the silver dollar that is stamped. They have use for the bullion. We can settle on a bullion basis with China and with Japan and with the silver-using countries. I am trying to amend this bill so that we may do that, by giving silver a status so that it will be, in a sense, a competitor of gold. But this bill does not proceed upon that theory at all.

The New York Times does not so construe it. If we pass this bill we may put in circulation two and one-half billion dollars of fiat money stamped upon silver. The silver is still worth a billion dollars, that is all. It has a billion dollars of value. We would not put that kind of money—a fiat of a billion and a half dollars—in reserves. So under the terms of this bill, silver is no more important than paper, so far as money is concerned, basic primary standard money. The New York Times states my viewpoint:

> Silver plan held no threat to gold.

I read further down the article:

> It is not to be elevated to the dignity of gold, as the gold dollar alone will be the standard unit of value in the United States, and foreign balances will be settled in gold alone.

I am trying so to dignify silver that we may settle foreign balances in silver on a bullion basis. That will make an added demand for silver; it will lessen the demand for gold; it will increase the value of silver and decrease the value of gold. As I have previously said, if the increased demand for silver is sufficient and the decreased demand for gold is sufficient, silver goes up in value and gold goes down in value, and after a while they will meet on a parity which we can all recognize.

I read further from another financial writer. It is rather recent, June 2, 1934, and the article is by Mr. Leslie Eichel, Central Press staff writer, and the article was sent out from New York and published in the New York World. I read as follows:

> Wall Street recognized what the silver proponents are just beginning to realize—that the silver bill actually is a deflationary measure.

Some of us, Mr. President, have not realized that as yet. If this writer interprets this bill properly, it is not an inflationary measure but is a deflationary measure.

Reading further from this article:

> Which, of course, is what the sound-money people desire.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HATCH in the chair). Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. Upon what theory does the writer say that the pending bill is deflationary?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Let me read the remainder of the article:

> It cleverly stops the silver stampeders, although on the surface it has the appearance of aiding them.
>
> Actually the Silver Purchase Act of 1934 gives the Government no more powers than it had previously, through acts already on the statute books.
>
> On the contrary, it puts fear into the hearts of silver speculators, for it places a 50-percent tax on private profits in silver bullion sales.

That is the complete article.

Mr. BORAH. I think that the writer looks upon the bill as deflationary because of the taxing clause in it.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I would get that impression; deflationary in that, instead of silver being increased in price, it will be decreased in price.

Mr. President, at this point I want to call the attention of the Senate to the legislation which has appeared upon our statute books since the Constitution was formed, and even prior to that time. I want to give very briefly the history of monetary legislation in the United States.

A resolution passed by the Continental Congress on the 6th day of July 1785 declared that the money unit of the United States shall be a dollar; and another resolution passed on the 8th of August 1786 fixed that dollar at 375.64 grains of fine silver. That was the act of the Continental Congress.

The Constitution, adopted and signed on September 17, 1787, contains the following provision in article I, section 8, paragraph 5:

> The Congress shall have power * * * to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin * * *.

Article I, section 10, paragraph 1, provides:

> No State shall * * * coin money, emit bills of credit, make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts.

The first Secretary of the Treasury, Alexander Hamilton, made a report on the establishment of a mint, and in that report made the following statement:

> That the unit, in the coins of the United States, ought to correspond with 24 grains and three-fourths of a grain of pure gold and with 371 grains and one-fourth of a grain of pure silver, each answering to a dollar in the money of account.

Quoting further from Mr. Hamilton's report:

> It is often in the course of trade as desirable to possess the kind of money, as the kind of commodities, best adapted to a foreign market.

That statement is significant. Three-fourths of the people of the world use silver as money; they know not gold; they know not paper; they use silver and silver alone as their medium of exchange. Mr. Hamilton said that in dealing with such people it was well to use the same kind of money as the people in such foreign countries use. So, it is my contention that we have a chance materially to increase our trade with three-fourths of the peoples of the world, in India, China, North and South America, silver-using countries, by making our money conform to this precept or principle stated by Mr. Hamilton back in 1792.

Reading further from Mr. Hamilton—and this is significant—

> To annul the use of either of the metals of money is to abridge the quantity of circulating medium, and is liable to all the objections which arise from a comparison of the benefits of a full, with the evils of a scanty, circulation.

This statement of Mr. Hamilton, issued in 1792, verifies my statement as to the quantitative theory of money. If we make money plentiful we make money cheap; if we make money scarce we make money high. Mr. Hamilton laid down the principle that if we take either gold or silver out of circulation, to the extent we do that, we make money scarce, and if we make money scarce we make money high.

Under the theory as expounded by Mr. Hamilton, the Congress on April 2, 1792, passed the first coinage act. That act contained the following language:

> There shall be from time to time struck and coined at the said mint, coins of gold, silver, and copper of the following denominations, values, and descriptions * * * viz, * * * dollars or units—each to be of the value of a Spanish milled dollar as the same is now current, and to contain 371 grains and four-sixteenths part of a grain of pure, or 416 grains of standard silver.

Mr. President, in 1792 the Congress of the United States, under the Constitution, acting upon a report and recommendation of Mr. Hamilton, established the silver dollar as the single measurement of value in these United States and fixed the weight of that dollar at 371¼ grains fine silver; and the grains of fine silver in the dollar fixed by Hamilton in the First Congress have never been changed to this good hour.

On June 28, 1834, the Congress passed another law relating to money, and I desire to incorporate one section from that act at this point in my remarks.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator will recall when Hamilton was formulating his monetary policy, involving the use of the two metals, that he sent it to Mr. Jefferson for his consideration, and it received the approval of Mr. Jefferson. Both those men declared very emphatically at that time for the use of both gold and silver as primary money.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator's statement is exactly correct. Hamilton's recommendation was followed by the Congress; and when the Congress met and acted upon the recommendation the Congress made silver the standard and fixed the weight of the standard silver dollar at 371¼ grains and that has not been changed since 1792.

By the way, the weight of the gold dollar has been changed three or four times, but the weight of the silver dollar still remains the continental dollar, the constitutional dollar, the Washington dollar, the Hamilton dollar, the Jefferson dollar, the Lincoln dollar, and the dollar of every President until silver was demonetized.

The act of June 28, 1834—and from that act I read a section—provided:

> The gold coins of the United States shall contain the following quantities of metal—that is to say, each eagle shall contain 232 grains of pure gold and 258 grains of standard gold. * * * Every such eagle shall be of the value of $10.

Mr. President, as late as 1834, in fixing the weight of gold the Congress fixed the value of gold measured by the standard silver dollar, because it said that so many grains of gold shall be of the value of $10, and the unit at that time was the silver dollar; gold had not been made the standard at that time; so the standard must have been the standard silver dollar, and gold at that time, in 1834, was measured in terms of silver.

This act changed the ratio of pure to standard gold and reduced the gold content by a little over 6 percent, making the silver-to-gold ratio 15.98 to 1.

The act of March 3, 1849, also made some reference to the monetary unit. Provision made for coinage of gold dollars each to be of the value of one dollar or unit.

As late as 1849 the silver dollar was the standard of value, and in 1849 we measured gold in terms of silver dollars. Some of the Senators here can almost remember back to that time.

I next call attention to the act of February 12, 1873, which is known as the "crime of '73." I want to read one paragraph from that act, which had the purpose of making the gold dollar the standard unit and stabbing or killing the silver dollar.

Section 14 of the act known as the "crime of '73" reads as follows:

> The gold coins of the United States shall be a one-dollar piece, which, at the standard weight of 25.8 grains, shall be the unit of value.

There was a change from the standard silver dollar to the standard gold dollar. By that simple act of three lines the standard unit of measurement in these United States was transferred from a standard silver dollar to the standard gold dollar. The act to which I have just referred contained no provision for a silver dollar, except a trade dollar having a weight of 420 grains troy. That was known as the "crime of '73", the act which demonetized silver.

Then, on March 14, 1900, we had what is known as the "Gold Standard Act" passed by the Congress. That act contained the following sentence:

> The dollar consisting of 25.8 grains of gold 0.9 fine * * * shall be the standard unit of value, and all forms of money issued or coined by the United States shall be maintained at a parity of value with this standard. * * *

Since 1900 the gold dollar has been the standard of value in these United States. Since that time silver has been nothing more than a commodity.

Mr. President, during the 100 years while silver was the primary, basic, and standard money of America, statesmen worthy of the title foresaw what was eventually to happen to silver and the effect of demonetization of the white metal upon the peoples of America and the world. I wish the RECORD to contain some of those statements, some of those forecasts, some of those premonitions, as they might be called.

I quote first from Mr. Lincoln, who said:

> If a government contracted a debt with a certain amount of money in circulation and then contracted the money volume before the debt is paid, it is the most heinous crime that a government could commit against the people.

Mr. Lincoln was not in doubt upon the money question. He understood it thoroughly.

Mr. Logan made the following comment:

> The cause of our depression is money famine, and nothing else.

On one occasion, February 7, 1878, James G. Blaine made the following observation:

> On the much vexed and long-mooted question as to a bimetallic or monometallic standard, my own views are sufficiently indicated in the remarks I have made. I believe the struggle now going on in this country and in other countries for a single gold standard would, if successful, produce wide-spread disaster in and throughout the commercial world.
>
> The destruction of silver as money and establishing gold as the sole unit of value must have a ruinous effect on all forms of property except those investments which yield a fixed return in money. These would be enormously enhanced in value, and would gain a disproportionate and unfair advantage over every other species of property. If, as the most reliable statistics affirm, there are nearly $7,000,000,000 of coin or bullion in the world, not very unequally divided between gold and silver, it is impossible to strike silver out of existence as money without results which will prove distressing to millions and utterly disastrous to tens of thousands.

Again he said:

> I believe gold and silver coin to be the money of the Constitution; indeed, the money of the American people, anterior to the Constitution, which the great organic law recognized as quite independent of its own existence. No power was conferred on Congress to declare either metal should not be money. Congress has, therefore, in my judgment, no power to demonetize silver any more than to demonetize gold.

Senator Sherman said in 1869:

> The contraction of the currency is a far more distressing operation than Senators suppose. Our own and other nations have gone through that operation before. It is not possible to take that voyage without the sorest distress. To every person except a capitalist out of debt, or a salaried officer or annuitant, it is a period of loss, danger, lassitude of trade, fall of wages, suspension of enterprise, bankruptcy, and disaster. It means ruin of all dealers whose debts are twice their business capital, though one-third less than their actual property. It means the fall of all agricultural production without any great reduction of taxes. What prudent man would dare to build a house, a railroad, a factory, or a barn with this certain fact before him?

John G. Carlisle, then a Member of the House of Representatives, said on February 21, 1878:

> I know that the world's stock of precious metals is none too large, and I see no reason to apprehend that it will ever be so. Mankind will be fortunate indeed if the annual production of gold and silver coin shall keep pace with the annual increase of population and industry. According to my views of the subject, the conspiracy which seems to have been formed here and in Europe to destroy by legislation and otherwise from three-sevenths to one-half the metallic money of the world is the most gigantic crime of this or any other age. The consummation of such a scheme would ultimately entail more misery upon the human race than all the wars, pestilences, and famines that ever occurred in the history of the world.
>
> The absolute and instantaneous destruction of half the entire movable property of the world, including houses, ships, railroads, and other appliances for carrying on commerce, while it would be felt more sensibly at the moment, would not produce anything like the prolonged distress and disorganization of society that must inevitably result from the permanent annihilation of one-half the metallic money of the world.

The junior Senator from Texas, Mr. Mills, on the 3d of February 1886, on the floor, said:

But in all the wild, reckless, and remorseless brutalities that have marked the footprints of resistless power there is some extenuating circumstance that mitigates the severity of the punishment due the crime. Some have been the product of the fierce passions of war, some have come from the antipathy that separates alien races, some from the superstitions of opposing religions.

But the crime that is now sought to be perpetrated on more than 50,000,000 of people comes neither from the camp of a conqueror, the hand of a foreigner, nor the altar of an idolator. But it comes from those in whose veins runs the blood of the common ancestry, who were born under the same skies, speak the same language, reared in the same institutions, and nurtured in the principles of the same religious faith. It comes from the cold, phlegmatic, marble heart of avarice—avarice that seeks to paralyze labor, increase the burden of debt, and fill the land with destitution and suffering to gratify the lust for gold—avarice surrounded by every comfort that wealth can command, and rich enough to satisfy every want save that which refuses to be satisfied without the suffocation and strangulation of all the labor of the land. With a forehead that refuses to be ashamed it demands of Congress an act that will paralyze all the forces of production, shut out labor from all employment, increase the burden of debts and taxation, and send desolation and suffering to all the homes of the poor.

Wendell Phillips said:

In other words, it was the currency which, rightly arranged, opened a nation's wellsprings, found work for willing hands to do, and filled them with a just return, while honest capital, daily larger and more secure, ministered to a glad prosperity. Or it was currency, wickedly and selfishly juggled, that made merchants bankrupt and starved labor into discontent and slavery, while capital added house to house and field to field, and gathered into its miserly hands all the wealth left in a ruined land.

The first question, therefore, in an industrial nation is, Where ought control of the currency to rest? In whose hands can this almost omnipotent power be trusted? Every writer of political economy from Aristotle to Adam Smith allows that a change in the currency alters the price of every ounce and yard of merchandise and every foot of land. Whom can we trust with this despotism? At present the banks and the money kings wield this power. They own the yardstick and can make it longer or shorter, as they please. They own every pound weight, and can make it heavier or lighter as they choose. This explains the riddle, so mysterious to common people, that those who trade in money always grow rich, even while those who trade in other things go into bankruptcy.

William B. McKinley said:

I am for the largest use of silver in the currency of the country. I would not dishonor it. I would give it equal credit with gold. I would make no discrimination. I would utilize both metals as money and discredit neither. I want the double standard.

Benjamin Harrison, in his message to the United States Senate on April 26, 1892, said:

It may not be inappropriate, however, to say here that believing that the full use of silver as a coined metal upon an agreed ratio by the great commercial nations of the world would very highly promote the prosperity of all their people.

M. Woloneski, at the French Monetary Convention in Paris, 1889, said:

If, by a stroke of the pen, they suppress one of these metals in the monetary service, they double the demand for the other metal, to the ruin of all debtors.

Goschen, at the Paris Conference, stated:

At present there is a vicious circle. States are afraid of employing silver on account of the depreciation, and the depreciation continues because States refuse to employ it.

The money commissioners in their report made March 2, 1877 (vol. 1, p. 50), said:

That the disasters of the Dark Ages were caused by decreasing money and the falling prices, and that the recovery therefrom and the comparative prosperity which followed the discovery of America were due to an increasing supply of the precious metal and rising prices, will not seem surprising or unreasonable when the noble functions of money are considered. Money is the great instrument of association, the very fiber of social organism, the vitalizing force of industry, the protoplasm of civilization and as essential to its existence as oxygen is to animal life. Without money civilization could not have had a beginning and with a diminishing supply it must languish and, unless relieved, finally perish. Falling prices and misery and destitution are inseparable companions.

Mr. President, what was prophesied and forecast has happened. Silver was demonetized. Gold was made the earthly god, and millions have worshiped at the yellow shrine.

[At this point Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, on the suggestion of Mr. MCNARY, yielded to Mr. BARBOUR, who addressed the Senate, and subsequently to Mr. METCALF, Mr. HATFIELD, and Mr. LONG, who addressed the Senate. Their speeches appear following the conclusion of the speech of Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma.]

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be permitted to insert in my remarks, at appropriate points, certain data and figures. I make the request because I want to get certain data in the RECORD for what they may be worth without unduly consuming time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, permission is granted.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, at this point I desire to call attention to one feature upon which the legislation is predicated. The public press and some of the people of the country seem to think that the silver legislation has been proposed to help the silver miners, the silver mine owners, the silver cities, the silver counties, and the silver States. That may be the purpose of some of those who are considering and promoting the proposed legislation. Personally, I hope, if the bill shall pass it will help the silver miners; I hope it will help the silver companies; that it will help the silver cities and silver counties and the silver States. But personally and fundamentally I have no interest in the question from that standpoint except as, in my capacity as a United States Senator, I represent in a way the entire country.

I am sure the Senate and the Congress and the country are not interested in the question strictly from that standpoint, however worthy that standpoint may be. Unless we can use silver to help the nonsilver States, the nonsilver miners, and the non-silver-producing companies, I think it would fail in both the House and the Senate. I can see in the proposal the possibility of using silver in such a way as to help people who do not reside in the silver States, to help the people of America, to help the farmer, to help the stockman, to help the professional man, to help the corporations of the country. Unless I could see in the proposal a possible help for those who do not live in strictly silver-producing States I should not undertake to spend hours in discussing the matter in the Senate.

Mr. President, the people of the country, as I verily believe, do not fully understand the conditions which confront them. The 125,000,000 people of America have but a faint conception of the mass debts which rest upon their shoulders today. If the question should be asked, "How much are the massed debts of America?" I doubt if many could give an answer.

I made the statement a year ago that if a certain other measure should be enacted into law it might have the possible effect of transferring value from one class in this country to another class to the amount of $200,000,000,000. I was taken to task on the floor of the Senate for making that statement. I have been taken to task in other places since for having made the statement. Some people yet apparently do not understand what I meant when I made that statement. At this point I am going to try to explain a little further what my meaning was.

At this time the people of America have on their shoulders massed debts in a sum in excess of $250,000,000,000. That is more than 20 times all the gold in the world. The authority for that statement is contained in the text of a book which has been published recently. The book is entitled "The Internal Debts of the United States." It is under the authorship of Evans Clark. The book was published by a group of gentlemen who did not expect to make money from its publication. A group of gentlemen of large means contribute to a fund called "Twentieth Century Fund, Inc." This fund is administered by a board of trustees. The board of trustees comprises the following well-known American gentlemen: Edward A. Filene, president; Henry Bruere, treasurer; Newton D. Baker; Bruce Bliven; Henry S. Dennison; John H. Fahey; Max Lowenthal; James G. McDonald; Roscoe Pound; Owen D. Young. Just to read those names should give assurance to anyone acquainted with those gentleman that the book is an honest attempt to portray and catalog and analyze the amount of the massed debts resting on the people of the country.

In order that I may properly portray and lay the foundation for the figures which the book gives, I want to read for the RECORD the names of some of the contributors. I read from one of the pages the contributors.

The following are the contributors to this volume, with the subjects of their special interest:

This board of trustees picked out experts to make a study, analyze catalog, and make an estimate of the massed debts of particular interests.

Frieda Baird was suggested to make a compilation of the farm-mortgage debts. Frieda Baird formerly represented the Brookings Institution.

John Bauer, director of the American Public Utilities Bureau, was selected to compile the public-utility debts.

Evans Clark, director of the Twentieth Century Fund, was selected to compile the Nation's total debts; and that is what I shall read from shortly.

Wilfred Eldred, economist of the National Transportation Committee, was selected to compile the railroad debts.

George B. Galloway, of the Twentieth Century Fund, was selected to make an estimate of the debts of the Federal Government and financial corporations.

Wylie Kirkpatrick, of the Institute for Government Research, the Brookings Institution, was selected to compile the State and local debts.

Gardiner C. Means, of Columbia University, was selected to compile the debts of industrial corporations and banks.

Victoria J. Pederson, of Columbia University, was selected to compile the urban mortgage debts.

Franklin W. Ryan, vice president and economist of the Van Strum Financial Service, was selected to compile the short-term debts.

In addition to those experts, they had a large number of consultants; and I read the names of these consultants.

The following acted as advisers in the preparation of this volume and reviewed the findings without, however, assuming personal responsibility for them:

Leonard P. Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust Co., the debts of banks.

James C. Bonbright, professor of economics at Columbia University, public-utility debts.

Philip H. Cornick, of the Institute of Public Administration, State and local debts.

Charles G. Edwards, president of the New York Real Estate Securities Exchange, urban mortgage debts.

Charles O. Hardy, economist of the Brookings Institution, the debts of railroads and banks.

Clarence Heer, professor of economics at the University of North Carolina, State and local debts.

Leon Henderson, director of the division of remedial loans, Russell Sage Foundation, short-term personal and household debts.

Harley L. Lutz, professor of political science at Princeton University, was selected to collaborate on State and local debts.

Edwin G. Nourse, director of the Institute of Economics, the Brookings Institution, farm-mortgage debts.

Laurence H. Sloan, vice president of the Standard Statistics Co., the debts of industrial corporations.

Mr. President, those are the persons responsible for this book. It is a book of 430 pages. It analyzes the debt structure of America.

I desire at this time to put in the RECORD an analysis of this debt structure. I shall give the figures in billions and millions only. I shall omit the thousands and hundreds. I quote from this publication, on page 10, in table I, where the long-term debts are itemized and classified, as follows:

[Figures in millions]

1. Farm-mortgage debts	$8,500
2. Urban mortgage debts	27,554
3. Railroad debts	14,264
4. Public-utility debts	11,225
5. Industrial debts	10,450
6. Financial debts	21,919
7. Federal debts	14,237
8. State and local debts	18,685
Total reported debt	126,834
Total estimated debt	134,280

This book was published some time ago, and the Federal debt at that time was figured at only $14,237,000,000.

The State and local debts, totaling $18,685,000,000, are long-term debts evidenced by bonds.

The figures just read total the sum of the reported debt of $126,834,000,000, but the collaborators of this book estimate the total long-term debts to be $134,280,000,000.

That is the long-term debt resting upon the shoulders of the people of America. It may be the debt of railroads, but men have to pay that debt if the debt is ever to be paid. It may be the debt resting upon the cities and the counties and the States, but men and women have to earn the money to pay these debts if they are ever to be paid. The total long-term debt resting upon 125,000,000 people is estimated to be $134,280,000,000.

Now the short-term debt:

On page 296 of this publication, under table 77, we find the short-term business debts in the United States for the years 1931 and 1932 classified and itemized as follows:

(Excluding debt items considered as money and excluding interbank items; figures in millions)

Forms of short-term business indebtedness	Outstanding
	Dec. 31, 1931	Dec. 31, 1932
Short-term loans to bank by individuals and business enterprises (deposits)	$45,821	$41,500
Loans by Federal Reserve member banks	19,261	15,000
Loans by nonmember banks	12,045	11,000
Total loans by going banks	31,305	26,000
Estimated loans by suspended banks, which may still be regarded as collectible	865	1,000
Total bank loans	32,170	27,017
Less estimated total of long-term bank loans secured by real estate	10,000	9,000
Total short-term bank loans	22,170	18,017
Less estimated total of short-term personal bank loans for individual and household purposes (items 7 and 8 from tables 82 and 83 of ch. XI)	1,120	760
Total of strictly business short-term loans	21,050	17,257
Loans to brokers for the account of "others" made by reporting member banks in New York City	13	4
Loans to brokers, reported by New York Stock Exchange, from private banks, brokers, foreign banking agencies, etc	132	68
Loans by brokers to individuals (estimated)	746	475
Loans by brokers to business firms (estimated)	186	119
Loans by Reconstruction Finance Corporation (of this total for 1932, loans to banks and trust companies were $594,597,707)		1,356

Since that time the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has increased its loans to banks to almost $1,000,000,000.

Forms of short-term business indebtedness	Outstanding
	Dec. 31, 1931	Dec. 31, 1932
Estimated current liabilities of incorporated business concerns, excluding debts due to banks	$14,000	$12,000
Estimated current liabilities of nonincorporated business concerns, excluding debts due to banks	3,000	2,200
Miscellaneous financing by factors, selling agents, and other strictly business nonbanking financing, not included above	1,000	1,000
Loans by life-insurance companies on life-insurance policies, for business purposes	1,100	1,300
Loans by the United States Government on Government insurance policies and on adjusted service certificates for business purposes	134	158
Short-term cash loans by small-loan agencies for strictly business purposes	340	304
Miscellaneous overdue rents, overdue taxes, and overdue insurance premiums owed by business firms	1,000	1,500
Total short-term business debt	98,522	89,241

On page 307 of the publication, under table 81, we have analyzed and classified the short-term indebtedness for household purposes in the United States in 1931 and 1932, as follows:

Class of financing	Total amounts outstanding—
	At end of 1931	At end of 1932
1. Retail open account debts	$3,200,000,000	$2,500,000,000
2. Retail installment debts	2,000,000,000	1,750,000,000
3. Short-term cash loans (for personal and household purposes)	2,223,083,000	1,720,000,000
Total of retail mercantile debts and short-term cash loans	7,423,083,000	5,970,000,000
4. Estimated total of life-insurance policy loans by life-insurance companies (for personal and household purposes)	2,269,146,545	2,500,000,000
5. Estimated total of U.S. Government loans to veterans on life insurance and on adjusted-service certificates (for personal and household purposes)	1,206,620,537	1,425,339,019
6. Estimated total of miscellaneous overdue rents, taxes, and overdue life-insurance premiums	2,000,000,000	3,000,000,000
7. Personal loans between individuals	1,000,000,000	1,500,000,000
Total short-term individual and family debts in United States	13,898,850,082	14,395,339,019
SUMMARY
Total estimated long-term debts; latest available year	134,280,000,000
Total short-term business debts outstanding Dec. 31, 1932	89,241,000,000
Total short-term personal and household debts, 1932	14,395,339,019
Total, long-term, short-term, and household debts	237,916,339,019

Mr. President, since the end of 1932 the Federal debt alone has increased more than $10,000,000,000. The city debts have increased; the county debts have increased; the State debts have increased; so I am safe in taking this condition as the basis for my statement that today the total massed debts of the country resting upon the people are in excess of $250,000,000,000.

Mr. TYDINGS. If my calculations are correct, that makes a per capita debt of about $2,000, with a family debt of about $8,000.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I have not made the calculation, but no doubt the Senator is correct.

Mr. President, I ask permission to insert in the RECORD following these tables some extracts taken from the book I have before me. I do not care to read them, but I do desire that they be included as a part of my remarks following the tables.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MCCARRAN in the chair). Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

(See exhibit B.)

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, how are we to pay these debts with a 137-cent dollar? Just a few moments ago I heard an address by a distinguished Senator of this body protesting against the cheapening of the dollar, protesting against the placing of more dollars in circulation.

I ask again, How can the people of the United States pay $250,000,000,000 of indebtedness with the scant sum of money we now have in circulation and with the high-priced dollars we still have today?

I wonder how high these dollars are in price. Before I come to that, however, I want to call the attention of the Senate to another set of conditions which, to me, is somewhat alarming. I have before me a map of the United States. This map shows the status of every State regarding the indebtedness of its cities.

The States shown in black on the map have cities, to the extent of over 200, which are now in default in the payment of interest on their obligations. The States shown with rather heavy lines indicate the States which have from one to two hundred cities which are in default today in their bonded obligations.

Another symbol shows States which have as many as twenty-five to a hundred cities which are today in default in their obligations.

Another symbol shows States which have cities to the extent of between 10 and 25 which are in default in their municipal obligations.

Still another symbol shows States which have between 5 and 10 cities in default.

The States left entirely white are States containing no cities which are in default.

How many States are there in the United States which have no cities which are today in default in their obligations? There are only seven which do not contain from 1 to 200 cities which have already defaulted in the payment of their bonded obligations.

Mr. President, there is one big white State in the West, the State of Nevada.

Mr. PITTMAN. I thank the Senator.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator sitting at my right [Mr. TYDINGS] ably represents the State of Maryland. I am glad to find that his State is in white. I will mention the States which are in white.

West Virginia has no city in default. Delaware has no city in default. Massachusetts has no city in default. Neither Vermont nor New Hampshire has a city which is in default. All the other States have cities in default. There are three States which have between 100 and 200 cities in default. I will not place the names in the RECORD.

There are eight States which have between 25 and 100 cities in default.

There are six States which have between 10 and 25 cities in default.

There are seven States which have between 5 and 10 cities in default.

There are 19 States which have as many as five cities in default.

Mr. President, how can these cities ever expect to pay their bonded obligations if the people have to earn and save and get dollars worth 137 cents to pay these debts? That is the reason why these cities are in default. They cannot pay. The only chance they will ever have to pay will be through the cheapening of the dollar so that the residents of the cities of the United States may get the dollars with which to pay their taxes, so that the tax money may be used to pay the interest and to pay the obligations as they mature.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. Has the Senator any figures as to the wealth of the United States and the annual income of the United States as compared with the debts? I do not wish to disrupt the Senator's remarks or change his thought, but if he has those figures, I should like to have him state them.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, my desk library is not very extensive, but I think I can answer most questions which may be propounded. In reply to the Senator's question, I shall quote from a report of the National Industrial Conference Board. I presume that will be taken as a rather substantial institution.

This report shows that the total estimated wealth of the United States in 1929 was $360,000,000,000. That was at its peak. In 1929 the total estimated wealth of the United States—and that means all property, of every kind and character—as estimated by this Board, totaled the sum of $360,000,000,000. If the Senator wanted me to itemize that sum, I would be very glad to do it.

Mr. TYDINGS. No; I do not ask the Senator to do that, but I take it, then, our national debt is within $110,000,000,000 of our national wealth, $250,000,000,000 as compared with $360,000,000,000?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, if we should take the dollar at a hundred cents, the Senator's statement would be correct; but that is not a fact, and that is what worries me. I shall now proceed to elucidate what I mean.

A year ago, the debts, for the purpose of illustration, totaled $250,000,000,000 in money, but owing to the fact that each dollar was worth $1.67, the people could not pay those debts with $250,000,000,000 of wealth. The taxpayers had to acquire dollars worth 167 cents and surrender those dollars in the liquidation of 100 cents of debts. That means that the $250,000,000,000 a year ago was not worth $250,000,000,000 in wealth although worth that in dollars, but in wealth, services, cotton, hogs, wheat, and what not, it was worth a year ago not $250,000,000,000 but the sum of $417,500,000,000.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator stated that the indebtedness of the people and of the political subdivisions of our country was $250,000,000,000.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The mass debt, and the debt the people all together owe.

Mr. BAILEY. Who held that debt?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator can answer his own question.

Mr. BAILEY. Was it held in the United States?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Much of it was held abroad, much in the United States.

Mr. BAILEY. Not over fifty billion, at any rate, was held abroad?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I think the Senator is approximately correct.

Mr. BAILEY. That would make $200,000,000,000 of American property in the form of American debts; that is, debts amongst the people. Has the Senator calculated that in the estimation of the national property?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I did not get the Senator's question.

Mr. BAILEY. Did the Senator calculate the national indebtedness, as between one American and another, as a part of the national property?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. No; I cannot calculate debts as a part of the national wealth, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. BAILEY. If the Senator from Oklahoma owed me a hundred dollars, I would count that as my property, would I not?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It might be an asset.

Mr. BAILEY. I assume it would be. Is the Senator saying that in framing his statement as to the national wealth he leaves out all the bonds, all the mortgages, all the notes, and all the choses in action held by the American people?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, the Senator's question compels me to place in the RECORD an itemization of the total wealth of the United States, as shown by the National Industrial Conference Board report.

The real property of the country was estimated to be worth $176,400,000,000; the personal property was estimated to be worth $39,816,000,000; the manufacturing products were estimated to be worth $28,422,000,000; railroads and equipment were estimated to be worth $19,900,000,000; manufactures, machines, and tools, $15,800,000,000; street railways, $15,400,000,000; livestock, $5,800,000,000; agricultural products, $5,500,000,000; motor vehicles, $4,600,000,000; coin and bullion, $4,300,000,000; farm implements, $2,600,000,000; imported merchandise, $1,500,000,000; mining products, $730,000,000. That makes a grand total. There are no debts figured in this statement.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator from Oklahoma is transposing the figures of the massed debts, I understand, from the dollar values the Senator gave into terms of the dollar of a higher valuation?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is correct.

Mr. ADAMS. Should not the same method of computation be applied to the national assets?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I shall come to that in just a moment. The Senator is exactly correct; and if I overlooked that, I wish he would call my attention to it.

I made the statement that last year, when the dollar was worth $1.67, the people of the country could not pay this mass debt with $250,000,000,000 of wealth, because to get the dollars they must of necessity surrender services, and wealth, and property, lands, and wheat, and corn, and copper, and what not, to the value of 167 cents in order to get $1.

So to pay the debt a year ago the people would have had to pay $417,000,000,000 in value. We have reduced the value of the dollar 31 cents since last May. The dollar still has a buying power of $1.35 plus. I will put the exact figure in the RECORD. So today, because the dollar still has more than 100 cents of value, we could not pay the debts with $250,000,000,000 of wealth. With this excess of 36 cents still in the dollar, the debts today resting upon the people amount in value—not in dollars, but in value—to the sum of $340,000,000,000.

By reducing the dollar from $1.67 to $1.36, we have transferred value to the extent of $77,000,000,000 from those who have the debts coming to them, the creditors, to the debtor class. The President's proclamation cutting the gold content of the dollar 40 percent had much to do with that. If the debts were $250,000,000,000 last year, it would have taken $250,000,000,000 in gold to meet those debts. Since the President's proclamation reducing the gold content of the dollar to 60 cents, those who owe those debts, the debtor class, can pay the debts with 40 percent less gold. Forty percent of $250,000,000,000 is $100,000,000,000. So, when the President issued the proclamation reducing the gold content of the dollar from 100 cents to 60 cents, by that act he took $100,000,000,000 in value from the pockets of the creditor class and transferred it over to the pockets of the debtor class. Already, by my illustration, $100,000,000,000 of that value has been transferred.

Let us figure on the other side. In 1929 the total national wealth was $360,000,000,000. That was measured in the value of the dollar in 1929. As the dollar went up in value this total valuation shrank; it fell; and if the same formula which I have applied to the value of our debt is applied to the national wealth it will be found that today, instead of having $360,000,000,000 of national wealth, we have approximately $200,000,000,000 of national wealth.

So, if my figures are correct, this is the status of the United States at this good hour: We have property of all kinds and classes worth $200,000,000,000, and we have a national debt, a mass debt hanging over our shoulders, in the sum of $250,000,000,000. I should like to have someone tell me how we are going to pay $250,000,000,000 when the value of an the property of all of us combined is estimated at $250,000,000,000. Yet distinguished Senators stand upon the floor of the Senate and protest against the cheapening of the dollar, protest against placing more dollars in circulation.

I have a statement from a prominent writer, Dean Donham, of the Harvard Graduate School of Business, from which I quote:

> Unless Government credit is maintained we shall start the printing presses and face wild inflation. Government credit can be maintained only if business improves, tax revenues increase, and private initiative takes over the burden of financing business. Private financing will start only if our banks, our investment bankers, and our exchanges do their part effectively.

Mr. President, that is a protest against cheapening the dollar. That is a protest against placing more money in circulation, because the moment more money is placed in circulation the dollar becomes cheapened.

Only a few days ago, when the silver bill was discussed in a conference and the press carried the statement that the conference had agreed upon a silver bill and through the use of silver we should put more money in circulation, what happened? Almost everything happened. Cotton went up; wheat went up; all commodities went up; business improved. Then, when this bill came forth and the wise boys of finance saw what the bill proposed to do, cotton went down; wheat went down, everything went down.

Mr. President, let me call the attention of the Senate to the condition of the banks today. Banks are criticized for not making loans. I am not criticizing banks for not making loans. Anyone who understands the situation in my judgment will not criticize the banks of today for not making loans. The money in the banks in the main does not belong to the banks. Bankers own the capital stock. They may own the surplus, they may own the undivided profits, but that is all the bankers own. The balance of the money in the banks belongs to the patrons of the banks and the depositors of the banks. The bank officials do not have their own money to loan. They are the guardians, they are the trustees, of the deposits of their depositors. When bankers make loans they are not loaning their own money. When bankers make loans they should be sure not only that the loans they make will be repaid but that the interest will be paid. If the interest is not paid the bank makes no profit. If the principal is not paid the bank has to lose the amount of the loan. So, Mr. President, banks cannot make loans today, for the reason that there is no business and no property in the country that is making money.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. May I suggest to the Senator that there is another reason?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I shall be glad to have the suggestion.

Mr. BAILEY. It is that the United States Government is demanding of the banks every 30 or 60 days that they buy the paper of the Government, and on yesterday, as reported in today's papers, the bankers were prepared to loan to the United States Government $6,900,000,000, and not at all prepared to lend anything to anyone else; and if they did, they could not supply the demands of the Government for money.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I know that the Senator understands the import of his question, but for the RECORD let me make my comment thereon.

Mr. President, I have just made the statement that there is no business in the country which today is sufficiently prosperous to justify the banks in making loans to it. Banks could not loan to farmers today. The farmers are not prosperous. Farmers cannot borrow money and pay 7 or 8 or 10 percent on it with cotton selling at below 10 cents a pound, with wheat selling below 75 cents a bushel, with livestock selling at 2 or 3 cents a pound. Farmers cannot borrow money from the banks, because farmers cannot repay the loans; and I do not blame the banks for not making loans to farmers. Bankers cannot make loans to farmers until the prices of farm products rise sufficiently, until the banks can see a chance to get back the principal and the interest. Banks cannot make loans to railroads. They are mostly in the hands of receivers. Banks cannot make loans to closed factories. Banks cannot make loans to men who have no jobs. I again make the statement that the reason why the banks are not making loans today is that the banks have no applications that promise repayment if the loans are made.

Let me answer the Senator's question with a question: Suppose the Senator from North Carolina had $1,000,000 in cash this afternoon—and I hope he has—how would the Senator loan his own dollars, his own money? He would not loan to farmers.

Mr. BAILEY. Let me answer the Senator. He gives me a good opportunity to say something that I have often wished I had an opportunity to say.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I am glad to yield.

Mr. BAILEY. The only hope for the people of this country, for the circulation of money and the employment of men and women and the expansion and consumption of the products of the farm, is the restoration of profitable individual enterprises. So long as the Government brings in new and strange legislation day after day and week after week, we cannot expect the business man to borrow, or the bank to lend. We wind up with the Government undertaking to maintain the business structure by means of borrowed money, and there can be but one end to that—and I forbear to say what that end will be.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I appreciate the statement made by the distinguished Senator from North Carolina. I desire to make further answer to his inquiry.

Banks are not making loans. As evidence of that, let me at this point place in the RECORD some concrete illustrations.

I hold in my hand a condensed bank statement. I shall not give the names of these banks, but they are types, and they are distributed in various sections. If anyone desires to see them, they are here, and can be seen. I have the condensed statement of a bank in my State. This bank has total deposits in the sum of $1,186,837.74. It is just a small country bank in the State of Oklahoma. This bank has loans and discounts in the sum of $231,837.56.

Mr. President, the statement shows that this bank has cash resources, commercial paper, bonds and warrants, Liberty bonds, cash in vaults, to the total of 87 percent of its deposits. Why is this bank not making loans? It is because there is no industry in that section which is prosperous upon which this bank can make loans; and until the farmers of that section get more than 10 cents a pound for cotton, more than 70 cents a bushel for wheat, more than 3 cents a pound for livestock, hogs, and cattle, they cannot secure loans at the bank, because the farmers cannot produce enough stuff to pay the cost of production and have anything left to meet the note when it comes due. That is the reason why this bank in my State is not making loans. It is advertising that it has 87 percent of its total deposits in liquid assets.

Mr. LEWIS rose.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, does the Senator from Illinois desire to interrupt me?

Mr. LEWIS. No. I was interested in the able Senator's presentation. I do not wish to interrupt him.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I call attention at this point to another bank, which is not in my State but in the adjoining State of Kansas. This bank is about the same size as is the bank to which I just referred. It has on deposit $1,280,615.33; it has loans and discounts in the sum of $203,625.37. This bank is located in one of the best towns in America, the town of Wichita, Kans. I know there are people in the city of Wichita, Kans., and in the territory surrounding Wichita, who want to borrow money; I know there are many applications for money, but the bank is not making loans. Why? Because the bank does not see, if it makes the loans, how it is going to get its money back, and, being the guardians and trustees of the money of its depositors, it does not dare make loans under present conditions.

Let me call attention to a third bank. This bank is a larger bank, one of the larger banks in Oklahoma. It has on deposit the sum of $12,386,000—I leave off the hundreds and cents—it has loans in the sum of $906,000. It has $12,000,000 of deposits and loans of less than $1,000,000. It has cash resources, bonds and warrants, cash and sight exchange in the total sum of $11,646,000. Why is not this bank making loans? To my personal knowledge, the people of Oklahoma surely want to borrow money. Two hundred thousand people live in that city. It is in the midst of a good farming community. The farmers need money; they want money; factories need money; they want money; but the bank will not lend them money, for the very good reason that the bank does not see an opportunity to make the loan, in the first instance, in such way that it will be certain to get its money back.

Mr. President, let me call attention to another bank. This bank is a rather large bank in an adjoining State. It has $18,000,000 on deposit; it has loans in the sum of $1,712,000. It has Government bonds in the sum of $12,700,000; it has cash and sight exchange of $4,016,000; in other words, the bank has on deposit $18,000,000 and has cash in sight exchange and liquid funds in the sum of $16,000,000.

Let me call attention to another bank. This bank is located in Illinois. I refer to the First National Bank in one of the large cities in Illinois. This bank advertises in the newspapers of Chicago that it has 100 percent cash and Government securities. The reference to the 100 percent covers a large part of the advertisement.

The advertisement shows that this bank has total deposits in the sum of $6,000,000—I will be exact and say $6,318,000—and the advertisement shows that it has bonds, Liberty bonds, and cash in the sum of $6,366,000. In other words, this bank has more wealth, represented by bonds and cash, than it has total deposits. It is 100 percent liquid. Why does not this bank in Illinois make loans? For the same reason that the banks in Oklahoma are not making loans; for the same reason that banks in Kansas and other States are not making loans. They will not make loans until the general price level of all our commodities is elevated above what it is today. I have spent a good many hours upon this floor in order to get some of my colleagues to realize that necessity and to secure their help, but I am not sure that all my efforts have been of very much avail.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMPSON in the chair). Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. FESS. I think the Senator has made a very clear statement and one that everybody can understand. The only difficulty is whether or not the remedy is an equitable one. I take it, the Senator has the view that the heavy burden of debts makes the debtors incapable of getting credit and therefore, having no security, they are unable to borrow, and that makes it impossible for the banks to loan. I think that is perfectly obvious.

The remedy would be to increase the price level by increasing the volume of money, and, in a degree, cheapening the price of money. If we could limit that to the debtors, it would be fine; but when we think of the effect it would have upon not only the creditors but upon the large laboring class of the country, that makes the problem exceedingly difficult.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I appreciate the suggestion made by the distinguished Senator from Ohio, but let me remind him that in 1920 when we did not have a 136-cent dollar, when we did not even have a 100-cent dollar, but did have a 50-cent dollar, a dollar worth one-third of what it is worth today, at that time every man in America had a job. If he did not want to work, he had to hide, because jobs pursued him. Today we have a 136-cent dollar, and 10,000,000 of our people are still unemployed, and we are spending $10,000,000,000 from the Federal Treasury for relief, by way of charity and gratuities, in order to keep these men alive until prosperous times come back, when, perhaps, jobs will come in sight again.

Mr. President, even though I have not converted very many here in the Senate, there have been some converts in some places. I now desire to put in the RECORD some extracts from a speech made by Mr. Russell Leffingwell, of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. I never expected to convert that firm; I never expected to convert any member of that firm, and I do not suppose Mr. Leffingwell ever heard of me. Nevertheless, I desire at this point to quote from a speech of his to show that what I am trying to say Mr. Leffingwell has already said. This address was delivered on March 21, 1934. His subject was "The Gold Problem and Currency Revaluation." The address was delivered before the Academy of Political Science. I wish to place some extracts from this address in the RECORD.

On page 5 of this address Mr. Russell Leffingwell, a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan Co., made this statement:

> The essence of monetary management and of central banking policy is to circumvent natural forces, and artificially, through the control of the note issue and of the investments of the central bank, to create a scarcity of money and credit when they appear to be too plentiful, and to create a plethora when they are too scarce.

Mr. President, Mr. Leffingwell admits what I have been trying to say here for 3 or 4 years as to the truth behind the question of the valuation of money. When money gets too high, it is because money is too scarce; when money is too high, it can be made cheaper by putting more money in circulation; and when money gets too plentiful, it can be made higher by taking money out of circulation. I will come to that in a moment, and place in the RECORD evidence that cannot be questioned.

From page 12 of Mr. Leffingwell's address I read another extract. I have just been trying to show the Senate how much of a burden of debt we have upon our people. Mr. Leffingwell makes this statement:

> The burden of debts had become unbearable.

This partner of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. recognizes that truth; yet here in the Congress of the United States but few apparently recognize the truth of that statement.

From page 13 I quote again from Mr. Leffingwell:

> It seems to me clear that the way out of the depression is to combat and overcome the deflationary forces.

On page 14 Mr. Leffingwell makes this statement:

> The controlling principle, we now know, is that the sovereign, the state, has and must have control of its currency, and therefore all obligations payable in its currency, however express. This power it cannot abdicate or contract away. When the force of an overwhelming catastrophe compels a revaluation of its currency, as part of a plan of reorganization and recovery, it can and must in common honesty make that revaluation effective universally, without fear or favor, without preferring one creditor over another.

From page 16 I quote again from Mr. Leffingwell:

> The future technique of dollar revaluation should follow the course of an orthodox cheap money policy.

While here on the floor of the Senate we have Senators protesting against the cheaper money policy, Mr. Leffingwell, of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., makes the statement in times such as these that a cheaper money policy is advisable.

On page 17 Mr. Leffingwell says:

> Until the stimulus of cheap money raises prices—

I invite the attention of the distinguished Senator from Ohio [Mr. FESS] to this statement:

> Until the stimulus of cheap money raises prices, and restores a profit to business, so that business can reemploy labor and will have more taxes to pay on increased incomes.

I think that answers the questions propounded to me a moment ago by the distinguished senior Senator from Ohio.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. I understand Mr. Leffingwell was formerly connected with the Treasury Department. I do not know the exact position he held, but he held an important place in the Treasury Department. In addition to that, I think he was a Republican.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I am glad to have the contribution. I am not personally acquainted with Mr. Leffingwell, but I so thoroughly agree with his address that I think he would be eligible to join another political party on the money question.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Leffingwell suggested that it would insure the employment of labor. Does the pending bill in any way insure the employment of labor? Can we be sure of that?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I go back to Mr. Leffingwell's statement and read it again so there can be no misapprehension:

> Until the stimulus of cheap money raises prices and restores a profit to business so that business can reemploy labor and will have more taxes to pay on increased incomes.

That is the statement. I think it answers the question thoroughly.

From the same page I quote two more short excerpts from Mr. Leffingwell:

> The way to stop a deflation is to make money cheap.

I have been making speeches on the floor of the Senate for 3 or 4 years, making that same statement, trying to get the United States Senate to adopt a policy of cheap money, and Mr. Leffingwell comes along and admits that the policy is sound.

Again he said:

> That has been in course of being proved in England since 1931 and here since a year ago. That way will work. There is no other way.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. I invite the Senator's attention to the fact that in 1929, when we passed the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, it was for the purpose of expanding the credit of the country. Mr. Hoover adopted the policy of having the Federal Reserve Board buy Government bonds and more Government bonds, with the idea of creating credit inflation, the idea further being to cheapen the dollar. But all the time the banking houses in New York have been advocating a credit expansion when it was impossible, and it has been demonstrated that it was impossible under a credit inflation. The only way we can get inflation at this time is through the medium of expanding the currency.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I appreciate the statement made by the distinguished Senator from Montana, and I agree with his conclusion 100 percent.

On page 17 Mr. Leffingwell made this significant statement:

> Cheap money opens the door to recovery.

I commend that to the attention of the distinguished senior Senator from Ohio.

On page 19 I quote the last excerpt from Mr. Leffingwell as follows:

> Going off the gold and the cheap-money policy were both necessary to meet a crisis of deflation and depression unexampled in the memory of living men and of world-wide incidence.

Mr. President, what is the reason why we have a silver bill before the Senate today? Why did the House of Representatives in past Congresses pass the bonus bill? Why did the House of Representatives a year ago or more pass the Goldsborough bill? Why did the House of Representatives at this session again pass the bonus bill? It passed the first Dies bill and it passed the second Dies bill.

Members of the House of Representatives come from close contact with the people of the United States. Members of the House of Representatives are supposed to speak the crystallized sentiment in their districts. If they misjudge the sentiment of their districts, there are likely to be new occupants in their seats in the next Congress. These men come to the Congress every 2 years direct from the people. Therefore, I assume that the Representatives in past Congresses and in this Congress voted for more money, because that is what the bonus bill provided; it provided for the payment of the balance due the ex-service men in money—new money, not with credit, not with checks, but with money.

The Dies bill provided that we should trade some of our surplus agricultural products for silver, place that silver in our Treasury and issue money against it, and place that money in circulation. The Goldsborough bill had the same object in view when it was passed in a former Congress. But notwithstanding, the House of Representatives has passed bill after bill providing for more money, providing for cheaper money, providing for higher prices; the Senate of the United States fails and refuses to act, as if money was controlled, like the sun, moon, and tide, through uncontrollable forces.

Mr. President, money is a man-made institution. Being man-made, it is man-controlled. The Senate of the United States apparently thinks that money, like the seasons, is controlled by a power over which we can exercise no influence.

For almost 5 years we have suffered the worst depression in history. While conditions have improved, America is still very ill. Our troubles are financial. To bring relief, we have temporized and experimented. We have increased taxes and increased appropriations. We have increased debts necessitating increased borrowings and bonds. At the very time that taxes, appropriations, borrowings, and bonds were being increased the managers of our financial policies were decreasing the volume of money until now money is unobtainable, credit is frozen, and our burden is becoming unendurable and unbearable.

As relief measures, we have recognized the law of supply and demand as controlling the value of every commodity save one—the commodity of money. We have restricted, curtailed, and destroyed cotton, corn, wheat, hogs, and oil to make such commodities scarcer and thereby dearer in value.

The same economic law which controls the value of commodities likewise controls the value of money.

To prove this theorem we have to revert only to the year 1920.

In that year we had ample currency, liberal credits, high prices, wide-spread employment, and consequent great prosperity.

In that year the managers of our financial policies decreed against such prosperity and ordered deflation of both currency and credit and the panic of 1921 was the inevitable result.

As I said, it is contended by some that money, like the sun, moon, and tides, is controlled by unchanging and unchangeable natural laws; hence any attempt to manage our currency or to influence or control our monetary policy constitutes tinkering with the currency.

It is self-evident that I do not subscribe to such doctrine. Money is a man-made device to encourage, promote, and facilitate commerce and trade.

Money and monetary policies, man-created, are subject to control, management, and manipulations; hence the kind of control and management is important, very important, to the people of our country.

The Federal Reserve Act was passed in 1913. This law was enacted in response to a demand for more money and an elastic currency system. When the new money law was passed we had only $3,400,000,000 in circulation. This was not enough basic money to satisfy the needs of business, and from 1913 to 1920 the Wilson administration increased the volume of currency to $6,200,000,000.

The year 1920 was a national campaign year and saw Franklin D. Roosevelt nominated for the Vice Presidency. In that campaign the party sponsoring Cox and Roosevelt was condemned as being responsible for the high cost of living. At that time wheat was selling for $2.50 per bushel; corn, $1.50 per bushel; cotton, 40 cents per pound; and other commodities were selling at comparable prices.

All remember the good times just after the World War, and with high prices there was a job for every worker and all forms of business were at the highest peak of activity.

In 1920 the war had been over for almost 2 years, and during this time 4,500,000 soldiers had returned from the front to reenter civilian life and to find places in business and jobs in industry.

In that year the opposition party, in its Chicago platform, declared that the reason prices were high was a "50-percent depreciation of the purchasing power of the dollar due to a gross expansion of our currency and credit." In other words, the Wilson administration was condemned for having made prices high by making money plentiful and credit easy.

In addition to condemning Mr. Roosevelt's party for its monetary policy and consequent high prices, the opposition party pledged itself to reduce the price of wheat, corn, cotton, and other commodities. The Chicago convention was frank in detailing the exact procedure to be followed in beating down the price level. The platform read:

> We pledge ourselves to earnest and consistent attack upon the high cost of living * * * by courageous and intelligent deflation of overexpanded credit and currency * * *."

Thus the opposition party admitted that placing money in circulation had cheapened the dollar and that the depreciated dollar was responsible for the high prices. As a remedy the minority party declared for scarcer money, higher valued dollars, and lower prices. In the campaign scarcer money and lower prices won; and Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Cox, his running mate, were defeated.

Immediately after the victors took over the Government, deflation of currency and credit was begun, and from March 4, 1921, to September 1, 1922, the actual currency in circulation was decreased from $6,200,000,000 to $4,390,000,000.

Thus, during the first 18 months of the new administration the sum of $1,800,000,000, or $100,000,000 per month of actual currency, was withdrawn from circulation.

The minority party in 1920 became the majority party in 1921, and thereafter made good its campaign pledge to deflate the currency. As the volume of money in circulation was reduced, prices fell, so that at the end of 18 months wheat was selling for $1 per bushel, cotton was selling for 20 cents per pound, and all other prices were reduced in proportion. The deflation of the currency and credit ruined agriculture first; then livestock, lumber, and mining industries followed the decline; and still later the smaller towns and cities suffered, and, with one-half our people impoverished, the 1929 crash came.

In view of the record stated, if the increase in the volume of money from 1913 to 1920 was responsible for a cheaper dollar and thereby higher prices, and if the policy promised in 1920 and carried out in 1921–22 of reducing the volume of money in circulation by approximately $1,800,000,000 had the effect of decreasing prices, is it illogical now to assume that an increase in the volume of money in circulation will have the effect of increasing the price of wheat, corn, cotton, livestock, and commodities in general?

One year ago the Congress, the policy-making branch of our Government, recognized and sought again to apply the law of supply and demand to money and credit by expanding both, to the end that money should be made more plentiful, and credit should be made more liberal.

This policy has been opposed and blocked by an influence more powerful than the Congress; and, as the result, recovery has been delayed and postponed, if not defeated.

With 10,000,000 of our citizens still unemployed, and in the midst of an expenditure of $10,000,000,000, we demand that the financial policy suggested and adopted 1 year ago be carried out.

We demand that our currency and credit be expanded. We are now seeking to use this silver bill as a means of expanding the currency of the Nation.

We demand that the value of the dollar be reduced to 100 cents.

To accomplish these ends, we suggest and recommend a wider use of silver as the base of our monetary system.

We do not suggest a wider use of silver to help silver, but rather we recommend that silver be used to help bring about the return of prosperity.

In 1900 the relation of silver to gold in our monetary base or reserves was over 50 percent, while today the amount of silver in relation to gold in token dollars is less than 11 percent, and in bullion value is less than 5 percent.

Since gold is out of circulation, we recommend that silver be substituted insofar as possible and practicable, to the end that at least 25 percent of our monetary reserves in value be accumulated and maintained in silver.

Mr. President, with this statement I hope we shall consider this measure, and, if it is possible to make a better bill out of it, that we shall make a better bill out of it. I think the bill can be improved by the addition of three amendments, which I have already stated:

First, make silver primary, basic, standard money.

Second, add a clarifying section providing that when we do buy silver, trade for silver, we shall issue silver certificates against such silver, and then see to it that those certificates are placed in actual circulation through meeting the maturing obligations of the Government.

Third, section 8 should be stricken from the bill. Section 8 is the taxing provision. In my judgment, section 8 will not bring any perceptible tax to the Federal Treasury. It will drive away from the Federal Treasury such taxes as we are now receiving from transactions on the exchange. In my opinion, section 8 will destroy the exchange and drive it to foreign lands.

For fear that I have not done so, I ask permission to insert in the RECORD some exhibits, one being a copy of the treaty negotiated at London by the distinguished author of this bill. I am not sure that this treaty appears in the RECORD. I think it should.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BANKHEAD in the chair). Without objection, the treaty will be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I offer that as an exhibit.

(See exhibit C.)

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Then I desire to read from a press release of the Department of State of date April 23, 1924, as follows:

> Acting Secretary of State Phillips announced today that all of the parties to the silver agreement entered into at the London Monetary and Economic Conference have taken the steps necessary to put such agreement in force.

That means that in the case of the treaty negotiated by the distinguished Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] at London, in which I understand 66 nations participated, each and all of the nations have taken the proper steps to endorse the treaty and make it a part of their monetary policy.

I desire to introduce in the RECORD a statement prepared by Dr. Goldenweiser, economist of the Federal Reserve Board, giving an analysis of the location of the silver now in existence in the world. The statement shows that there has been produced since the discovery of America 15,500,000,000 fine ounces of silver. That is all the silver that has been produced. Of this, we can account at the present time for less than 10,000,000,000 ounces. The balance has been used in the arts or has been lost or destroyed. Of the 10,000,000,000 ounces that we can account for, we find 4,700,000,000 ounces in British India; we find 2,500,000,000 ounces in China; the United States has almost 1,000,000,000 ounces. That makes over 8,000,000,000 ounces of silver held by the three great silver nations of India, China, and the United States. There is only about a billion ounces left in the world, according to this statement; so those who argue that the remonetization of silver will bring a great flood of the white metal to our shores are arguing from misinformation, judging from the facts as I can obtain them.

I ask permission to insert that table and the accompanying statements in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit A.)

EXHIBIT A

DISTRIBUTION OF SILVER STOCKS BY COUNTRIES

Information with regard to silver held in the various countries of the world is fragmentary and uncertain. Using estimates of Dr. Adolph Soetbeer up to 1885 and its own annual estimates thereafter, the Bureau of the Mint estimates that during the period 1493–1933 the aggregate world production of silver amounted to 15,500,000,000 fine ounces. Two-thirds of this has been produced since 1860. An appreciable amount of the silver produced has been lost or converted into uses from which it can never be recovered, e.g., chemical uses. The available world total today is unquestionably less than 15,000,000,000 ounces; but how much less it is impossible to state with any precision.

In the table below certain data has been brought together with a view to showing the distribution of about 9,400,000,000 ounces, for which information or a basis of estimate has been found.

Data on silver stocks by countries

[In millions of ounces]

Country	Date	Estimated stock of silver in coin, bullion holdings, jewelry, and other articles	Estimated speculative holdings of bullion	Total stock of coin	Net coinage 1900–1932
British India	December 1933	4,700
China	December 1930	2,500
United States	February 1934		175	635
Germany	December 1932				181
Mexico	do				169
Russia	do				167
Spain	1933			134
Japan	December 1932				131
Austria-Hungary	do				123
Indo-China	do				118
United Kingdom	do		20		71
Siam				53
France	December 1932				50
Persia	do				47
Italy	December 1931			44
Netherlands	do			31
Canada	do			17
Australia	December 1932				15
Total		7,200	195	914	1,072

Combining the figures on these several bases—incomplete as they are—gives a total figure of about 9,400,000,000 ounces. All the important silver-using countries appear to be represented in the table; but it is possible that the aggregate figure derived from the table would be raised by another 1,000,000,000 ounces if the returns for monetary silver were complete. This would leave perhaps 4,500,000,000 ounces of the silver mined since 1493 to represent silver employed in jewelry, silverware, and other commercial uses outside India and China. Detailed estimates by the Bureau of the Mint indicate that the net industrial consumption of silver in the United States for the period 1880–1932 was 865,000,000 ounces.

SOURCES OF DATA

Complete estimates are available only for India and China—the two outstanding silver-holding countries. The figure for India is based upon an estimate in 1919 by G. Findlay Shirras, director of statistics with the Government of India. This estimate has been brought down to date by adding net imports and production of silver in India since that time. At the end of December 1933 the Indian Government held 348,000,000 ounces of silver. This is included in the total.

The estimate for China is one by E. Kann published in the Chinese Economic Journal for April 1931. The estimate evidently applies to the end of the year 1930 and is given in detail for various types of monetary silver, the aggregate figure amounting to 1,700,000,000 ounces. This appears to be consistent with comprehensive data on coinage covering the period 1891–1928 compiled by the Chinese Bureau of Statistics from figures furnished by the Ministry of Finance. The difference between the figure of 1,700,000,000 ounces for monetary silver and the figure of 2,500,000,000 ounces shown in the table represents Kann's best guess as to the probable amount of silver hoarded in China or employed for ornamental and household purposes.

Figures for other countries in the table are incomplete. Those for the United States show (1), silver contained in the total stock of silver coins of the country at the end of February 1934, and (2) an estimate of bullion holdings in New York reported in Handy & Harman's Annual Review of the Silver Market (1933), presumably as of the end of the year 1933. The Review also reports an estimate of silver bullion holdings in London as of the same date.

For Spain the basis is an estimate of the total stock of silver coin reported in a bulletin of the Department of Commerce entitled "The Monetary Use of Silver in 1933." Nearly two-thirds of the monetary silver stock as estimated is reported in the balance sheet of the Bank of Spain.

For four other countries (Siam, Italy, Netherlands, and Canada) the total monetary silver stock as reported in the 1933 annual report of the Director of the Mint in terms of dollars is used as the basis. The dollar figures are converted back into the respective national units and the amount of silver is compiled on the basis of the silver content of the current coins. This method involves some understatement since all four countries have reduced the fineness of their current issues of silver coins in the post-war period. Hence such old coins as may remain in circulation contain more silver than the estimate indicates.

For 10 other countries (Germany, Mexico, Russia, Japan, Austria-Hungary, Indo-China, the United Kingdom, France, Persia, and Australia) net coinage in the period of 1930–32 is shown. This is based upon data of coin issued and withdrawn as published in the annual reports of the Director of the Mint. It gives some indication of the present stock of coin in the 10 countries, although it omits coinage previous to 1900 and is, therefore, far from complete.

EXHIBIT B

[Extracts from the book, The Internal Debts of the United States, edited by Evans Clark]

In considering these two possible steps aimed to further recovery, the expansion of money, and public works, it must be kept in mind that one of the immediate objectives of action must be to repair the damage done to the country's economy by the bank liquidation of 1931–32 and by the failure of some of the banks to be reopened after the bank holiday. In the drastic bank liquidation of 1931–32 the money of the country, chiefly deposits in commercial banks, was reduced over $10,000,000,000, though the supply of money necessary to maintain the then existing level of prices and production does not appear likely to have suffered any such tremendous decline. The money stock of the country has been further reduced by several billion dollars as banks have remained closed after the bank holiday. Altogether the volume of money has thus been seriously contracted—presumably without any fully corresponding reduction in the country's money needs.

NOTE.—"Money needs" is here used as a convenient term to refer to the amount of money which is needed to support a given level of prices and production. Presumably this amount fluctuates from a variety of causes as the desirability of holding wealth in the form of money rather than in the form of goods or securities fluctuates with changing conditions: More at Christmas time and in the crop-moving period, less as fears of inflation reduce the desirability of holding individual wealth in the form of money, more as interest rates drop and wealth in the form of securities becomes less advantageous, less as a rising interest rate shifts the relative advantage of holding wealth in the form of money and of holding wealth in the form of high yielding call loans or other safe assets in favor of the latter. It should be noted that the money needs of the country relate to a particular level of prices and production. It is assumed that if, with the level of prices and production remaining constant, a drop in the desirability of holding money at that level occurs—as for instance from an extensive fear of inflation—then, the effort will be made to convert part of the wealth held in the form of money into goods or securities thus tending to increase both prices in the areas where prices are highly flexible and the volume of production in the areas where prices tend to be inflexible.

If the volume of money remains constant, prices and production presumably increase until a new relation between prices, production, and income has been established such that the demand for wealth in the form of money is equal to the supply. In a similar manner, if the effective desire to hold wealth in the form of money were to remain constant over a period of time while the volume of money was markedly reduced, say by bank liquidation, and if, at the initial level of prices and production, there was a balanced adjustment between the advantages of holding wealth in the form of money and in the form of goods or securities, then with the reduction in the supply of money, the adjustment would be deranged and a balance would only be reestablished at a lower level of prices and production unless other influences intervened. It is assumed here that a balance must be maintained between the advantages of holding wealth in the form of money and holding it in any other form into which it can be converted at the existing prices.

To correct this inequality between the supply of money and the need for money if prices and production are to be supported on a reasonable basis, it would seem that either the supply must be increased or the need for money reduced, or a combination of both. The departure of this country from the gold standard and the extensive discussions of uncontrolled inflation have undoubtedly brought some reduction in the country's need for money as person after person has converted part of his money holdings into goods or securities. It is possible, though improbable, that further talk of inflation and the taking of initial steps to increase the volume of money may of themselves cause people to prefer to hold less money and thereby reduce the need for money to the point at which the supply is adequate to support a higher level of prices and production without further increase. Presumably an extensive decrease in the desire to hold money would result in additional expenditures on goods and securities, thereby bringing about an extensive rise in prices of those commodities and securities whose prices are highly flexible, with a general increase in business activity in the areas where prices are relatively inflexible.

More probably the talk of inflation will not reduce the country's need for money to a point low enough to induce an important measure of recovery, and the deficiency of money must be made good through the expansion of bank deposits or the issue of notes if extensive recovery is to be brought about. Action to increase the volume of money in the community is therefore recommended, but subject to reversal in case of an inordinately rapid rise in prices and business activity resulting from the mere discussion of inflation.

There are a variety of ways whereby the money stock of the country could be increased, certain of which have been mentioned in the chapter on bank debt. In selecting among them two objectives should be sought: First, that method should be employed which makes the newly created money most effective in reviving employment. To this end we recommend that the new money, whether created as a result of the extension of bank credit or through the limited operations of the printing press, be expended in the furtherance of public works or other projects aimed at unemployment relief. This would place much of the newly created money in the hands of individuals likely to spend it directly in the purchase of goods.

The second and perhaps equally important consideration in selecting the method of adding to the money stock of the country is that the process should be promptly reversible. In order to effect a controlled expansion it is essential that the Government be able to bring about a withdrawal of money from circulation. (Note: Where the money has been put into circulation through Government expenditure it should be withdrawn by sale of bonds to individuals and institutions other than banks or by the less flexible process of taxation) if the changed business outlook should lead to an important expansion of bank credit (with the corresponding creation of money) quite apart from, or perhaps as a further product of, the Government's action in adding to the money stock.

Just how extensive an increase in the volume of money is required to bring about a substantial recovery is a matter which can be determined only as the expansion process is set in motion. That such an expansion program is justified under the circumstances seems clear. Therefore, unless prices rise very much further and business activity greatly increased as a result of the fear of inflation, we recommend that the Government take steps to increase the volume of money outstanding in a manner to place purchasing power in the hands of those able and willing to expend it and that this expansion of money be accomplished in a manner capable of immediate reversal so as to maintain the fullest possible control in the hands of the Government.

EXHIBIT C

Agreement negotiated by Senator KEY PITTMAN on behalf of the delegation of the United States, also including resolution presented by Senator PITTMAN on behalf of the delegation and unanimously adopted by the 66 Governments represented. (As London Conference was called by the League of Nations and held under their auspices, no resolution could be adopted except by unanimous consent.)

Memorandum of heads of agreement entered into by the delegates of India, China, and Spain as holders of large stocks or users of silver, and of Australia, Canada, the United States, Mexico, and Peru as principal producers of silver, at the Monetary and Economic Conference held in London, July 1933.

Whereas at a meeting of the subcommission II (permanent measures) of the monetary and financial commission of the Monetary and Economic Conference held on Thursday, July 20, 1933, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Be it resolved to recommend to all the governments parties to this conference:

"(a) That an agreement be sought between the chief silver-producing countries and those countries which are the largest holders or users of silver with a view to mitigating fluctuations in the price of silver; and that the other nations not parties to this agreement should refrain from measures which could appreciably affect the silver market.

"(b) That the governments parties to this conference shall refrain from new legislative measures which would involve further debasement of their silver coinage below a fineness of 800/1000.

"(c) That they shall substitute silver coins for low-value paper currency insofar as the budgetary and local conditions of each country will permit;

"(d) That all of the provisions of this resolution are subject to the following exceptions and limitations;

"The requirements of such provisions shall lapse on April 1, 1934, if the agreement recommended in paragraph (a) does not come into force by that date, and in no case shall extend beyond January 1, 1938;

"Governments may take any action relative to their silver coinage that they may deem necessary to prevent the flight or destruction of their silver coinage by reason of a rise in the bullion price of the silver content of their coin above the nominal or parity value of such silver coin"; and

Whereas the Governments of India and Spain may desire to sell certain portions of their silver holdings, and it will be to their advantage that the countries which are large producers of silver should absorb silver as herein provided, to offset such sales; and

Whereas it is to the advantage of the large producing countries named in article 2 that the sales of silver from monetary stocks be limited as herein provided; and

Whereas it is to the advantage of China that sales from monetary stocks of silver be offset by purchases as herein provided, with a view to its effective stabilization;

Now, therefore, it is agreed between the parties hereto:

1. (a) That the Government of India shall not dispose by sale of more than 140,000,000 fine ounces of silver during a period of 4 years, commencing with January 1, 1934. The disposals during each calendar year of the said 4-year period shall be based on an average of 35,000,000 fine ounces per year, it being understood, however, that if in any year the Government of India shall not dispose of 35,000,000 fine ounces the difference between the amount actually disposed of and 35,000,000 fine ounces may be added as additional disposals in subsequent years: Provided further, That the maximum amount disposed of in any year shall be limited to 50,000,000 fine ounces.

(b) Notwithstanding anything previously stated in this article, it is understood that if the Government of India should after the date of this agreement sell silver to any government for the purpose of transfer to the United States Government in payment of war debts such silver shall be excluded from the scope of this agreement.

(c) Provided, however, That when the total of the disposals referred to in paragraph (a) above plus sales referred to in paragraph (b) above by the Government of India under this agreement shall amount to 175,000,000 fine ounces the obligation of the parties hereto shall cease.

2. That the Governments of Australia, Canada, the United States, Mexico, and Peru, during the existence of this agreement, shall not sell any silver, and shall also in the aggregate purchase, or otherwise arrange for withdrawing from the market 35,000,000 fine ounces of silver from the mine production of such countries in each calendar year for a period of 4 years commencing with the calendar year 1934. The said Governments undertake to settle by agreement the share in the said 35,000,000 fine ounces which each of them shall purchase or cause to be withdrawn.

3. That the silver purchased or withdrawn in accordance with article 2 above shall be used for currency purposes (either for coinage or for currency reserves), or be otherwise retained from sale during said period of 4 years.

4. That the Government of China shall not sell silver resulting from demonetized coins for a period of 4 calendar years commencing January 1, 1934.

5. That the Government of Spain shall not dispose by sale of more than 20,000,000 fine ounces of silver during a period of 4 years commencing with January 1, 1934. The disposals during each calendar year of the said 4-year period shall be based on an average of 5,000,000 fine ounces per year; it being understood, however, that if in any year the Government of Spain shall not dispose of 5,000,000 fine ounces, the difference between the amount actually disposed of and 5,000,000 fine ounces may be added as additional disposals in subsequent years; provided further, that the maximum amount disposed of in any year shall be limited to 7,000,000 fine ounces.

6. That the Governments concerned will exchange all such information as may be necessary with regard to the measures to fulfill the provisions of this memorandum of agreement.

7. That it is understood that, subject to the provisions of article 8, the undertakings of each party to the present memorandum of agreement are conditional upon the fulfillment of the undertakings of every other party thereto.

8. That this memorandum of agreement is subject to ratification by the governments concerned. The instruments of ratification shall be deposited not later than the 1st of April 1934, with the Government of the United States. It shall come into force as soon as the ratifications of all the governments concerned are received, provided that all the ratifications are received before the 1st of April 1934. A notice by any government that the affirmative action necessary to carry out the purposes of this agreement has been taken will be accepted as an instrument of ratification. Nevertheless, if one or more of the governments enumerated in article 2 fail to ratify by the 1st of April 1934, the agreement shall come into force at that date, if the other governments mentioned in article 2 which have ratified notify the other governments which ratify that they are prepared to purchase, or cause to be withdrawn, in the aggregate the amount of silver mentioned in article 2. The Government of the United States is requested to take such steps as may be necessary for the purpose of the conclusion of this agreement.

In witness whereof the undersigned have signed the present memorandum of agreement.

Done at London this 22d day of July 1933, in a single copy which shall be deposited in the archives of the Government of the United States.

S. M. BRUCE,
Delegate of Australia.
EDGAR M. RHODES,
Delegate of Canada.
W. W. YEN,
Delegate of China.
KEY PITTMAN,
Delegate of United States of America.
GEORGE SCHUSTER,
Delegate of India.
EDUARDO SUAREZ,
Delegate of Mexico.
F. TUDELA,
Delegate of Peru.
L. NICOLAU d' OLWER,
Delegate of Spain.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I understand that our leader, the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] desires to have a short executive session. Prior to that I wish to say that some fear has been expressed that the able Senator from Oklahoma has been filibustering. I take this opportunity to say that I have denied that all the time; and, in addition to that, I take great pleasure in declaring that I think he has made one of the ablest and most complete speeches delivered in this body, and that the matter he has gathered together, the data, the statistics which are uncontradictable, will be of great value in this discussion.

The fact that I may not agree that many of the Senator's suggestions will accomplish the purpose which he thinks they will accomplish does not mean in any sense whatever that I have the less respect for anything he has said in this connection. Perhaps what he has suggested is correct. Perhaps it is not. His judgment of the matter probably is just as good as mine, if not better.

I simply desire, as one of those having charge of this bill, to thank the Senator for having abbreviated his splendid speech just as much as he could abbreviate it.

(During the delivery of the speech of Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma:)

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, in view of the fact that the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR] must be absent during the afternoon, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield to enable that Senator to submit a few brief remarks, with the understanding that the Senator from Oklahoma shall not lose the floor?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I am anxious to conclude the remarks I have to make. However, if it will be agreeable to the Senate to have the Senator from New Jersey address the Senate and his remarks appear at the close of my speech, and if I may be permitted to resume the floor at the conclusion of his remarks, I am willing to yield.

Mr. McNARY. Let it be understood that at the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from New Jersey the Senator from Oklahoma is to have the floor.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. With that understanding I yield at this time to the Senator from New Jersey.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. At the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from New Jersey the Senator from Oklahoma will be recognized.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, it is most difficult to find any particular economic reason for silver legislation such as is presented in the bill now before the Senate, unless, as the Democratic New York World-Telegram said recently, it is a political gesture forced by a Congressional bloc—which, if so, is obviously a dangerous basis on which to determine any monetary policy. In other words, excepting for the fact that we are adding one more cause for uncertainty and fear to the present business situation, despite the fact the proponents of the bill declare that the measure is designed to broaden the metallic base of our monetary system, and is to remedy a maladjustment of our currency, there is no immediate danger in this new silver proposal itself, unless, of course, it is materially amended. I say this, estimating danger in terms of prospective early debasement of our monetary standard and depreciation of our currency, with the consequent effects on values and prices.

It is difficult for me to understand why we should seek to broaden the metallic base of our monetary system when the devaluation of the dollar has already given the country a gold reserve of unprecedented size and greater apparently than our monetary needs in this respect; when it is borne in mind that the mere amount of money is not the controlling factor and that the mobility of a sufficient currency is certainly the all-important thing.

It is difficult for me also to understand why we should seek to remedy a maladjustment of our currency when that maladjustment seems to be in the diversity of paper money now outstanding by adding to this paper money a large amount of additional silver certificates as provided for in the pending bill.

It is admitted that the provisions of the bill, if carried out, would make it necessary for the United States to purchase silver abroad and, obviously, such silver must be paid for in gold. Foreign speculators, accordingly, would buy silver with their currency, send the silver to the United States, and receive dollars. Having no use for dollars, the speculators would obviously demand gold from the United States Treasury for shipment abroad and, once more, make effective the economic laws of not only supply and demand, but that bad money drives out good money. I want to add that, of course, while the Treasury would not authorize shipments of gold except to countries on the gold standard, it must be borne in mind that, for instance, Dutch and French speculators anyway would be keenly alive to their opportunities.

I do not believe anyone anticipates that the actual administration of this measure will increase commodity prices, because it must be obvious that the theory that, by adding silver to our gold reserve, prices will be raised automatically, is false. The administration's experience in manipulating gold prices certainly is sufficient to demonstrate the futility of such operations.

In other words, since this legislation will neither stabilize nor lift prices, nor can increase the earning power of our citizens, the bill seems chiefly to be a subsidy to silver owners and prospective owners, despite any suggestions in the measure apparently designed to prevent silver owners from benefitting directly.

The chief danger, therefore, of this new silver proposal at the moment is psychological, as I see it, in that it contributes to the paralysis of business and financial confidence resulting from doubt about the value of the future dollar, for certainly this proposal interjects into this state of doubt a fresh element of uncertainty as to the nature of the future dollar, as well as uncertainty as to its future value.

The proposed measure, therefore, is simply another and, I think, glaring example of the effort on the part of the administration to increase its general powers in a new field, while the going is good on the one hand, and evidences again, on the other, a step away from any definite national program under bloc pressure.

I am forced, therefore, to the conclusion that the New York World-Telegram has hit the nail on the head when it referred to the present proposal as a political gesture and a dangerous one, and I ask unanimous consent thus, at the conclusion of my remarks, to have printed this editorial and also a recent editorial from the Newark (N.J.) Evening News.

There being no objection, the editorials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York World-Telegram, May 23, 1934]

POLITICAL SILVER—AN EDITORIAL

There won't be many cheers for the President's silver message. It looks like "a political gesture forced by a congressional bloc." That is a dangerous method of determining monetary policy. At best it may add another factor of uncertainty and fear in a business situation which needs confidence and certainty. At worst it could lead to a destructive inflation, in which most citizens, especially working people, would suffer and only speculators would profit.

Insofar as the Roosevelt plan—if such a forced gesture can be given the Roosevelt name—encourages negotiations for international use of silver with gold as a monetary base it is intelligent. There is little reason to doubt that some form of symmetalism, say at the suggested ratio of 75-percent gold and 25-percent silver for reserves, would be a much more workable system than the old gold standard, provided the other major nations would agree to it. But that is the rub. No such agreement is in prospect. And for us alone to attempt such a system, in monetary conflict with the rest of the world, would add to international confusion and might be exceedingly risky here at home.

We believe that the monetary problem is important but not the principal factor in recovery; it is secondary to fundamental economic causes and cures. It is insidious because it relies on dope instead of an operation to cure a surgical case.

The idea that the Government can cure the depression by control and arbitrary manipulation of the price of gold and silver has been disproved by the last 6 months of experiment in this country.

The related idea of the silver extremists that more currency and credit are the key to recovery ignores all the facts. The job is not to get more currency and credit but to put into use that which we have.

The problem is to get that money into the hands of the people—to the farmer in better prices for his products and to the city worker in the form of wages—to restore purchasing power. Already Federal Reserve member banks hold funds on which they can expand credit from an estimated $16,000,000,000 to $24,000,000,000. Many experts fear that our excess credit reserves already have become so vast that a break in the reservoir might carry us into a speculative flood that would destroy us.

James Harvey Rogers, the administration's monetary specialist, testified that the gold devaluation law would create a reserve "the utilization of which constitutes a direct inflationary influence of the first magnitude." Estimates place this theoretically possible expansion as high as $200,000,000,000. Even if the figure is only one-quarter of that, it is dangerously high.

Fortunately the administration to date has done nothing to indicate that it desires to go on any such inflationary debauch.

And that is why most observers believe that the President does not want a larger silver-inflation edict.

Under the circumstances it is to be hoped that the President will insist that the proposed silver plan shall remain discretionary with him rather than mandatory, and that he will not establish a fused silver-gold or symmetallic base unless and until there is the desired international stabilization on that basis. Perhaps that is the intent of the President's not-too-clear message to Congress and of the bill introduced yesterday.

[From the Newark (N.J.) Evening News, May 24, 1934]

TIME FOR FIRMNESS

The President has not enhanced his reputation for firmness by his handling of the silver issue. It may be his action, dictated obviously by political rather than economic considerations, has neatly sidetracked the silver bloc. But he did reverse his earlier stand that no silver legislation was needed at this session. And that fact is not altered by his employment in the message of "ultimate", twice used, "ultimately", and "eventually." These words show he has no intention of being hurried into doing something for silver, but do not hide the fact that he compromised with the silver bloc.

Is this the Roosevelt who, returning from a vacation in southern waters, could not wait to leave the train before saying to his congressional welcomers, "I'm a tough guy!"?

When, rather than face a fight he easily could have won, Mr. Roosevelt withdrew the nomination of the eminently qualified Dr. Thorp to be Chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, he forgot the lessons he said he had learned from the voracious barracuda. The savagery he claimed to have acquired from the sharks was little in evidence when, accused of trying to sway congressional conferees on the stock-exchange bill, he declared he had not meant to do so in expressing a desire to have the Federal Trade Commission do the regulating.

The President's wish, which coincides with the country's, to get Congress away in reasonably good humor as early as possible is entirely understandable. But if early adjournment is to be had at the price of a series of Presidential backings and fillings, then that price is too great to pay.

It may be the President's recent actions conform to a specific line of conduct he has laid out. They would be understandable if they were part of a Napoleonic strategy the President has in mind. No evidence, however, is visible of such a general plan or that each act does not stand by itself. There comes a time when leadership must take a definite position and fight. In the case of Mr. Roosevelt that is inescapable, and the time is near.

Mr. BARBOUR. I thank the Senator from Oklahoma very much; and, as he has suggested, my remarks of course should follow his. I am grateful to the Senator.

Mr. METCALF. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I am glad to yield to the Senator if it be agreeable to the Senate.

Mr. METCALF. Mr. President, during the campaign of 1932 the Democratic candidate for the Presidency said:

Far up in the Northwest, at Butte, I repeated the pledge of the platform, saying: "Sound currency must be maintained at all hazards." In Seattle I reaffirmed my attitude on this question. The thing has been said, therefore, in plain English three times in my speeches. It is stated without qualification in the platform and I have announced my unqualified acceptance of that platform.

During the past 18 months the people of the United States have been hoping for a sound currency. Now comes the silver bill, and in the accompanying message the inflation accomplishments are described as "a long step forward, but only a step."

If anything can contribute to a maladjustment in our currency, it is doubt as to what the value of the dollar will be tomorrow, and not what the value of the dollar is today. We have repudiated our gold contracts and debased the dollar. Now we propose further to dissolve that dollar in a caldron of silver.

Sound money means money with a stable and dependable value. America cannot do business when it does not know what the value of the dollar will be in the near or remote future. Hence, business pauses and lags when inflationary movements are in the air. It will continue to do so until we have a stabilized dollar that will bring confidence. Confidence is the pressing necessity. There is no business man in the country who today has the slightest idea what the true basis of the dollar will be in a day or a year from now.

If this bill is only another step, how can any man have hope for the future investment of his funds? The need is not for more currency. The banks are full of money belonging to depositors. It cannot be loaned until confidence has been returned, whether we treble or quadruple the number of certificates in circulation.

The money tinkerers are engaging in the great game of trial and error. Unfortunately, it is the people who have their savings in life-insurance policies and mortgages and Liberty bonds who will be hurt. At the beginning of the war every bank, every corporation, and every citizen was urged, on the ground of patriotism, to loan to the Government every cent he could find, and accept Liberty bonds. The Government entered into a contract with the people to pay in dollars of a certain gold value. The banks of the country have held these bonds as a safeguard to the money of their depositors. Banks certainly do not hold them to make money for their stockholders.

During the 1932 campaign the cry of the victors was that a government should have a balanced budget, sufficient funds to retire Government obligations, and a sound money system. A balanced budget has not been created, but two budgets have been set up instead, one so topheavy that it already endangers the whole credit of the Nation. Government debts are being repaid by repudiation, and the sound money system which has been promised is as much in the air as ever.

It is my opinion that any maladjustment of the currency is the result of two things: First, the irrational public speculation prior to 1929; and, second, the jigsaw meanderings of the money tinkerers in this administration. The latter seem to think that we can subtract gold from the dollar, pour in an amount of silver, stir up the potion, lock it up in a vault, issue great masses of paper on the strength of it, and the result will be prosperity. The actual effect of this potion will be to throw a heavier fog of doubt over the economic interests of the country. This doubt will be prolonged as long as we continue to tinker with our currency system.

The wage earner suffers from every new inflation scheme. We must all do our best to see that they do not suffer. When we make two dollars out of one, we cannot, by any stretch of the imagination, make them buy twice as much as before. If this could be done, the tinkerers would long ago have created prosperity overnight. Similarly, we cannot expect to do orderly domestic or international business by two standards of value any more than we can make practical two standards of time.

I wonder what is back of this silver bill. Is it a sincere effort to correct a maladjustment of the currency or an effort to correct a maladjustment in the price of silver? Are there speculators in silver who are pushing this bill?

Has the administration discovered that it can maintain the credit of the United States and borrow money for its squanderings only by cheapening the medium with which debts are paid? We are now trying to correct it by further squanderings and lessen the price through the sheer power of the Government to take advantage of its creditors.

Silver is silver, and gold is gold, regardless of how many printing presses may run overtime to expand the dollars they are alleged to represent. A dollar is worth no more than the bread it will buy, and wages are useful only insofar as they provide the necessities of life. When we tinker with these things we are tinkering with something fundamental in our social and economic structure. This we should leave alone, for the doubt which we cast over the country cannot be dispelled until we have done so. This bill is a grant of power rather than a definite and firm move toward currency adjustment, and the use of power to tamper with the currency will depend upon the unreliable whims of the "brain trusters." Even if the powers granted to the Executive are not exercised, the very presence of these powers in an administration constantly vacillating in its policies will try to the breaking point the very nerves of our whole industrial system.

The time has come to call a halt, both in the matter of tinkering with our money and in the matter of squandering it; and what is most important, we should cease our moves toward giving almost absolute power to the Executive, as he should be charged only with the administration of the acts of Congress. How can Senators who have opposed the abdication of legislative power vote for another bill which takes away a little more congressional responsibility?

I thank the Senator from Oklahoma for yielding to me.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. RUSSELL in the chair). The Senator from Oklahoma has the floor.

Mr. LONG. Will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I shall be glad to conform to the wish of the Senate. I desire to complete my remarks so that they will appear in somewhat connected form. If these addresses will appear in the RECORD after I finish my remarks, I have no objection, if it is agreeable to the Senate, to yielding in order to accommodate the Senator.

Mr. MCCARRAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Costigan	Kean	Reynolds
Ashurst	Couzens	Keyes	Robinson, Ark.
Austin	Cutting	King	Russell
Bachman	Davis	La Follette	Schall
Bailey	Dickinson	Lewis	Sheppard
Bankhead	Dieterich	Logan	Shipstead
Barbour	Dill	Lonergan	Smith
Barkley	Duffy	Long	Steiwer
Black	Erickson	McCarran	Stephens
Bone	Fess	McGill	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Fletcher	McKellar	Thomas, Utah
Brown	Frazier	McNary	Thompson
Bulkley	George	Metcalf	Townsend
Bulow	Gibson	Murphy	Tydings
Byrd	Glass	Neely	Vandenberg
Byrnes	Goldsborough	Norbeck	Van Nuys
Capper	Gore	Norris	Wagner
Caraway	Hale	Nye	Walcott
Carey	Harrison	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Clark	Hatch	Overton	Wheeler
Connally	Hatfield	Patterson	White
Coolidge	Hayden	Pittman
Johnson	Copeland	Pope

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Ninety Senators having answered to their names, there is a quorum present.

THE NEW DEAL

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield to enable me to make a very brief statement and to have an article printed in the RECORD?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. With the same understanding as in the case of the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR], I am glad to yield to the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. HATFIELD. I thank the Senator. Mr. President, one of the outstanding newspaper publishers of our country, a successful business man, interested in many industrial activities, one who employs by preference organized labor in all his plants, the Honorable H. C. Ogden, of my State of West Virginia, has recently made and published in the Wheeling Intelligencer of May 23, 1934, an analysis of new-deal legislation, which I ask to have inserted in the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Wheeling Intelligencer, May 23, 1934]

WHAT THE NEW DEAL HAS DONE FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

The time has come, in the judgment of this newspaper, to speak plainly about public affairs in the United States. No good purpose is to be served by refusing to look the facts in the face. Nothing is to be gained by clinging to blind faith in a promise.

Fifteen months ago the new deal was introduced to the American people. It was the agency which was to lead us out of the valley of depression. It was to be all things to all men in a material way. It was to solve our every economic problem.

What are the accomplishments as weighed against these glittering promises?

The new deal has been an uninterrupted record of experiment, of grabbing at every nostrum promising some partisan political advantage or some artificial, fleeting relief from business depression.

First, there was the N.R.A. itself, loudly heralded as the means of returning 4,000,000 idle men to regular employment. The National Recovery Act and its ambitious program were accepted by the American people as nothing had been accepted since the Liberty Loan efforts. Due to the intense campaign of propaganda, which surpassed any undertaking of its kind in the history of the Nation, and the naturally receptive frame of the public mind, the Recovery Act was given unparalleled public support. It was embraced by many who doubted its efficacy but who hoped for the best and who were willing to try anything. The N.R.A. failed miserably. It is questionable if any considerable number of men were returned to regular employment at all through its operations. Indeed, there is evidence to support the belief that it actually retarded reemployment. It created fear and uncertainty among employers, stirred up employee strife, and resulted in a greater loss of time and money through labor troubles than any other agency ever set in motion by the Government of the United States.

Moreover, it has established a great army of officeholders, living off the public, and extending its tentacles into every State, every county, and every community in the land. The N.R.A. alone is responsible for a public pay roll—in addition to the regular pay roll—representing a greater cash outlay than that required for both Houses of Congress, all their attachés, and the entire Department of Justice. Finally, it has proven a depressing and disheartening influence upon small business enterprise, has strengthened the hand of monopoly, and has increased the cost of living.

Next came the A.A.A. Here was an agency that promised to raise the farm price of agricultural commodities without increasing the consumer cost. Starting out thus with an absurd assignment, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration at once began taking absurd steps to reach the goal. The slaughter of millions of marketable hogs and of more millions of unborn pigs; the ploughing under of 10,000,000 acres of cotton; the rental of millions of acres of wheat and corn land for the purpose of curtailing production and thus increasing prices will stand, undoubtedly, as the great governmental folly of history. This deliberate and costly restriction of agricultural output on the theory that a country can grow rich and prosperous by failure or refusal to produce wealth has no parallel in the annals of this or of any other land. On the absurdity of this proposition, we can do no better than quote from Representative BUSBY, of Mississippi:

"If destruction makes prosperity, there was enough property destroyed in the World War to bring prosperity to all nations for a generation to come."

A kindred folly was the C.W.A. Brought into being in recognition of the failure of the N.R.A., the Civil Works Administration was set up for the frank purpose of creating, of manufacturing, employment. The N.R.A. failed to return men to the normal pursuits of life, so the Government set about the manufacture of work. The vast sum of more than $3,000,000,000 was spent by this agency in 4 months' time in the hopeless enterprise of compelling business revival.

For the first time in history, the Federal Government became the guardian of the people, not only against the operation of economic laws, but against their own folly as well. It is only necessary to remember back to the winters of 1932 and 1933, before the days of the C.W.A., before acceptance of the theory that direct relief work is the business of the Government, to realize that this great waste was wholly unnecessary. We know now that no man, woman, or child starved. Local relief agencies, private contributions, met the situation then as they always had met it before. Every need was filled. Food and shelter and clothing were furnished those who were without them, without one dollar of Federal money having been spent in the endeavor. Why, then, the necessity of dumping $3,000,000,000 of public money into direct relief work in 1934? Why the gigantic fiction of pretending the "projects" in which C.W.A. workers were employed were necessary public improvements?

The operation of the Civil Works Administration represented the most extravagant spending spree of its kind in the world's history. It created in this country a vast army of dependents, each educated to the theory that it is the duty of the Government to provide a living for him, whether or not he does anything to earn a living for himself. And worst of all, perhaps, it destroyed the system of local charity built up in this country during the past 50 years. When all this folly is of the past, when people inevitably return to a realization that the Government can't do what they have been led to expect of it, we will have to start all over again building up our private relief agencies. In the meantime, many unfortunates actually needing and meriting assistance will undoubtedly be overlooked.

In October of last year, President Roosevelt in a radio address, announced the administration's program for debasement of the dollar. And in due time, the gold value of the dollar was fixed at 59.6 cents, as compared with the 100-cent value of the old dollar. The justification for this breach of public faith was the expectation that it would increase prices, farm prices in particular, and thus hasten recovery.

We have had 7 months of the debased dollar now, and the only increase in farm prices has been that brought about by the drought. Before drought damage or threat appeared, on March 1, for example, wheat, corn, potatoes, and cattle sold at lower figures than the prices prevailing on the day dollar debasement was announced. The failure of the cheapened dollar to produce the desired results has been one of the greatest tragedies of the President's program.

The banking record presents another interesting field of inquiry. The other day J. F. P. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, publicly proclaimed the glad tidings that no bank had failed in the United States since the opening of 1934. This was stated with great pride, as proof of the soundness of the Roosevelt program.

While it is not true that there have been no bank failures since January 1, grant that there have not been so many as during the same period in 1933. Why is this so? In the first place, 20 or 30 percent of the banking facilities of the country remain closed and have been closed since the bank holiday. Many banks have found it impossible to meet the requirements for reopening set up by the Government and have been compelled, therefore, to deny depositors their money, to withhold from their communities the banking service they ordinarily would perform. In this immediate neighborhood, Moundsville has 2 banks still closed and 2 others but lately relieved of restrictions. In Wellsburg one of the most important banks is closed. In Fairmont 2 banks, representing previous consolidations of 6 banks, are closed, with only 1 functioning in the community.

With the banking structure of the Nation reduced perhaps to 70 percent of its former size, it is not strange that the remaining banks, those strong enough to have weathered the storm, manage to keep open. But even these are operating merely as places for the retention of money. They are operating because they have in substance abdicated the legitimate function of banks, which is to assemble the funds of a community and loan these funds out for the conduct of business. They have the funds, but under existing conditions banks refuse to place them in normal circulation. Business conditions today are such that no banker dares grant a long-term loan, dares make a commitment for more than 90 days, or at the outside limit 6 months. No business man—with rare exceptions—can go to his bank and make a loan that does not contemplate repayment within 6 months. Banking, in other words, is a hand-to-mouth enterprise. No wonder the building of homes, the improvement and expansion of industrial plants, have practically ceased in this country.

The list of failures, of wild experimentation, might be carried on indefinitely. There are, for example, such enterprises as that at Reedsville, W.Va., where complete villages are being built by the Government and factory work created, for the purpose of settling idle miners and others in so-called "subsistence homesteads."

There is the Tennessee Valley enterprise, where the Government not only contemplates production of electricity on a gigantic scale—perhaps a worthy endeavor in itself—but envisions a stupendous development, with thousands of families actually transplanted into new and vastly improved territory at public expense.

There is the elaborate and puzzling invasion by the Government of the field of private financing. The various "administrations" having failed to restore employment and stimulate business, the wildness of the recovery program having prostrated banking, frightened business, and stagnated the vital permanent-goods industries, the Government now proposes to force the stimulation of home building. An elaborate housing program, "designed to put men to work, and to improve social and economic conditions", is in the making. It proposes that the Government guarantee loans up to 20 percent of their value, these to be made by private capital for the purpose of building homes and making repairs to homes.

There is the threat to American industry and American living standards contained in the reckless proposal to trade our home market for a chance to sell more goods abroad.

There is the disturbing influence of increasing invasion by the Government of fields of private enterprise.

There is the destructive effect of the whole program of price and wage and hour fixing.

There is the renewed tampering with silver to further unsettle the money situation.

Above all of this looms the depressing cloud of debt, which grows larger and hangs lower every day. In this wild enterprise to spend the country back to prosperity, the administration is rolling up the greatest debt in either the war-time or peace-time history of the Nation. During the fiscal year now drawing to a close, approximately $9,500,000,000 will have been spent, only 3 billions of which represent ordinary governmental expenditures. To meet this, the Government will have collected approximately $3,250,000,000, leaving a deficit of more than $7,000,000,000. Next year, in addition to a general expense outlay of $4,000,000,000, it already is proposed to spend $2,000,000,000 for relief—a figure which almost certainly will be increased substantially. So that, even if next year's spending does not exceed the early estimate, this country will wind up its fiscal affairs on June 30, 1935, with a public debt of $31,834,000,000, which will exceed by $7,000,000,000 the peak of the war debt in 1920.

When it is borne in mind that England, Canada, and other countries are farther along the road back to prosperity than we are; when it is realized that this vast enterprise known as the "new deal" is both retarding recovery and undermining our economic and governmental structure, isn't it apparent that the time has come when the American people must call a halt?

Mr. HATFIELD. In the editorial Mr. Ogden deals very intelligently and very practically with the resultant effects of the new-deal legislation. In the editorial Mr. Ogden proves that this un-American legislation is not helping, but has, in fact, retarded our recovery from the depression.

Mr. Ogden points out that the debasement of the gold dollar which was supposed to increase the price of farm commodities, constituted a breach of public faith and at the same time resulted in a depreciation, or a reduction, of the purchasing power of all those gainfully employed without increasing the price of farm commodities, as many were led to believe would happen.

Mr. President, I commend the contents of this editorial to those Members of the Senate who desire to obtain a brief, impartial survey of the new-deal legislation. I have no hesitancy in saying that if the Congress of the United States were to listen to the advice of men like H. C. Ogden, who has made a success of business without exploiting labor, we would have enacted legislation of a type which would have placed the American people in a much better industrial, agricultural, and financial position than we enjoy at the present time.

THE CHACO

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield to me?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

[Mr. LONG addressed the Senate on conditions in the Chaco. His speech is published on p. 10808.]

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bill and joint resolution, and they were signed by the President pro tempore:

H.R. 9322. An act to provide for the establishment, operation, and maintenance of foreign-trade zones in ports of entry of the United States, to expedite and encourage foreign commerce, and for other purposes; and

H.J.Res. 352. Joint resolution to provide funds to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate with States in control of chinch bugs.

After the conclusion of the speech of Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma,

RETIREMENT OF RAILROAD EMPLOYEES—NOTICE OF MOTION

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I give notice that at the conclusion of the consideration of the pending bill, I shall move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 3231) to provide a retirement system for railroad employees, to provide unemployment relief, and for other purposes.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, in order to meet some official engagements it is necessary for me to leave the Senate Chamber in a few minutes. I desire to have an executive session in order that a motion may be made to discharge a committee from the consideration of a nomination.

I therefore move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. KING. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BANKHEAD in the chair). The Senator will state it.

Mr. KING. I really wish to propound an inquiry to the Senator from Arkansas. Will the Senator call for a quorum?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I do not intend to call for a quorum.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from Arkansas simply desires to enter a motion.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I intend to make a motion. Of course, Senators well understand that a single objection to considering the motion on this day will carry it over, and I have been informed that an objection will be made to proceeding with the motion. I desire to make the motion now, and then if some Senator objects, under the rule it will go over.

Mr. McNARY. Then I suggest that no quorum is needed.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. That is why I am not suggesting the absence of a quorum. Of course, if the Senator from Utah desires to call for a quorum, he may do so.

Mr. KING. I have no desire to do that, but I think that when the matter is taken up for consideration there ought to be a quorum present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Arkansas that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. DIETERICH, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the following nominations:

Fred A. Isgrig, of Arkansas, to be United States attorney, eastern district of Arkansas, to succeed Wallace Townsend, whose term expires June 9, 1934; and

Virgil Pettie, of Arkansas, to be United States marshal, eastern district of Arkansas, to succeed George L. Mallory, whose term expires June 9, 1934.

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reports will be placed on the calendar.

If there be no further reports of committees, the calendar is in order.

THE CALENDAR—TREATIES

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I suggest that the treaties go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the treaties will be passed over.

THE JUDICIARY

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of E. P. Carville to be United States attorney for the district of Nevada.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of John Ward Studebaker, of Iowa, to be Commissioner of Education.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I understand that heretofore the Senator from Iowa [Mr. MURPHY] has objected to this nomination, and wishes to discuss it.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I had not been advised of that.

Mr. CLARK. I have no further information about the matter. I suggest that, in the absence of the Senator from Iowa, it be passed over.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I think that is proper. Let the nomination go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination will be passed over.

POSTMASTERS

The Chief Clerk read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I ask that the nominations of postmasters be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc. That completes the calendar.

NOMINATION OF REXFORD G. TUGWELL—MOTION TO DISCHARGE

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I move that the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry be discharged from the further consideration of the nomination of Mr. Rexford G. Tugwell to be Under Secretary of Agriculture. I am ready to proceed with the motion if there is no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I am advised that a number of Members of the Senate desire that this matter go over under the rule. Therefore I shall object to the consideration of the motion at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made, and the motion will go over, under the rule.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I concede that under the rule the motion must go over for the day.

I move that the Senate return to the consideration of legislative business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate resumed the consideration of legislative business.

MONETARY USE AND PURCHASE OF SILVER

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H.R. 9745) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase silver, issue silver certificates, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS].

Mr. FESS addressed the Senate. After having spoken for an hour, the following occurred:

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, the leader on the other side, the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY], has suggested that perhaps the Senator from Ohio would prefer to go on tomorrow morning.

Mr. FESS. I should very much prefer that course, if it be agreeable.

[Mr. FESS yielded the floor for the day. His speech will be published entire after it shall have been concluded.]

GOVERNMENT CONTRACTORS

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House bill 9002. It is a bill introduced at the request of the Treasury Department. Some amendments have been proposed by the Senate committee. The bill has been approved as to procedure by the General Accounting Office.

The purpose of the bill is to take care of the increased cost of labor and material made necessary to persons having contracts with the Government when they accepted the N.R.A. code. It is approved unanimously by the Judiciary Committee.

The reason why I am now asking for consideration of the bill out of order, which is something I rarely do, is that I am receiving hundreds of letters and telegrams every day concerning the bill, and I wish to remove that burden. I mentioned the matter yesterday to the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY] and also to the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON]. I think the bill will call for no debate.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I am sorry to inform the Senator from Kentucky that two or three Senators with whom I discussed the bill said they would like to look into it, and asked that it be postponed for a day or two.

Mr. LOGAN. Very well.

Mr. McNARY. Under those conditions I think we would save time if we should wait until we have the next call of the calendar, which will be on Saturday of this week, or the first of next week.

Mr. LOGAN. The reason why I asked unanimous consent to have the bill taken up at this time is that a great many letters and telegrams are being received about it, and I should like very much to get it out of the way. However, I shall ask to have the bill called up later.

MONETARY USE AND PURCHASE OF SILVER

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H.R. 9745) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase silver, issue silver certificates, and for other purposes.

RECESS

Mr. PITTMAN. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 32 minutes p.m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Friday, June 8, 1934, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate June 7 (legislative day of June 6), 1934

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY

E. P. Carville to be United States attorney, district of Nevada.

POSTMASTERS

ARKANSAS

Fred W. Lemay, Alicia.
Earl T. Estes, Calico Rock.
Wyeth S. Daniel, Marshall.
Henry M. Landers, Murfreesboro.
Paul Janes, Ravenden.
Jesse T. Howard, Smithville.

COLORADO

Carl E. Wagner, Fort Morgan.

CONNECTICUT

Charles F. Schaefer, Greens Farms.

FLORIDA

Sidney E. Livingston, Homestead.
James L. Richbourg, Laurelhill.

IDAHO

Angus G. David, Bovill.

IOWA

Hans E. Eiel, Buffalo Center.

MASSACHUSETTS

Dominick F. Corrigan, Fall River.
John E. Harrington, North Chelmsford.

MISSISSIPPI

Ida F. Thompson, Dlo.
Ida E. Ormond, Forest.
Virginia B. Duckworth, Prentiss.

NEW JERSEY

Frank Tilton, Avon by the Sea.
Robert H. McKinney, Barrington.
John P. Euler, Belford.
Daniel T. Hagans, Blackwood.
James D. Magee, Bordentown.
Ethel H. McDonald, Englishtown.
Edwin Case, Flemington.
Martin E. Carroll, Lawrenceville.
Carl M. Hermann, Milltown.
Francis S. Doyle, New Lisbon.
Joseph J. McNally, Park Ridge.
William T. Johnson, Point Pleasant.
Dominic Soriano, Raritan.
S. Dana Ely, Rutherford.
Andrew D. Wilson, Stockton.
Thomas Whittington, Sea Isle City.
Franke Carter, Tenafly.
Helen S. Elbert, Vincentown.

NEW MEXICO

Perla E. Darbyshire, Anthony.
Helen M. Sears, Capitan.
Dolores I. Lujan, Des Moines.
J. Robert McNeil, Dexter.
Dominic Rollie, Gallup.
George T. Meyers, Hillsboro.
Eugene Montague, Lordsburg.
Hezekiah Hall, Magdalena.
Rosalie Branch, Mora.
Canuto Gonzales, Roy.
Hayden L. Greene, Santa Rita.

NORTH CAROLINA

Wiley G. Hartzog, Boone.
John R. Hughes, Madison.
Karl M. Cook, Mount Pleasant.

OKLAHOMA

Elmer C. Croom, Okmulgee.

PUERTO RICO

America R. de Graciani, Ensenada

WISCONSIN

John F. Loschky, Arpin.
Dominic W. Riley, Baldwin.
George Heiderer, Butternut.
Alfa Ruth Anderson, Colfax.
Anna Loftus, De Soto.
Henry J. Gramling, Jr., Dousman.
Walter H. Emanuel, Fairchild.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, JUNE 7, 1934

(Legislative day of Monday, June 4, 1934)

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker at 11 o'clock a.m.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 311. An act for the relief of Martin Henry Waterman, deceased;

H.R. 1405. An act for the relief of the Yosemite Lumber Co.;

H.R. 2035. An act for the relief of Jennie Bruce Gallahan;

H.R. 2287. An act for the relief of Warren Burke;

H.R. 2692. An act for the relief of Lula A. Densmore;

H.R. 2748. An act for the relief of A. C. Francis;

H.R. 2749. An act for the relief of E. B. Rose;

H.R. 3167. An act for the relief of Sue Hall Erwin;

H.R. 3214. An act to compensate the Post Office Department for the extra work caused by the payment of money orders at offices other than those on which the orders are drawn;

H.R. 3353. An act to provide a preliminary examination of Stillaguamish River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of its floods;

H.R. 3354. An act to provide a preliminary examination of Snohomish River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of its floods;

H.R. 3362. An act to provide a preliminary examination of the Nooksack River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of its floods;

H.R. 3363. An act to provide a preliminary examination of Skagit River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of its flood;

H.R. 3423. An act for the relief of Benjamin Wright, deceased;

H.R. 3768. An act to change the name of the retail liquor dealers' stamp tax in the case of retail drug stores or pharmacies;

H.R. 3992. An act for the relief of C. A. Betz;

H.R. 4272. An act for the relief of Annie Moran;

H.R. 4541. An act for the relief of George Dacas;

H.R. 4932. An act for the relief of Judd W. Hulbert;

H.R. 4962. An act for the relief of Joseph B. Lynch;

H.R. 5175. An act to provide a preliminary examination of the Green River, Wash., with a view to the control of its floods;

H.R. 5312. An act to provide for the conveyance of the abandoned lighthouse reservation and buildings, including detached tower, situate within the city limits of Erie, Pa., to the city for public-park purposes;

H.R. 5334. An act to amend the third clause of section 14 of the act of March 3, 1879 (20 Stat. 359; U.S.C., title 39, sec. 226);

H.R. 5522. An act to amend the Standard Baskets Act of August 31, 1916, to provide for a 1-pound Climax basket for mushrooms;

H.R. 5597. An act to afford permanent protection to the watershed and water supply of the city of Coquille, Coos County, Oreg.;

H.R. 5636. An act for the relief of Jose Ramon Cordova;

H.R. 5665. An act authorizing the control of floods in the Salmon River, Alaska;

H.R. 5780. An act for the relief of Lt. H. W. Taylor, United States Navy;

H.R. 5823. An act to authorize the purchase by the city of McMinnville, Oreg., of certain tracts of public lands and certain tracts revested in the United States under the act of June 9, 1916 (39 Stat. 218);

H.R. 5935. An act for the relief of Oscar P. Cox;

H.R. 6246. An act granting 6 months' pay to Annie Bruce;

H.R. 6675. An act to authorize the acknowledgment of oaths by post-office inspectors and by chief clerks of the Railway Mail Service;

H.R. 6847. An act providing for the acquisition of additional lands for the naval air station at Hampton Roads Naval Operating Base, Norfolk, Va.;

H.R. 6890. An act for the relief of Mrs. Pleasant Lawrence Parr;

H.R. 7028. An act for the relief of Mrs. Joseph Roncoli;

H.R. 7082. An act validating certain conveyances heretofore made by Central Pacific Railway Co., a corporation, and its lessee, Southern Pacific Co., a corporation, involving certain portions of right-of-way, in and in the vicinity of the city of Lodi, and near the station of Acampo, and in the city of Tracy, all in the county of San Joaquin, State of California, and in or in the vicinity of Galt, and Polk, in the county of Sacramento, State of California, acquired by Central Pacific Railway Co. under the act of Congress approved July 1, 1862 (12 Stat.L. 489), as amended by the act of Congress approved July 2, 1864 (13 Stat.L. 356);

H.R. 7098. An act validating certain conveyances heretofore made by Central Pacific Railway Co., a corporation, and its lessee, Southern Pacific Co., a corporation, involving certain portions of right-of-way in and in the vicinity of the town of Gridley, all in the county of Butte, State of California, acquired by Central Pacific Railway Co. under the act of Congress approved July 25, 1866 (14 Stat.L. 239);

H.R. 7185. An act to authorize the purchase by the city of Forest Grove, Oreg., of certain tracts of public lands and certain tracts revested in the United States under the act of June 9, 1916 (39 Stat. 218);

H.R. 7213. An act to provide hourly rates of pay for substitute laborers in the Railway Mail Service and time credits when appointed as regular laborer;

H.R. 7299. An act to authorize the Post Office Department to hold contractors responsible in damages for the loss, rifling, damage, wrong delivery, depredation upon, or other mistreatment of mail matter due to fault or negligence of the contractor or an agent or employee thereof;

H.R. 7317. An act to provide for the final construction, on behalf of the United States, of postal treaties or conventions to which the United States is a party;

H.R. 7340. An act to authorize the Post Office Department to hold contractors or carriers transporting the mails by air or water on routes extending beyond the borders of the United States responsible in damages for the loss, rifling, damage, wrong delivery, depredations upon, or other mistreatment of mail matter due to fault or negligence of the contractor or carrier, or an agent or employee thereof;

H.R. 7360. An act to establish a minimum area for the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, and for other purposes;

H.R. 7367. An act for the relief of Sarah Smolen;

H.R. 7653. An act to authorize the establishment of the Ocmulgee National Monument in Bibb County, Ga.;

H.R. 7711. An act to permit postmasters to act as disbursing officers for the payment of traveling expenses of officers and employees of the Postal Service;

H.R. 7759. An act to amend the law relating to timber operations on the Menominee Indian Reservation in Wisconsin;

H.R. 8234. An act to provide a preliminary examination of the Paint Rock River in Jackson County, Ala., with a view to the control of its floods;

H.R. 8541. An act to provide for the enrollment of members of the Menominee Indian Tribe of the State of Wisconsin;

H.R. 8562. An act to provide for a preliminary examination of the Connecticut River, with a view to the control of its floods and prevention of erosion of its banks in the State of Massachusetts;

H.R. 8779. An act to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to adjust claims to so-called "Olmstead lands" in the State of North Carolina;

H.R. 8927. An act to define the exterior boundaries of the Navajo Indian Reservation in Arizona, and for other purposes;

H.R. 9064. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of Indiana to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Grand Calumet River near Clark Street, in Gary, Ind.;

H.R. 9141. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of Alabama, its agent or agencies, and to Colbert County and to Lauderdale County in the State of Alabama, and to the city of Sheffield, Colbert County, Ala., and to the city of Florence, Lauderdale County, Ala., or to any two of them, or to either of them, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge, and approaches thereto, across the Tennessee River at a point between the city of Sheffield, Ala., and the city of Florence, Ala., suitable to the interests of navigation;

H.R. 9180. An act relating to the incorporation of Columbus University of Washington, D.C., organized under and by virtue of a certificate of incorporation pursuant to the incorporation laws of the District of Columbia as provided in subchapter 1 of chapter 18 of the Code of Laws of the District of Columbia;

H.R. 9313. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Savannah River at or near Burtons Ferry, near Sylvania, Ga.;

H.R. 9320. An act to further extend the times for commencement and completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Garrison, N.Dak.;

H.R. 9392. An act to reclassify terminal railway post offices;

H.R. 9400. An act to exempt from taxation certain property of the American Legion in the District of Columbia;

H.R. 9430. An act to provide a preliminary examination of the Cowlitz River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of its floods;

H.R. 9431. An act to provide for a preliminary examination of Chehalis River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of its floods;

H.R. 9432. An act to provide a preliminary examination of the Lewis River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of its floods;

H.R. 9433. An act to provide a preliminary examination of Columbia River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of its flood waters;

H.R. 9434. An act granting the consent of Congress for the construction of a dike or dam across the head of Camas Slough (Washougal Slough) to Lady Island on the Columbia River in the State of Washington;

H.R. 9567. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Brownville, Nebr.;

H.R. 9585. An act authorizing the city of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the St. Mary's River at or near Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.;

H.R. 9694. An act to amend the Emergency Railroad Transportation Act, 1933, approved June 16, 1933;

H.J.Res. 340. Joint resolution to harmonize the treaties and statutes of the United States with reference to American Samoa; and

H.J.Res. 352. Joint resolution to provide funds to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate with States in control of chinch bugs.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, bills of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 7212. An act to remove the limitation upon the extension of star routes;

H.R. 7301. An act to authorize the Postmaster General to charge an additional fee for effecting delivery of domestic registered, insured, or collect-on-delivery mail, the delivery of which is restricted to the addressee only, or to the addressee or order;

H.R. 7437. An act for the relief of E. C. West;

H.R. 7922. An act authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to dispose of a portion of the Yaquina Bay Lighthouse Reservaton, Oreg.;

H.R. 8525. An act to amend the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act to permit the issuance of retailers' licenses of classes A and B in residential districts;

H.R. 9123. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to lend War Department equipment for use at the Sixteenth National Convention of the American Legion at Miami, Fla., during the month of October 1934; and

H.R. 9526. An act authorizing the city of Port Arthur, Tex., or any commission designated by it, and its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge over Lake Sabine at or near Port Arthur, Tex.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 74. An act to authorize payment of expenses of formulating claims of the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache Indians of Oklahoma against the United States, and for other purposes;

S. 171. An act for the relief of certain purchasers of lands in the Borough of Brooklawn, State of New Jersey;

S. 339. An act for the refundment of certain countervailing customs duties collected upon logs imported from British Columbia;

S. 418. An act for the relief of William H. Connors, alias John H. Connors, alias Michael W. H. Connors;

S. 504. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to make a long-term contract for the supply of water to the United States naval station at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba;

S. 527. An act for the relief of Lillian Morden;

S. 568. An act for the relief of Winifred Meagher;

S. 605. An act authorizing national banks to establish branches in certain cases;

S. 762. An act for the relief of Teresa de Prevost;

S. 771. An act for the relief of James Darcy, alias James Hurley;

S. 829. An act for the relief of Denis Healy;

S. 1137. An act for the relief of Ruth J. Barnes;

S. 1146. An act for the relief of John W. Beck;

S. 1177. An act for the relief of Edward T. Costello;

S. 1386. An act to provide for a preliminary examination of Nisqually River and its tributaries in the State of Washington, with a view to the control of their floods;

S. 1510. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to adjust water-right charges, to grant other relief on the Federal irrigation projects, and for other purposes", approved May 25, 1926, with respect to certain lands in the Langell Valley irrigation district;

S. 1707. An act for the relief of Carlos C. Bedsole;

S. 1792. An act for the relief of Claude C. Martin;

S. 1836. An act for the relief of John W. Schell, deceased;

S. 1895. An act for the relief of C. B. Dickinson;

S. 1948. An act amending the act entitled "An act authorizing the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment in the civilization fund claim of the Osage Nation of Indians against the United States", approved February 6, 1921 (41 Stat. 1097);

S. 2010. An act to provide for the establishment of a Coast Guard station on the coast of Georgia, at or near Sea Island Beach;

S. 2074. An act for the relief of James R. Mansfield;

S. 2255. An act to regulate the defense of alibi in criminal cases;

S. 2333. An act for the relief of John J. Moran;

S. 2336. An act for the relief of the estate of Mrs. Donnie Wright, deceased;

S. 2343. An act for the relief of Herbert E. Matthews;

S. 2454. An act for the relief of Arthur W. Adams;

S. 2462. An act relating to loans by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in connection with agricultural improvement projects;

S. 2501. An act for the relief of Dr. R. N. Harwood;

S. 2531. An act to define the exterior boundaries of the Navajo Indian Reservation in New Mexico, and for other purposes;

S. 2557. An act to investigate the claims of and to enroll certain persons, if entitled, with the Omaha Tribe of Indians;

S. 2581. An act for the relief of Charles H. Willett;

S. 2613. An act for the relief of Jewell Maness;

S. 2673. An act for the relief of Carl Lindow, alias Carl Lindo, deceased;

S. 2802. An act for the relief of Ed Symes and wife, Elizabeth Symes, and certain other citizens of the State of Texas;

S. 2836. An act to amend the Mining Act of May 10, 1872, as amended;

S. 2892. An act to amend existing laws prohibiting the introduction of intoxicating liquors within the Indian country to permit its use as a medicine by practicing physicians for patients of Indian blood;

S. 2896. An act for the relief of James W. Carmichael, deceased;

S. 2987. An act to restore homestead rights in certain cases;

S. 3017. An act for the relief of Edwin C. Jenney, receiver of the First National Bank of Newton, Mass.;

S. 3113. An act to add certain lands to the Malheur National Forest in the State of Oregon;

S. 3116. An act to amend sections 3 and 4 of the act of July 3, 1930, entitled "An act for the rehabilitation of the Bitter Root irrigation project, Montana";

S. 3122. An act for the relief of H. N. Wilcox;

S. 3160. An act for the relief of Charles E. Secord;

S. 3199. An act for the relief of Thomas A. Coyne;

S. 3237. An act to repeal certain provisions of the act of March 4, 1933, and to reenact sections 4 and 5 of the act of March 2, 1929;

S. 3261. An act to permit the step-children of certain officers and employees of the United States to be admitted to the public schools of the District of Columbia without payment of tuition;

S. 3375. An act to provide for the distribution of power revenues on Federal reclamation projects, and for other purposes;

S. 3394. An act for the relief of the Grier-Lowrance Construction Co.;

S. 3415. An act authorizing the State of Michigan, by and through the Mackinac Straits Bridge Authority, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge or series of bridges across the Straits of Mackinac at or near a point between St. Ignace, Mich., and the Lower Peninsula of Michigan;

S. 3419. An act to exempt articles of machinery belting from the tax on floor stocks imposed by the Agricultural Adjustment Act;

S. 3431. An act authorizing a preliminary examination of the lower Columbia River, with a view to the controlling of floods;

S. 3459. An act to exempt from taxation certain property of the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War in the District of Columbia;

S. 3463. An act to authorize the addition of certain names to the final rolls of the Blackfeet Tribe of Indians in the State of Montana;

S. 3479. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to regulate the practice of the healing art to protect the public health in the District of Columbia", approved February 27, 1929;

S. 3499. An act for the relief of Michael Ilitz;

S. 3521. An act to facilitate purchases of forest lands under the act approved March 1, 1911;

S. 3540. An act to amend section 32 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933;

S. 3541. An act to authorize production credit associations to make loans to oyster planters;

S. 3568. An act to amend section 824 of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia;

S. 3569. An act to provide for the acquisition of land in the District of Columbia in excess of that required for public projects and improvements, and for other purposes;

S. 3584. An act to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes;

S. 3594. An act for the relief of the heirs of Burton S. Adams, deceased;

S. 3604. An act to revive and reenact the act entitled "An act to authorize the Bainbridge Island Chamber of Commerce, a corporation, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across Agate Pass connecting Bainbridge Island with the mainland in Kitsap County, State of Washington", approved March 2, 1929;

S. 3615. An act authorizing the county of Wahkiakum, a legal political subdivision of the State of Washington, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Columbia River between Puget Island and the mainland, Cathlamet, State of Washington;

S. 3626. An act referring the claims of the Turtle Mountain Band or bands of Chippewa Indians of North Dakota to the Court of Claims for adjudication and settlement;

S. 3640. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Tensas Basin Levee Board of the State of Louisiana to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across Bayou Bartholomew at or near its mouth in Morehouse Parish, La.;

S. 3656. An act for the relief of Robert N. Stockton; and

S. 3657. An act authorizing the construction of a dam on the San Pedro River, Ariz.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 9322) entitled "An act to provide for the establishment, operation, and maintenance of foreign-trade zones in ports of entry of the United States, to expedite and encourage foreign commerce, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1358) entitled "An act to provide for the improvement of approaches to the National Cemetery and the Confederate Cemetery, at Fayetteville, Ark."

COMMITTEE ON ACCOUNTS

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Accounts may be permitted to sit today during the session of the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

PROCESSING TAX ON HOGS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes in reference to the pending bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Committee on Agriculture, may I say a word with reference to the pending bill upon which we are about to vote?

On February 1 I introduced a bill to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act so as to exempt the farmer or the hog producer from the processing tax on pork products up to the amount of 2,000 pounds. This bill was before the Committee on Agriculture of which I was the chairman of the subcommittee. The subcommittee conducted hearings, and I went to the Department of Agriculture a number of times and talked to Dr. Black, Mr. Davis, and others with reference to raising the poundage allowed the farmers from 300 to 2,000 pounds. There is not any doubt about the attitude of the Committee on Agriculture. I think practically 100 percent of the committee favor a bill to exempt up to 2,000 pounds. It was unanimously recommended by my subcommittee, and after the subcommittee made its report the chairman of our committee, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES], in whom we all have the very greatest confidence and who is anxious to cooperate with the Department, suggested that some of us interview Department officials with reference to having an increased allowance over the 300 pounds which they at present exempt.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 additional minute?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, this amendment as proposed by the distinguished gentleman from the State of New York should have our endorsement. It has the approval of the Committee on Agriculture, and I know of no reason why we should not give the farmer this exemption of 2,000 pounds. The bill as proposed, unamended, means nothing to the farmer. If we only exempt 800 pounds, the hog will dress off 40 percent from the gross to net, and you have only given him a raise of 200 pounds. In my judgment, this amendment should be adopted. It is nothing more or less than a nuisance tax the way it is being administered.

It will not seriously affect the administration of the A.A.A. and will afford great relief to the small farmers throughout the Nation who raise pork for their own use and sell from time to time hogs on the market. This exemption should be granted, as it will relieve the Department of the collection of many small items of tax and, above all, will exempt the farmer from the tax and greatly relieve his already embarrassed financial condition.

I hope all the real friends of the farmers will support this bill and send it to the opposite side of the Capitol, where I hope it will meet with approval. The farmers in my congressional district seriously object to the payment of this tax, and I am anxious to see them relieved of having it longer imposed. The farmers throughout the United States will approve our action in the passage of this measure, in which I take much pride because of being its author. I am glad to have favored it before the committee and to have advocated its adoption by the Department of Agriculture in their rules and regulations, and, above all, I am glad to see a favorable sentiment looking to its passage on the floor of the House today. I hope it will have the unanimous support of all those who believe in extending the helping hand to the neglected farmers of our country. We have tried to do much for them during the present session, but no measure that has been proposed and passed by this House will meet with more unanimous approval than will our action in supporting this bill granting a 2,000-pound live-weight exemption to the hog producer.

The report of my subcommittee was unanimous in favor of this bill, and the report of the Committee on Agriculture was likewise favorable to the measure. To insist on only an exemption of 800 pounds, as proposed by my colleague from Virginia, will not afford the much-needed relief from this tax on the part of the hog raisers of the United States. This bill is important and should be endorsed by all those who represent a farming district and who are anxious to be of assistance to the farmers of our Nation. I commend it to the House and urge its passage.

CURRENT TOPICS

Mr. SINCLAIR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include an article by a former Member of this House, Judge Willis G. Sears.

Mr. BYRNS. What is the subject of the article?

Mr. SINCLAIR. It is an article covering water control. Judge Sears, of Nebraska, was a former Member of this House for 8 years.

Mr. BYRNS. I have no particular objection, but I desire to call the attention of the gentleman from Pennsylvania to the request. If he is willing, I am.

Mr. RICH. May I say to the majority leader that when the subject of including articles by former Members of the House of Representatives came up I questioned at that time whether we ought to continue to permit this practice of inserting things in the RECORD a number of years afterward. If the author of this article has had the honor of sitting in this House, I question whether I ought to object to it at this time, and if the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] wants to object, all right.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, my admiration for Judge Sears is so sincere that I shall not object.

Mr. SINCLAIR. He was one of the best-informed Members of this House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Dakota?

There was no objection.

THOUGHTS ON SOME IMPORTANT QUESTIONS OF THE DAY BY A FORMER MEMBER

Mr. SINCLAIR. Mr. Speaker, under the leave granted me to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I wish to offer a letter recently received from a former and highly respected Member of this House, the Honorable Willis G. Sears, of Nebraska. I had the honor of serving with Judge Sears on the Flood Control Committee of the House, and well recall the splendid work he did in the framing of the Flood Control Act of 1928. In my opinion, no man in this body was as well informed on the important question of water conservation and river navigation as was Judge Sears. It was largely due to his persistent advocacy of the conservation of the run-off waters that the building of dams and reservoirs was adopted as a national policy. Had such a policy been in effect years ago, there is no doubt but that the present devastating drought would not have occurred, or that its effects would have been materially less damaging. I know that the friends of Judge Sears who are still in the House will be glad to have this message from him. I might add that he is now rendering distinguished service as judge of the fourth judicial district, Omaha, Nebr.

DISTRICT COURT OF NEBRASKA,
FOURTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT,
Omaha, Nebr., May 25, 1934.

Hon. JAMES H. SINCLAIR,
House Office Building, Washington, D.C.

MY ESTEEMED ONE-TIME COLLEAGUE: I wonder if a few thoughts on the subject of the welfare of our country would be out of place, if I, a "has been", should foist them upon you? If they are threadbare, or belong to the "national anthem of the kingdom of boredom"—well, I presume you still have a wastebasket.

I want to group up to you several subjects. They are: (a) Droughts, (b) floods, (c) navigation, (d) power, (e) banking, (f) credit and currency, (g) the great river.

FOREWORD

I realize that I must give you only a bony structure, that is, as much thought as I can compass in limited use of words, and must also set up as a guidepost to the route of discussion a short preamble, as apologetic to the whole matter. That preamble is devoted to the condition of the country.

PREAMBLE

The condition of the country is deplorable; a country dedicated to the common welfare finds 90 percent of its people ruined, or in sore distress, when they should be both prosperous and full of hope. With a soil of God-given fertility, baked like an oven, and its croppage destroyed by droughts; with its wondrous system of navigable rivers either at ruinous floods or too low for navigable uses; with sources of electric power ample for all purposes of our people undeveloped, and our people at the mercy of the commercialized vice that treats the consumer with unfairness; with a money system that is in the hands of those who deal in money, and travel all roads of speculation, and compel the banks of the country to transact business like pawnbrokers, and has thrown oldtime honest credit into the discard, and has ruined the most and the best of our people throughout the land, and has prostrated agriculture.

(a) Droughts are with us because we will have them so. For 50 years we have been draining marshes, straightening creeks, grading and paving roads and streets, and sewering our cities; doing everything, in fact, during our rainy season to hasten the run-off waters into the Gulf and the oceans. The water line in our soils has been down as low as 60 feet, in sections where it was formerly up to the grass roots. Every year drought takes its toll of from hundreds of millions to many billions of dollars, and thus detracts from the national wealth, and keeps alive the fires on the altar of human misery.

(b) Floods in great areas are with us because we will them so. It is because the rapid waters from the minor flood areas are not restrained at their sources, but are allowed to run wild and overtop the slower waters at the more level areas below; that levees are overtopped and damage is done; that erosions take place as to our soils; that property and lives are lost. With a system of reservoiring of the minor flood areas that would not cost $1,000,000,000, 0.9 of the run-off waters would be under control, the droughts largely prevented, and the water line kept well up in the soil, and floods of any materiality only known as of the past.

(c) Navigation marks the price and wealth of a nation. Only here have important men fought navigation. Important and demanding special privileges, none can secure special privileges unless others are deprived of what is theirs by right. When men or corporations move into a country and work against its best development, according to its best prospective, they are traitors to that country by all the gagings, parallels, and definings. There is no successful navigation unless it is long-time navigation. There is no long-time navigation without ample water at what is called the "low-water period", and that can only be attained by reservoiring the areas where the run-off water originates, putting it into the soil and to work. Thus only will we have successful navigation and agriculture; and there is no prosperity in this country unless agriculture is profitable and labor employed; then we will minister to the general welfare.

(d) Power, meaning electric power, is that—when developed and placed in the family and house and barn and factory at a low and reasonable cost—which will prove a handmaid to human happiness. Its production will be a mighty by-product of taking control of our run-off waters, as an asset, instead of throwing them away as useless things.

(e) and (f) Our banking and currency should never be given over to the control of those who deal in money speculation, such as stocks, grain, or gambling of any kind. The Federal Reserve bank was only instituted to furnish ample currency and credit when needed for the activities of the country. It has been the most baneful influence for evil that our country has known in its history. Inflation may be carried to a foolish extent, but any great deflation of currency and credit is a crime. My recollection is that the bank opened its own door, and placed on its own doorstep the twins of inflation and deflation, and encouraged them to grow up and devour the kine that were fat. The law should reestablish the old-fashioned banker, under the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency. The three brass balls should be taken from our banking.

(g) The great river originates in Montana, sweeps up almost to Canada, then south and east to the Gulf of Mexico at New Orleans. It should have but one name: the Tennessee, Ohio, Wabash, Illinois, upper Mississippi, Kaw, Platt, Niobrara, and the like are only its tributaries. They each and all bring their tribute to the great river, the world's most wonderful river; but its own accepts it not. It flows through the heart of the greatest agricultural region of the world. It is the only river of the world that is capable of 4,400 miles of navigable water. It has more important cities along its banks than any river of the world. But its improvement has been fought for years, fought by great financiers of the East and by important men even of our own section. Our great section of the great croppage and the long haul is dammed by the highest rates because that great river's improvement has been fought so long. The Congressmen of this section have always helped the East and South, getting cheap chemical fertilizers; but when all we want is the impounding of our run-off waters, we wonder sometimes if equal and exact justice is being meted out.

There never was a greater fallacy than the statement often made that the Government is not responsible for good or bad times. It is an abnormality or a normality traceable to governmental activities.

Of the three departments of our Government under our system, the legislative should be dominant; of the two divisions of that dominance, the House of Representatives should then be first, and it should not be afraid. We would be without either extended droughts or floods if the House should see that legislation is passed that conserves flood waters at the minor areas of origination.

The House of Representatives should see that our banking facilities are not controlled by those who are using money for speculative purposes. And money should stay, as a rule, where labor is responsible for it. There should not be great inflation, and we should progress on the theory that any material deflation is a criminal act.

No prospect could be more pleasant than that of the old banker with the old borrower, doing old-fashioned business together; with ample currency for all purposes; with the water line well up in the soil; without material floods; with the navigable rivers kept up in their flowage by running springs and waters from proper dams; with the same transportation rates for all parts of the country—which means that Pittsburgh plus and its relatives would have disappeared; with the buying power returned to our people because of normality again; and our factories busy, providing for the needs of the people; with agriculture profitable and labor employed.

OPPORTUNITY FOR AUTOMOBILE EXPORTS LIES IN RECIPROCITY NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. THOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. THOM. Mr. Speaker, all through the recovery program of this Congress there has run a central purpose—to expand the consumption of the abundant products of our farms and industries. The means by which this object was sought have been various, for the President was not wedded, as are some of our people, to one idea of recovery. In that refusal to accept and follow blindly only one road, as well as his determination not to let the chaos he faced cure itself through the passing of time, lay his true statesmanship. That his program has been eminently successful and has reversed the economic trends in a way that is amazing within a period of a little over a year is the judgment of every fair-minded American, and this progress is tardily being recognized by many business forecasters as not a temporary uplift but a permanent trend that will lead to a restoration of normal conditions. I purpose now to sketch two of the main lines of attack on the problem of underconsumption.

The first line of attack was aimed at procuring a rise in the price of the staple farm crops, in order that the 30,000,000 people in the United States directly or indirectly dependent on the farm might have a sufficient income over and above their taxes and interest payments with which to barter for the manufactured articles produced in the cities. The crop-allotment plan adopted as a means to this end was and has been assailed as a subsidy to the farmer. If it be, there is one devastating and wholly sufficient answer that industry through the device of tariffs enjoyed subsidies for 50 or 60 years, thus being permitted to charge a price for its products over and above the price of similar products of foreign producers. If thereby the American workingman received a higher wage and the American industrialist a more or less certain earning, why was it indefensible to use the processing tax to give the American farmer a fair wage and a fair return on his investment? Why compel the American farmer to sell his wheat, cotton, hogs, and other exportable crops here and abroad at a world market price, and by tariff duties make him pay an artificial price for the tariff-protected article that he needs?

Whatever the views of the agricultural relief program, there has been a decided increase in the purchasing power of the American farmer, best illustrated by the reports of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics showing a farm income of $417,000,000 for March, 1934, as against $275,000,000 for March, of 1933. Whether the exact programs of crop control, introduced as purely experimental but based on the fundamental law of supply and demand, will eventually prove effective remain to be discovered. There is, however, through the presentation of the farm problem by the Roosevelt administration a new understanding, especially by our city populations, that a restricted farm income will not and cannot aid in generating orders in rural areas for urban factories. In other words, bankrupt farms will mean eventually bankrupt factories.

The second main attack was on the waning consumptive power of the American workingman, and the particular device resorted to was the National Recovery Act. At one fell swoop child labor was abolished, and jobs heretofore held by children at meager wages were opened up to adults. The reduction of hours in response to the economic fact that machinery displacement of industrial workers had relegated thousands of men to the rolls of the unemployed made some of us feel that legislators at last had a faint recognition that men, besides enjoying liberty and freedom, must have an opportunity to work at a fair wage. Otherwise, the social system was in jeopardy, and rightly so.

Available reports, at least from the larger industries which employ mass-production methods, show that the National Recovery Act has substantially increased both the number of workers and their wage totals. No fair-minded person can deny that this legislation has increased the purchasing power of American workers, and in large part furnished that stabilization of prices that made production once more profitable. Unless the N.R.A. principles of shorter hours and rising wages are continued in their application, we shall find a repetition of our past troubles growing out of an inability of the masses to consume the things they produce. Personally, I think after the emergency is over we shall realize that we expanded the N.R.A. too far by coding some industries and service lines of business in which, as a result of codes, increase of working forces was negligible; and that we inherited from these particular lines bitter disputes about trade practices that bogged down the N.R.A. machinery, diverting its energies from the organization of those large mass-production industries wherein the real gains are to be obtained in the increase of employment.

Having used these remedies to invest the farmer and working man with increased consuming power, there remains a distinct feeling that, due to our rationalization of industry and improvement of farming methods, we shall still have a potential surplus production that must be disposed of in foreign markets in exchange for foreign goods, if it can be done, as the President says, so "that no sound and important American industry will be injuriously disturbed." This involves, of course, the doctrine of reciprocal trade relations. Up to date, the current discussions have seemed to center around the possibility, under reciprocity treaties, of disposing of our agricultural surpluses in overseas markets as a way of obviating the forced retirement from active use of 50,000,000 or 75,000,000 acres of land in accordance with the ideas of the Department of Agriculture.

To me there seems to be an equally important opportunity in any reciprocity arrangements that are undertaken to benefit our economic status, by giving to the American automobile industry—the most efficient of our present-day manufacturing units—the chance to sell the transportation that, to my mind, will be bought during the next decade or so as never before in foreign countries, especially in the undeveloped parts of the world. My study convinces me that the motor-car industry for the next 5 or 10 years will determine the industrial prosperity of the United States. It has taken the lead in the present revival of business, and it was the one industry that fought to the bitter end the overwhelming forces of the depression. It therefore deserves, by reason of its tested efficiency, the aid of the American Government in its conquest of the automobile markets of the world, and I believe it can do the job if we will but help scale down the prohibitive tariffs and quota arrangements in foreign countries that make its competitive opportunities less favorable.

Let us look at the phenomenal growth of this key industry. In 1916 production for the first time topped the million mark for 1 year, the exact production being 1,618,000 cars. Its high tide of yearly output was 5,358,420 cars in 1929. General prosperity spread through the country as motor-car production held to a steady output of 4,000,000 units per year from 1925 to 1929, except for a relapse in 1927. So we can almost say that as flourishes Detroit, so flourishes the whole country, and I do not have one whit of special interest, political or otherwise, in the affairs of that city. I state what seems to me an economic fact.

There are certain other illuminating facts that show the dependence of our national prosperity on this young but pushing industry. In 1932, 3,901,800 workers relied upon the auto industry for a livelihood, equal to 10 percent of the total man power employed in all industry. View its tremendous utilization of our raw materials in 1932—7 percent of our cotton, 10 percent of our tin, 11 percent of our copper, 14 percent of our mohair, 17 percent of our steel, 23 percent of our aluminum, 28 percent of our nickel, 33 percent of our plate glass, 53 percent of our upholstery leather, 55 percent of our malleable iron, 80 percent of our rubber, and 85 percent of our gasoline. Since its raw material orders for production purposes go into every State of the Union, it is easy to understand that a slow up in motor-car manufacture sends chills into the financial arteries of every State, crippling farmer, miner, and factory worker alike. The blighting effect on railroad transportation from stagnation in the motor-car industry may be judged when we know that 14 percent of the total rail tonnage in 1932 was derived from this industry.

By reason of its sheer efficiency and its huge domestic market, with a fairly regular call each year in normal times for 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 cars, permitting of a mass production undreamed of in any other country, the American motor-car industry now, without dispute, gives us the lowest-priced and most-serviceable car in the world. Since unit costs decrease markedly as volume increases, it is plain to see why United States manufacturers can undersell the world in a fair field, when tariff handicaps are not imposed.

Master, unchallenged, in its own market, what has this industry been able to do for itself in foreign trade? Cars exported rose from 292,522 in 1924 to the peak of 733,066 in 1929. And mark this salient fact, that since 1923 the growth of our motor-car output has been due solely to export sales made in the face of lower wages per man in foreign plants.

This stalwart and self-reliant industry—most characteristic of American ingenuity and venturesomeness—has not kept to our own shores but has penetrated into every part of the world in its search for business to keep its wheels turning at full speed. But there came a sudden halt to its rapid progress abroad, when exaggerated policies of self-sufficiency in this country taught the world how to use tariffs against us. To avoid the combined expenses of tariffs, transportation, and so forth, the manufacturer, to keep himself in the competitive race, migrated with his capital to the chief countries of Europe, there to invest it in branch factories that now enjoy the prosperity that rightfully belongs to the workers of the United States.

To be explicit about these tariff barriers that thwarted automobile production in the United States for foreign sale, let it be known that Canada—our best customer at this moment—levies a 20 to 30 percent ad valorem tariff rate against United States cars; Union of South Africa, 20 to 25 percent; Japan, 35 percent; Argentina, as high as 40 percent; Netherlands, 15 percent; Australia, 32 to 45 percent; British India, 25 to 37½ percent; United Kingdom, 33⅓ percent; Sweden, 15 to 20 percent.

What do these tariff rates exactly mean in plain, understandable language? Let us examine the Canadian rate, first enumerated. A 20-percent duty is assessed on passenger cars selling for $1,200, which means a tariff tax of $240 added for the Canadian consumer to the price of an American car. In Sault Ste. Marie, Canada, recently I heard a Canadian, as he looked across the expanse of waters to Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., where an American automobile was traveling along the shore, bemoan the fact that to possess that very car he had to pay a tariff tax of $250—adding just that much to the price paid by his American cousin across the water. No wonder, then, that the United States manufacturer was virtually clubbed by these foreign tariffs into the erection of branch factories abroad, both in Canada and Europe.

Now, then, we have this giant industry, unsurpassed in output both as to quality and price, capable of building each year 8,000,000 cars, against a possible domestic consumption of four millions. Ready to use the energies of thousands of more men and to consume raw materials of thousands of more producers, this industry has but one need—and that is more export orders. These are not unobtainable if we will but use our commercial wits to bargain for new fields unhampered by tariffs for this industry.

Before drawing attention to the areas where transportation demands are beckoning us, it is well to remember that this industry is selling a product that is new and is just beginning to take hold in many parts of the world. Every backward country where progress has set in is bound to improve its transportation. A rising standard of living that will come all over the world will carry with it a yearning for something better than the oxcart. Trade demands promptness and, consequently, faster and heavier loads of merchandise. The answer is cheap motor cars, both passenger and truck, which are commensurate with buying power. The United States can furnish them to the advantage of its workers, farmers, and business men.

If you ask for specifications as to what particular markets we may capture, we can without hesitation check off the United Kingdom, France, Italy, and Germany as out of the question, because these countries have both home manufacturers, who through the arm of the government used the tariff device to exclude foreign competition, and the branch factories built within their tariff walls by Americans. Our particular opportunity lies in the nonproducing automobile countries, or in the undeveloped ones where road construction is beginning to appear and where trade in raw materials will eventually be carried by motor trucks. Our objective would be to trade our automobiles for the raw materials that are not competitive with us, and thus establish a barter that will keep our chief industry in regular operation.

It is in these particular fields, last described above, that we in 1933 sold our greatest number of motor cars. The Union of South Africa, unaffected as other countries by the slump in raw-material prices, because her chief export is gold which, in fact, appreciated in price despite hard times, was our third best customer; Japan, fourth; Argentina, fifth; Brazil, sixth; and Mexico, eighth. Here at our doors is the vast market of South America, rich in hidden resources, where the use of motor vehicles has expanded more rapidly since 1924 than in any other part of the world. Shall we let its automobile business slip from our hands because we failed to follow the suit of our European cousins in binding up markets by reciprocity treaties?

I hope we shall be bold enough to seize this opportunity for needed trade expansion, or at least be venturesome enough to find out if we can negotiate ourselves into a position to enter on better terms the motor-car fields that look so alluring at this time. If we succeed we shall bring new security to our so-called "automobile cities", where assembled cars or merely parts or raw materials therefor are fabricated. This will keep those thousands of men who have migrated from rural areas to work in these plants from returning to the farms to aggravate the rural problems of overproduction. With more export orders these industrial cities will, through the use of additional raw material, help to increase the well-being of the agricultural producer, and at the same time draw new workers from the rural population, changing them from producers to consumers of foodstuffs. In this way agriculture can save itself the retirement of some at least of its acreage, and many industrial cities will be saved the disgrace of bread lines. So long as we tie down this great motor industry to domestic fields, so long shall we endanger our national prosperity.

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of the privileges of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, in the Washington Post this morning I noticed an article describing the proceedings of the House yesterday; it included the following:

Representative ROBERT LUCE, of Massachusetts, propounded a parliamentary inquiry to Speaker HENRY T. RAINEY, on the subject of the proper method of addressing the House.

The author of the article went on to state further that the Speaker, whose duties include tips on etiquette, advice to the lovelorn, and similar knotty problems, went into conference with himself [laughter] before answering the inquiry.

Mr. Speaker, I have carefully examined Jefferson's Manual concerning the duties of the Speaker, rule I, from section 621 to section 634, inclusive. These sections define the particular duties and general duties of the Speaker and in none of them do I find that the Speaker is permitted to decide questions of etiquette, advice to the lovelorn, or similar knotty problems of social intercourse. So I think, in fairness and justice to the House, this erroneous information should not be disseminated to the public but that proper correction should be made, informing the general public that the Speaker, holding the dignified office that he does, is not permitted by the rules of the House to decide questions of this kind.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOYLAN. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. That is just about as reliable as anything the gentleman will ever see in Eugene Meyer's Washington Post. Besides attacking Democrats generally and attacking the President and the President's program for economic recovery, Eugene Meyer, in his Washington Post, has deliberately tried to belittle Congress ever since he used his ill-gotten bond money to defraud the McLean boys out of their natural heritage when he hornswoggled them out of their Washington Post. I think he is a menace to society. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I understood the first business in order today was the roll call on an amendment——

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I have not concluded.

Mr. SNELL. I beg the gentleman's pardon; I thought he had. I would not want to interfere with my friend from New York.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, irrespective of the outstanding qualifications of the gentleman whom the distinguished statesman from Texas has mentioned, I am not going into that particular phase of the matter. I am only concerned with the dignity of the House and the respect that I personally hold, which I know is shared by every Member of the House, for our beloved and eminent Speaker, in order that the general public may not be led to believe that these frivolous duties mentioned in the article devolve upon our distinguished Speaker. [Applause.]

PROCESSING TAX ON HOGS

The SPEAKER. The unfinished business is the roll call on the Snell amendment to the bill H.R. 9829, striking out "800 pounds" and inserting "2,000 pounds." For the information of the House, without objection, the Clerk will again report the amendment.

Mr. FLANNAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I may say to the gentleman from New York that I shall agree to accept the gentleman's amendment raising the poundage to 2,000 pounds.

Mr. SNELL. We must have the Members here for other business, and I think we may just as well have the roll call.

The SPEAKER. The yeas and nays have been ordered.

Without objection, the Clerk will again report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SNELL: Page 1, line 9, strike out "800" and insert in lieu thereof "2,000."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 328, nays 18, not voting 84, as follows:

[Roll No. 178]

YEAS—328

Adair	Cannon, Mo.	Culkin	Farley
Adams	Cannon, Wis.	Cullen	Fiesinger
Allen	Carden, Ky.	Cummings	Fitzpatrick
Arnold	Carmichael	Darden	Flannagan
Ayers, Mont.	Carpenter, Kans.	Darrow	Fletcher
Ayres, Kans.	Carpenter, Nebr.	Dear	Focht
Bacharach	Carter, Calif.	Deen	Ford
Bakewell	Carter, Wyo.	Delaney	Foss
Bankhead	Cartwright	De Priest	Foulkes
Beck	Cary	Dickinson	Frear
Beedy	Castellow	Dingell	Fuller
Beiter	Cavicchia	Dirksen	Gasque
Blanchard	Chapman	Disney	Gavagan
Bland	Christianson	Ditter	Gifford
Blanton	Clark, N.C.	Dobbins	Gilchrist
Bloom	Clarke, N.Y.	Dockweiler	Gillespie
Boehne	Cochran, Mo.	Dondero	Glover
Boland	Cochran, Pa.	Doughton	Goldsborough
Boylan	Colden	Douglass	Goodwin
Britten	Cole	Dowell	Granfield
Brown, Ga.	Collins, Calif.	Drewry	Gray
Brown, Ky.	Colmer	Driver	Greenwood
Brown, Mich.	Condon	Duffey	Gregory
Brunner	Connery	Duncan, Mo.	Griswold
Buchanan	Connolly	Dunn	Guyer
Buck	Cooper, Ohio	Eaton	Haines
Bulwinkle	Cooper, Tenn.	Edmiston	Hamilton
Burch	Cox	Edmonds	Hancock, N.Y.
Burke, Calif.	Cravens	Eicher	Hart
Burke, Nebr.	Crosby	Ellenbogen	Hartley
Burnham	Cross, Tex.	Elizey, Miss.	Hastings
Busby	Crosser, Ohio	Eltse, Calif.	Healey
Byrns	Crowe	Englebright	Henney
Cady	Crowther	Evans	Hess
Caldwell	Crump	Faddis	Hildebrandt
Hill, Knute	McClintic	Polk	Stubbs
Hill, Samuel B.	McFadden	Powers	Studley
Hoeppel	McGugin	Prall	Sullivan
Hoidale	McKeown	Ramsay	Swank
Hollister	McLean	Ramspeck	Sweeney
Holmes	McLeod	Rankin	Taber
Howard	McReynolds	Ransley	Tarver
Hughes	Maloney, Conn.	Reece	Taylor, S.C.
Imhoff	Maloney, La.	Reed, N.Y.	Taylor, Tenn.
Jacobsen	Mansfield	Reilly	Terrell, Tex.
Jenckes, Ind.	Mapes	Rich	Terry, Ark.
Jenkins, Ohio	Marshall	Richards	Thom
Johnson, Minn.	Martin, Colo.	Richardson	Thomas
Johnson, Okla.	Martin, Mass.	Robertson	Thomason
Johnson, Tex.	Martin, Oreg.	Robinson	Thompson, Ill.
Johnson, W.Va.	May	Rogers, Mass.	Thompson, Tex.
Kahn	Mead	Rogers, Okla.	Tinkham
Kee	Meeks	Romjue	Tobey
Keller	Merritt	Rudd	Traeger
Kelly, Ill.	Millard	Ruffin	Treadway
Kennedy, N.Y.	Miller	Sabath	Truax
Kenney	Milligan	Sadowski	Turpin
Kerr	Mitchell	Sanders, La.	Umstead
Kinzer	Monaghan, Mont.	Sanders, Tex.	Underwood
Kloeb	Montague	Sandlin	Utterback
Kniffin	Montet	Schaefer	Vinson, Ga.
Knutson	Moran	Schuetz	Vinson, Ky.
Kocialkowski	Morehead	Schulte	Wadsworth
Kurtz	Mott	Scrugham	Wallgren
Lambeth	Murdock	Sears	Walter
Lamneck	Musselwhite	Secrest	Warren
Lanham	Nesbit	Seger	Welch
Lanzetta	O'Brien	Shallenberger	Werner
Larrabee	O'Connell	Shannon	West, Ohio
Lea, Calif.	O'Connor	Sinclair	White
Lehlbach	O'Malley	Sirovich	Whitley
Lehr	Oliver, Ala.	Smith, Va.	Whittington
Lemke	Owen	Smith, Wash.	Wigglesworth
Lesinski	Parker	Snell	Williford
Lewis, Colo.	Parsons	Snyder	Williams
Lindsay	Patman	Somers, N.Y.	Wolcott
Lloyd	Peavey	Spence	Wolfenden
Lozier	Perkins	Stalker	Wolverton
Luce	Peterson	Steagall	Wood, Ga.
Ludlow	Pettengill	Stokes	Wood, Mo.
Lundeen	Peyser	Strong, Pa.	Woodrum
McCarthy	Pierce	Strong, Tex.	Young

NAYS—18

Arens	Doxey	Jones	Rayburn
Beam	Eagle	Kleberg	Wearin
Biermann	Gillette	Lambertson	West, Tex.
Bolleau	Harlan	McMillan
Corning	Hope	Oliver, N.Y.

NOT VOTING—84

Abernethy	Collins, Miss.	James	Randolph
Allgood	DeRouen	Jeffers	Reid, Ill.
Andrew, Mass.	Dickstein	Kelly, Pa.	Rogers, N.H.
Andrews, N.Y.	Dies	Kennedy, Md.	Shoemaker
Auf der Heide	Doutrich	Kopplemann	Simpson
Bacon	Durgan, Ind.	Kramer	Sisson
Bailey	Fernandez	Kvale	Smith, W.Va.
Berlin	Fish	Lee, Mo.	Sumners, Tex.
Black	Fitzgibbons	Lewis, Md.	Sutphin
Bolton	Frey	McCormack	Swick
Brennan	Fulmer	McDuffie	Taylor, Colo.
Brooks	Gambrill	McFarlane	Thurston
Browning	Goss	McGrath	Turner
Buckbee	Green	McSwain	Waldron
Carley, N.Y.	Greenway	Marland	Weaver
Celler	Griffin	Moynihan, Ill.	Weideman
Chase	Hancock, N.C.	Muldowney	Wilcox
Chavez	Harter	Norton	Wilson
Church	Higgins	Palmisano	Withrow
Claiborne	Hill, Ala.	Parks	Woodruff
Coffin	Huddleston	Plumley	Zioncheck

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. Allgood with Mr. Bacon.
Mr. Rogers of New Hampshire with Mr. Fish.
Mr. McCormack with Mr. Kelly of Pennsylvania.
Mr. Randolph with Mr. Simpson.
Mr. McDuffie with Mr. Winthrow.
Mr. Sumners of Texas with Mr. Plumley.
Mr. McSwain with Mr. Woodruff.
Mr. Hancock of North Carolina with Mr. Muldowney.
Mr. Huddleston with Mr. Goss.
Mr. DeRouen with Mr. Bolton.
Mr. Collins of Mississippi with Mr. Andrews of New York.
Mrs. Norton with Mr. Buckbee.
Mr. Browning with Mr. Chase.
Mr. Fulmer with Mr. Andrew of Massachusetts.
Mrs. Greenway with Mr. Higgins.
Mr. Smith of West Virginia with Mr. Moynihan of Illinois.
Mr. Taylor of Colorado with Mr. Waldron.
Mr. Weaver with Mr. James.
Mr. Wilson with Mr. Doutrich.
Mr. Celler with Mr. Reid of Illinois.
Mr. Brennan with Mr. Thurston.
Mr. Green with Mr. Kvale.
Mr. Carley of New York with Mr. Shoemaker.
Mr. Dies with Mr. Church.

Mr. Griffin with Mr. McGrath.
Mr. Wilcox with Mr. Coffin.
Mr. Fernandez with Mr. Kopplemann.
Mr. McFarlane with Mr. Sisson.
Mr. Turner with Mr. Weideman.
Mr. Sutphin with Mr. Kennedy of Maryland.
Mr. Lee of Missouri with Mr. Durgan of Indiana.
Mr. Lewis of Maryland with Mr. Marland.
Mr. Parks with Mr. Harter.
Mr. Palmisano with Mr. Berlin.
Mr. Hill of Alabama with Mr. Claiborne.
Mr. Dickstein with Mr. Bailey.
Mr. Auf der Heide with Mr. Black.
Mr. Fitzgibbons with Mr. Abernethy.
Mr. Chavez with Mr. Brooks.
Mr. Frey with Mr. Jeffers.
Mr. Gambrill with Mr. Zioncheck.

Mr. RANKIN and Mr. MERRITT changed their votes from "nay" to "aye."

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, with the consent of the House I wish to make the announcement that the following gentlemen are members of the special committee of the House investigating certain alleged un-American activities, and are engaged at the present moment in hearings: The gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. MCCORMACK; the gentleman from California, Mr. KRAMER; the gentleman from New York, Mr. DICKSTEIN; the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. JENKINS; the gentleman from Tennessee, Mr. TAYLOR; the gentleman from Kansas, Mr. GUYER; and the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. WEIDEMAN. I ask that they may be excused by the House from voting on this roll call and any subsequent roll calls, unless the hearings should adjourn.

The same thing is true of the subcommittee of the Committee on Military Affairs, which is investigating aircraft and other related matters. The members of this subcommittee are the gentleman from New Hampshire, Mr. ROGERS; the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. JAMES; the gentleman from Connecticut, Mr. GOSS; the gentleman from Vermont, Mr. PLUMLEY; the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. HARTER; and the gentleman from Alabama, Mr. HILL.

Further, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from West Virginia, Mr. RANDOLPH, is absent today and has asked me to request the House that he be excused for the day because of his acting as escort to Mrs. Roosevelt, who is visiting his State.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I rose to offer an amendment to the bill, and I was recognized to offer the amendment.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, the bill has not been read, and the previous question is not in order until the bill is read.

The SPEAKER. The first section of the bill has been read. The Clerk will read the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. (a) Paragraph (4) of subsection (d) of section 9 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, is repealed.

(b) Paragraph (7) of subsection (d) of such section 9 is amended to read as follows:

"(7) In the case of any other commodity, the term 'processing' means any manufacturing or other processing involving a change in the form of the commodity or its preparation for distribution or use, as defined by regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture; and in prescribing such regulations the Secretary shall give due weight to the customs of the industry."

SEC. 3. This act shall take effect on the day following the date of its enactment.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas moves the previous question. The question is, Shall the previous question be ordered?

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Shall the previous question be ordered?

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. TRUAX) there were—ayes 144, noes 84.

So the previous question was ordered.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

WOMEN IN THE NEW DEMOCRACY—THE FIRST BRAIN TRUST—HARMONY BETWEEN FREEDOM AND POWER

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing therein an address delivered by our colleague, Mr. PETTENGILL, at the commencement exercises of St. Mary's College, Notre Dame, Ind., June 3, 1934.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object, to ask the gentleman a question, so that we may answer some telegrams that we are getting from Texas. What is the situation in respect to the oil bill?

Mr. RAYBURN. I do not yield for that question.

Mr. BLANTON. Then I object to the remarks going into the RECORD, if the gentleman cannot answer a decent question. That is a question that the people of my State are interested in, and I intend to know what is the situation.

Mr. RAYBURN. We closed the hearings on the bill yesterday.

Mr. BLANTON. Then, why could not the gentleman have answered that in the first place?

Mr. RAYBURN. I did not want to, and I did not have to.

Mr. BLANTON. But since I finally did get an answer, Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following:

This occasion renews my faith. I look as confidently forward into the future today as I did a quarter of a century ago. I know that I am standing today on the recruiting ground of the Republic. I know that here and in countless other colleges and schools in this country the army of the future is being mustered in—an army, if you please, that has never known defeat. These young citizen-soldiers are not going to admit that we have lost the battle for God and country. The broken ranks of those who have borne the battle to save our institutions are today being filled anew with at least 150,000 college men and women—greater in number than our standing Army—and with four times that number from preparatory and high schools, a total of 750,000 of the pick of the pack. That is what commencement means to America every year.

Whenever I think of these young graduates I think of a mighty Niagara pouring its fresh clean flood down upon parched valleys and dusty plains.

It is natural, I suppose, that I should think of you today as citizens rather than as students, although I hope you will remain students also throughout the years. No one can value cultural subjects more than I. "Man lives not by bread alone." Nor does he live alone for the state. On the contrary, the state has meaning only as it helps the individual to attain a more abundant life.

In view of the assaults being made upon the new democracy by the apostles of things as they were, I often wonder that young men and women have the courage to go to college.

From what we read today one would think that it is un-American to plan for a better future, a misdemeanor to experiment, a crime to have brains in the public service, a felony to have taught or been taught at college, and treason itself to be young.

Well, planning is not new in America, nor is it a disgrace. The greatest plan for social well-being that the world has ever known is the Constitution of the United States, and America's first "brain trust" was that little group of 55 men who put that plan on paper. When they signed that document of experiment they joined the immortals. It remains an experiment still.

A few words about these men may fortify us against the calamity of brains and the pestilence of youth. Of those 55 men, 24, or nearly half, were college graduates, several with highest honors—a truly remarkable record when we consider the conditions prevailing when they were in their teens and twenties—170 years ago. But not only that. These men sleep in their graves under the serious accusation that 6 of their number were or had been or were to become college professors, 3 college presidents, and 7 founders or trustees of colleges.

And then their age. We think of them as patriarchs—men with long, gray beards, grave demeanor, venerable with experience, hoary with wisdom. That is the supposition. What are the facts? Only 13 of the 55 had passed their fiftieth birthday; 22, or nearly half, were under 40; Madison, the "Father of the Constitution", was 36; Hamilton was 30; one of the Nation's fathers had reached the ripe old age of 26 and 3 more were tottering around in their twenties. These men, averaging 43 years young, balanced with the ripened wisdom of Washington, 55, and Benjamin Franklin, 81, the only man past 70, wrote the Constitution of the United States.

A college man or woman may be a fool. Many are. And, as Benjamin Jowett used to say, "Not even the youngest, my brethren, is necessarily infallible."

But the young men who wrote the Constitution deliberately planned to meet a great emergency. We must do the same.

Our struggle today is not to overthrow their work. It is to keep their work from being overthrown. It is to redefine and recapture the benefits and liberties they intended to guarantee in perpetuity to every American.

The Constitution of the United States did not and does not guarantee a jobless and hopeless future to 10,000,000 Americans.

Another fact about those 55 men is of particular interest, perhaps, to this audience: 9 of the 55, 1 in 6, were born in that quiet, peaceful country known as the "Emerald Isle." The River Shannon flows across the Constitution of the United States. Generations of Ireland's injustice—of man's inhumanity to man—helped write that immortal document, and the blood of Irish patriots is mixed with its fadeless ink.

I speak today on women in the new democracy. In your college catalog I notice with satisfaction that you have thought upon this subject in your courses in economics, sociology, and ethics. I notice that one of the six aims of the college is "to inculcate the principles of justice in society and to make young women zealous for its interests."

I know it is sometimes said that women do not take readily to these subjects. That is but a partial view, and, I think, a false one. My own experience has taught me to expect from women audiences an attentive interest in the problems of society. Women are citizens. They have the rights of citizens. They have the responsibilities and the burdens of citizens. They have an equal suffrage with men. They spend three-fourths of all money for home maintenance. They inherit 65 percent of the total wealth of the Nation once every generation. They are the beneficiaries of 60 percent of the $100,000,000,000 of life insurance now in force. In many of our larger corporations more than half the stockholders are women, and women compose 43 percent of the total number of all stockholders. They pay taxes. More than 10,000,000 are gainfully employed, or a total of one-quarter of the adult female population of the Nation are breadwinners in their own right.

Other uncounted millions carry heavy burdens at home for their husbands and children and are, by very necessity, profoundly interested in their husbands' jobs and their children's opportunities. Finally, in time of war they contribute father, husband, sweetheart, and son, and thus their very selves, to their country's service.

To say that women are not interested in the great problems of international peace abroad and justice in society at home, in jobs, in prosperity, in political campaigns, in schools, parks, playgrounds, in equality of opportunity is to show that one "does not know women." Their interest is more evident today than ever, as shown by increasing numbers in the public service, even as Cabinet officers and ambassadors. Today government impinges more directly upon the lives of men and women than ever before. It will continue to do so. The growing complexity of our civilization makes that inevitable. In the break-down of unregulated competitive practices it is to government that the great banker and the humble wage earner both turn for help. Whether wisely or not, that is the fact.

We find ourselves in the midst of "excursions and alarums" and divided counsels. We see the paradox of the famine of plenty—too little in the land of too much. We see democracy challenged at home and parliamentary governments crashing abroad. We read of the Decline of the West; we are told that "democracy is a rotting carcass", and we are warned of impending doom to all that we hold dear. Like a battle line extending from Switzerland to the North Sea there is no lookout so high that one may see the struggle as a whole, nor compute its total movement.

But if democracy is as we believe, the economic and political application of the Golden Rule, if democracy is secular Christianity, and if to save it is worth the sacrifice our fathers made to establish it, then the problems of popular government in this time of world-wide stress and strain become peculiarly the problems of women, because if we read events abroad correctly, it is women who have the most to lose if democracy goes down. No history, past or present, has ever shown the man on horseback to be tender to the rights of women. If a distinction were made between the sexes, it seems certain that women have a greater stake than men in defending democracy and preserving parliamentary institutions.

The problems are real—to you. They will affect your future—your very happiness. They are worth your study, whether in public or private life, or behind cloistered walls.

There is the problem of peace and war. That may come very close to your hearthside. A vast madness has seized the world. Do not leave this problem to men. While we appreciate the compliment of your trust, we have not done a good job. While men regretfully prepare for war, women should strive unceasingly for peace. Here is a cause that will enrich and transfigure your lives, wherever you live them. Where is the Joan d'Arc who will become immortal by making peace eternal? Who will expose the munition makers in their devilish cabals?

There is the problem of crime. Does that mean nothing to you except when some child is kidnaped? Do you know that the annual cost of crime, a cost without a single compensation, is greater than the cost of supporting the Federal and the 48 State governments?—and these latter, of course, include all costs of war, past or future. Here is a problem of "justice in society" which will give significance and meaning to your lives. Frustration and futility need never be the lot of any woman. Accept life's challenge. Life is neither a jest nor a sour martyrdom. It is a glorious adventure.

What will be your attitude toward your country in this time of clashing nationalism? What does patriotism mean to you? Is a patriot a swashbuckler, an international agent provocateur? Or is patriotism so provincial that you love every country but your own? Joseph Conrad once spoke on this subject in reply to the charge that patriotism is a relic of barbarism. These were his noble words, "Neither the great Florentine painter who closed his eyes in death thinking of his city, nor St. Francis blessing with his last breath the little town of Assisi were barbarians. "It requires", Conrad said, "a certain greatness of soul to interpret patriotism worthily, or else a sincerity of feeling denied to the vulgar refinement of modern thought, which cannot understand the august simplicity of a sentiment proceeding from the very nature of man."

The "vulgar refinement of modern thought." We have suffocated with it. We need again, whipping in our faces, the stinging winds of work and duty and devotion and sacrifice.

The primary problem of modern times, with the possible exception of international peace, is to strike a new balance between profits and wages. You or the men you marry must have either profits or wages to live. But profits generally go to age. Wages are the bread of youth. Unless this problem is solved thousands of men and women graduating this year may never have jobs. This problem concerns you.

We are, I believe profoundly, at one of the great turning points of the human spirit. We are at the headwaters of a new, strange stream upon which necessity compels us, whether we will or no, to embark our frail canoes. Will this stream, swollen with recent tempests, carry us to a smash-up or to fertile valleys where we can again rebuild our fortunes?

That is going to depend entirely on the men and women in the boats. The paddles are still in our hands. This is a man-made depression. It is not due to famine or plague. For our misfortunes we can blame only ourselves. We have been thinking faster scientifically than we have socially. The engine of mass production has run down the road ahead of the passengers and crew. We must catch up with it. We must balance distribution with production. That, it seems to me, is our supreme problem. Men must be able to buy what the machines make or the machines will grow rusty for want of customers.

Before we can hope to see the peaks of achievement which await your generation we must first pierce the fog that lies in the valley of today.

There are those who express the fear that we are moving toward a dictatorship in this country. I do not share that fear. It is my belief that we are moving away from a dictatorship in this country. We had a dictatorship. It was the dictatorship of the dollar. Its board of directors was a little group of 59 men, it is said, and by some it is said the executive committee was no more than a dozen men. This dictatorship ran this Nation, and they ran it into the ground.

We had regimentation, too, in this country. It was as cruel and ruthless as any man on horseback who ever "waded through slaughter to a throne." It was the goose step of the machine. It was the regimentation of the industrial dead line and the dole line. Anyone who ever stood unwillingly in these lines knows all about regimentation—much more than the people who write editorials for the Chicago Tribune. It said to men 40 or 45 years old and out of work that they could not hope ever to work again. It said that to the wives of these men also. It said to good farmers on fertile soil that they could not hope ever to burn the mortgage. It dictated increasing unemployment even in years that men called prosperous.

We had regimentation of public opinion also in this country. It was not by government. It was by the "invisible government." It took the form of subsidizing the writing of school and college textbooks; of putting teachers and professors of economics on a private pay roll; of gratuities to various organizations to mold the opinion of the public to the support of those who were robbing the public.

This dictatorship and regimentation came to its perfect flower in 1929. I will describe that flower. It consisted of 513 men who had each a net taxable realized income of $1,000,000 or more each year; who had together a total net income greater by $100,000,000 than the gross income of all of the cotton and wheat farmers of this Nation put together—representing with their wives and children some 12,000,000 Americans.

These 513 men and their satellites—what is left of them—now that they have been pried loose from their privileges and plunder, tell us today that "constitutional government is at stake." They warn us to "beware of dictators." The Constitution of the United States, my young friends, was not written for 513 men. It was written for 126,000,000 Americans in order that it might for them "promote the general welfare", "establish justice", and "secure the blessings of liberty" for themselves and their posterity. It is that Constitution, designed for those objectives, which we hope to reordain and reestablish in this country.

In what I have said about the dictatorship of the dollar I hope you will not think I am repeating the harangue of a soapbox orator. I have a different authority. His name is Pius XI, Supreme Pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church. This is what that world statesman has said on this subject:

"It is patent that in our days not alone is wealth accumulated, but immense power and despotic economic domination is concentrated in the hands of a few, and that those few are frequently not the owners, but only the trustees and directors of invested funds, who administer them at their good pleasure. This power becomes particularly irresistible when exercised by those who, because they hold and control money, are able also to govern credit and determine its allotment, for that reason supplying, so to speak, the lifeblood to the entire economic body, and grasping, as it were, in their hands the very soul of production, so that no one dare breathe against their will."

The head of the Catholic Church, in his great encyclical from which I have quoted has asked the patriotic men and women of every faith and every nation to battle against those sinister forces which are crushing free institutions in the western world. Outstanding religious leaders in every church and faith are preaching the same message. There is, thank God, a greater degree of common thinking along these lines than we have ever seen before. And I take it that this challenge is directed to you as well as to me, and that legion of men and women who agree on the major economic problem of our time—the more equitable distribution of a nation's income.

A word or two about this hue and cry over a political dictator. Let us get clear on this. If I understand the word it means one who imposes his own will on his people. It cannot mean one who executes the people's will, a man elected by the people, with power conferred upon him by representatives of the people, who are also elected by the people; power conferred by constitutional means and capable of being constitutionally withdrawn at any time, not by a political coup d'etat or by violence, but by those same representatives, reflecting, as they understand it, the will of the people, and responsible to the people at frequent elections held at unchangeable times fixed by the people's Constitution.

We have no dictator in this country except the people themselves. They have wielded sovereign power since 1789. They wield it now. And pray God they and they alone will wield it in the future.

With all its faults, government by the people has not failed. Nowhere on the round globe have the rank and file enjoyed, or ever can hope to enjoy, the blessings of liberty except under a constitutional democracy. Where under God's sun have people been happier for a century and a half and had more to make them happy than right here in America? Let us not discard a century and a half of history in a moment of breakdown. The alternative forms of government, fascism, nazi-ism, and communism have not proved that they can last even a fraction as long. The Stars and Stripes, with one exception, is the oldest flag now flying anywhere in the world, the symbol of a Government which has remained structurally unchanged for 145 years. Let us remember what Fisher Ames, one of the great orators of the American revolutionary period, once said on this subject, "If all you want", he said, "is a smooth-running machine, absolute government is the best that was ever devised. An absolute government is like a man-of-war, beautiful in motion, irresistible when under way; but a single hidden rock will send her to the bottom, while democracy is like a raft, always in trouble, your feet always wet, but nothing can sink her."

There is, however, danger that the people themselves in the swing of the pendulum, will attempt to do too much by political means—will place upon their own Government burdens which no government can carry.

A certain centralization of authority at Washington is inevitable. The march of science compels it. Radio waves do not stop at State lines. A Federal Radio Commission is necessary. Wildcat oil wells, flowing in several different States, not only demoralize the industry but needlessly exhaust priceless reserves of power. By proration the Federal Government is asked by many in the industry itself to do what the several States are powerless to accomplish. Many similar examples could be given.

It is, however, generally speaking, a fallacy to think that if your city or county government does not suit you, you can improve it by transferring its power to Indianapolis or Washington. The same kind of men will exercise it there as here—and they will be a long way off. It is a fallacy, too, to think that the money you get from Washington is paid by someone other than yourself. It is a fallacy, too, to think that social workers and policemen and the State can raise children better than their parents, flesh of their flesh and blood of their blood. It is a final fallacy to attempt to transfer authority to government from God. There is no substitute for conscience. The soul of man is greater than the state of men.

A great decision must be made soon. You will help make it. It is to find a sound middle ground between the anarchy of irresponsible individualism and the tyranny of state socialism, between Caesarism and laissez faire run wild. That choice is made difficult by the opposing clamor of two classes—both enemies of the Republic—those who oppose everything new and those who favor nothing old.

It is the old recurring struggle between liberty and power. Can we discipline liberty in order to preserve liberty? Can we combine freedom with civilization? Or must democracy be crushed by the iron heel of concentrated power? It is not a new question. It is as old as the world. This struggle was compromised between Nation and State and county and city—and their citizens—when the Federal Constitution was written. The compromise then was along political boundaries. A new compromise along economic boundaries must now be made between men and machines, between science and sociology.

In working out this compromise is there a star by which we may steer? I believe there is—an ancient one—liberty—"ordered liberty"—the great middle meeting place between power and freedom—the noblest compromise ever evolved by men as social animals.

What do we mean by "ordered liberty"? Let me illustrate. Here is a tiny secluded hamlet. You may cross and recross its streets at will. But the hamlet becomes Chicago. You no longer can cross its streets at will. That liberty you have surrendered to the State, symbolized by a blinking red traffic light. But at the same time, all other citizens have surrendered part of their freedom to you. You and they have actually gained by the exchange. By obeying that traffic light you and all others enjoy a greater freedom of movement than you could attain as separate individuals. And it is your light. You, or your representatives, responsive to your will, erected it. And you are still free to come and go. That is democracy, regardless of the exercise of control, or the increase of controls.

The touchstone of legislation in the new democracy seems, therefore, to be this: Consistent with equal rights to all others, will the new controls, the new mechanisms, actually preserve if not in fact enlarge the liberties of the individual? If so, I care not by what name you call them. Freedom—what is it? Freedom to go hungry in a land of limitless plenty is a poor freedom. It is, in fact, tyranny. If unemployment insurance, old-age pensions, insured bank deposits, proration of production, codes of fair competition actually free men and women from the fear of losing their homes, from the fear of insecurity, from the fear of age reduced to want, and children compelled to beg, then we will ourselves vote for these controls. But if they do not enlarge liberty and opportunity we will struggle along as best we may rather than embrace the promises of alien philosophers who advertise that they know what is good for us. We shall remember Abraham Lincoln's words, "Tyrants always bestride the necks of the people on the theory that it is for their own good." When all is said and done they are still tyrants and the necks they tread on are ours.

Let us "hold fast to that which is good"—freedom to choose one's occupation, freedom to marry the mate whom you select, to nurture and instruct your own children, to worship God in church, cathedral, or synagogue, and, finally, freedom of speech, of the press, of the air, which make all other liberties possible.

Few things in nature are more beautiful than a tree. It is a perfect harmony between strength and freedom. The myriad leaves, each turning toward the sun, feed the giant trunk; the trunk and its branches sustain the leaves and lift them toward the light.

So it is with man and the state. The Federal Government is the giant trunk, the branches are the States, the smaller branches and twigs the counties, cities, towns, farmers' cooperatives, labor organizations, chambers of commerce, and the thousands of associations under which men combine to unite their powers. The leaves, with their faces toward the sun, are you and I.

The state sustains the man against all enemies, foreign and domestic; and man, working out his individual destiny, struggling toward the light by reason of some inner compulsion of his life, alone justifies the state.

"I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree."

If the tree falls, the leaves die. If the leaves lose their liberty of growth, the tree rots.

The trunk is material. It is strength and power. The leaves are spiritual. They are freedom and growth. But in the new synthesis which you will help evolve, leaves and trunk, men and the state, will again appear in harmony "diverse as the billows, and one as the sea."

As our fathers and mothers once had the courage to do, with freedom for all and not for the few in their minds, let us once more highly resolve that if Americans are the last to love liberty, we shall love liberty to the last.

TO AMEND THE EMERGENCY FARM MORTGAGE ACT OF 1933

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3540) to amend section 32 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. LAMNECK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. WOODRUFF. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably detained at my office during the roll call on the amendment to the bill (H.R. 9829) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act with respect to the processing tax on hogs. Had I been present, I would have voted in the affirmative.

CENSUS OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Mr. DRIVER. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 392, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H.R. 9391, a bill to provide for a census of unemployment, employment, and occupations to be taken as of November 12, 1934, and for other purposes, and all points of order against said bill are hereby waived. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the Chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Census, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and the amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Mr. DRIVER. Mr. Speaker, upon the adoption of this rule, the bill (H.R. 9391) to provide for a census of unemployment, employment, and occupations to be taken as of November 12, 1934, and for other purposes, will be in order. It is not necessary to state to the House the provisions of this bill. They were fully discussed on Monday, and every Member is informed in respect to them. The purpose of this rule is to enable the majority of this House to give expression upon this legislation.

I yield one-half the time on the rule to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANSLEY] and reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to this rule, and I am opposed to the legislation it would make in order. First, I wish to congratulate the leadership of the House upon its keen appreciation of things. It is eminently fitting the leadership of the House should assign this pork bill to follow the roll call on the hog bill. [Laughter.] I congratulate the leadership of the House when it had the good sense and good judgment to refrain from explaining the bill. There is no explanation which can be made which should prompt the House to make this expenditure of public moneys. The only excuse for this bill being before us at the present time is that it may create political jobs. In opposing this legislation I am not making a partisan appeal. This should not be a partisan question. I believe there are many Democrats in the House who are just as much interested in protecting the Treasury as are the Republicans. I hope they will show their sincerity by voting against this proposed raid. Many Democrats voted against the proposal the other day, and I hope they will continue in their opposition.

It has been stated it was necessary at this time to have taken another census of population. We had a census of population taken in 1930, and only recently another census has been taken in nearly all of the large communities by the P.W.A. workers. These figures are ample for relief purposes, and so are figures taken annually by the municipal authorities. Clearly the need for further figures has not been shown.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. The gentleman said they have just concluded a census in every large city in the country. Will the gentleman tell us whom he means by "they" and what cities he has in mind?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I mean to say by "they", men and women who were on the pay roll of the United States Government. They have been to all of the cities and towns in my district, and they are just reporting the figures at the present time. I mean employees of the Government of the United States by "they." I do not yield any more.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Just for a question?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I refuse to yield. We do not need to spend $8,000,000 to find out if there are eleven or twelve million people in this country who are unemployed. You do not have to take a census to ascertain the people who are out of work. We all know we have an enormous unemployed problem and this information is available in the cities and towns. We have regional offices established by the Government which can tell accurately the needs of the communities. If you want the necessary data for the relief of the unemployed people of the country, all that is required is to communicate with the regional offices or the city relief bureaus. In this way the information can be received promptly and it will not be necessary to wait months for the census returns. It is far better to give the millions you want to spend to give a few people political jobs, to the people who are actually unemployed, and who, if not given relief, will starve. I do not believe this unemployment census is needed under the present set-up of the Government. I protest particularly as a cruel wrong to take the money for this census out of the relief fund of Administrator Hopkins.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 3 minutes more.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I call attention to the fact that in taking this census in November we take the count when the industrial cities should be busy. Several months later the situation will be entirely different, as employment normally is much less after the fall business.

I should like to appeal to the House to have a lucid moment. I should like to appeal to the Membership to forget partisan politics and give consideration to the measure on the merits involved. I should like to ask the Democrats to join with the Republicans like they did on the last hog bill. Let us vote down this second hog bill of the day, and we will have a good record. If we defeat this bill we will have served notice to the American people we are anxious to protect the Treasury. Let us show by our votes it is not the purpose of either Democrats or Republicans to load the Government pay roll with political appointees. [Applause.]

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BLANCHARD].

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. Speaker, on day before yesterday, when this bill was under discussion, I had occasion to make reference to the drought-relief situation with which we are confronted, and the necessity for caring for human wants as well as taking care of the livestock and the farm investment of this country. I want to amplify that just a little today, since I have more time to discuss the proposal, by saying to you that no one today can forecast the drought-emergency needs of the coming few weeks. Counties are constantly being placed on the emergency list; more are being placed on the secondary list. I have before me a sheaf of telegrams from my district which indicate that conditions never before known in southern Wisconsin are rapidly approaching the disaster stage.

Today we are called upon, because of Democratic desperation, to further plunder the relief funds that have been provided to take care of human want and misery. We will need all these millions before many days have passed.

Mr. HENNEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANCHARD. I yield.

Mr. HENNEY. Will the gentleman not agree with me that the Democratic administration is cooperating admirably in this drought situation with the Republican gentlemen from Wisconsin?

Mr. BLANCHARD. The Democratic administration is doing a good job of cooperating, but the Democratic Congress is not.

Mr. HENNEY. I think the gentleman will agree that the Democratic Congressmen who are interested in the drought situation are doing just as much and doing it as well as anybody.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Perhaps more than I have done, but I ask the gentleman if the President has requested this bill?

Mr. HENNEY. I cannot tell the gentleman.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I doubt if the President ever will request a bill of this character.

Now, there is a provision in this bill for the taking over of the administration by the Census Bureau. I presume some of those same officials are the boys who are referred to in the Washington Merry-Go-Round in this morning's paper:

The final A.A.A. clique consists of former Census Bureau workers who know all the routine of punch cards, tabulating machines, and sorting machines which reduce human labor to the minimum. Because of this many of them have been elevated to the exalted rank of assistant supervisor at $2,000 a year, thereby earning the right to strut around the room, lean on the desks of pretty girls, talk learnedly with the supervisor, and in general display an exaggerated ego.

You ought to be satisfied with the pay-roll performances you have staged during the past few months without reaching further into the Treasury of the United States on a foolhardy proposition of this kind. When I say you have displayed pay-roll-grabbing propensities I mean that in the literal sense of the term. I appeal to you to defeat this political plunder of Federal relief funds.

I want to refer to some of the figures which have come from the Civil Service Commission and from the departmental heads to show what you have done.

February 28, 1933, there were regularly employed 563,487 employees listed as civil-service employees. On April 30, 1934, the number of civil-service employees had jumped to 644,108. Add to that the C.C.C. employees, 285,000; persons employed in public works, 387,000; the Army, 182,000; the Navy, 90,000; the Marine Corps, legislative, and judicial, making a grand total of 1,569,308. Naturally we are primarily concerned with regular employees rather than emergency employees. By this measure you propose to add 104,000 more at a cost of anywhere from $7,500,000 to $10,000,000.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BLANCHARD] has expired.

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 3 additional minutes.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The Department of Agriculture, for instance, employed in the District of Columbia on February 28, 1933, 5,649; on April 30, 1934, a total of 9,295 in the District. Out of the District, 20,483 on February 28, 1933, and on April 30, 1934, out of the District, 25,121.

Let me give you the grand total. The grand total is 47,641 in 1934. In 1933, on February 28, only 26,132, an increase in one department of over 21,000.

Another typical Department is that of the Interior. On February 28, 1933, this Department employed in the District of Columbia a total of 3,338, and on April 30, 1934, 6,863. Out of the District on February 28, 1933, only 11,680 were on the rolls, while on April 30, 1934, there were 22,132, and these figures are exclusive of C.C.C. employees.

There is no justification for a survey of this kind. One has recently been conducted and I understand the figures will shortly be available. We know there are millions of people unemployed at present. Let us devote our time and money to finding jobs for those we now know are suffering and then make the count of those remaining. If you pass such a measure you are making a congressional confession of our inability to cope with the situation staring us right in the face, and that there are probably as many unemployed as there were on March 1, 1933. I will not lend my aid to what the public must interpret as a plain, unadulterated political creation of jobs for campaign purposes.

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES].

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, the proponents of this legislation are actuated, of course, by nothing except the highest patriotic and humanitarian motives, free from political bias or any thought of partisan advantage but they furnish a striking illustration of what the nonpolitically minded may accomplish politically when they actually set their minds to it. They conceived the notion that something over 100,000 additional people ought to be given Government jobs in this country and that the appropriate way of doing it was to authorize the taking of a new census.

In their innocent, unselfish, and nonpartisan approach to the consideration of the matter they were not embarrassed by the fact that the Bureau of the Census had only recently finished its work of conducting the most complete census the United States has ever had, including a complete census of unemployment. Undoubtedly that thought never occurred to them. They were not embarrassed by the fact that existing law provides for the taking of an agricultural census beginning the 1st day of January. These considerations never occurred to them in their innocence and nonpartisan desire to do something for the benefit of the public and of the country. It did occur to them, however, that the agricultural census in January would be too late to accomplish results which they had in mind. It also occurred to them that in taking only an agricultural census, a great part of the population of the United States would be overlooked and that the voting precincts in all of the cities would not have anyone to look after them in the coming election. Without giving any thought to the political aspects of the question which might have influenced the judgment of the more practical minded, they decided that it was unfortunate not to have a complete census; they decided that it was unfortunate to have the census on the 1st day of January, and immediately decided to remedy these conditions. They concluded, perfectly innocently, that there was only 1 day out of the 365 days in the year, when the taking of a census should start and that day was the 12th day of November 1934. In fixing upon that date, they did not realize that there was to be an election only 6 days before that time.

Just as innocently they probably will announce later that they do not intend to appoint the census enumerators, one or more in every election district over the United States, until after the election. They will have plenty of time between the 6th day of November, when the election is held, and the beginning of this work on the 12th of November to determine who is qualified to take the census; and, of course, they probably will let all candidates understand that their activity during the political campaign will have nothing to do in determining their fitness for appointment as census enumerators immediately after the election. They will refuse to hold out any hope to the multitude of possible census enumerators in each voting precinct in the United States that they may be appointed to do this work if things go all right in their particular election districts on the 6th of November.

I say, Mr. Speaker, that this is a perfect illustration of how the unselfish humanitarian may accomplish great political results when in his innocence he considers what may be done for the welfare of the country regardless of partisan politics. [Applause.]

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. LEHLBACH].

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker, the bill to be made in order by the rule now pending is the climax, the capstone of the biggest course of exploitation of civilian employment that has occurred in this country in half a century.

In the permanent regular civil service, by devious tricks, by chicancery, there have been dismissed thousands of employees who, under the law, were entitled to consider themselves permanently in the employ of the Government. Hardly had the ink dried on the Economy Act before various transfers of activities from one bureau and division to another, from one department to another, took place, and an Executive order accompanied them, stating that the activities of the employees in the agency abolished or transferred should not bodily be transferred, but that these employees should be separated from the service and then be reemployed in a temporary status in case it was deemed desirable, and that thereafter a permanent civil-service force to do the same work that had been done by these dismissed employees would be established.

Let me give you a specific example. The maintenance and care of Federal buildings throughout the country has always been under the supervision of the Treasury Department, for they had the custody of the buildings under the law. The practice had been to name as custodian the postmaster in each post office. He served the Treasury Department in this capacity without pay. It was determined, however, to transfer the function of custody and maintenance to the Post Office Department. The same custodian, the postmaster, continued, only he was answerable to the Post Office Department instead of to the Treasury Department for his custodianship of that building. The same identical forces of workers under the same bosses were in those buildings throughout the country, the same cleaners and janitors, the same elevator men, the same mechanics to make necessary repairs, the same engineers and firemen to run the heating apparatus in these buildings—all precisely the same except the fiction of a transfer. The result was that in every post office in the United States every employee dealing with the custody and maintenance of that building was stripped of his civil-service status and either fired outright or continued for the time being in a temporary status until the political henchmen of the Congressmen in those districts in which the Federal buildings were located, could be appointed. Then they were covered into the service.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEHLBACH. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I wish the gentleman would point out one charwoman, or one employee of any kind, who has been disturbed in the St. Louis office.

Mr. LEHLBACH. I do not know anything about the St. Louis office. There is probably a conscientious postmaster out there, and there probably is a conscientious outstanding Representative in Congress from St. Louis.

Mr. HENNEY. Any of the other States?

Mr. LEHLBACH. There was another example of similar juggling with permanent civil-service employees of the Government in the various offices of the collectors of internal revenue throughout the country. Originally all employees in these offices were designated deputy collectors and were not under civil service. The work in these offices is of twofold character—the clerical work in the office and the leg work of the deputies who go around examining books and papers and interviewing taxpayers. These were continued to be called deputy collectors and not under civil-service rules. The titles of the clerical workers were made to conform with the nature of their work, such as typists, stenographers, comptometer operators, filing clerks, and other clerical jobs. These were placed under civil service. If a Democratic politician's daughter desired a job as a stenographer already held by a civil-service employee, the procedure was to transfer such employee from the stenographer roll under civil service to the position of deputy collector not under civil service. The employee, however, continued in precisely the same character of work. A little later she would receive notice that she was dismissed, without cause or reason, and the politician's daughter would get the job.

A recent report by the United States Civil Service Commission shows that there are more than 80,000 additional civil employees under the Government than a year ago. The great majority of these are in the various alphabetical emergency relief and recovery administrations. All the bills authorizing these activities exempted employees from civil-service regulations in order that these many thousands of positions might be used as patronage. The result has been wide-spread incompetence, inefficiency, wastefulness, and in some instances corruption.

The administrative activities of the Government are for the purpose of rendering service to the people. The people are entitled to be served with efficiency and economy. They are entitled to a working force selected and maintained with this end in view. This principle was first written into law in 1883 under the administration of President Chester A. Arthur. Each succeeding administration has extended the scope of the principle. It was left for the new deal to scrap, insofar as it lay in their power, the merit system and to return to the spoils system, with all its unquestioned evils.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEHLBACH. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Is it not true that if the census should be taken in November that is the time when the majority of the people will be employed in preparation for the work of disposing of goods demanded for the holiday season?

Mr. LEHLBACH. If the census starts on the 12th of November, it will be necessary to appoint the supervisors, arrange quarters, and to man the quarters with a clerical staff, and select the enumerators some time before that date.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 3 additional minutes.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The idea I tried to convey was that if they take the census in November, when the people are at work in connection with the holiday season, we may be obliged to take another one in January, because the conditions relating to unemployment will be changed.

Mr. LEHLBACH. That does not enter into the consideration of the proponents of this bill at all. They want to set up a headquarters and force in every congressional district, with 2 supervisors, a clerical staff, and at least 200 field workers in the district, all appointed and all ready for action before election day to man the polls at the expense of the Federal Government with those workers.

The Democratic Party reported $5,000,000 to run the last election in 1932. Now they are going to take $7,500,000 out of the relief fund to run the election of 1934 if this bill passes.

Mr. HENNEY. Does the gentleman have reference to the assessments on postmasters made during the last campaign?

Mr. LEHLBACH. No; I have not. May I say that this is not going to do the Democratic Party any good. For every enumerator that you send to the polls as a political worker for the Democratic ticket you will have 20 indignant citizens to whom decency in public affairs is a prime consideration. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON].

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to this rule, and I am opposed to the bill. I am also opposed, most of all, to the hog exemption bill that you just passed when no opportunity was given to say one word.

By your action you have vitiated the contract of every farmer, and I have 15,000 in my district that signed up. You have curtailed every contract by a live-weight exemption of 2,000 pounds, and not one word was allowed to be said here in reference to the matter. I should like to ask the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES], who moved the previous question, how he thinks the hog-and-corn man is going to come out on his contract now?

Mr. O'MALLEY. May I say to the gentleman that it was the Republican leader who offered that amendment.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. The bill was passed. Neither amendment should have been passed, and the bill should not have passed. I thank God there is a Senate to pass on this matter when the House cannot debate for one minute an important measure like this amendment. When a live-weight exemption of 2,000 pounds is allowed every farmer's contract is curtailed. The contract and the farmer's benefit payment is all that is involved in this thing. Now, you have curtailed this absolutely unless the Appropriations Committee brings in a bill to make up the deficit. That is exactly what you have done.

This is the biggest example of the effect of a gag rule, or a vote being taken on a bill without anything being said, that I ever heard of. I think every Member here who has hog-and-corn signers in his district ought to be ashamed for voting for this bill. Half the hogs in the United States, under the bill just agreed to, would be exempt from the processing tax. The Department would be forced to abandon the remainder and let the benefit payments go by the board or ask us for $200,000,000 to make up the difference.

Mr. BOILEAU. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BOILEAU. If this bill is to actually become law, will it not ruin every hog farmer in the country?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Yes. It will curtail the benefit payment that he has been promised and that he has been looking forward to all this year. Cut out the processing tax if you want to, but do not change horses in the middle of the stream and cut an existing contract in two when the farmers have agreed to it. The farmers' hogs have largely been sold and the price depressed some, at least, by the processing tax, but the farmers' hope for a fair break lay in a benefit payment to come. Now you would reduce that. That is what has happened in connection with this bill. Neither side knew what it was doing.

Mr. DRIVER. Has the gentleman ever consulted his minority leader in regard to this matter?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Did the gentleman consult his leaders down there in the A.A.A.?

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. The gentleman is objecting to the way this bill was considered. If he will read the RECORD he will find it was taken up by unanimous consent, and if the gentleman would have objected the bill could not have been considered.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. The action was taken too quickly. We supposed we would have an opportunity to discuss it a little. The second amendment enlarged the viciousness of it and the whole bill should not have passed. There should be no exemption made while the contract is in operation.

Mr. BOILEAU. This will not only destroy the agricultural adjustment program but it will also destroy the present marketing channels for hogs. It will beat down the price, destroy the settled market, and restrict the competition at the central market where the price is fixed.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Yes.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. And now we are on the other hog bill.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Yes. I agree with the gentleman. I do not think there is any Democrat in my State who is going to vote for this bill. May I reiterate that you made a mistake when you passed the other one. You did not know what you were doing. I think I am right. The Appropriations Committee will be asked, in all fairness, to make up this deficit to the signers if the bill goes through, and I hope they will be men enough to make the appropriation.

Mr. DRIVER. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. SNELL. On that, Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 208, nays 134, not voting 88, as follows:

[Roll No. 179]

YEAS—208

Adair	Cary	Dobbins	Granfield
Adams	Castellow	Dockweiler	Gray
Ayers, Mont.	Chapman	Doughton	Greenway
Bailey	Chavez	Douglass	Greenwood
Beam	Claiborne	Doxey	Gregory
Beiter	Cochran, Mo.	Drewry	Griswold
Bland	Colden	Driver	Haines
Blanton	Cole	Duffey	Hamilton
Bloom	Colmer	Duncan, Mo.	Harlan
Boland	Condon	Dunn	Hart
Boylan	Connery	Durgan, Ind.	Harter
Brown, Ga.	Cooper, Tenn.	Eagle	Hastings
Brown, Ky.	Corning	Eicher	Healey
Brunner	Cox	Ellenbogen	Henney
Buck	Cravens	Elizey, Miss.	Hildebrandt
Bulwinkle	Crosby	Faddis	Hill, Ala.
Burch	Cross, Tex.	Farley	Hill, Samuel B.
Burke, Calif.	Crosser, Ohio	Fiesinger	Hoidale
Busby	Crowe	Fitzpatrick	Hughes
Byrns	Cullen	Flannagan	Imhoff
Caldwell	Dear	Ford	Jacobsen
Cannon, Mo.	Deen	Fuller	Jenckes, Ind.
Carden, Ky.	Delaney	Gasque	Johnson, Okla.
Carmichael	Dickinson	Gavagan	Johnson, Tex.
Carpenter, Nebr.	Dingell	Glover	Johnson, W.Va.
Cartwright	Disney	Goldsborough	Keller
Kenney	Monaghan, Mont.	Sabath	Terry, Ark.
Kerr	Montet	Sadowski	Thom
Kocialkowski	Murdock	Sanders, La.	Thomason
Kramer	Musselwhite	Sanders, Tex.	Thompson, Tex.
Lamneck	O'Brien	Sandlin	Truax
Lanham	O'Connell	Schaefer	Turner
Lanzetta	O'Connor	Schuetz	Underwood
Larrabee	Oliver, Ala.	Schulte	Vinson, Ga.
Lindsay	Oliver, N.Y.	Scrugham	Vinson, Ky.
Lloyd	Owen	Sears	Wallgren
Lozier	Parker	Secrest	Walter
Luntieen	Parsons	Shallenberger	Warren
McCarthy	Patman	Shannon	Wearin
McClintic	Pettengill	Sisson	Weaver
McCormack	Peyser	Smith, Va.	Weideman
McFarlane	Prall	Smith, Wash.	Werner
McKeown	Ramsay	Snyder	West, Ohio
McReynolds	Ramspeck	Somers, N.Y.	West, Tex.
McSwain	Rankin	Spence	White
Maloney, Conn.	Richards	Steagall	Whittington
Maloney, La.	Richardson	Strong, Tex.	Williford
Mansfield	Robinson	Studley	Williams
May	Rogers, N.H.	Sullivan	Wood, Ga.
Meeks	Rogers, Okla.	Swank	Wood, Mo.
Miller	Romjue	Sweeney	Woodrum
Milligan	Rudd	Tarver	Zioncheck

NAYS—134

Allen	Dondero	Kniffin	Ransley
Andrew, Mass.	Dowell	Knutson	Reece
Arens	Eaton	Kurtz	Reed, N.Y.
Arnold	Edmiston	Lambertson	Rich
Ayres, Kans.	Edmonds	Lambeth	Robertson
Bacharach	Eltse, Calif.	Lea, Calif.	Rogers, Mass.
Bakewell	Englebright	Lehlbach	Ruffin
Beck	Evans	Lehr	Seger
Beedy	Fletcher	Lemke	Sinclair
Biermann	Focht	Luce	Snell
Blanchard	Foss	Ludlow	Strong, Pa.
Boileau	Frear	McFadden	Stubbs
Britten	Gifford	McGugin	Taber
Buchanan	Gilchrist	McLean	Taylor, S.C.
Burke, Nebr.	Gillespie	McLeod	Taylor, Tenn.
Burnham	Gillette	Mapes	Terrell, Tex.
Cady	Goodwin	Marshall	Thomas
Cannon, Wis.	Goss	Martin, Mass.	Thompson, Ill.
Carpenter, Kans.	Guyer	Martin, Oreg.	Tobey
Carter, Calif.	Hancock, N.Y.	Merritt	Traeger
Carter, Wyo.	Hess	Millard	Treadway
Cavicchia	Hill, Knute	Mitchell	Turpin
Christianson	Hollister	Montague	Umstead
Clarke, N.Y.	Holmes	Moran	Wadsworth
Cochran, Pa.	James	Morehead	Welch
Collins, Calif.	Jenkins, Ohio	Mott	Whitley
Connolly	Johnson, Minn.	Moynihan, Ill.	Wigglesworth
Cooper, Ohio	Jones	Nesbit	Wolcott
Crowther	Kahn	O'Malley	Wolfenden
Culkin	Kelly, Ill.	Peavey	Wolverton
Darrow	Kennedy, N.Y.	Perkins	Woodruff
De Priest	Kinzer	Pierce	Young
Dirksen	Kleberg	Plumley
Ditter	Kloeb	Polk

NOT VOTING—88

Abernethy	Crump	Huddleston	Powers
Allgood	Cummings	Jeffers	Randolph
Andrews, N.Y.	Darden	Kee	Rayburn
Auf der Heide	DeRouen	Kelly, Pa.	Reid, Ill.
Bacon	Dickstein	Kennedy, Md.	Reilly
Bankhead	Dies	Kopplemann	Shoemaker
Berlin	Doutrich	Kvale	Simpson
Black	Fernandez	Lee, Mo.	Sirovich
Boehne	Fish	Lesinski	Smith, W.Va.
Bolton	Fitzgibbons	Lewis, Colo.	Stalker
Brennan	Foulkes	Lewis, Md.	Stokes
Brooks	Frey	McDuffie	Sumners, Tex.
Brown, Mich.	Fulmer	McGrath	Sutphin
Browning	Gambrill	McMillan	Swick
Buckbee	Green	Marland	Taylor, Colo.
Carley, N.Y.	Griffin	Martin, Colo.	Thurston
Celler	Hancock, N.C.	Mead	Tinkham
Chase	Hartley	Muldowney	Utterback
Church	Higgins	Norton	Waldron
Clark, N.C.	Hoeppel	Palmisano	Wilcox
Coffin	Hope	Parks	Wilson
Collins, Miss.	Howard	Peterson	Withrow

So the resolution was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Kee (for) with Mr. Bacon (against).

Mr. Palmisano (for) with Mr. Higgins (against).

Mr. Kennedy of Maryland (for) with Mr. Andrews of New York (against).

Mr. Randolph (for) with Mr. Fish (against).

Mr. Celler (for) with Mr. Chase (against).

Mr. Brooks (for) with Mr. Kvale (against).

Mr. Peterson (for) with Mr. Bolton (against).

Mr. Griffin (for) with Mr. Doutrich (against).

Mr. DeRouen (for) with Mr. Buckbee (against).

Mr. Boehne (for) with Mr. Hope (against).

Mr. Dickstein (for) with Mr. Hartley (against).

Mr. Lee of Missouri (for) with Mr. Muldowney (against).

Mr. Sirovich (for) with Mr. Simpson (against).

Mr. Martin of Colorado (for) with Mr. Stalker (against).
Mr. Lewis of Colorado (for) with Mr. Tinkham (against).
Mr. Sutphin (for) with Mr. Waldron (against).
Mr. Black (for) with Mr. Swick (against).
Mr. Kopplemann (for) with Mr. Withrow (against).
Mr. Hancock of North Carolina (for) with Mr. Powers (against).
Mr. Bankhead (for) with Mr. Stokes (against).
Mr. Mead (for) with Mr. Reid of Illinois (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. McDuffie with Mr. Thurston.
Mr. McMillan with Mr. Kelly of Pennsylvania.
Mr. Carley of New York with Mr. Shoemaker.
Mr. Rayburn with Mr. Frey.
Mr. Huddleston with Mr. Berlin.
Mr. Wilson with Mr. Church.
Mr. Taylor of Colorado with Mr. Darden.
Mr. Smith of West Virginia with Mr. Hoeppel.
Mr. Reilly with Mr. McGrath.
Mr. Lewis of Maryland with Mr. Wilcox.
Mrs. Norton with Mr. Utterback.
Mr. Parks with Mr. Brown of Michigan.
Mr. Fulmer with Mr. Lesinski.
Mr. Sumners of Texas with Mr. Jeffers.
Mr. Gambrill with Mr. Marland.
Mr. Dies with Mr. Fitzgibbons.
Mr. Crump with Mr. Foulkes.
Mr. Clark of North Carolina with Mr. Auf der Heide.
Mr. Allgood with Mr. Collins of Mississippi.
Mr. Browning with Mr. Cummings.
Mr. Abernethy with Mr. Coffin.

Mr. BURKE of California changed his vote from "nay" to "aye."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

UNEMPLOYMENT CENSUS

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 9391) to provide for a census of unemployment, employment, and occupations to be taken as of November 12, 1934, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H.R. 9391, with Mr. BULWINKLE in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ELLENBOGEN].

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, before beginning my remarks on the bill, in the brief period of time that has been allotted to me, I should like to answer those gentlemen who have said that this census is not necessary because there has been a census taken in every large city of the United States. These gentlemen are not correct in their statement. The only census conducted under the Federal departments since the census of 1930 has been a trial or sample census in three cities: Lancaster, Pa., Bridgeport, Conn., and Springfield, Ohio.

These sample censuses were conducted under the Department of Labor. There has been no other census conducted by any Federal Department. There have been censuses conducted by various State agencies in various cities of the United States, but they have been conducted by State and not by Federal agencies. These censuses cover only a small part of the population and are not comparable one with the other, because they do not contain the same questions and are not based upon the same principles. These local censuses do not furnish adequate data regarding the number of employed or unemployed or regarding the occupation of the unemployed in the United States.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a short question?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I yield if it is a very brief question, I only have 3 minutes.

Mr. SNELL. I referred the other day to the section of the law and showed that the same provisions in this bill are carried in that law including the employment agency provision and the reports from the C.W.A.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. There has been no similar census conducted, as I have told the gentleman.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. In just a moment, I will yield.

Mr. Chairman, I say without hesitation that the passage of this bill is a vital necessity; that if you are a friend of the unemployed you must vote for this bill. There cannot be a solution of the problem of unemployment unless we have the facts. We must know how many unemployed there are, who they are, where they are, and what their occupations are. You cannot say in one breath that you are a friend of the unemployed and in the other breath that you will vote against this measure; and let me tell you gentlemen, if I know anything about it—and I may not—if you think it is politically expedient to vote against this bill you may find out that you are badly mistaken.

We cannot have lasting recovery in the United States, unless we know the number of unemployed, unless we know where they are and what their occupations are, and we cannot get this information except through this census.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman two additional minutes.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Yes; for a brief question.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Up to the present time I have not heard anybody say whether or not this is an administration bill.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. It is supported by every department of the Government.

Mr. O'MALLEY. How about the President?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I do not know the attitude of the President. I believe the President is in favor of it, but I have no right to speak for the President.

Mr. FOCHT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I am sorry. I would like to yield to my colleague, but I do not have the time.

Mr. FOCHT. The gentleman made a gross error in his statement here.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I made no error. I am extremely sorry that I cannot yield.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FOCHT] ought to obey the rules—his colleague from Pennsylvania [Mr. ELLENBOGEN] has refused to yield.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I want to say, Mr. Chairman, that if we are to have unemployment insurance in this country we must first have the facts. We must know how much unemployment insurance would cost, and we cannot know this, unless we know how many unemployed there are. We cannot have any social legislation, we cannot have any intelligent plan for a solution of the unemployment problem unless we conduct this census. We need this census to furnish us the basic information which we need for the consideration of legislation for shorter working hours, whether 30 hours or 32 hours and for the preparation of intelligent legislation for old-age pensions. You must also vote for the census, if you favor unemployment insurance.

Mr. Chairman, the welfare of the unemployed demands that we pass this bill, the welfare of the country demands that we pass it, and I certainly hope the Congress will enact this bill into law. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HESS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BRITTEN].

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, for the time being I will decline to yield to anyone. I agree in part with the gentleman who has just taken his seat [Mr. ELLENBOGEN]. I appeal to the friends of the unemployed not to allow seven and a half million dollars to be taken away from relief work and spent for a political machine, and that is what this bill does. It appropriates seven and a half million dollars, which is to be taken out of the relief fund.

I agree with the gentleman from Pennsylvania in part, and I call upon the friends of the unemployed in this House to vote down this bill. It was defeated day before yesterday by Democratic votes, not by Republican votes, and within 1 hour after the defeat of the bill the telephone wires between New York and Washington "got hot". Jimmie Gerard, former treasurer of the National Democratic Committee, was excited over the loss, or the prospective loss, of 100,000 persons to be put on the pay roll for the benefit of the Democratic Party in the next November election. Let me tell you something.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRITTEN. I decline to yield. This bill was defeated day before yesterday by Democratic votes because the President of the United States is not for it. Everybody on your side of the aisle knows that the President is not for this legislation. The only indication the House has that the administration is in favor of this legislation is one line from the Director of the Budget, who says that this legislation is not in conflict with the financial program of the Government.

Let me appeal to you gentlemen on that side of the aisle—you who, like myself, are going home to be elected next November. Think of the injustice you are doing to yourself as well as to your Government when you vote to throw away so large an amount of money in a perfectly useless direction.

Why do you suppose your distinguished leader, the Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations [Mr. BUCHANAN] voted against the bill? He must have had some sound reason for doing so. Why do you suppose my distinguished friend from Illinois [Mr. ARNOLD] voted against this bill? Why do you suppose the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. AYRES] voted against it?

What about the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], and there is no higher type or more able man on either side of the aisle than the gentleman from Virginia, who voted against this bill the other day, all of them members of the powerful Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. CROSSER, Chairman of the Steering Committee, voted against the legislation. The distinguished Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS] voted against the legislation.

The gentleman from Oregon, General MARTIN, now a candidate for Governor, voted against the bill. Former Governor Montague voted against the legislation, and also former Governor Morehead, of Nebraska, voted against the bill.

I appeal to my Democratic friends, I am asking no one any questions, but draw your own conclusions as to why these distinguished Democrats voted against this legislation. They refused to stultify themselves with so sordid a vote.

Now, I have been here 22 years, and in all my experience I have never seen a majority party refuse to vote for a roll call on a rule which they themselves had just presented, and you did it unanimously a few minutes ago on that side of the aisle.

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRITTEN. I decline to yield; I thank the gentleman. You gentlemen voted unanimously against it, or at least you all refused to stand up and be counted as favoring a roll coll.

Mr. AYRES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRITTEN. I have declined to yield, but I did use the gentleman's name, and I yield. The gentleman remained seated also.

Mr. AYRES of Kansas. The gentleman was mistaken when he said that we voted unanimously on this side for the rule.

Mr. BRITTEN. Oh, that is not what I said. I said the Democratic side voted unanimously to refuse a roll call on the rule, and they did, and the gentleman was one of them.

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRITTEN. No.

Mr. CONNERY. The gentleman does not want to put us in the wrong? I voted against the rule.

Mr. BRITTEN. The gentleman does not understand me. I said the gentleman remained seated or refused to stand on a rising vote, to demand the yeas and nays on the resolution making the bill in order.

Mr. CONNERY. It was the gentleman from California [Mr. HOEPPEL] who rose at the time of the little altercation.

Mr. BRITTEN. I am talking about today. The gentleman is still in Boston reviewing the fleet.

Mr. CONNERY. I have not been in Boston since January.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, if this bill should become a law, and the authorities ultimately have the expenditure of seven and a half million dollars, I am wondering how they will feel about having taken seven and a half million dollars that has already been set aside for the poor, the underfed, the underclothed, the unemployed of the United States. The language in this bill is very clear, that the seven and a half million dollars shall be taken from funds already appropriated for the relief of those in distress, and you gentlemen are being called upon by a bunch of politicians—that is all it is—to pass this bill in the interest of politics. There never was a more purely political bill presented to this House in the history of the American Congress. What has become of all of your promises for economy in government? It is perfectly natural that you should not want a yea-and-nay vote on the resolution.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. The gentleman should appeal to us upon the basis of statesmanship.

Mr. BRITTEN. I appeal to gentlemen on the basis of statesmanship, as my young friend from Seattle says, and I regard him as a great statesman, although I think he erroneously voted for this rule.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. And he is going to vote for it again.

Mr. BRITTEN. And he is showing very bad judgment in his young statesmanship.

Mr. BLANTON. Which kind of statesmanship—Republican or Democratic?

Mr. BRITTEN. There is only one kind of pure statesmanship, and that is on the Republican side of the aisle. What has become of all your promises to do away with useless commissions and to amalgamate others? What has become of your promises for economy in government? Surely no one can reconcile the expenditure of seven and a half million dollars in this useless direction? I am talking from a serious standpoint. No one can reconcile the expenditure of this seven and a half million dollars in a political direction when it has already been appropriated in the interest of the destitute, the starving, and the hungry.

Mr. Chairman, this bill is, frankly, intended to provide approximately 104,000 jobs next November, when a very large percentage of them may be used in the promotion of Democratic politics and Democratic votes. It will be expended very largely in the big cities of the country, where from 200 to 400 workers will be enrolled in each congressional district, and their enrollment will depend entirely upon their promises to produce Democratic votes at all hazards.

This seven and one-half million dollar expenditure will be a valuable adjunct to the present depleted Democratic national treasury, and that is one of its main purposes, while the terrible part about it is that this money, instead of being expended for the needy, the sick, and the underfed, will now go to the fat, the healthy, and the progressive Democratic precinct workers and the relief funds will be reduced accordingly.

The very best available figures would indicate that there are some 10,000,000 adults out of employment at the present moment and that the National Recovery Administration has been a failure. Each day sees the cracking up of another code, and I predict that it will not be long before those which do not crack of their own impotence will be torn asunder by the Federal Trade Commission and the courts.

Mr. Chairman, the best available authority indicates that there are 5,000,000 families in more or less destitute circumstances in the United States today. A truly sad commentary on the success of the new deal, which is calling for the expenditure of countless billions of the people's money in a false hope to avert destruction. If it were not so serious a matter it would be real funny at this time to read some of the promises of the Democratic national platform.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, the real reason for all this loud concentrated Republican opposition to this bill is that they are not going to have anything to do with its administration.

We are just now unshuffling the legislative cards that have been stacked in this Nation for a dozen years. For a dozen years before we Democrats took over the affairs of this Government, the Republicans filled every appointive office in the United States with Republicans—600,000 of them, all Republican appointees, all over the United States, scattered in every little hamlet, in every district. When they would have a civil-service examination and the three eligibles did not embrace a Republican, Republicans would have that examination set aside and would have another one held, and sometimes would have to hold two or three examinations before they could get a Republican in some districts on the eligible list, but Republicans would hold examinations, and set them aside, and keep on holding them until they did get a Republican. And finally we had Republicans in every office. And they did help Republicans to win elections. Republicans know all about winning elections with pay-roll employees. We are unshuffling those cards now.

Talk about politics! Why, we put this off until after all of the elections, both primaries and the general election in November. If we had wanted to indulge in politics, we would have had this census right away, before the primaries, when most of the elections in many of the districts are definitely decided. We are putting it entirely out of politics.

The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MCGUGIN] is your Republican keynoter, whom you put up here to lead the fight against this bill, and you Republicans put him on the fighting line all the time. He is the one who does your real fighting for you on the floor. Sometimes you desert him and let him get shot and then you fail to go out and pick him up, but my friend Mr. MCGUGIN let the cat out of the bag when he said that all of that filibustering monkey business you Republicans pulled off here the other day—the reading of the Journal for 2 hours and a half, with the eight roll calls and the reading of all the names on the roll calls—was done by your minority leader [Mr. SNELL] because he was filibustering against this census bill. You went to all that trouble to try to keep us Democrats from filling a few jobs that are necessary and putting decent Democrats in them.

I will tell you gentlemen on the Republican side what is going to be done with this money. Oh, you know that you have put every postmaster in for 12 years, you have put every postal clerk in for 12 years, and you have put every rural carrier in for 12 years. You have filled the clerical forces in all the departments with Republicans. You have filled the customs offices with Republicans; you have filled every independent office, bureau, and commission in Washington with Republicans; you have fixed it so that there was hardly a Democrat in any position when we Democrats took charge of the Government. It is all right when you Republicans get the jobs. You have not objected to any of these billion-dollar bills that furnished the jobs and money to all of these Republicans that Mr. Secretary Ickes has been appointing in every district in the United States. That is all right. You have not objected to all of these Republicans that Mr. Secretary Wallace has been putting into every district in the United States.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I regret that I have not the time to yield to my good friend from New York. He is a man of such splendid judgment, and is such an able legislator, that I know he cannot be proud of his party organization wasting all of that time the other day in spending 2½ hours reading the Journal, and reading all of the names in eight different roll calls, when the Journal otherwise could have been read and disposed of in 3 minutes, had the usual custom been pursued.

But, after all, you did not kill this bill. It is far from being dead. It did not pass the other day because it was called up under suspension of rules requiring a two-thirds majority. There were 227 votes cast for the bill, and only 128 votes against it, but as it failed to receive a two-thirds majority, it was stopped temporarily.

And you Republicans cannot escape the responsibility of temporarily stopping it the other day, when such action was futile and accomplishes nothing, and forces all of this time to be used now to pass it, for the press has held you Republicans responsible. The Washington Daily News in its editorial today condemning you Republicans said that you had reached, in stock-market terms, "a new low", and in condemning your House organization said: "Action of the Republican House minority in beating the Lozier bill to finance an unemployment census this fall is as cynical a bit of pettifogging politics as the country has suffered this season." Pettifogging politics! Is not that an indictment against you Republicans? The press does not say that Democrats defeated this bill. It says you Republicans in this House did it. And it says that you Republicans were guilty of "pettifogging politics."

When Secretary Ickes or Secretary Henry Wallace has been putting Republicans in all the jobs in every district in the United States, that is perfectly all right with the minority leader and his Republican organization in this House. He does not filibuster against those billion-dollar bills. He does not force the House to spend 2½ hours uselessly reading the names of 435 Members on eight roll calls, in reading the Journal, to defeat those bills. They are all right. They furnished jobs for Republicans, and money to pay them. They have a blue spot on them that makes them eligible; but when the Democrats want to appoint the necessary employees to take the unemployment census, it is all wrong.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] has expired.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. BLANTON. This $7,500,000, that is already appropriated, spent in this good purpose, will do more real good to the country, and will put more deserving widows with minor children who are starving, in a place where they can honestly earn meat and bread for them, and it will do more good in helping us eventually to put all of the unemployed back to work, and will be of more value than all the legislation you Republicans passed in all of your 12 years put together. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HESS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH].

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I feel I am up against a pretty difficult proposition in endeavoring to answer the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON]. I have learned so much about this bill from what the gentleman has said, and no doubt the House has learned just as much, and it seems that further discussion is almost unnecessary.

In an experience in legislative bodies, commencing, I admit it, back as far as 1905, I have had the opportunity of seeing a great many purely political measures presented and enacted. Every legislative body occasionally undertakes measures of that kind. I can remember very well in the Albany Legislature, upon instances in which the State government changed hands, that the party succeeding to power passed bills legislating out of office members of the defeated party, and under some color of respectability passed so-called "new legislation" in order that members of their own party might be appointed to the places made vacant. We called them "ripper" bills. There are Members of this House with whom I had the privilege of serving in the New York Legislature years ago, and I am sure they recall the character of legislation to which I refer. I have seen a great deal of it, and as the years have gone by I have become somewhat philosophical about them. Moreover, I have lost what faith I ever had in the efficacy of that kind of legislation when put through by the party in power. There is a momentary triumph about it, a momentary satisfaction when some people are put out of office and the victors take their place, but day in and day out that kind of legislation is not politically profitable. I would be philosophical upon this occasion, too, were it not for the fact that this bill is quite different from any I have ever encountered, in that it does not seek to carry out the usual intent of so-called "ripper" bills by putting somebody out of appointive office, a Republican, for example, and putting a Democrat in his place, but rather—and I do not mean to use overly harsh language—rather represents, as I see it, an attempt to control the congressional election by the use of Federal funds for the employment of workers.

Now, let us see just what this thing is. You fix the date for this census as of November 12, 1934. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] says that the fixing of the date takes this whole thing out of politics, takes away from it all political significance. How about that? You have to set up this huge machinery to be manned by 105,000 appointees before November 12. It will take some weeks to do that. A very large number of people will apply for the 105,000 places, probably 10 for every place. The appointments, we all know, will be made under Democratic auspices. Let us concede that. The drive for those appointments will commence in the middle of October, or earlier, and thousands who hope to land a place to be paid $4 a day for several weeks' work will live with a lively appreciation of favors yet to come from Democratic sources; and it is to be assumed that they will demonstrate to the best of their ability, long prior to November 12, indeed prior to November 6, which is election day, that they are loyal to Democratic candidates for Congress in the respective districts. And in each district there will be from 300 to 800 such persons either hoping to be employed or actually notified of their appointment, all of them thrilling with loyalty and zeal for the cause.

This thing is a deliberate attempt to sway and debauch the election, and goes further than anything I have ever known in political legislation. My friends, in the long, long run it will not pay. People will learn about it. People will repudiate the spirit in which it is done, and eventually it will hurt those who stand for it. At first it may handicap some of us on this side of the aisle in our congressional campaigns, but sooner or later the sense of fairness of the American people, regardless of their political affiliations, will reject this ruthless political legislation. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] has expired.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WOOD].

Mr. WOOD of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I have listened with a great deal of interest to the discussions on this bill. I must say that it is one of the most glaring illustrations of petty politics played by the minority side of this House that I have ever yet observed in this session.

This Government has tribunals set up to ascertain how many hogs there are in the country, how many sheep, how many cattle, how much wheat, how much corn, and how much of other commodities we have in the warehouses and storehouses of the Nation; we know the extent of the wealth of the Nation; we know that about 1 percent of the population owns 60 percent of the wealth; we know about almost everything else and have complete statistics on every matter concerning the welfare of the people except statistics as to how many unemployed there are in this country.

A while ago it was said on the floor that it was unfair and ridiculous, that it was playing petty politics, to spend $7,500,000 to take a census of the unemployed at a time when the farmers of the Central States have been visited by a great catastrophe, the drought. In reply let me say that I am willing to vote whatever the President and the administration believes is necessary to relieve the farmers of the West, be it $500,000,000 or $1,000,000,000.

The Department of Labor has not the facilities to ascertain the number of unemployed in this Nation. About the only two tribunals that know anything about it are the American Federation of Labor through its monthly census and the Department of Labor through a partial survey owing to lack of facilities. At all our hearings before the Committee on Labor and the committee which considered the 6-hour bill, and at hearings before other committees, Hon. Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, has frankly stated that the Department of Labor did not have the facilities to conduct a sufficient survey to ascertain the number of unemployed in this Nation.

I think it is necessary for us to know the number of unemployed there are in this country. I do not know of anything at this time that is more important than to learn whether we have five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven million, or whatever the number may be of unemployed, many of whom are starving.

A great many of the large employers testified before our Labor Committee during this session of Congress, and in interviews in the press, have contended there are between 2,000,000 and 4,000,000 unemployed. Some have said that we have just about reached the level of 1929. The people of the country know not the condition. So I think it is necessary that it be accurately ascertained. I think it is one of the most important things for the Congress and the people of this Nation to know how many unemployed, suffering, starving millions of human beings we have in this Nation.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD of Missouri. I yield.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Are not the Republicans afraid that if this census is taken it will show how terrible the depression was when Hoover was in power?

Mr. WOOD of Missouri. Oh, certainly; yes.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. And they are afraid of the comparison.

Mr. WOOD of Missouri. They are also afraid it will show that some improvements have been made. [Applause.] They are also afraid that some Democrats will be employed; but I would say to the Republicans that they are the best appointive job-getters and job-keepers I ever saw.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD of Missouri. I yield.

Mr. MOTT. If this legislation is so vitally necessary why defer the taking of the census until next November?

Mr. WOOD of Missouri. I am sorry our Government has not established a permanent Census Department.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. WOOD of Missouri. This bill, I realize, is only a makeshift, but at least it is a beginning and I hope that in the near future we shall have a permanent census bureau so that we may at all times know just how many unemployed there are in this country, in order that the President and Congress may at all times be in possession of accurate statistics upon which to base the need for proper corrective legislation.

This information is necessary in order to know whether we should have a 6-hour day, a 5-hour day, or a 4-hour day. At the present time no one can state what the length of the workday should be because no one knows how many unemployed there are in the country. This is one reason why I am for this bill and believe that it should pass without delay. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HESS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER].

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, the persistency with which the Democratic majority addresses itself to the enactment of this bill convinces me that argument and reason are futile. I must, however, pay a passing compliment to the usual opponents of junkets by saying that in this instance the junket, apparently, is entirely in order.

Because of the futility of argument, but desiring to bring some contribution to the thought of the day, with apologies I turn to Kipling and offer these lines:

THE 1934 CENSUS

(With apologies to Kipling)

By J. WILLIAM DITTER

When the census' last name is written,
And the lists are blotted and dried;
When the public coffers are raided
And the need of distress laid aside;
They shall blush in shame to confess it,
The Democrats of the new deal,
That they took the charity dollars
Their party's plums to conceal.

And those that are true will regret it,
They shall sit in a mourner's chair;
They shall wonder why they voted
To barter plums for despair.
They shall see real need loom before them;
Millions still looking for work;
They shall rue that day in the Congress
When their duty they brazenly shirk.

Not even the jesters shall praise them,
The honest will bow in their shame,
For the 1934 census
Will be a blot on their name.
Ten million dollars just squandered,
Thrown out as political pelf,
To feed the old hungry donkey,
To save the party itself.

And all the needy shall ask them,
"Are votes to be eaten for bread?"
"Is this a part of the new deal
By which we're now to be fed?"
"Has Tugwell found a new theory
To help his extravagant plan;
Will plowed-under wheat, corn, and barley
Bear votes as the foodstuff of man?"

Ten million dollars of taxes!
Ten million dollars of greed!
Ten million dollars of census!
For only the Democrats' need.
Ten million men standing idle!
Ten million men filled with zeal!
Thrice 10,000,000 men disappointed
By the fruits of the famous new deal.

[Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONNERY].

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of this bill. The American Federation of Labor feels the necessity of this bill, as has been described by previous speakers, and made particularly plain and clear by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WOOD].

Miss Perkins, Mr. Hopkins, and others connected with the Government appeared before the Committee on Labor and explained that they had no really accurate statistics as to the number of unemployed in the United States.

I think it will be generally agreed that the American Federation of Labor figures come closest to the real figures of the unemployed because the American Federation of Labor gets them directly from their central labor unions throughout the country, and I think that their figures are probably the most accurate that we get under the present conditions.

The question has come up as to why this bill is brought out, the Republicans saying that it is a political move, and ask why the census should be held up until November. The committee informs me that the reason the taking of the census is being held up until November is partly for the very reason that the gentlemen on the minority side offer in objecting to this bill; that is, if it were started now the Republicans would be sure to say that we are using the time between now and election to put people to work on the census for the purpose of obtaining their votes.

There is another reason why this has been put over until November. The committee states that is the best time to take an agricultural census. They say that is the best time to get an accurate census on agriculture.

Mr. MOTT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONNERY. I yield to the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. MOTT. I just wanted to be sure I understood the gentleman correctly and his statement as to the reason why the taking of this census is deferred until November. The gentleman's statement is that it is to remove from the bill any possible objection on the ground of political activity?

Mr. CONNERY. Yes. That is one of the reasons. I may say that, as far as political activity is concerned, if the gentleman will ask any Member on this side of the House what he personally thinks it means to him he will find out that Member will feel that it is a bad political proposition, because the naming of one man or woman to a job will make him 1 friend and 99 enemies.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONNERY. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. O'CONNOR. It was the consensus of opinion of all the experts that this was the best time of the year to find out the true situation in reference to unemployment, on account of certain seasonal occupations?

Mr. CONNERY. Yes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I am sure the gentleman will recall the effort the Republicans in this House made for years to shift the date of the agricultural census from January to November 12.

Mr. CONNERY. Yes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Only last year they offered an amendment to have the agricultural census taken on election day. Of course, the agricultural districts used to be in the main on the Republican side until they saw the light.

Mr. CONNERY. May I make a comment in reference to the beautiful poem which the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER] read? He did not mention in the poem that there were approximately 16,000,000 people out of work during the previous administration and that the Democratic administration has put five or six million of those people back to work, and we will continue to put people back to work as fast as we can. However, while I did not agree with the sentiments it was a pleasure to listen to the fine reading of the poem by my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER].

Mr. DITTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONNERY. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. DITTER. Of course, if the views of the gentleman are correct, the need of the census becomes——

Mr. CONNERY. More acute.

Mr. DITTER. More acute?

Mr. CONNERY. Yes. We want to put those people to work who have been out of work. We have to find out who they are and where they are before we can put them back to work.

Mr. GRISWOLD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONNERY. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. GRISWOLD. May I suggest to the gentleman that the original of the poem, To the Viceroy, written by Kipling, ends, "Good night, don't dream." I would suggest that the gentleman also "don't dream."

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONNERY. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BLANTON. We are always loyal to our Republican friends across the aisle. Possibly some of them will need a job after November.

Mr. CONNERY. Yes; we shall put them to work and take care of them first.

Mr. MOTT. Does the gentleman think it is necessary, just for the purpose of removing political suspicion, to delay this very important census until next November?

Mr. CONNERY. Yes; for the reasons given by the chairman. He says that is the best time to take an agricultural census and, frankly, I think so too.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HESS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. CONNERY. I may say to my colleagues that whether it is the Republicans or Democrats who are in power, in connection with everything you do you are accused of political favoritism and partisanship.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman consent to an amendment to postpone this census until after Thanksgiving so that we can get a census on the turkeys?

Mr. CONNERY. It might not be a bad idea to take a census of the turkeys too and then distribute some of them to people who have been unemployed and hungry for a long time.

It is vital to have this census. According to the figures of the American Federation of Labor there are approximately 10,000,000 people unemployed in the United States. We ought to have the figures to show us exactly how many people are unemployed. We ought to have these figures available so that we could enact constructive measures to put them back to work, whether it is under a 30-hour week, whether it has to do with unemployment insurance, or whatever may be necessary to put them back to work. This is a step in the right direction toward finding out how many people are unemployed in every State of the Union, and it is proper to have it done under the Census Bureau and not piecemeal, a little here and a little there, in different bureaus.

Mr. Chairman, I hope this bill passes.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HESS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, I hold in my hand the Census Act of 1929. Much of the controversy centers around section 16 of the act, which reads as follows:

SEC. 16. That there shall be in the year 1935, and once every 10 years thereafter, a census of agriculture and livestock, which shall show the acreage of farm land, the acreage of the principal crops, and the number and value of domestic animals on the farms and ranges of the country. The schedule employed in this census shall be prepared by the Director of the Census. Such census shall be taken as of the 1st day of January and shall relate to the crop year. The Director of the Census may appoint enumerators or special agents for the purpose of this census in accordance with the provisions of the permanent Census Act.

I know it must have come with some surprise to certain Members of the House when this bill was brought in here and a suspension of the rules was asked in order to pass it. I may say that I have great admiration for the gentlemen on the majority side of the aisle, who are recognized as some of the ablest men in this country, men who are always solid and substantial, men who are classed by the public at large as statesmen, who voted against this bill. They voted against the bill because they recognized that it was purely a political measure. They realized that there was a purpose, and a political purpose, in moving up the time of this census practically a year and fixing it just after the time of election.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REED of New York. I have only a few minutes, and I regret I cannot yield.

Another thing that impressed the men on the majority side who voted against this bill was the fact that the last census, taken at a cost of $40,000,000, has only been completed within the past 6 months. Now it is proposed to start an army of 100,000 people taking a new census that it was never intended to take until 1935.

I know the men on that side of the House are not proud of this bill. I know that you realize that your people back home are not going to approve any such political measure, and I am satisfied, too, if you men were to go back into your districts at the present time and study the temper of your people and the condition they are in, you would not vote for this bill when it comes up for a vote in the House. It is an astounding proposition that, after this bill was fairly and squarely defeated on the floor of this House, and defeated because men on your own side of the House recognized the unsoundness of the measure and that it was purely a political measure, you should go to your Rules Committee and there obtain a rule to bring in this bill and try to ram it down the throats of the men of this House.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REED of New York. I cannot yield.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I want to correct a statement which the gentleman has made. The rule was reported out and was in existence and on the calendar long before the suspension was called up.

Mr. REED of New York. I understand it was; but you did not have the courage to bring in the bill, and finally it was called up under suspension.

Mr. O'CONNOR. But the rule was on the calendar.

Mr. REED of New York. You were defeated under suspension of the rules, and then you brought up the rule.

Mr. KELLER. What was the vote?

Mr. REED of New York. The vote was 172 yeas and 128 nays against the bill.

Now, here is what happened, and you men know it, and the country ought to know it. Just as soon as the outstanding statesmen on that side of the aisle recognized the imperfections of this bill and recognized that it was a bill you could not justify, then what happened? The party lash was applied, and you men were whipped into line.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HESS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of the time on this side to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, what is the object of this bill? If we take a census of those who are unemployed on the 12th of November, you know and I know that this will not be right by 25 percent on the 1st of January.

It is just a worthless job, and it is to be taken at a time when industry is slowing down, and farming is slowing down because of seasonal conditions to a point where unemployment is at its peak. So much for this feature of the bill.

There is one more feature I want to talk about a moment, and that is the matter of good faith. Your Appropriations Committee came in here, and there was passed early in February a bill providing $950,000,000, ostensibly for relief. If a Republican came in here and proposed to take seven and a half to eight million dollars out of an appropriation for relief and blow it for campaign expenses for the Republican Party, he would be accused of defalcation. Now, you know in your own hearts that the operation of passing this bill is defalcation—it is obtaining money under false pretenses.

Mr. MILLARD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. MILLARD. Does the gentleman know that the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BUCHANAN], voted against this bill?

Mr. TABER. I know that, and I wish that the other Representatives on the majority side of the aisle would show just as much honesty and just as much courage and just as much faithfulness to the people of the United States as the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee did when this bill was up for consideration.

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I cannot yield at the present time.

Let me now talk about one more feature of this bill, and I have but a minute remaining.

At the present time there are on the Federal pay roll 1,569,000 in one way or another. This bill proposes to increase that number by 105,000. The Democratic record is great on increasing the pay roll.

When the Republicans in 1921 came into office there were about 680,000 United States civil-service employees, and about 800,000 others on the pay roll, making over 1,400,000. When the Democrats came back into office that had been reduced about 600,000, and it was down—including 100,000 on the relief employment—to 856,000. The Democratic Party has already increased the number on the Federal pay roll 713,000.

Are we going to have the nerve to add 105,000 more to the pay roll by taking the money that was appropriated for relief? There are already today supported by the Federal Government on the relief employment and on relief 5,147,000. That means, allowing three and one-half to a family, practically 17,000,000.

Now, altogether, including the relief roll and those on the pay roll, there are 6,000,000 families getting their living out of the taxpayers of the United States. On the same basis that means 21,000,000 living on the pay roll of the United States.

Is it not time to stop foolish expenditures? Is it not time to have respect for our oath of office? Is it not time to stop this kind of raping of the Federal Treasury of the United States and to vote down this bill? [Applause.]

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, this bill was reported after very extensive hearings. Obviously, our Republican colleagues on the other side of the aisle have not read the hearings and do not understand the provisions and purpose of this measure. This bill comes before Congress with the unequivocal approval of Mr. Roper, Secretary of the Department of Commerce. It is sanctioned by Mr. Austin, Director of the Bureau of the Census. Its enactment is advocated by Secretaries Wallace, Ickes, and Perkins. Every Cabinet officer having anything to do with agriculture, commerce, business, employment, or labor is unequivocally for this legislation.

General Johnson, National Recovery Administrator, and Mr. Hopkins, Federal Emergency Relief Administrator, are asking for the enactment of this bill. L. W. Douglas, Director of the Budget, in a letter to the Secretary of Commerce, said:

> A census of agriculture as of January 1, 1935, is already authorized and appropriation for the first year has been made. The bill merely advances the date of this census to November 12, 1934, which is not inconsistent with the President's financial program, and that a census of unemployed persons and their dependents within the limits of the continental United States, to provide information necessary to aid in the formulation of relief and other public policies, providing that such census may include such enumeration of population as may be appropriate and necessary for this purpose, to correct the inconsistencies therein with present law, and to authorize allotment from emergency funds of not to exceed $7,540,000 for taking this census, exclusive of agriculture, the expenditures contemplated by such legislation would not be in conflict with the financial program of the President.

Do our Republican friends charge that Louie Douglas, the "hard-boiled" Director of the Budget, would give his approval to legislation that was purely partisan, that was without merit, for which there was no necessity, and which would involve an expenditure of $7,540,000? Every Member of this House and every well-informed Democrat or Republican in the United States knows that the Director of the Budget, Mr. Douglas, is undeniably a watchdog of the Treasury; that he stands guard over the funds of the Government and only sanctions appropriations for projects that are undoubtedly sound and the consummation of which will promote the public welfare.

If our Republican friends would read the hearings and exercise their mental faculties, their foolish arguments would dissolve in thin air, and if they could only forget their partisanship, they would give unqualified support to this legislation. Their objections will not stand the acid test of reason. If the taking of a census was ever justified, that time is now.

The charge has been made that this legislation is essentially political, merely a scheme to provide offices for hungry politicians. This, I deny. Where is there a man in this House, where is there a person in the United States who will claim that Secretary Ickes, when he urged the enactment of this legislation was influenced by partisan motives? Where is the man who will say that Secretary Wallace and Secretary Perkins are prompted by political or partisan motives in urging the enactment of this legislation? Secretary Ickes is not a Democrat, and it cannot be charged that he favors this legislation merely to make jobs for Democrats. In his administration of the Department of the Interior, and in the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works he has not shown any eagerness to separate Republicans from the Federal service and appoint Democrats.

Who will charge that Secretary Wallace, a Republican, favors this bill because, forsooth, a few thousand Democrats will be appointed to take the census. There is nothing in the record of Secretary Perkins to indicate that she has any special interest in appointing Democrats to Federal positions. No one familiar with the facts will charge that Secretary Ickes, Secretary Wallace, or Secretary Perkins were actuated by political or partisan motives in supporting this legislation, or that any one of them is primarily interested in promoting the morale and solidarity of the Democratic Party. I say frankly I am sorry these departmental heads are not more politically minded. When Republicans are in power I do not object to Republicans' filling the Federal offices, but under a Democratic administration all offices that are essentially political should be filled by Democrats.

Secretary Roper is a Democrat, but he would not give his approval to any legislation that was purely partisan and for which there was no real necessity. You gentlemen know that these four deparmental heads, in urging this legislation, are not actuated by partisan motives. You are not ignorant of the fact that every one of these departments is honeycombed with Republicans—hangover Republicans, partisan Republicans—many of them occupying key positions and many of them passing on the applications of Democrats for Federal positions; and yet you would have the country believe that these Cabinet members have prostituted their high offices and are seeking to secure the enactment of this measure for the contemptible purpose of providing jobs for Democratic officeseekers. Deep down in your hearts you know that these Cabinet officers are actuated by lofty patriotism and without any thought of preserving the morale or promoting the solidarity of the Democratic Party.

If these Cabinet officers are actuated by petty partisan motives, why have they refused to remove partisan Republicans from key positions in their respective departments? Why do they allow partisan Republicans to walk the corridors of the departmental buildings boasting that they are secure in their positions, that the administration dare not remove them, and that the Democratic Party is incapable of administering the affairs of this Government without the aid of Republicans, while thousands of capable and deserving Democrats are denied positions which are essentially political and which, under a well-established custom, are supposed to be filled by men in political harmony with the administration? Republicans have been treated too generously by these departmental heads. I am amazed that the Republican Members of this House should have the temerity to charge the Democratic administration with creating offices in order to supply Democrats with jobs.

It is exceedingly difficult to believe in your sincerity when you charge that this legislation was prompted solely by a desire to find positions for Democrats and to promote the success of the Democratic Party in the approaching congressional elections.

I have been a member of the Census Committee for 10 years. If there is a department of the Government that is free from partisan bias, if there is a governmental agency that stands rigidly against the spoils system, it is the Census Bureau. Dr. Stuart, a Republican, was Director of the Census for many years. I knew him well and held him in high esteem for his splendid qualities of mind and heart. He was a fair and a just man, but in the administration of the Census Bureau he unhesitatingly favored Republicans. When he retired he advised Mr. Austin, his successor, to conduct the affairs of the Bureau as he, Dr. Stuart, had conducted them. He stated that where he had a discretion he appointed Republicans, but that he endeavored to appoint competent and efficient Republicans. He advised Mr. Austin, wherever he had a discretion, to appoint Democrats, but to select competent Democrats. Dr. Stuart has endorsed this legislation, because he understands and appreciates its importance and value.

Mr. Hopkins, Federal Emergency Relief Administrator, has unequivocally endorsed this legislation. In a letter to Secretary Roper, Mr. Hopkins said:

> Certainly, a new census of population would aid us considerably in administering relief throughout the country. Inasmuch as the Federal Emergency Relief Act of 1933 is based on giving relief to persons made destitute because of unemployment, factual evidence of unemployment by political subdivisions would be of great aid in administering this act. Unfortunately, at this time but little evidence exists on this subject on which I can make the administrative decisions, and I therefore find myself an advocate of the taking of a population census, with particular emphasis given to unemployment aspects. You may be sure that anything I can do to assist in the realization of this desire will be gladly undertaken.

Secretary Wallace, in a letter to Secretary Roper, said:

It is absolutely essential for our agricultural program to have a thoroughgoing and accurate census of agriculture. * * * It seems apparent that completeness and adequacy in the agriculture census returns will be very largely dependent upon the concurrent population census. * * * Representatives of this Department have participated in conferences on the subject and have concurred in the general agreement that November 12, 1934, be substituted for January 1, 1935, as the census date.

In a letter to Secretary Roper, Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, said:

A Member of Congress has brought to my attention a proposed bill for a census of population and census of unemployment to be taken in November of 1934.

I am extremely interested in this proposal, because I am of the opinion that the rapid changes that have occurred both in the geographical distribution of our population and the distribution of age groups, invalidates such data as now exist. I feel, and various experts in the field concur with me, that the data collected in the census of 1930 can no longer be used as a basis for portraying either the growth in population or the occupational distribution picture. Furthermore, the experience of the Department of Labor in making trial surveys of unemployment during the past 4 months has revealed profitable ways of securing data on unemployment. A census of unemployment in conjunction with a census of population, if made this year, would provide a valuable basis for making a continuing estimate of the effects of the administration's program for economic recovery.

I trust that the Congress will see its way clear to authorizing you to make a census of population and unemployment during the current calendar year.

Mr. Isidor Lubin, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, in his testimony before the Census Committee, said:

We need this data, first, so that the Secretary of Labor can recommend to the President and to the Congress such policy as is deemed essential, and such a policy cannot be well formulated unless we know what our problem is—not only the magnitude of it, but where the problem centers. In the second place, we need the information in order to develop a plan that will be of help in the activities of the United States Employment Service.

Hon. Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, in a letter to the Chairman of the Census Committee, said:

The inquiries contemplated, in my opinion, are of vital importance to the recovery program, as is evidenced by letters we have received from the Federal agencies administering various phases of that program. I have received hundreds of communications from organizations and competent specialists in the fields concerned demanding legislation of the type here submitted.

In another letter to Secretary Roper, Secretary Ickes said:

While normally a census taken at 10-year periods is adequate, in view of the unusual economic and social conditions which have prevailed since the 1930 census, the taking of a somewhat simplified census in 1935, with special reference to employment and other population movements, will be fully justified. No other expenditure of like amount is apt to yield such rich returns.

The hearings on this bill covered 131 printed pages, and I wish every Member of this House had taken the time to read these hearings. If you had read them, you would support this bill, because the evidence conclusively shows that this census is needed in order to consummate our national recovery program, to meet the unemployment situation, and to restore normal national life.

Twelve years of Republican administration under Presidents Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover brought our Nation to the verge of a precipice and ended in an unprecedented depression akin to economic chaos. Under the statesmanship and wise administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt the pall of the depression is being lifted, prosperity is returning, and each month brings us nearer and nearer to normal national life. The emergency and recovery measures, while not perfect, are nevertheless restoring normal economic conditions, inspiring the people with courage, confidence, and hope, and marking a path over which an impoverished people may find a way out of the economic distress and chaos that followed 12 years of Republican maladministration of our foreign and domestic affairs.

Congress is appropriating billions of dollars to put over our recovery program, relieve human distress, establish a proper balance between the several vocational groups, and insure the reign of social justice. It will be difficult economically and wisely to administer this recovery program and expend the billions of dollars appropriated for recovery and relief, unless these superb governmental agencies have reliable statistics as to the unemployed and such additional information as this census will supply, and with which our economic recovery may be hastened and insured.

Secretary Wallace says this census is necessary. Secretary Ickes says it is necessary. Secretary Roper says it is necessary. Secretary Perkins says it is necessary. General Johnson says it is necessary. Mr. Hopkins says it is necessary. The American Federation of Labor says it is necessary. Every industrial, commercial, agricultural, and business group will receive tremendous benefits as a result of this legislation, because this census will materially aid us in solving the unemployment problem.

One of the highest officials in the Government, one of the watchdogs of the United States Treasury, stated to me that the taking of this census and the information it would supply would save the Government two or three times its total cost, because the recovery agencies are now working in the dark, guessing at the number and whereabouts of the unemployed; but this census will give them the facts, statistics, and information necessary speedily and efficiently to carry out President Roosevelt's program for relief and our economic recovery.

The taking of this census is not a waste of funds. This is not a spoils measure, but a sane piece of legislation to facilitate our economic rehabilitation. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. All time has expired. The Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That to provide information concerning the numbers, classes, and geographical distributions of unemployed persons and their dependents, and concerning employment and occupations, necessary to aid in the formulation of a program of unemployment relief, the Director of the Census shall take as of November 12, 1934, a census of unemployment, employment, and occupations in the 48 States and the District of Columbia: Provided, That such census may include such enumeration of population as the Director of the Census may deem appropriate and necessary for the purpose of this section.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SNELL: Page 1, line 8, after the word "of", strike out "November 12" and insert in lieu thereof "July 23."

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, in the debate upon this bill several Members on the Democratic side have referred to the fact that there is no political significance in the selection of the date, November 12, for the taking of this census. If there is no political significance in that and there is an actual need for the census, as the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LOZIER] has just said, the quicker that census can be taken, the better it will be for the people of this country. The sooner it is taken the better position we will be in for taking care of unemployment during the coming winter. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LOZIER] has referred to the people who are in favor of this census and he says that there are no political motives in advocating it. I have not consulted with any of those men, but I do know that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LOZIER] is the chairman of the Democratic patronage committee of the House of Representatives, and, if he has been correctly reported in the press, he has said that he is not satisfied with the number of jobs that go to deserving Democrats. I also know that he is practically the only one of the older Members on the Democratic side who have taken the floor and vigorously defended this measure. If it is necessary and it ought to be done to obtain efficient and effective results, I ask that this amendment be adopted.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. Yes.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I should like to have the gentleman's reasoning, free from any political consideration, for this change.

Mr. SNELL. Oh, there is nothing political about this bill; at least, gentlemen on the Democratic side say there is not.

Mr. BANKHEAD. The charge is made that it is political, and I am not discussing that phase of it; but why does the gentleman suggest July 23 as an appropriate time for taking the census?

Mr. SNELL. I shall tell the gentleman how I arrived at that. That will be about 4 weeks after we adjourn, and that will give ample time for taking the census. It will take at least 4 weeks to take it, and it will take a considerable length of time to compute the results of the census; and if it is actually wanted to take care of relief and unemployment this winter, it should be taken as quickly as possible this summer, and I believe the date suggested is a reasonable one.

Mr. BANKHEAD. What about the agricultural census? I do not know whether the gentleman is acquainted with farm conditions or not—the harvesting period, and so on. Does the gentleman assert that the 23d of July is an appropriate time of the year to take a farm census?

Mr. SNELL. I think it is the best possible time to take a census to get at the facts of unemployment, and that is the reason given for the bill, and then you will have the information available to use next winter when you want it.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, Mr. SNELL.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL], would amend the bill so as to provide for the holding of the census on the 23d of July. As the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] has said, a census has never been taken at a time when the farmers of the country were busy with their crops. The gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL] knows that it is impossible to take an accurate census of any kind involving agricultural districts, in July or in August or in September. The gentleman from New York also knows that it takes a long time to prepare for the census, and the Director of the Census has advised the committee that it will take at least 4 months to prepare for this census. The gentleman can find that testimony in the hearings given before the committee.

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman yield for a short question?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Certainly, I shall gladly yield to my eminent colleague.

Mr. SNELL. Did the Director of the Census tell you how long it would take to get the results of that census after you have taken it?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. How long?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. He told us that the preliminary figures, as he called them, the preliminary preliminary figures——

Mr. SNELL. Well, I do not quite understand that.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. The actual taking of the census in the cities will take about 2 weeks. In the country districts it will take about 4 weeks. The census enumerators having finished, the supervisors in each district will release the figures, so that some figures will be available within 2 to 4 weeks immediately after the completion of the enumeration, and reliable preliminary figures giving totals for the States and the Nation will be available toward the end of December of this year.

Mr. SNELL. The testimony, as I read it, says after the first of the year, and the greatest demand for relief of unemployment is in December and January, and it will be impossible to get the results of this census and act on it at that time.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I will say to the gentleman that I was in favor of holding the census earlier, but the statistical and census experts in the various departments were opposed to the holding of the census at an earlier time.

Mr. SNELL. Well, I am, too. The gentleman and I agree.

Mr. TRUAX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I shall gladly yield in just a moment. I was in favor of holding the census earlier, so as to get the figures available earlier, but the Department of Agriculture has informed the committee that the census cannot be held until after the crop year, and that the best time to hold it would be in November, before the removal of the tenants to new farms. I might also say to the gentleman that a census of unemployment should not be held when employment is at its peak, nor should it be held when unemployment is at its height. It should be held at a period of average unemployment so that we may have the most accurate figures obtainable. July would be about the worst month which we could selected for the holding of an unemployment census, and November about the best.

Mr. TRUAX. Will the gentleman yield now?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I yield to the worthy gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. TRUAX. I am in accord with what the gentleman has stated, but the gentleman has said that the farmers would be busy harvesting their crops in July. They will not this year. The only things our farmers will raise this summer will be dust and hell.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I am sorry to hear my friend say that, but I hope that some sections of the country will have something to harvest.

Mr. BLANTON. Considering what he says they are raising back home, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRUAX] is very faithfully and ably representing his Ohio farmers here. [Laughter and applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ELLENBOGEN] has expired.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto do now close.

Mr. TREADWAY. Well, Mr. Chairman, I would like to have 5 minutes.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I was on my feet, and I desire 5 minutes.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LOZIER] that the Chair had recognized the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. O'MALLEY] before the gentleman from Missouri had risen.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I ask to be recognized.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, am I to have 5 minutes of that time?

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise for the purpose of striking out the last word, because in the limited amount of time originally allotted to the bill I did not have time to study the bill.

I find great difficulty in supporting this measure, because two wrongs do not make a right. I know that during the Republican administration they did all they could to pack the Government service with temporary jobs. They even sent out in my district, and I can prove it, Government employees to campaign for the Republican candidates, on Government money. Two wrongs do not make a right. They tell us this census is absolutely necessary to find out how many unemployed there are in this country. In my district the registration lists of the C.W.A. will show exactly how many unemployed there are who want jobs. [Applause.]

I know the political pressure that comes from back home by a group of selfish job seekers, for I have experienced it in my own district. One of our Presidents, I think it was Lincoln, once said that the people who want to get on the Government pay rolls will some day destroy the Government with their greedy disregard for decency and honor unless they are checked. There are all kinds of people who want to get soft Government jobs. Those are the ones who will get these census jobs, and the deserving people who do not know how to get jobs through political influence will never get any of them.

The gentleman from Missouri, for whom I have a great deal of respect, said that this census bill was endorsed by partisan Republicans serving in the President's Cabinet. Now, it may be possible that these partisan Republicans who endorse this bill are trying to mislead the Democrats into passing a bill that may give them a lot of trouble in the election. [Applause.]

Who are going to get these jobs? I see from the hearings that the bill is endorsed by college professors. I wonder if the teachers' pets are going to be employed during the months of October and November on the pay roll of the Government? We were told in the committee hearings that they could not use the C.W.A. workers, because they are not highly enough educated; they have got to use specially selected college boys to do this work that is supposed to relieve unemployment amongst laboring people. [Applause.] Mr. Rice, of the Census Bureau, probably a partisan Republican, said in the hearing:

I think I might make this statement: It would be entirely out of the question from the standpoint of efficiency for the Bureau of the Census to take this census by using only, or in any number, work relief people, or people who are working out their relief under the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

If this bill is for relief of this kind of people, why does this gentleman in the Census Bureau say they cannot use them?

I think this is a piece of legislation of which Congress will not be proud to have enacted in its closing days. We are going to do something for the unemployed by counting them! [Laughter.] I know how the farmers in the drought-stricken counties of Wisconsin, without enough food in prospect for the coming year, will look at the spending of nearly $8,000,000 for counting them when this money might better have been used to feed their children. Imagine what one of them would say when an enumerator comes up to him and says that the Government was spending $8,000,000 to relieve distress by counting the distressed! [Applause.]

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I yield.

Mr. TRUAX. Upon whose recommendation are these appointments to be made?

Mr. O'MALLEY. Apparently it is understood that they are to be made upon the recommendation of the Congressmen.

Mr. TRUAX. Does that include Congressmen at large?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I am almost certain it will not include Congressmen who object to this measure because the Republican census supervisors now in their districts under civil-service rules will see that those who are against this bill will get no consideration for their recommendations.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the substitute amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Substitute amendment offered by Mr. RICH: Page 1, line 8, strike out "as of November 12, 1934", and insert in lieu thereof "at once."

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment that it is indefinite and means nothing.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair states to the gentleman from Missouri that the Chair cannot rule upon that point of order. The gentleman raises a question of consistency upon which the Chair cannot pass. That is a matter for the Committee to determine.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to inject politics into this discussion if I possibly can refrain from it, although that is going to be very difficult after the many things that have been said in reference to this bill.

The thought uppermost in my mind has been that if we are to have a census taken by the Federal Census Bureau notwithstanding the fact there are employment offices in every State of the Union, and labor organizations which keep themselves definitely informed from week to week as to the number of unemployed, and notwithstanding the fact that the various States maintain labor bureaus, cooperate and work in conjunction with the other labor organizations, the sooner we get started on this census the better, if it must be taken. The men in the labor temple down here, I understand, try to keep themselves informed on the unemployment situation and give out bulletins from time to time as to the number of unemployed. Then why this census?

If by the enactment of this bill we are going to have a census taken by the United States Census Bureau, why procrastinate? Why is it necessary to wait until July 23? Why is it necessary to wait until November to start getting this information?

In the first place, I think it is a duplication of work on the part of the Federal Government, an effort to secure information we already have. When it will take at least 6 months to secure this information, what good will it do this session of Congress? If it is to be taken it should be started in time that the information secured may be assembled and tabulated for the use of Congress when it convenes next January; and certainly it will require that length of time to do it. We know we have too much unemployment now—everybody knows that. What will it help you or anyone to know if there are 9,000,000 or 10,000,000 unemployed? We all know there are too many.

When the present administration came into office its spokesman, the President, said the administration was going to reduce the number on the Federal pay roll; but, as has been stated this afternoon, the number of Federal employees on the Government pay roll has increased 713,000 since March 4, 1933, and it is now contemplated that the Government will put on the pay roll another 100,000 employees or more.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I want to say to the Members of Congress assembled here today that each and every one of you are going to vote as to whether you want to put another 100,000 employees on the pay roll to secure information already in the possession of the Government. When you go back to your taxpayers—and I hope the taxpayers of every congressional district in the United States will pay attention to the vote here this afternoon—I hope every one of you who votes to put 100,000 more men on the Government pay roll will receive your just desert from the people back home for trying to increase the expenses of the Government. [Applause.]

You are burdening the taxpayers; you are hindering business; you are destroying confidence; you are duplicating effort. You certainly are not thinking. This Congress has forgotten to think; we are like sheep led to the slaughter.

I feel confident that when you go back to your districts, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and the people in your home districts note the fact that you are increasing their burden of taxation and national debt by foolish, senseless legislation, they will send men to Congress who will act wisely and judiciously, and, as has been stated this morning by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] about one of the newspapers in Washington in connection with the publication of criticisms of congressional actions, and I say this as a Member of Congress, we are doing some of the most damnable things that sensible people are not expected to do, this bill being one unreasonable piece of legislation; and I want the newspapers of the country to know that I do not approve of the things we are doing here. [Applause and laughter.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. PETTENGILL. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asked for time in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that debate was limited on this section and the time has expired.

The question is on the substitute amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. RICH] to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The substitute amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts, Mr. KNUTSON, and Mr. McGUGIN) there were—ayes 61, noes 102.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. FOCHT. Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Motion offered by Mr. FOCHT. Mr. FOCHT moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken out.

Mr. FOCHT. Mr. Chairman, from what we have heard here today and for some weeks past in regard to relief measures and the unemployed, it must be clearly manifest to every Member of this House that while a census is primarily used to furnish information, in the face of certain facts, we already have more information than we know what to do with. [Applause.]

I do not know that it is necessary to find out how many unemployed there are. It seems to me that if we admit there are something like 10,000,000 unemployed in this country, if that is so, it will keep us busy for a long while to supply employment for half this number; hence, this census that you want to take now might well be deferred until the regular time.

May I say a word now with reference to the political aspects of this question. No one would charge you Democrats with anything beyond political design, but that is legitimate. This is a country of parties, and the party in power, if they furnish competent men, if there is a census to be taken, they should have the census takers and enumerators of their own party. But this is not the time to take it, and it is not necessary. I am more than amazed that any Member of this House from Pennsylvania should sponsor this bill. I am surprised that any Member of this House coming from Pennsylvania is not familiar with the fact that at the present time a census is being taken in Pennsylvania and elsewhere on this very question. The gentleman from Pittsburgh who claims authorship should get word from home and become familiar with what is going on in his own great Commonwealth.

May I say that in Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, and all the great States of the country we have had all kinds of legislation, much of it political. This was stated here a while ago by one of the gentlemen from New York, a former member of the legislature. I was a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature, and I know something about the intrigue of politics. As long as it is clean it is up to the Democrats to do the same thing the Republicans would do, only do it a little better, and vice versa. I therefore offer no complaint to your taking a census if you take it at the right time; but of all things, do not burden the people by withdrawing relief money.

I do not see how any Member could look anyone in the face here or hereafter after voting for the withdrawal of money that you say is needed for relief. Starvation has been spoken of here. There is not any starvation in this country. If there is, we will have to lay that to the Democratic Party, because they have been furnished enough money, but it may have been crudely distributed. We have the money of the world, and we have the resources of the world, if you gentlemen on that side would just furnish the brains to make the distribution and not use your power to pass such legislation as this. I started in to help give you the money, but I am losing faith if you are going to put through measures of this kind. I trust for your own good and to save us in our respective communities, not as individuals but as a legislative body, that you Democrats will not pull off anything of this kind. If your party is successful in your bewildering scheme of legislation, then you will win without this job-making measure. If you are not successful after all the money voted the President, then you ought not to win and you will not win.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this motion do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is now on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania to strike out the enacting clause.

The motion was rejected.

Mr. DIMOND. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DIMOND: On page 1, line 10, after the words "District of Columbia", insert the words "and the Territories of Hawaii and Alaska."

Mr. DIMOND. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, that is against the rule.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the Delegate from Alaska.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. DIMOND) there were—ayes 78, noes 36.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MOTT: Page 1, line 8, after the word "November", strike out "12" and insert in lieu thereof "1."

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. The provisions, including penalties, of the act providing for the fifteenth and subsequent decennial censuses, approved June 18, 1929 (46 Stat. 21; U.S.C., Supp. VII, title 13, ch. 4), shall, so far as not inapplicable, apply to the taking of the census provided for in section 1 of this act. In applying such provisions the period from the date of enactment of this act until the completion of such census, and all reports and publications relating thereto, shall be deemed to be a decennial census period. Temporary personnel in the District of Columbia employed to carry out the provisions of this act, may be allowed leave of absence with pay at the rate of 1¼ days per month.

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I know there are men who call themselves Democrats and men who call themselves Republicans who are conscientious and sincere. I respect the men who are conscientious about this bill. I believe every man is entitled to his opinion whether he is a Republican or a Democrat.

In my opinion, the bill before the House is an excellent piece of legislation because it is going to furnish employment for 100,000 people.

It is unfortunate we cannot bring a bill into Congress and have it enacted into law, which would obtain employment for all the jobless people in the United States. I wish we could do this; in fact, I have said many times this should be done.

The fact that the American Federation of Labor has endorsed this measure is sufficient proof this bill is meritorious.

There is no clause in the bill which states the Democrats will be the ones chosen for the positions. If I have the opportunity to appoint men or women in my district to positions in taking this census I shall select such men and women who are in need of employment regardless of their party affiliations. [Applause.]

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I may say that I hold in my hands a letter from Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, in which he states that this organization favors this bill and—

That a thorough investigation of unemployment could only be made through the Census Bureau. We approved of an investigation of unemployment in the last census. We still believe that it is absolutely necessary to secure proper statistics on this subject.

Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto do now close.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, before offering that motion will the gentleman yield for one question?

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman allow me to have 5 minutes? I asked for time on the other section.

Mr. LOZIER. Will the gentleman please secure time on the next section?

Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may incorporate in the RECORD the letter from Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, from which I have quoted, and in which the American Federation of Labor gives its approval to this bill.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman yield for one question?

Mr. LOZIER. Certainly.

Mr. SNELL. The gentleman has advised us about the attitude of the American Federation of Labor. Will the gentleman tell us what is the attitude of the President of the United States on this bill?

Mr. LOZIER. I have not consulted the President of the United States in reference to this measure. The gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL], as a result of his long parliamentary experience, knows it is not customary to put the President "on the spot" with reference to every pending bill; but I will say to the gentleman that the responsible departmental heads who will be charged with the responsibility of administering this act are in favor of this legislation—four Cabinet officers, plus General Johnson and Mr. Hopkins—all of whom say that this legislation is necessary to the success of the recovery program.

Mr. SNELL. I admit that part of the gentleman's statement is correct; but with respect to practically every piece of legislation that has been brought on the floor of the House during the Seventy-third Congress you gentlemen have said, "This is wanted by the President of the United States."

Mr. LOZIER. Oh, no.

Mr. SNELL. Oh, yes, you have; and the gentleman knows it, and the RECORD will prove it. You do not dare tell what he wants to do here.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object——

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask for the regular order.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. MOTT. I reserve the right to object.

Mr. BLANTON. I ask for the regular order.

Mr. MOTT. I object unless the gentleman will answer a question.

The CHAIRMAN. The regular order has been demanded. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. MOTT. I object.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, is not the fact that the gentleman from Missouri read the letter sufficient to have it incorporated in the RECORD without unanimous consent?

The CHAIRMAN. It is.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Morrison's letter is as follows:

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR,
Washington, D.C., May 28, 1934.

Hon. RALPH F. LOZIER,
House of Representatives, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SIR: The American Federation of Labor is very much interested in H.R. 9391, a bill to provide for the census in the continental United States of unemployment, employment, occupations, population, and agriculture, which you refer to in your letter of May 25.

We have always felt that a thorough investigation of unemployment could only be made through the Census Bureau. We approved of an investigation of unemployment in the last census. We still believe that it is absolutely necessary to secure proper statistics on this subject.

Yours truly,

FRANK MORRISON,
Secretary American Federation of Labor.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 3. The census of agriculture and livestock, authorized to be taken as of January 1, 1935, by section 16 of the said act of June 18, 1929, and appropriated for in the Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1935, shall be taken as of November 12, 1934, conjointly with, and covering the same geographical limits as, the census provided for in section 1 of this act.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, in our early childhood we were taught the old adage "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." This strictly patronage measure, having been defeated on Tuesday, under suspension of the rules, is brought before us today under a special gag rule which will insure its ready passage by the 3-to-1 Democratic majority. This seems an appropriate time for a gentleman from away back in Massachusetts to speak, when the amendment is applicable to livestock. We have got some of it up where I live, but I want to look out for the interests, not only of the four-footed stock but those who go around on two feet—the taxpayers.

I want first to refer to the remarks made by my friend from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] this morning, when he referred to the fact that during 12 years of Republican administration through the civil service only Republicans were allowed. Even though we were ready to admit that statement to be correct, which, of course, we are not, I will say that for 12 years during the Republican administration we did not go on continually establishing new offices in order to fill them with Republicans.

Now, within the short period from February 1933 to April 1934, a year and 2 months, the number of employees has increased from 563,437 to 644,108—an increase during the period of the Democratic administration of 80,621, most of them not under the civil service. What has become of the Democratic platform pledge to reduce the cost of government and eliminate extravagance?

The Democratic Party, to which the gentleman from Texas owes his allegiance, has done more to increase patronage employment during the 1 year than the Republican Party did in the entire 12 years of its administration.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. TREADWAY. I will yield.

Mr. BLANTON. Four-fifths of these employees are Republicans. Practically all of the appointees of Secretary Ickes and Secretary Wallace have been Republicans.

Mr. TREADWAY. Of the Democratic appointments? I guarantee there is not one in five hundred who is a Republican, and the gentleman from Texas is facetious when he says that.

Now, I want to tell you where these people are employed.

There have been more than 40 new agencies established, and I have here a list of about 20. There are 9,173 employed under the Tennessee Valley Authority. Does the gentleman from Texas think that any part of that number are from the Republican Party? If he does, he is mistaken. I guarantee that the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. TAYLOR] has not one constituent on that list.

Mrs. KAHN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the lady from California.

Mrs. KAHN. Does the gentleman think that it is necessary to employ 17,222 people to administer the Bankhead cotton bill?

Mr. TREADWAY. That is a group that I have not got, and that is 17,000 more to be added to it.

Now, in the Home Loan Corporation there are 13,798; in the Public Works Administration, 3,579; in the N.R.A., 3,694; and I might go through the whole new alphabetical list and show how these places have been established to give deserving Democrats employment.

Now, in this measure you come in here and ask that right after election these appointments shall be made to put 100,000 men and women on the pay rolls in your respective Democratic districts. This feature of the bill is not without significance. November 12 will be pay day for Democratic ward heelers and party workers all over the country. That is exactly the picture, and I say the gentleman from Pennsylvania was right when he said that he hoped that the people of the country will have full information on this subject.

This bill is just another means of perpetuating the Democratic Party in office through the distribution of funds from the Treasury. In order to pay the costs of the census, $7,540,000 is to be diverted from moneys previously appropriated for relief purposes, and those who are really suffering and in need will be deprived of that much assistance.

Contrary to the statements of those sponsoring this measure, there is absolutely no need for taking any census at this time. So far as unemployment figures are concerned, the Department of Labor is continually gathering information along this line. The American Federation of Labor also keeps an up-to-the-minute census of unemployment, and just recently the C.W.A. has been engaged in taking a census throughout the country. Instead of setting up another agency for counting the unemployed, the administration should devote its energies to putting them back to work.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. LANZETTA. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to section 1 for the purpose of offering an amendment so as to include Puerto Rico in the census. I send the amendment to the desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to return to section 1 for the purpose of offering an amendment. Is there objection?

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I object, and I move that all debate upon this section and all amendments thereto do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. TRUAX: Page 2, line 22, after the word "act", add a new section as follows:

"SEC. 4. The census of agriculture and livestock shall include the amount of farm-mortgage indebtedness, names of mortgagees, date of maturity of mortgages, and rate of interest per annum."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. TRUAX) there were—ayes 74, noes 95.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Chairman, on that I demand tellers.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio demands tellers. All those in favor of taking the vote by tellers will rise and stand until counted. [After counting.] Not a sufficient number and tellers are refused.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 4. To meet the expenses of section 1 of this act the President is authorized to make available not to exceed $7,540,000 from the fund appropriated by the act entitled "An act making an additional appropriation to carry out the purposes of the Federal Emergency Relief Act of 1933, for continuation of the Civil Works program, and for other purposes", approved February 15, 1934. Amounts so made available shall remain available until expended.

Mr. KENNEDY of New York. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KENNEDY of New York: Page 2, line 25, after the word "exceed", strike out "$7,540,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$1."

Mr. KENNEDY of New York. Mr. Chairman, it is obvious from the wording of my amendment that I am opposed to bill H.R. 9391, which is a bill to provide for a census in continental United States of unemployment, employment, occupations, population, and agriculture, and for other purposes. It is estimated that the taking of the proposed census will cost almost $8,000,000, and it is intended that the $8,000,000 will be paid out of the funds appropriated under the Federal Emergency Relief Act of 1933 for the continuation of the Civil Works program. I voted against this census bill on last Tuesday when the committee tried to pass it under the suspension of the rules. I voted against the rule today which limited the debate on the bill to 1 hour, and I propose to vote against the final passage of the bill at the conclusion of this debate. To spend $8,000,000 on a census at this time is, in my opinion, a waste of money. I have no objection to the spending of money on public works that will provide useful employment for our people, but when it is proposed to spend $8,000,000 to obtain information which may be readily obtained through the various Government agencies, and particularly when this money is to be paid out of relief funds, I must oppose the passage of the bill. I have a further objection to this bill in connection with the expense involved. I am not satisfied that even the huge sum of $8,000,000 would be sufficient to pay the bills of the Bureau of the Census for this work. In 1930 the Government spent approximately $40,000,000 on a census. This bill gives the Bureau of the Census the right to prepare an appropriate questionnaire, and from a reading of the committee report I am led to believe that the questions to be asked by the census takers will not be the usual questions necessary to prepare an intelligent and useful report, but there will be questions on every conceivable subject, and some of the questions, in my opinion, will be highly indelicate and extremely personal.

If the expenditure provided for in this bill was a direct appropriation from the Committee on Appropriations, I would be more patient in my consideration of the bill. That committee not only failed to appropriate the money, but the chairman of that important committee voted against this bill on Tuesday.

I wish to direct the attention of the House to page 6 of the committee report. On that page you will find the following offered as a reason for the passage of the bill:

Fundamental changes are taking place as the result of restricted immigration and a declining birth rate; and a census will show what the effect has been upon the growth and composition of the population.

Further:

A census will show the changes taking place in the age composition of the population and in the numbers and relative importance of the various race and nativity classes—the native whites, the foreign born, the Negroes, the Mexicans, and others.

On page 8 we find:

Such a census would contribute to the interpretation of the economic and social questions now before our people.

On page 14 we find a few more reasons, as follows:

As a check upon the number and adequacy of its returns, the Bureau of Internal Revenue needs accurate and detailed population data for minor civil divisions.

Also:

Preparedness for national defense from the standpoints both of military and industrial mobilization requires accurate population and employment data, by State and local distribution, and by sex, age, and occupation.

Finally we find this reason also given:

The Office of Education needs population information by age and occupation to determine a coherent educational policy, so far as required by the Federal Government. Unemployment data, by occupation, are essential for all vocational and industrial-education plans and developments, such as those of the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

Mr. Chairman, if these are the best reasons offered for the necessity of spending almost $8,000,000, I for one, on the Democratic side, cannot possibly support the bill, and I hope that my amendment which would reduce this appropriation from $8,000,000 to $1 will prevail. [Applause.]

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate upon this section and all amendments thereto do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. TABER) there were—ayes 60, noes 105.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 5. The President is authorized, from the fund appropriated by such act of February 15, 1934, to make available to the Secretary of Commerce not to exceed $368,465 for the printing of reports collected and now being compiled on the census of American business, census record preservation, urban tax delinquency, and real property inventory. Amounts so made available shall remain available until expended.

Mr. HOEPPEL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to refute the charge of the Republicans in the House that this bill under consideration is a partisan measure. I can, at least, prove that the Republican leader in my district appears to be wholeheartedly in favor of legislation which is proposed by the Democrats in the Congress. This boy, who opposed me in 1932 on the Republican ticket and who has again announced his candidacy on the Republican ticket, in writing to the Literary Digest, has made this declaration:

I shall continue, as I have in the past, to support on the whole the acts and policies of our great American patriot, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOEPPEL. I am sorry, but I have not the time.

There is no reason for the Republicans to oppose this bill on the matter of patronage. We all know the Republicans have fared exceptionally well in this respect under the Democratic administration.

If this bill is enacted into law and if I receive any patronage as a result thereof, I intend to select men from the United States Employment Service list for promotions, except for appointments such as for supervisors or executives.

God knows, most of the unemployed today are Democrats. The Republicans, during their 12 years of misrule, have garnered to themselves all of the important executive and administrative positions in the departments of government.

Mr. TABER. Is the man who is running against the gentleman a fine man and a man who ought to be elected?

Mr. HOEPPEL. Answering the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER], I wish to state that, in my opinion, the youth to whom I referred cannot be considered a Republican with the lofty principles so frequently displayed on the floor by my colleague [Mr. TABER].

Referring to the question involved, we should consider that we suffered reverses for a period of 4 years under the Republican Hoover regime. The time is now opportune for us to reorganize and assemble all the information and facilities at our command to surmount the depression in the interests of our suffering people.

We should take an inventory of our assets, find out where we are, and how we stand. There is no better time to do that than now. And remember that at the same time that you are, for instance, putting 100,000 more men into employment, you will be taking 100,000 men off of the relief rolls. Our American citizens—God praise them and bless them—want work. They do not want the dole. They do not want charity. I hope that my colleagues will stand behind this bill. This is one of the many progressive measures of our party which I am pleased to support. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. HOEPPEL] has expired.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto do now close.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman make that in 2 minutes so that I may offer an amendment?

Mr. LOZIER. I move that all debate on this section do now close.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, as a substitute motion I desire to offer——

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LOZIER].

Mr. LOZIER. I move the previous question.

Mr. BRITTEN. I move to amend the motion by providing that all debate on this section shall close in 2 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BRITTEN] to the motion of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LOZIER].

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I accept the gentleman's amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection debate on this section and all amendments thereto will close in 2 minutes.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BRITTEN: Page 3, line 13, after the period, add the following: "Each census enumerator shall display a badge upon which shall appear the following inscription: 'I am a Democratic campaign worker being paid out of funds previously appropriated to feed hungry people.'"

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, a point of order. I make the point of order that the amendment is not germane.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] is addressing the Chair from the well of the House.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to be heard on the point of order.

Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of order that the amendment is not germane.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to debate the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. BULWINKLE). The Chair is ready to rule. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois——

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the Chair hear me on the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Under the rule, the Committee will rise.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BULWINKLE, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee had had under consideration the bill, H.R. 9391, the census bill, and pursuant to House Resolution 392, he reported the same back to the House with an amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 216, nays 146, not voting 68, as follows:

[Roll No. 180]

YEAS—216

Adair	Bulwinkle	Cole	Dickinson
Adams	Burch	Colmer	Dingell
Ayers, Mont.	Byrns	Condon	Disney
Bailey	Caldwell	Connery	Dobbins
Bankhead	Cannon, Mo.	Cooper, Tenn.	Dockweiler
Beam	Carden, Ky.	Corning	Doughton
Beiter	Carmichael	Cox	Douglass
Black	Carpenter, Nebr.	Cravens	Doxey
Bland	Cartwright	Crosby	Drewry
Blanton	Cary	Cross, Tex.	Driver
Bloom	Castellow	Crowe	Duffey
Boland	Chapman	Crump	Duncan, Mo.
Boylan	Chavez	Cullen	Dunn
Brown, Ga.	Claiborne	Cummings	Durgan, Ind.
Brown, Mich	Clark, N.C.	Dear	Eagle
Brunner	Cochran, Mo.	Deen	Eicher
Buck	Colden	Delaney	Ellenbogen

Ellzey, Miss.	Johnson, Okla.	O'Connell	Snyder
Faddis	Johnson, Tex.	O'Connor	Somers, N.Y.
Farley	Johnson, W.Va.	Oliver, Ala.	Spence
Fiesinger	Keller	Oliver, N.Y.	Steagall
Fitzgibbons	Kelly, Ill.	Owen	Strong, Tex.
Fitzpatrick	Kenney	Palmisano	Stubbs
Flannagan	Kerr	Parker	Studley
Fletcher	Kleberg	Parsons	Sullivan
Ford	Kocialkowski	Patman	Sutphin
Fuller	Kopplemann	Peyser	Swank
Fulmer	Lamneck	Prall	Sweeney
Gasque	Lanham	Ramsay	Tarver
Gavagan	Lanzetta	Ramspeck	Taylor, Colo.
Glover	Larrabee	Rankin	Taylor, S.C.
Goldsborough	Lesinski	Reilly	Terry, Ark.
Granfield	Lewis, Colo.	Richards	Thom
Gray	Lindsay	Richardson	Thomason
Greenway	Lozier	Robinson	Thompson, Tex.
Greenwood	Lundeen	Rogers, Okla.	Underwood
Gregory	McClintic	Romjue	Vinson, Ga.
Griswold	McFarlane	Rudd	Vinson, Ky.
Haines	McGrath	Sabath	Wallgren
Hamilton	McKeown	Sadowski	Walter
Harlan	McMillan	Sanders, La.	Warren
Harter	McReynolds	Sanders, Tex.	Wearin
Hastings	McSwain	Sandlin	Weaver
Healey	Maloney, Conn.	Schaefer	Werner
Henney	Maloney, La.	Schuetz	West, Ohio
Hildebrandt	Mansfield	Schulte	West, Tex.
Hill, Ala.	Martin, Colo.	Scrugham	White
Hill, Samuel B.	Mead	Sears	Whittington
Hoeppel	Meeks	Secrest	Williford
Howard	Miller	Shannon	Williams
Hughes	Milligan	Sirovich	Wilson
Imhoff	Montet	Sisson	Wood, Ga.
Jacobsen	Murdock	Smith, Va.	Wood, Mo.
Jenckes, Ind.	O'Brien	Smith, Wash.	Zioncheck

NAYS—146

Allen	Dondero	Kurtz	Reed, N.Y.
Andrew, Mass.	Dowell	Lambertson	Rich
Arens	Eaton	Lambeth	Robertson
Arnold	Edmiston	Lea, Calif.	Rogers, Mass.
Ayres, Kans.	Edmonds	Lehlbach	Ruffin
Bacharach	Eltse, Calif.	Lehr	Seger
Bakewell	Englebright	Lemke	Shallenberger
Beck	Evans	Luce	Sinclair
Beedy	Focht	Ludlow	Snell
Biermann	Foss	McCarthy	Stokes
Blanchard	Frear	McFadden	Strong, Pa.
Boileau	Gifford	McGugin	Taber
Britten	Gilchrist	McLean	Taylor, Tenn.
Brown, Ky.	Gillespie	McLeod	Terrell, Tex.
Buchanan	Gillette	Mapes	Thomas
Burke, Nebr.	Goodwin	Marshall	Thompson, Ill.
Burnham	Goss	Martin, Mass.	Tinkham
Cady	Guyer	Martin, Oreg.	Tobey
Cannon, Wis.	Hancock, N.Y.	May	Traeger
Carpenter, Kans.	Hart	Merritt	Treadway
Carter, Calif.	Hartley	Millard	Truax
Carter, Wyo.	Hess	Mitchell	Turner
Cavicchia	Hill, Knute	Montague	Turpin
Christianson	Hollister	Moran	Umstead
Clarke, N.Y.	Holmes	Morehead	Utterback
Cochran, Pa.	Hope	Mott	Wadsworth
Collins, Calif.	James	Moynihan, Ill.	Welch
Connolly	Jenkins, Ohio	Nesbit	Whitley
Cooper, Ohio	Johnson, Minn.	O'Malley	Wigglesworth
Crosser, Ohio	Jones	Peavey	Wolcott
Crowther	Kahn	Perkins	Wolfenden
Culkin	Kelly, Pa.	Pettengill	Wolverton
Darden	Kennedy, N.Y.	Pierce	Woodruff
Darrow	Kinzer	Polk	Woodrum
De Priest	Kloeb	Powers	Young
Dirksen	Kniffin	Ransley
Ditter	Knutson	Reece

NOT VOTING—68

Abernethy	Church	Huddleston	Peterson
Allgood	Coffin	Jeffers	Plumley
Andrews, N.Y.	Collins, Miss.	Kee	Randolph
Auf der Heide	DeRouen	Kennedy, Md.	Rayburn
Bacon	Dickstein	Kramer	Reid, Ill.
Berlin	Dies	Kvale	Rogers, N.H.
Boehne	Doutrich	Lee, Mo.	Shoemaker
Bolton	Fernandez	Lewis, Md.	Simpson
Brennan	Fish	Lloyd	Smith, W.Va.
Brooks	Foulkes	McCormack	Stalker
Browning	Frey	McDuffie	Sumners, Tex.
Buckbee	Gambrill	Marland	Swick
Burke, Calif.	Green	Monaghan, Mont.	Thurston
Busby	Griffin	Muldowney	Waldron
Carley, N.Y.	Hancock, N.C.	Musselwhite	Weideman
Celler	Higgins	Norton	Wilcox
Chase	Hoidale	Parks	Withrow

So the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Kee (for) with Mr. Bacon (against).
Mr. Hancock of North Carolina (for) with Mr. Higgins (against).
Mr. Kennedy of Maryland (for) with Mr. Andrews of New York (against).
Mr. Randolph (for) with Mr. Fish (against).
Mr. Celler (for) with Mr. Chase (against).
Mr. Brooks (for) with Mr. Kvale (against).
Mr. Peterson (for) with Mr. Bolton (against).
Mr. Griffin (for) with Mr. Doutrich (against).
Mr. DeRouen (for) with Mr. Buckbee (against).
Mr. Dickstein (for) with Mr. Plumley (against).
Mr. Lee of Missouri (for) with Mr. Muldowney (against).
Mr. Busby (for) with Mr. Simpson (against).
Mr. Lloyd (for) with Mr. Stalker (against).
Mr. Boehne (for) with Mr. Swick (against).
Mr. McCormack (for) with Mr. Waldron (against).
Mr. Rogers of New Hampshire (for) with Mr. Withrow (against).
Mr. Gambrill (for) with Mr. Reid of Illinois (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. McDuffie with Mr. Thurston.
Mr. Carley of New York with Mr. Shoemaker.
Mr. Allgood with Mr. Church.
Mr. Dies with Mr. Brennan.
Mr. Rayburn with Mr. Frey.
Mr. Smith of West Virginia with Mr. Hoidale.
Mr. Sumners of Texas with Mr. Berlin.
Mrs. Norton with Mr. Wilcox.
Mr. Fernandez with Mr. Weideman.
Mr. Lewis of Maryland with Mr. Parks.
Mr. Musselwhite with Mr. Foulkes.
Mr. Green with Mr. Monaghan of Montana.
Mr. Huddleston with Mr. Marland.
Mr. Browning with Mr. Burke of California.
Mr. Collins of Mississippi with Mr. Coffin.
Mr. Auf der Heide with Mr. Jeffers.
Mr. Kramer with Mr. Abernethy.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all Members who spoke on the bill H.R. 9391, may be permitted to revise and extend their remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection?

OLD-AGE PENSIONS

Mr. WELCH Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, of all the social legislation that has been suggested during recent years, there is perhaps none that touches our hearts and has a greater emotional appeal than that of old-age pensions. The old system of the county poorhouse or home for the aged is passing. Over one-half of the States in the Union have enacted old-age pension legislation. In some of these States husbands and wives who have toiled together through the years are no longer torn apart to be placed in a home under a system of mass charity. The day will speedily come when this shall be stopped entirely in this country. No matter how adequate may be its facilities, no matter how beautiful its surroundings—and my home city of San Francisco has one of the finest and most beautiful homes for old folks in the world, the Laguna Honda Home, with the most modern facilities and most beautiful surroundings—an old-folks home still remains mass charity, with all of its drawbacks.

It is significant that the welfare organizations of the Nation, with their vast experience in dealing with the aged and indigent, together with the fraternal organizations, and particularly the Fraternal Order of Eagles who have had very wide experience in this problem, are unanimous in their support of this humanitarian legislation. It has been endorsed by the Catholic Welfare Council, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, and the Commission on Social Justice of the Central Conference of American Rabbis as representing the three great religious groups in our Nation. In addition it has received the support of the American Federation of Labor and countless other agencies engaged in direct welfare work whose first-hand knowledge of conditions throughout the country cannot be denied. I am glad to add my endorsement to that given by all of these representative organizations and urge upon the Congress of the United States the advisability of taking early and favorable action upon this matter.

During the past year the Federal Government has spent billions of dollars on relief. Every effort has been put forth to find employment for those in distress. An emergency has existed producing distress on every hand. But even in normal times those who have reached old age cannot hope to compete with youth in securing employment. They are always facing an emergency. Necessary assistance to them is a responsibility we cannot avoid.

The problem is no longer local in character. As our Nation has grown, so has our responsibility. Formerly, when each local community lived largely unto itself, this was a local problem. As local interests and life became State-wide, the responsibility became a State problem. As I have already said, this has been recognized by the enactment of old-age pension laws in 28 States. But we as a Nation are fast outgrowing this State responsibility. It is rapidly becoming a Federal responsibility, and legislation must be enacted to meet it.

Great chain organizations have grown up during recent years, taking the wealth from local communities and centering it in larger cities. Investors in one part of the United States develop their investments in other sections of the country, in which they may never be present, and in many instances in which they pay no taxes. This increase of wealth develops responsibility, and the only way in which it can be adequately placed is through the Federal Government contributing its proper share of the cost incidental to caring for the aged. It is not right to expect a local community to have to carry the burdens of those who have grown old developing wealth that is removed from that community by distant investors. This is in part a Federal responsibility.

The progress made in the American standard of living during recent years has created a situation which must be recognized by the Federal Government. Improvement in transportation, the wider knowledge of more favorable climate in some States for older people, have both contributed to make this Federal problem more important. State old-age pension laws must, as a measure of self-protection, contain provisions requiring residence in that State for periods of 10 or 15 years prior to the application for an old-age pension. Persons of advanced years, seeking better health in more favorable climates, are without assistance from their old home State and can lay no claim to assistance from the new home State. Only through the Federal Government can these worthy citizens be aided.

The enactment of national legislation definitely establishing a policy in which the Federal Government accepts its responsibility will do much to bring about uniformity in State laws which now vary widely. The cost to the Federal Government will be negligible when compared with the tremendous sums now spent on relief. The experience already gained by the administration of State old-age pension laws now in effect indicates that old-age pension laws are far more economical and humanitarian than the maintenance of almshouses and homes for the aged.

In every State where the plan has been in effect the per capita costs have been materially reduced by the pension plan. The cost of caring for the aged in these States has been lifted from local communities during the recent depression and has been more properly distributed. It should be distributed over the entire country.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, let me call attention to the fact that this is not a new principle insofar as the Federal Government is concerned. It is simply an extension of the pension systems already in effect to apply to all of our citizens who have labored through the years to build this Nation. It is recognition of services rendered in the development of private industry in the same manner as the veterans of our wars receive pensions for services they have rendered, or Federal civil employees for the years they have toiled in civil service. Every laboring man and woman is entitled to the removal of the haunting fear of a destitute old age.

MR. RAND'S EXPLANATION UNSATISFACTORY

Mr. FOULKES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FOULKES. Mr. Speaker, it was to be expected that my criticism of James H. Rand, Jr., head of the reactionary "committee of the Nation", and president of the typewriter-manufacturing concern of Remington-Rand, Inc., would displease Mr. Rand and his associates, as well as others in agreement with him.

I was not surprised, therefore, when I received a lengthy letter from H. Landsiedel, vice president of Remington-Rand, Inc., protesting against my statements in an extension of remarks in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD under date of May 28.

In this strike, as in many others, it is obvious that the employers have violated the spirit of the N.R.A. and of the new deal although naturally enough, with able legal counsel to aid them, they have surrounded themselves with every subterfuge and protection that statutory technicalities provide. My information came from reliable sources and I am satisfied that I did not err on any material point in my statement regarding the disagreement between the corporation and its employees. From people living in Ilion, N.Y., and vicinity, I have obtained plenty of facts in corroboration of my position.

Although the N.R.A. has laid down as one of its fundamentals the right of employees to organize in unions, to have their unions recognized, and to deal with their employers in an organized way, the manufacturers of the Remington typewrite object to this and want to go back to the outgrown epoch in which there were no unions because there were also no great corporations.

Dependable informants tell me that the workers in the Remington plants have not insisted upon a closed shop. They have merely asked recognition of their union and the right to have representatives of the union deal with the company, instead of the workers being compelled to deal as helpless individuals with one of the most powerful trusts in the United States. Such a request calls for no more than an elementary right that the N.R.A. and the National Labor Board have consistently upheld.

I am advised, moreover, that the Remington-Rand, Inc., agreed to accept terms which were accepted in the parallel case of the Underwood Typewriter Co., and then failed to live up to the agreement. I am convinced, from the facts laid before me, that I was entirely right in my assertion that the employers have taken advantage of the workers in conferences, getting concessions from them by making promises that were later disregarded.

Mr. Landsiedel says my speech tended to "inflame passion and class antagonism." Every monopolist says the same thing whenever his oppressive tactics are exposed. The truth is that the exploiting trust magnate is the one who creates passion and antagonism by his tyranny.

As for Mr. Rand, Remington-Rand, Inc., and the Remington Arms Co., the relationship between these and other interests that are viciously hostile to the social-justice program of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and his fellow workers in the task of humanizing the Government of the United States is perhaps technically remote. So is the connection between many other groups of Wall Street magnates who are beneath the surface hand in glove.

At one time Remington, owner of the Ilion, N.Y. rifle factory, had a financial interest in his own name in the typewriter concern. Merely because there is no official record today of a monetary relationship between these two organizations or between many other corporations is no proof that such a connection does not exist. Political bedfellows who fight shoulder to shoulder for the same code of reaction and stifled competition have secret bonds that unite them in their common cause against progress and the cause of "the forgotten man."

Mr. Rand, with his plutocratic "committee of the Nation" and his hysterical and melodramatic Dr. Wirt; the Remington Arms Co; the Remington-Rand, Inc.; the Steel Trust, that makes its headquarters in Dr. Wirt's home city, Gary, Ind.; and all the other ruthless and rapacious interests that give lip service to Franklin D. Roosevelt, but actually hate him and his brave crusade for real democracy—they are all brothers under the skin.

WORK OF THE SEVENTY-THIRD CONGRESS

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, in a few days we will have finished the work of the Seventy-third Congress, the most important in the history of our great Republic. Both the special session held during the early months of 1933 and the session now drawing to a close have enacted more constructive legislation than has ever been witnessed during any like period.

The splendid work of the Seventy-third Congress has been possible because of the close cooperation between the administration and the majority party of the Congress. Relief has been extended to millions of our fellow citizens, and agriculture and industry have been lifted from conditions of utter prostration. We have started on the road to recovery. However, there remains much to be done, and the Congress should not adjourn until the task is completed. It is my thought that even though this is an election year and many of the Members have opposition in their respective districts, we should remain in Washington until the Congress adjourns. With this thought in mind, I am sending the following letter to my constituents:

DEAR FRIEND: After the adjournment of Congress I will return to my home in Oklahoma City. I will have copies of all laws enacted during both sessions of the Seventy-third Congress, together with various documents, bulletins, pamphlets, and other governmental publications. You may have any of these upon request.

If, as your Congressman at large, I can be of any service to you while I am in Washington or when I return to Oklahoma, do not hesitate to write me, or, better still, come to see me when you are in Oklahoma City. Let me have the benefit of your personal suggestions and recommendations. You will find me listed in the Oklahoma City telephone directory.

With best wishes, I am,

Sincerely yours,

WILL ROGERS (of Oklahoma City),
Congressman at Large.

I am confident that whatever remains to be done when the Seventy-third Congress adjourns will be pushed forward to completion by the Seventy-fourth Congress under the leadership of our great President. It is to be hoped that the people will see to it that enough members of the Democratic Party are returned to Congress to enable President Roosevelt to complete the work that he has so ably begun.

THE POLICY OF EXEMPTING GOVERNMENT BONDS FROM THEIR JUST PROPORTION OF TAX BURDENS IS UN-DEMOCRATIC, UN-REPUBLICAN, UN-AMERICAN AND A VICIOUS FORM OF GOVERNMENTAL FAVORITISM

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks on other subjects than the census bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. LOZIER. Mr. Speaker, one of the live issues before the American public is the question of tax-exempt securities. Since I entered Congress I have spoken and voted in favor of a constitutional amendment that would prohibit the issue of tax-exempt or partially tax-exempt securities, because many great fortunes, some of which were accumulated as the result of war-time profiteering, are now invested in this class of securities.

Those who have their fortunes invested in tax-exempt securities are escaping their fair proportion of the burdens and expenses of the Government which protect them in the accumulation of their wealth, and now protects them in the enjoyment of their possessions. It is a time-honored principle that all citizens should contribute to the support of the Government in proportion to their ability, but this formula is reversed under the policy of issuing tax-exempt securities, which, in its practical operation, means that the greater wealth a man has the less taxes he shall pay.

The policy of exempting any securities or things of value from their just proportion of tax burdens is undemocratic, unrepublican, un-American, and a vicious form of governmental favoritism. It tends to create a privileged class, which is antagonistic to the basic principles on which our Government is founded. It strikes viciously at our progressive income-tax system, in that it permits a comparatively few individuals with large incomes to escape their quota of taxes and correspondingly increases the tax burdens of people who have only moderate means.

To fair-minded men it is inconceivable why any class of citizens should be relieved of their just proportion of national, State, or local taxes, but there is rapidly increasing classes who by purchasing tax-free bonds not only escape taxation on their incomes from these bonds, but at the same time secure a reduction on their surtax on incomes from other sources.

No one familiar with the facts will deny that many owners of swollen fortunes are systematically investing their capital in tax-exempt securities in order to escape taxation, especially in the higher bracket surtaxes. In every community there are men of great wealth who pay little or no taxes for national, State, or local purposes because their wealth is invested in tax-free bonds. This condition is not wholesome and is calculated to breed discontent, socialism, and bolshevism. When men of moderate incomes who are taxed heavily for the support of the State and Nation see their rich neighbors escaping their taxes by concentrating their wealth in tax-free securities, only patriotism, sound judgment, and commen sense prevent them from becoming anarchists.

The ever-increasing supply of tax-exempt securities makes taxdodging easy, wrongfully deprives the local, State, and Federal Governments of revenue comparatively estimated at from two hundred million to four hundred million annually, which revenues are sorely needed to enable our governmental agencies to function efficiently.

The system is viciously discriminatory. It creates and nurtures communistic sentiment. It discourages and penalizes individual enterprise and initiative. It relatively reduces the reward of the man of vision, who, seeing far into the future, has the courage to invest his funds in commercial ventures and productive industries, in which, of course, there is always an element of risk because of varying economic conditions. It destroys the incentive of individuals and corporations to initiate new commercial and industrial activities. It makes capital lazy, timid, withdraws it from channels of commerce, and locks it in a strong box.

In our complex economic system money invested in tax-exempt securities is likened to the talent buried in the earth. While it may discharge public obligations, make public improvements, and perform other useful purposes, it yields no revenue and does not aid productive industries or make the wheels of commerce and business go 'round and 'round. The tax-exempt securities do only a part of their duties, and in return for what they do, they demand unconscionable privileges and immunities.

Tax-free bonds are drone bees in the hive of capital, commerce, and industry. They create no new wealth, build no new factories, construct no new railroads, stimulate no new industries, open no new markets, build no new homes, and finance no new and far-reaching commercial activities. The beneficiaries of tax-free bonds turn a deaf ear to the ever-increasing demand of industry and commerce for new capital to develop and conserve our national resources and to carry on our commerce and business.

It is fundamentally wrong to permit certain classes or groups of citizens to habitually use capital for less than its economic value, and when this privilege is granted to any class it automatically compels all other groups to pay for the use of capital more than its economic value. This discrimination is opposed to sound economics, business ethics, and common honesty. If a merchant habitually sells his commodities to a few persons at a loss, obviously, to recoup that loss, he must increase the price of the commodities he sells to his other customers. The loss of profit on one transaction must be compensated for by increased profit on other transactions.

The theory on which tax-exempt securities are issued is unethical and inexpedient, because it exacts an excessive charge on the many in order to make up for the losses on transactions with a favored few. This principle applies to sales of the use of capital because money is a commodity, and interest is the price the borrower pays for its use.

If the economic value of a loan of $1,000,000 to a person or corporation is 5 percent per annum, then the economic value of a loan of $1,000,000 to a State or municipality is likewise 5 percent per annum. If we indulge the practice of lending money to a State or to its political subdivisions at a rate of 1 or 1½ percent below the economic value of the money loaned, then to compensate for this loss individuals, business concerns, and public-service corporations must pay 1 or 1½ percent more than the economic value of the use of the money they borrow to conduct their business enterprises.

The issue of tax-exempt bonds penalizes all other forms of securities, withholds capital from industrial developments—railroads, and other public utilities—except at a higher rate, which is immediately reflected in increased prices for manufactured commodities, freights, and other public-utility services. This is because higher priced capital must operate these industries and commercial agencies. This means increased cost of production or operation, which is quickly translated into higher prices for commodities or service.

Tax-exempt bonds are of exotic origin. They are contrary to the genius and spirit of our institutions. In theory, at least, all men are equal before the law; that is, all have the same rights and are alike amenable to the law and entitled to its protection. Likewise, all property should be equal before the law and alike subject to the burdens incident to maintenance of our governmental agencies.

The continued issue of tax-free securities violates the principle of equal distribution of taxation and prevents an equitable proportion of the taxes being placed on those best able to bear them. It necessarily penalizes one class of investment for the benefit of another form of investment. The average citizens—that is the farmers, laborers, business and professional men, and the middle classes, who follow ordinary pursuits and have moderate incomes and who by their industry, economy, and ability build up communities and contribute to the creation of new wealth—under the present system must bear more than their fair and just proportion of the tax burden—Federal, State, and local—while the favored few escape their just part of this burden, because, forsooth, they have invested their idle wealth in tax-free securities and not in productive industries or tangible property. In my opinion the next constitutional amendment submitted for ratification will be one to abolish the issue of tax-exempt securities, and in the interest of fair play and social justice I will aggressively support an amendment of that character.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an editorial.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

THE OIL INDUSTRY

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on some oil bills pending before the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and to include therein a letter from the President.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker, next to agriculture, the oil industry is perhaps the most important one in my State of Oklahoma. The proceeds from oil produced have been of great help to the development of the State. It has built cities and towns and has provided revenues, in a large measure, to pay the expenses of the State government. It has strengthened our school funds. To the amount that the oil industry has contributed in taxes, it has taken that burden from the taxpayers and has built roads and bridges and has maintained them.

Some 2 years ago the oil industry was in a terrible plight. The price of oil went down to around 25 cents per barrel, which is ruinously below the cost of production. The oil men now are greatly distressed lest these low prices be reached again, and this low price level will be reached again unless a way is found of effectively enforcing the allowable production of oil for each State and locality.

The oil administrator strongly recommends that additional legislation is necessary to strengthen the existing law. The President has appealed to the committees of Congress, and through them to Members of the House, inviting attention to the actual and acute situation, and the responsibility is upon Congress to enact legislation with teeth in it before adjournment if the oil industry is to be saved from disaster.

Bills are pending before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and before the Senate Committee on Mines and Mining to give the oil administrator additional authority to enforce the present law and prevent the production of oil in excess of the maximum amount determined by the administrator, as provided by the petroleum code. It is reported that "hot" oil is being produced. Those States where the petroleum code has been ruthlessly violated do not want any legislation. They protest against it. It is as certain as that night follows day that unless the oil administrator is given legislation with teeth in it that "hot" oil in almost unlimited quantities will be run in violation of the amount allowable under the code.

I believe in oil proration and restricting production. In my judgment it is the only way to save the oil industry. If the legislation introduced by my colleague, Congressman DISNEY, and by Senator THOMAS of Oklahoma, at the request of the oil administration, is enacted, it will give the necessary authority to the oil administrator. This will preserve the price of oil. If the price of oil goes down as it did in August 2 years ago, it will not only deprive Oklahoma of a large amount of revenue, but it will throw thousands of laborers out of employment; it will destroy the value of collateral pledged for loans; and it will disastrously affect not only Oklahoma but all the oil-producing States. It is a short-sighted policy for a few companies engaged in running "hot" oil to oppose this legislation for the benefit of the oil industry. They do not fear State authority. They think they can get by States and State agencies and still run "hot" oil. They have been able to do this in the past, and they hope to do it in the future. There really is no answer to the contention I make that those who really are opposed to this legislation believe that they are in a position in some way or other to evade existing law and regulations and will be able to run an excess amount of "hot" oil. This is the position in a nutshell. If not, why do they not agree that the Federal Government enact strengthening legislation which will put teeth in existing law and enable the oil administrator to enforce the law and prevent excess production?

This will result in keeping up the price of oil. Without this legislation the oil industry is headed for the rocks. You hear of scandals and all sorts of evasions of existing law. Congress ought not to adjourn, if this industry is to be preserved, without the enactment of legislation recommended by the oil administration and the President.

This bill is to regulate commerce in petroleum, and declares, in section 1, the policy that the excessive supply of crude petroleum and products derived therefrom has injuriously affected and now injuriously affects commerce in petroleum; that premature extraction of petroleum from the natural reservoir above the quantity which may be moved in commerce results in waste; and that to prevent this there is need of further regulation.

It gives the Secretary of the Interior, who is the oil administrator, the necessary power to make necessary investigations and collect data, and require reports and the examination and inspection of books, records, papers, and properties for the purpose of verifying such reports.

This means that producing companies, some of whom are engaged in running "hot" oil, cannot conceal the oil produced and sold above the allowable amount, and it will give the oil administrator the information he desires as to whether an excess amount of oil has been produced and sold over and above the amount allowed.

The bill authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to limit the importation of petroleum and its products and to determine the demand for consumption and regulate or fix the quota for each State or community of oil that may be produced.

Paragraph (b) of section 5 provides:

The Secretary of the Interior shall prescribe quotas of crude petroleum for movement into commerce, in such manner and to such extent as will limit the total movements into commerce to the demand for consumption, in the United States and the demand for export, as determined by the Secretary of the Interior, and he shall prescribe such quotas of crude petroleum from such States, pools, fields, leases or properties, storage units, or other sources of supply as he may find to be necessary to effect such national limitation. The quota prescribed for any such source of supply shall be equal to the demand for crude petroleum from that source of supply as determined by the Secretary of the Interior under this section.

Then there is a proviso for proper care for new sources of supply. After determining the amount of the allowable quota for any State or community, section 6 provides:

If the Secretary of the Interior shall determine that the effective enforcement of quotas prescribed pursuant to section 5 of this act requires the establishment of quotas for the production of crude petroleum within or from any State, pool, field, lease, property, or well, the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe quotas for production in or from such State, pool, field, lease, property, or well.

Then the bill makes it unlawful to produce oil in excess of the quota.

Section 7 provides that the Secretary of the Interior may provide certificates of clearance for petroleum.

Section 8 provides that the Secretary may make additional rules and regulations whenever it may be necessary.

Finally, an appeal is permitted to the courts, and any person adversely affected by any order, rule, or regulation issued under the provisions of the act or any act done or threatened thereunder may seek court review.

This bill makes sure that the Secretary of the Interior, appointed as the oil administrator, may have the authority to make the necessary investigations, examine books, prescribe quotas, and prevent imports in order to find data to compel all persons or corporations producing oil to live within the law. It will result in reduced production to the amount allowed. No person, firm, or corporation interested in having the oil industry to prosper honestly need be afraid of this bill. The "hot" oil man or company, of course, uses every kind of argument, constitutional or otherwise, to dodge the question. Of course, everyone who wants to evade the law first jumps behind the Constitution and uses it as a smoke screen. This legislation is constitutional. The committees of the House and the Senate should bring the bills out in the open and report them for the consideration of the House and Senate so that the questions involved may be debated and considered.

I am attaching an earnest appeal from President Franklin D. Roosevelt, urging the enactment of this legislation and outlining the situation such as we who are acquainted with the oil industry know to exist.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE RELATIVE TO FEDERAL PETROLEUM BILL.

The President has addressed identical letters to Senator M. M. LOGAN, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Mines and Mining, and to Representative SAM RAYBURN, Chairman of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and has sent copies of these letters to Senator THOMAS of Oklahoma and Representative DISNEY. The President's letter read as follows:

MAY 22, 1934.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I have received a disturbing letter from the administrator for the petroleum industry, Hon. Harold L. Ickes, informing me of the continued daily production of oil in excess of the maximum amount determined on by the administrator pursuant to authority under the petroleum code.

The administrator states that the records of the Bureau of Mines during the first 3 months of this year show a daily average production of illegal oil of 149,000 barrels. Technically speaking, this may not all have been "hot" oil, but in a real sense it is, since it is oil produced in excess of the allowable. While the final figures of the Bureau of Mines are not available for the months of April and May, it is unquestionably true that there is growing disregard for production orders issued under the petroleum code and that the trend of "hot" oil produced is upward. For example, it is stated on reliable authority that the daily excess production in the east Texas field alone is running at 60,000 to 75,000 barrels per day. Other estimators say that this figure should be much higher. The Oil and Gas Journal recently estimated that there was illegal production in the country as a whole of 193,475 barrels per day during the week ended May 12.

If the principle of prorating production under a code is to be maintained, it seems necessary that the existing law should be strengthened by the passage of the bill which has been introduced in the Senate by Senator THOMAS, and in the House by Congressman DISNEY, and supported by the oil administrator.

It is a simple fact that as a result of the work of the oil administrator definite progress has been made both in eliminating unfair practices and in raising the price of crude petroleum to a reasonable level, which has brought added employment and more fair wages to those engaged in oil production.

I am frankly fearful that if the law is not strengthened illegal production will continue and grow in volume and result in a collapse of the whole structure. This will mean a return to the wretched conditions which existed in the spring of 1933.

I hope therefore that the proposed legislation can be enacted. I do not want to see this important American industry reduced to the condition under which it was operating before the oil administration started its work.

Very sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

JUDGE MANSFIELD

Mr. McDUFFIE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SANDERS] may be permitted to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. SANDERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, those of us who have spent many years in Congress learn to value above all else the sincere and able efforts of certain of our colleagues on both sides of the House. One of the most faithful and beloved is the gentleman from Texas, Judge MANSFIELD. His long service, his stout heart, and his indomitable courage have inspired us all. We learn now with a feeling of relief that the Judge will run without opposition in his district, and therefore will be spared the hardships and uncertainties, and the expense of a grueling campaign in the heat of summer.

Mention should here be made of a peculiar and unusual circumstance which has arisen in the Mansfield district which could have brought about a condition far less pleasant than the one that now exists. The State of Texas has been redistricted, and Galveston County, the home of the gentleman from Texas, Mr. THOMPSON, has been removed from the Seventh District and placed in the Ninth—Judge MANSFIELD's district. Thus two seated Congressmen were pitted against each other.

It is already known that Mr. THOMPSON, with a generosity and chivalry seldom found in our present-day life, has announced that he will not oppose our beloved Judge MANSFIELD, and that he will support him actively. This announcement, incidentally, caused two ambitious Ninth District politicians to withdraw from the congressional race. They had seen in the Mansfield-Thompson situation a possible chance to slip into a prominent place in the coming race.

It should be noted here, in justice to Mr. THOMPSON, that he has made an unusual record during his term in Washington. He is the caliber we need, and seldom get. His vision is clear and far-seeing. He has a mind of his own, but listens carefully to the counsel of his older colleagues. A staunchly loyal Democrat—still I am gratified to hear our Republican colleagues speak well of him.

His committee chairmen tell me his service has been capable and faithful, a gratifying bit of knowledge for me, because I placed him on his committees.

Of particular importance is his age—he is young—38 years this summer, and therefore has every prospect, should he return to Congress in the near future, of attaining those places of power gained solely by seniority.

These things should be known and appreciated by his own friends here and at home, and by the good Texans who have been Judge MANSFIELD's supporters for so many years. This last group will, I hope, feel a sense of relief to know that when the Judge retires, which we hope will not be for many years, but when he does leave public life and settles down in his newly built home in Columbus, that there is available a worthy successor to carry on his work in the person of the Honorable CLARK THOMPSON.

The Democratic Party, too, will appreciate Mr. THOMPSON's self-sacrifice for through it the seniority of Judge MANSFIELD, with all of its value and influence, is preserved in the House of Representatives.

NATIONAL DEFENSE BY AIR POWER

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks on the subject of national defense.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, it is remarkable how the civil population of the United States has grasped and understood the remarkable power of aviation as a factor in national defense. In fact, this power is almost self-evident. What would we think of a horse that could travel 300 miles without having to have a road to run on, and could travel at that rate over water as well as mountains? A troop of cavalry made up of horses with that speed would certainly restore the confidence of all military minds in the power of cavalry. But such horses are not comparable to planes of that speed. Horses would become uncontrollable and break the formation if struck by a single bullet causing even a mere superficial wound. But airplanes may be shot through at nonvital points a hundred times and continue their usefulness, and only when some vital spot is struck is the airplane disabled. Since it has become fairly well known throughout the Nation that I have been standing for advocating and seeking to accomplish legislation looking to adequate defense by air, I have received thousands of letters from all sections of the country. I regret that my clerical force was inadequate to answer all these letters. I am asking all who may happen to read these remarks to consider it as something of an answer to the words of commendation that have come to me during the present session of Congress.

Mr. Speaker, not only is air power the most effective means of national defense, but it is the most economical means, and therefore appeals to the mind of the layman and the taxpayer for that reason. I feel sure that it will not be many years before the force of this public opinion operating in every quarter of the country will force itself upon the Government, and the Congress and the President will be compelled to respond to this public conviction that air power is the best and cheapest way of defending our country. Of course, I do not advocate the abandonment of either the Navy or of ground troops. Not one word has ever escaped my lips in derogation of either. But I do say that standing alone they cannot defend this Nation as we insist it must be defended. Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, I am discussing the national defense, and defense only. And I mean by defense the repulsion of any attempted invasion of continental United States or of our outlying possessions. I do not believe that the American people will ever again approve of our sending armies across the oceans to fight the battles of other nations upon a foreign soil. Our country is large enough and varied enough in resources of food and of materials to enable us to live comfortably while other nations destroy each other in war. It is far better for us to stay at home and develop our own resources, and, if needs be, have our foreign commerce for a time curtailed by reason of wars among other nations, than it is for us to undertake to engage in war on the other side of the ocean and thus be drawn away from our base of supplies and take the chance of having other nations combine against us and destroy hundreds of thousands of precious American youth.

So long as I am in Congress I will never vote to send another army across either ocean. But I will vote to spend the last dollar of American wealth and to bring into the service every man of military age to repel any effort by any enemy to invade our country. We want to give other nations of the world notice that we will not dabble in their affairs, but if they try to come over here and dictate to us we will by means of our fleet and especially by means of our air fleets, try to give them a watery grave before they get within 500 miles of our shores. But should we fail in this, then we will be still fighting by our reserve air forces, having brought into action not only the Organized Air Reserves but the emergency pilots, and will try to sink the enemy transport before they ever can touch American soil. If, however, they should break through this line of defense, we will by then have assembled sufficient forces of land troops consisting of Regular Army, National Guard, Organized Reserves, and millions of soldiers drafted from the unorganized reserves, and these will fight along with those already trained in the Regular Army, the National Guard, and the Organized Reserves, and we will furnish ground for graves for every enemy that lands on American soil. Conditions are very different from what they were a hundred years ago. No fleet can land as did the British in 1814, when they burned the National Capitol. No invading army can land as it did at New Orleans, when Andrew Jackson sent them to sudden and unexpected graves.

The following extracts from current publications are typical of thousands appearing in our newspapers and magazines:

The views of General Bullard, a most distinguished soldier, are entitled to the greatest respect, as they appeared in the New York American:

AVIATION BECOMES MOST DOMINANT FACTOR IN MILITARY SYSTEM, ADDS SECURITY LEADER

(By Lt. Gen. Robert Lee Bullard, formerly commander of the American Second Army in France, now president of the National Security League)

The amazing progress of aviation and in the adaptability of the airplane to war uses make necessary a reorganization of our national defense system.

The air is not "divided" at the shore line. We should have a unified air force.

The airplane is the most powerful weapon of offense and defense ever invented by man. It should not be made a "stepchild" of the older services. As such, plans for its use are woefully inadequate.

These plans, and appropriations to make them effective, are constantly subordinated to the needs of the Army and Navy—both of which are quite literally of diminishing importance to national defense.

There should be a separate, unified air force, equal in rank and importance with the Army and Navy, and the three services should be united under a single department head.

The time is very near when, of these three services, the air force will be by far the most important, effective and reliable means of defense.

It is imperative that we prepare for this day by freeing the airplane, as a defense weapon, from the apron strings of the older services; and seek to let men trained in carrying war into a new element study and prepare now, so that we may be able to meet the war as it will be fought in the future.

PLANES DOMINATE

After the World War, and again lately amid threats of war, we had discussion of air power, and in each case indecision. Facts and events give no warrant for indecision.

Even when the World War ended the airplane's superior power was clear. The dominant morale had shifted from side to side with mastery of the air. Soldiers, overflown, became demoralized and had little fight left in them. Panic-stricken civil populations fled. That kind of domination over the morale of a warring nation is next door to victory.

The airplane emerged from the World War armed with the deadly effectiveness of the machine gun, the destructiveness of the bomb, the frightfulness and insidiousness of poison gas. And it was even then evident that its attacks could neither be foreseen nor prevented.

No other arm or implement of war showed such wide development of uses. None had comparable material and moral effectiveness. None showed such possibilities of future development.

In Europe, France, in her fear of another war with her old enemy, Germany, at once made the airplane her principal arm.

In America Admiral Sims was quoted as saying that in a modern war the best place for the fleet would be as far up the Mississippi as possible.

NEW ACHIEVEMENTS

Then, a dozen years ago, General Mitchell, of the Army Air Force, contended that even then the airplane was superior to the dreadnaught. And during a storm of controversy he was court-martialed and resigned. But generally in America thinking on this subject has advanced little beyond the ideas of 1918.

Even though, within a few years, there have been staggering increases in size, spread, maneuverability, climb, lift, range, and fighting power of this war weapon.

New achievements are reported almost daily. An American commercial giant airplane has 3,000 miles cruising range. Even Mount Everest ceases to be an obstacle. Russia nears success with a plane which can carry 150 men, or even artillery. Italy staggers us with superspeed records and a trans-Atlantic air armada.

We produce a bomber which needs no escort of fighters; it is swifter and more agile than most pursuit planes. From Europe a story, not improbable, of the invention in Germany of a stratosphere bombing plane of almost incredible ceiling speed, range, and load capacity. While Britain experiments with a giant, heavily armed, which may be able to drive the submarine menace from beneath the seas.

To make this new weapon more deadly and terrifying, more powerful poison gases are being invented, and more frightful and outrageous of all bacteria for the infection and indiscriminate killing of civil populations are being prepared for broadcasting by aerial bombers.

For more than a dozen years the older services have been working on defenses against this new weapon of war. There is none, except the airplane itself.

DEFENSES FEEBLE

That is to say, until some radio wizard invents a ray which will cripple the ignition system in mid-air. Antiaircraft guns, gas masks, and caves, regardless of military reassurances, all constitute but feeble defense. They are merely palliatives.

Two years ago our Navy, with its airplanes, defeated our Panama Canal defenses in a war maneuver.

Last year British land defense, with its airplanes, was judged to have repelled and defeated attack by the British Navy, the most powerful in the world.

Russia is even now planning to strengthen her trans-Siberian Railway, with airplanes. Germany's rearmament demand is chiefly for airplanes.

France has just called for 3,000,000 francs and Great Britain for approximately the same sum, both for the purpose of enabling themselves to get into constant action with airplanes.

Great Britain is reported to have planned movement of her capital in event of war, to protect the seat of government from aerial attack. Doubtless France and many other European nations secretly have completed such tentative plans long since.

Britain also gives evidence of relying less upon her navy than upon specially armed seaplanes, having cannon firing a new undersea projectile, for protection of her pervious shipping against submarines.

Japan hastens the enlargement of her air force as the only defense which her highly inflammable great cities can have against a Russian air fleet of unknown proportions.

In the light of facts and events which have been cited, how can there be basis for indecision in America?

Frontiers and their forts, seas, rivers, and mountain ranges, concrete entrenched lines, armed millions and gigantic guns—all these mean nothing to this new weapon.

It does not seem to me that H. G. Wells was a literary dreamer when he pictured a general war breaking in 1942 which would so weaken all the powers of Europe that airmen finally would dominate Europe and enforce peace upon that continent.

The possibilities of air war now, today, are of such magnitude that we need to rewrite our whole conception regarding what constitutes an adequate defense system.

MUST BUILD DEFENSE

If the nature of war has changed, if it has already taken to the air, then we cannot be sure of the adequacy of our defenses against air attack if they remain subordinate to the two older services.

The development of air defense for war, as war will be fought henceforth, has been crippled repeatedly by traditional-minded men of the older services. These give preference to the strategy, tactics, methods, and equipment with which they have fought and which they know.

But war tomorrow will be startlingly and tragically different, and preparations for defense against it must not be hampered by short-sightedness.

Again, General Bullard, who, though retired many years ago, fortunately for the good of America continues to study and learn and gives us the benefit of his wise and courageous thinking.

Great powers lately have devoted much attention to various schemes for surface defense against air attack. Tacticians know this was almost wholly futile and was done mainly to put heart into civil populations.

There is no defense against the airplane except the airplane. Hence we have these powers now spending hundreds of millions of dollars building air power. More than that, they seek unified air power, in services kept separate and distinct from army and navy—and thus capable of thinking and acting freely in preparation for modern war.

The chief nations give every evidence of conviction that the airplane has become the predominant weapon of war. Study convinces me that this is true.

Meanwhile, our defense policy can only be characterized as one of indecision.

We have slipped from second place in air power to, some contend, sixth or seventh.

OLDER SERVICES JEALOUS OF AIR

The directors of the older services have been jealously intent upon keeping this new arm subordinate, as an auxiliary, lest they lose power and prestige.

They have belittled the airplane, denied its effectiveness, exaggerated obstacles and difficulties. In the hope of holding the airplane's power to their own services, and thus perpetuating those services, they have fixed rigorous conditions governing personnel, training, organization, construction, and delineation of objectives. Again and again it has been charged that the older services have hamstrung the new.

But for reasons of discipline and subordination to policies decided upon and in operation, this charge is voiced in whispers by only a few of the ranking officers of the Air Services. Younger officers and eminent civilian airmen speak the truth more freely. They know that we should set the airplane free.

Great Britain—so often wise in her foresight—had the vision to avoid such a condition as exists in the United States. No institution has been more sacred in Britain than the Navy, and it has a centuries-old record of geting what it wants. Nevertheless, ever since the armistice powerful forces within the Admiralty have struggled in vain attempting to break up the unified Royal Air Force and obtain control of that portion which is assignable to sea duty.

Great Britain—like most other powers—has placed the airplane in the hands of men who understand the airplane and who can work out the new strategy and tactics of a new type of warfare without hindrance by tradition-bound minds of the older services.

The older services do not face facts.

It is with difficulty that Army Air Corps leaders convince Army leadership that attack, bombardment, and large man-carrying planes give the air force an offensive power widely separate from and increasingly independent of land operations.

Few Army commanders, apparently, can even conceive of a new type of offensive from the air, so deadly in its effectiveness as to make land operations difficult, and an old-fashioned battle line almost meaningless. The airplane joined the Army in the Signal Corps branch—and, unfortunately, the habit of thought which rates it as observer and scout still persists.

Similarly, although there are bombers in the Navy, the discussions of naval men reveal that the airplane is valued by them chiefly as an aid to gunnery and as the eyes of the Navy.

But meanwhile the Army cannot develop an antiaircraft gun which is really effective against airplane attack; and the problem of safeguarding transport lines of a land army if the enemy dominates the air is literally insoluble.

As likewise is the problem of protecting bases of supply, both behind the front and in distant industrial centers.

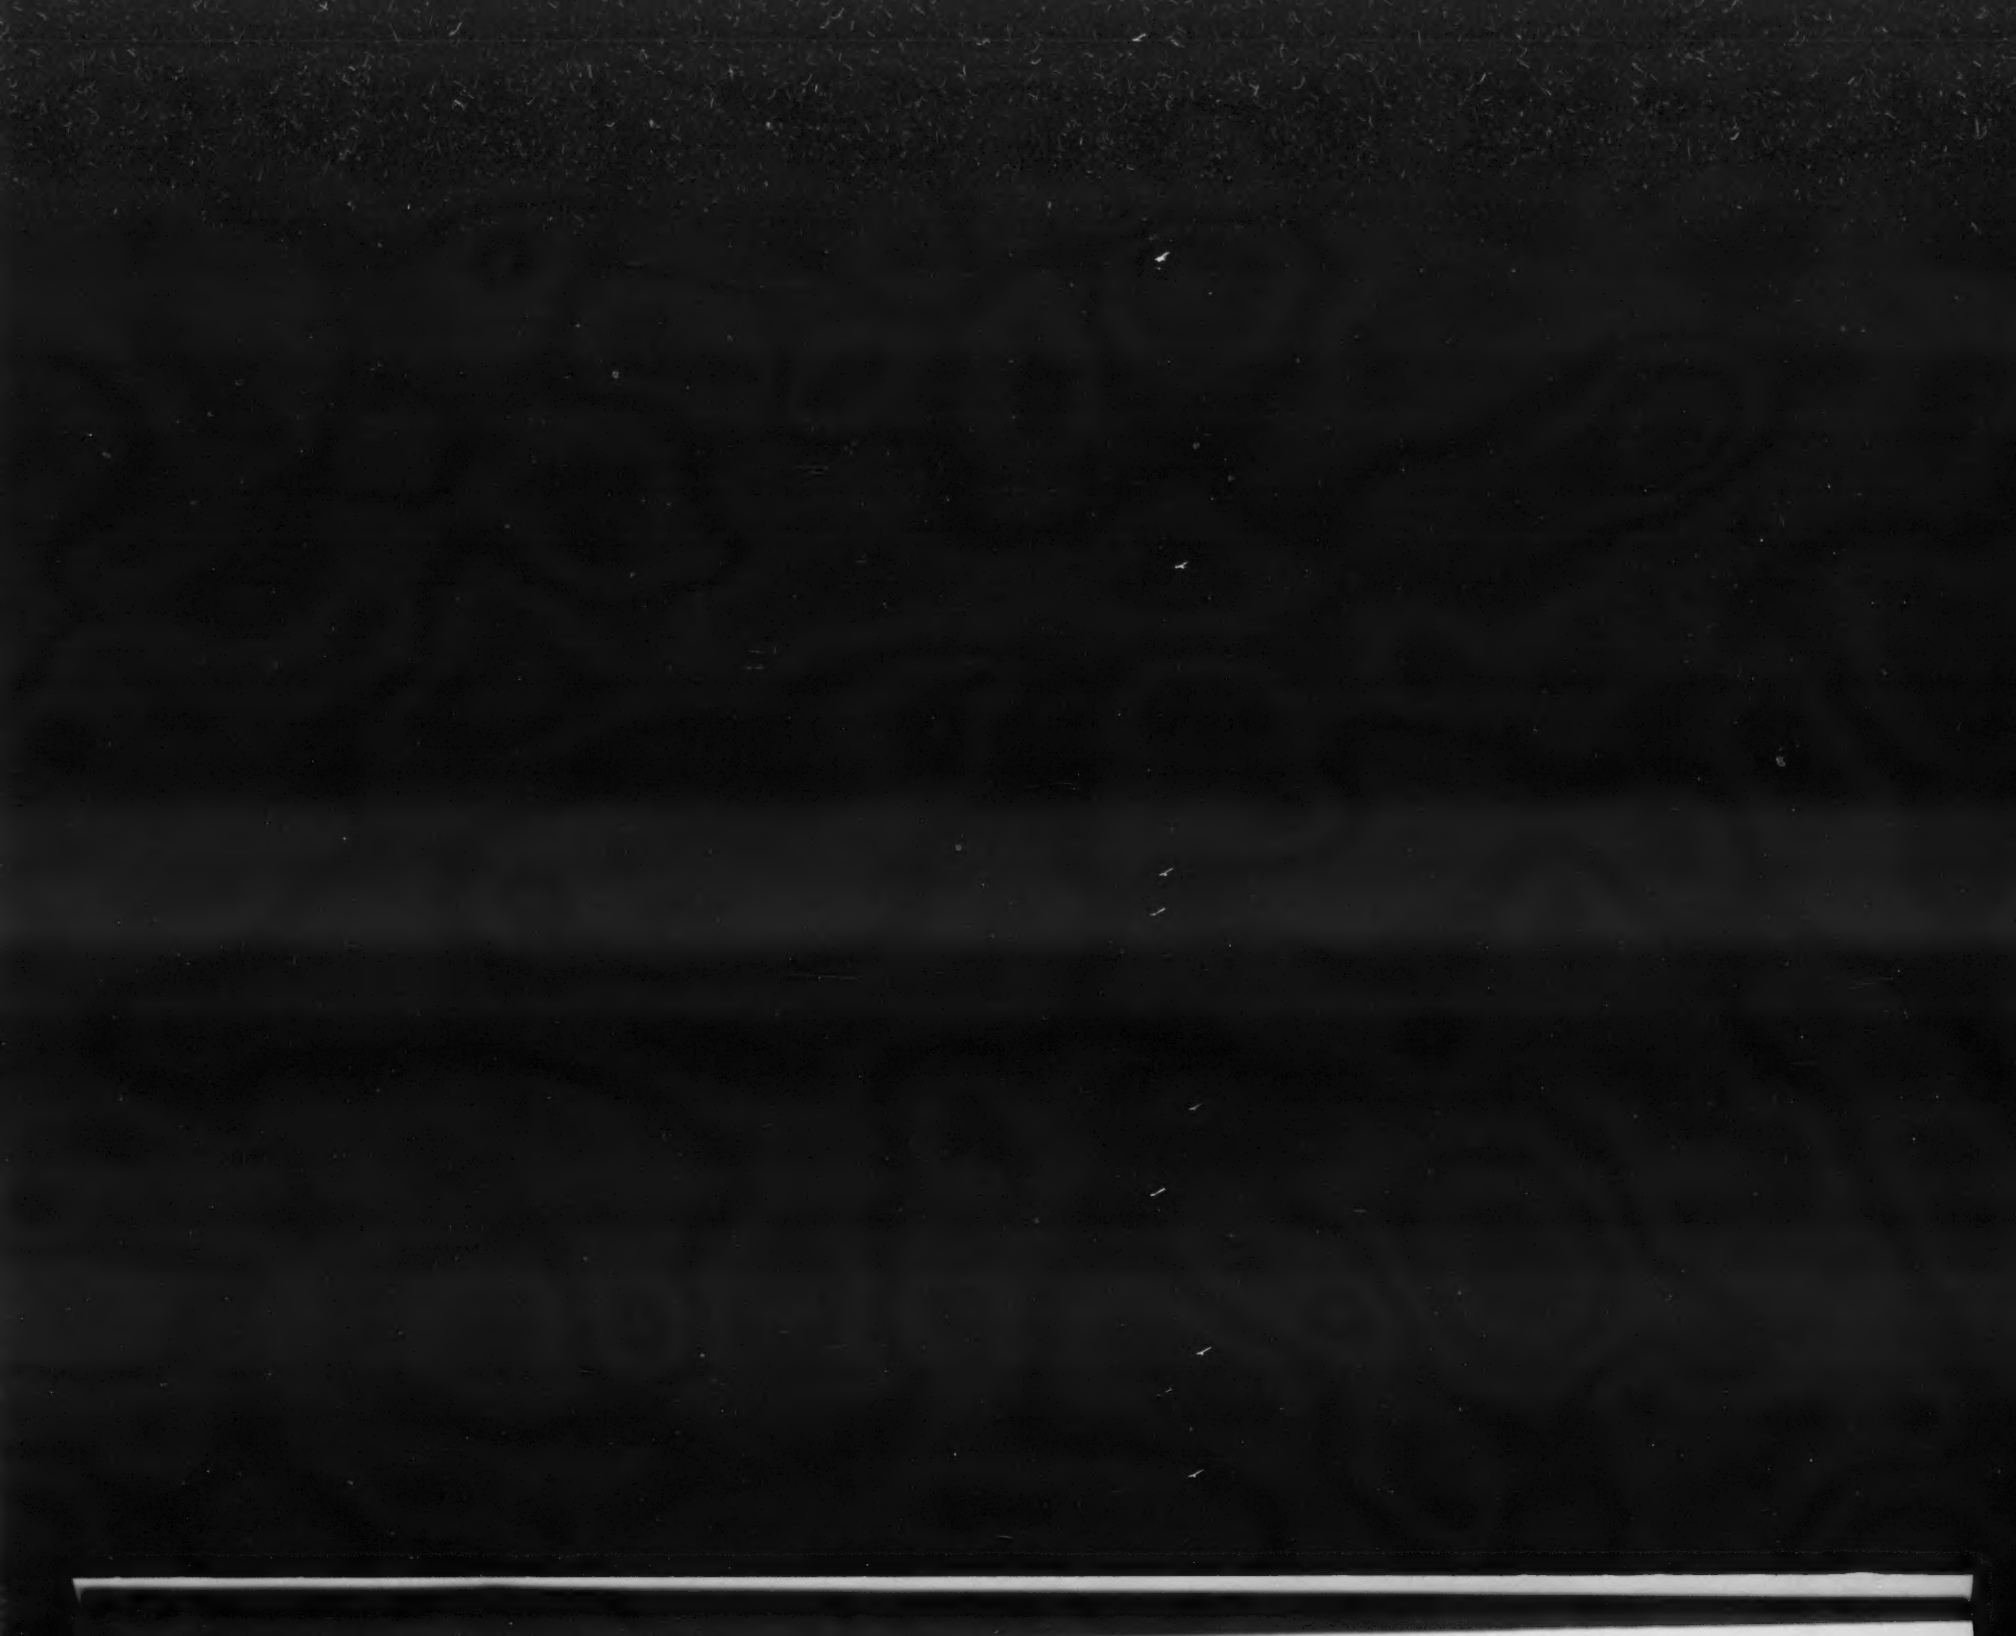
NO INLAND CITIES IN WAR TIME

And although naval men still contend that floating forts are the heart of the fleet, we are building no new dreadnaughts, though we are building three new airplane carriers. The latter are destined to become, if they are not even now, the most powerful units of any fleet. The dreadnaught is disappearing from navies.

Always, the older services come slowly and reluctantly to decisions based upon the lessons of aviation development; and in a period when that development is so swift that it is rewriting war plans the world over, we inevitably must change our laggard policy. We should do so now.

We should learn also to think in terms of tomorrow, not of yesterday. We have now a bomber which can fight 500 miles at sea and return—outrunning pursuit planes sent against it. We will have soon planes capable—war-equipped—of cross-continent, nonstop flight. Sikorsky, builder of one of our biggest commercial planes, contends that the advance of science and new materials and power plants indicates that the airplane of 5,000-mile flying range is now in sight.

The shore line means nothing when such attacking ranges as that are achieved. The safety of isolation, of distance, of intervening seas, will be ended.



There will be no inland cities in war time. The shipping port, Pittsburgh, will be almost as vulnerable as the naval port, Boston. From bases in Canada or Mexico, or plane carriers at sea, it will be possible very soon for an enemy to attack any city within the United States, or bomb any vital railway or highway.

We cannot know precisely what aerial warfare of the future will be like. Except that it will be swift and deadly; it will strike at the vitals of a nation; it will be waged over a front many hundreds of miles in extent.

We cannot know precisely even what a naval engagement would be like today with airplanes; the world's last great naval engagement, at Jutland, was fought with no airplanes. Lately Britain's reliance on aviation has been such as to bring from a British naval expert a declaration that "the airplane is putting our navy in the museum."

We cannot know how to prepare to meet the war of the future if we treat the airplane as the stepchild of the Army and Navy, despite the fact that it is now being developed as the major weapon of offense and defense.

The airplane has been a helper to the Army and Navy.

But the airplane is rapidly forcing a reversal of old relationships. The Navy is becoming an escort to the airplane; while on land the Army will take over, to consolidate and hold gains made by the airplane.

NO FRONTIERS IN THE AIR

The Akron disaster, our admitted Army Air Corps combat weakness, our tardiness in providing the Navy with airplane carriers, our recent air-mail experience, our loss in air strength as compared with other powers—such things as these cry out the fact that our policy is wrong and is providing us with neither effectiveness at present, nor vision regarding the future.

There are no frontiers in the air. The air utterly refuses to lend itself to the present for-the-sake-of-peace agreement between Army and Navy, and divide at or near the coastline into air for Army aviation and air for Navy aviation. The agreement, everybody knows, is ridiculous and destined to fail in its first test in war.

Air war will sweep at high speed over land and sea. It will leave no time for passing the job of defense from service to service. Air defense against it should be unified, centrally controlled, commanded by men who can visualize its necessities and needs—by men capable of looking forward toward tomorrow and not backward toward yesterday.

We should seek, now, unified air defense; also the uniting under a single head of all defense—the services for air, land, and sea having equal rank. It is hard to see how this can be delayed long.

"The wise do in the beginning what fools are obliged to do in the end."

WHY IS AMERICA BEHIND IN AIR POWER FOR DEFENSE?

By George Daws, World-Telegram staff writer

Army aviation in the United States, the Nation that leads the world in commercial air development, is about 5 years behind the program Congress outlined for it in 1926. On the other hand, while naval aviation is under planned strength, it compares favorably with that of any other nation.

Despite the fact that American planes, engines, and pilots are rated as the best in the world and are sought and used throughout the world, the United States Army Air Corps today is sharply deficient in fighting planes, personnel, and training.

GRAVE DOUBT OF DEFENSE VALUE

There is grave doubt as to the value of this major weapon of defense if the Nation were suddenly attacked.

These statements can be made after a study of the Nation's air problem by the World-Telegram. The investigation included visits to official Washington and Army, Navy, and commercial airports, study and analysis of records and reports, and frank discussion of the situation with military, commercial, and congressional authorities. Certain information, classed as military secrets, obviously could not be included in these articles.

Recognition of the fact that something is wrong with military aviation in the United States came recently from two sources.

ROOSEVELT ASKED STUDY

President Roosevelt asked Congress to appoint a commission to study the problem and outline a broad policy. Also, acting on the President's request, Congress added $5,000,000 to the Army Air Corps' 1935 budget.

$120,500,000 NEEDED BY ARMY TO COMPLETE 1931 AIR PROGRAM

By George Daws, World-Telegram staff writer

It will cost the United States Government $120,500,000 to complete the Army Air Corps' 5-year plan of 1926 and provide the corps with the strength this year it should have had in 1931.

Further, the annual cost of maintaining the enlarged corps will be $19,700,000 more than at present.

These figures are quoted direct from an official estimate by the Army General Staff.

Expenditures of the $120,500,000 would not provide for the normal growth the corps should have had in the last 3 years—a period that brought the greatest improvement in aircraft since the first plane was flown. Neither would it properly recognize the fact that military aviation today is a much more important factor in the defense of the Nation than it was in 1926. It would only complete now the program Congress authorized 8 years ago after long and careful study of the Nation's needs.

This evaluation in dollars of the deficiency of the Air Corps is one of the principal disclosures of the World-Telegram's investigation of the Nation's air problem. Others showed the corps is dangerously short in strength and personnel and that there is a general lack of policy and agreement as to the future of the corps. That later situation may be corrected by the report of the Baker board, now meeting in Washington, provided the military authorities and Congress take proper action.

ONLY 450 FIGHTING PLANES SCATTERED ABOUT COUNTRY, MILITARY EXPERTS REVEAL—LARGE PART WOULD BE REQUIRED FOR ADVANCED TRAINING—LESS THAN HALF HAVE PERFORMANCE EQUAL TO THOSE NOW BEING BUILT

By George Daws, World-Telegram staff writer

The Army Air Corps, in the event of sudden aerial attack upon the United States, could only delay rather than defeat the invaders.

That statement by several military and civilian experts, including a high ranking officer of the Army, who must remain unidentified for obvious reasons, supported the conclusion of the World-Telegram investigation of the performance, number, and location of the Air Corps' fighting planes.

These men pointed out that the Army had only about 450 fighting planes scattered throughout the Nation, that a large share of them would be required for advanced training if war came and that considerably less than half had performance comparable to planes now being built. This further confirmed conclusions of the World-Telegram survey that Army aviation is 5 years behind its schedule.

"There is not a single fighting plane in Alaska to repel possible attack by way of the Aleutian Islands," they said. "There are no fighting planes in either the northwest or northeast corners of the Nation, which most certainly are vulnerable areas.

"An enemy coming in by way of Alaska would encounter no aerial opposition until he got down to San Francisco. That is an observation base, but they now are putting in some bombers.

"There's nothing much along the Atlantic coast except Langley Field in Virginia. They call that a bombardment post, but most of the ships are pursuits. Mitchel Field has quite a few observation planes—fine for the artillery but not to repel a hard-hitting aerial attack."

Mr. George Daws, of the New York World-Telegram, interviewed me hurriedly and represented me briefly as follows:

URGES FRONTIER BASES

Mr. MCSWAIN proposed establishment of a chain of seven frontier air bases, underground and bombproof. The most important one would be in Alaska, ready to repel possible attack by way of the Aleutian Islands. Of almost equal importance, he said, would be the bases in the now unprotected northeast and northwest corners of the Nation.

Swift planes, equipped with efficient radio sets, would maintain a constant patrol of the borders, ready to take the air immediately.

Mr. MCSWAIN's indictment of present conditions ranged from criticism of the lack of a separate promotion list for Air Corps officers to the charge that independent manufacturers do not get a fair chance at Government air contracts.

LET'S BE PRACTICAL

"Let's be practical", he said, in discussing the one department of national defense. "Presidents should not be and are not professional military experts. That is not their job. They have other, more important things to do. But the Army and Navy now insist unification of command exists through the President.

"What does the President do in a war-time emergency? He does the sensible thing. He calls in his experts, and they either are under command of or are the Secretaries of War and Navy. Each has his own idea and each advises something different. The result might well be paralysis of action.

UNIFIED CONTROL BETTER

"Common sense dictates that one man, one department, one general staff could get into action better than two groups, who probably previously were glaring at each other from opposite ends of a building."

The one department, Mr. MCSWAIN said, probably would save millions of dollars.

Air Corps officers applauded and then, speaking as individuals, brought forth their plan for the chain of bombproof air bases and the aerial patrol of the Nation's borders. It considerably resembles the one approved by Representative J. J. MCSWAIN, Chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, and by Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, commander of the overseas air forces during the World War.

NOBODY EXPECTS WAR

"Nobody expects or wants war", said one officer. "But we're hired to defend the Nation. We must get it into our heads that war is not fun, not flashy formation flying to make crowds cheer, not taking off when we feel like it and only when the sun is shining.

"Suppose an enemy suddenly attacked the West coast and we wanted to get all our spare fighting ships out there. I'm saying just suppose, remember.

"First, we'd find that more than half of them either were slow and almost worthless or assigned and needed in schools. Flying west, all would be well for some of the boys if the weather was tough and just too bad for the others. We're not sufficiently trained in blind flying or in following the radio beams.

ENEMY WOULD DESTROY BASES

"You can bet the enemy, if he had any sense, first thing would have destroyed our air bases out there. We'd have to land somewhere for supplies. The sensible thing would be for the Air Corps men at the scene of action to scout around, select a safe field, and guide us in. But how?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill H.R. 8575.

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot recognize the gentleman for that purpose. The Chair will recognize the gentleman later. We want to call the Consent Calendar at this time.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire of the majority leader the program for the remainder of the afternoon?

Mr. BYRNS. It is hoped to call the Consent Calendar.

Mr. SNELL. Are we to understand that nothing but the Consent Calendar will be taken up this afternoon?

Mr. BYRNS. I hope that too much time is not taken in the discussion of these bills, for we want to complete the calendar. There are, I think, about 90 bills on the calendar, and I hope we can conclude the calendar this afternoon. Many of the bills are bridge bills and will not require any particular discussion.

Mr. SNELL. Several Members on the minority side have requested me to find out what the program is expected to be for tomorrow and the next day.

Mr. BYRNS. It is my intention to ask unanimous consent either this evening or tomorrow to consider bills unobjected to on the Private Calendar, the call to begin at the star. It has been suggested that the request should be made to call first the Senate bills on the Private Calendar. Of course, that is subject to the will of the House. I may submit both requests.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Why not submit them now?

Mr. BYRNS. I will do so.

Mr. SNELL. I think it would be just as well to submit them now so we will understand what the program will be.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on the calendar days of Friday and Saturday it may be in order to call the Private Calendar for the consideration of bills unobjected to, the call to begin at the star.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object to ask a question, in the event we do not finish the Consent Calendar today, is it the intention of the majority leader to continue the consideration of bills on the Consent Calendar tomorrow?

Mr. BYRNS. I may say to the gentleman that if this request is granted I shall ask unanimous consent to take it up, for consent would be necessary unless the House takes another recess tonight. This does not mean necessarily that nothing else will intervene. For instance, if there should be a conference report tomorrow it might be thought best to take it up. Personally, I should like to see the Consent Calendar finished today and the Private Calendar called on Friday.

Mr. SNELL. I do not believe there would be any objection to taking up a conference report, but I think it ought to be understood that no other legislation will be brought in when it is understood that the time is to be devoted to the Consent Calendar and to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, unless the House recesses tonight, it would not be in order to take up the Consent Calendar tomorrow.

Mr. BYRNS. In the event we do not finish the Consent Calendar tonight, I hope the House will agree to recess until tomorrow so the consideration of bills on the Consent Calendar will be in order tomorrow.

Mr. TRUAX. If the majority leader will make his request for 1 day at a time, it will be agreed to as far as I am concerned, but if he makes it for Friday and Saturday, I shall have to object to the request.

Mr. BYRNS. I thought we could dispose of both propositions in one request, but if the gentleman insists upon his objection I will confine it to Calendar Friday.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee modifies his request. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. McLEOD. Reserving the right to object, in view of the fact that there are not sufficient legislative days remaining in order to bring up my bill under the discharge rule on June 11, is it necessary for the House to recess in preference to adjourning?

Mr. BYRNS. It is necessary for the House to recess. We have not recessed solely for that purpose. I may say to the gentleman from Michigan that he had every opportunity to get a direct vote upon his bill by an amendment and a motion to recommit the Steagall bill the other day and declined to accept the opportunity.

Mr. McLEOD. May I answer the gentleman?

Mr. BYRNS. Certainly.

Mr. McLEOD. I would rather answer the question if the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STEAGALL] were present. He is chairman of the committee.

I may say, however, that there was an understanding that the conferees of the House would stand by the House bill provision for depositors' pay off until the Capitol fell.

Mr. BYRNS. Do I understand the gentleman to state that he purposely refrained from asking for a direct vote upon his bill on the understanding that he had with the gentleman from Alabama? The reason I ask that question is that the gentleman has been quoted repeatedly in the newspapers and over the radio as complaining that the leadership of the House has denied to him and the majority of the House the right to vote directly upon his bill. The point I make is that the gentleman had this right and when he had the right he failed to exercise it and did not submit his motion. [Applause.]

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

Mr. McLEOD. Does the majority leader contend that the leadership of the House has permitted a vote on the so-called "McLeod bill"?

Mr. BYRNS. The gentleman had a right to call it up and to insist upon a vote. The gentleman deliberately ran out and failed to insist upon his right and have a vote on the question at a time when he had the right to make it, and no Member of this House could have prevented it.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman from Michigan did not call it up, because he did not have a majority of the votes.

Mr. BYRNS. Certainly; it is because the gentleman knew he did not have anything like a majority in this House in favor of the bill.

Mr. McLEOD. Does the floor leader object to my now moving to suspend the rules and pass the bill?

Mr. BYRNS. I say to the gentleman from Michigan that personally I have no objection to voting on his bill. I am against it myself, and I have no reason personally to object or to going upon record against it. I say that the gentleman ought to quit abusing the leadership of the House through the newspapers and over the radio and complaining that they have refused to give him a right to bring his bill to a vote when he had an opportunity to bring it to a vote and deliberately declined the issue.

Mr. McLEOD. I accept the statement of the floor leader as being sincere and in view of that, Mr. Speaker, I now move to suspend the rules and pass the bill H.R. 8479.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I have not the right to recognize for suspension, and the gentleman knows it, and this is simply another camouflage that the gentleman is seeking to practice before the public.

Mr. BLANTON. Instead of getting a two-thirds vote, necessary to pass it under suspension, the gentleman would not be able to get one-third of the votes, hence such action would be futile and a waste of time.

Mr. McLEOD. Mr. Speaker, I renew my motion to suspend the rules and pass this bill.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the majority leader if a similar opportunity was given to those who advocated the Frazier-Lemke bill?

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I am simply trying to accommodate the House. I have not a single bill upon the Consent Calendar or upon the Private Calendar. If the gentlemen are not willing to permit this request to go through, it is their responsibility and not mine.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, I object.

CONSENT CALENDAR

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the first bill on the Consent Calendar.

DECLARATIONS OF INTENTION

The Clerk called the first bill on the Consent Calendar, H.R. 8317, to extend the validity of declarations of intention beyond 7 years.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

IMPORT AND EXPORT CARGOES

The Clerk called the next resolution, House Joint Resolution 282, requiring 50 percent of the cargo imported and exported under trade agreements between the United States and foreign nations to be carried in vessels of the United States.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I notice in the report on this bill that Mr. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, makes the statement that the views of the State Department should be obtained. In view of the fact that this involves an international question, I ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution be passed over without prejudice until such time as the opinion of the State Department may be obtained.

Mr. BLANTON. Let us take the bill off now.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. BLANTON, Mr. PIERCE, and Mr. WOLCOTT objected.

DISBURSING OFFICERS OF THE ARMY

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 2046, to provide relief for disbursing officers of the Army in certain cases.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I hope the Members will listen to what I have to say. The Committee on Military Affairs has reconsidered this bill and has an amendment to offer. The amendment not only meets the objection I had to the original bill but it will be beneficial to the Government if the bill is passed with this amendment, because it takes certain powers from the Secretary of the Navy that he now has that he should not have, and with the understanding the amendment will be offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HILL], I shall not object. The law that the bill seeks to amend was a war-emergency measure. It should be repealed, but the amendment is satisfactory to the Comptroller General.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Will the gentleman withhold his objection a moment?

Mr. BLANTON. I want the bill to go over until we can see the amendment and be sure that it properly protects the Government.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. The amendment is an amendment prepared by the Comptroller General, Mr. McCarl. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HILL] has the amendment and will offer it if permitted. I will not let the bill pass without the amendment.

Mr. BLANTON. I want to see the amendment, and I have asked that the bill go over without prejudice, until I do see it.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HILL] will show the gentleman from Texas the amendment. I may say to the gentleman from Texas that under present law the Secretary of the Navy can relieve a disbursing officer of a shortage of $1,000,000 by writing a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of the Treasury is compelled, under existing law, to relieve that disbursing officer. The gentleman surely is willing to take such power from an executive official.

Mr. BLANTON. And that is what I have been trying to stop, but I want to see the amendment.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Let me say to the gentleman from Texas that the Comptroller General prepared this amendment for the Committee on Military Affairs. We took the matter up with him and asked him to go into the matter and investigate it and suggest an amendment.

Mr. BLANTON. The amendment, on my hurried reading of it, seems to be all right. Does General McCarl approve of it?

Mr. HILL of Alabama. He not only approves of it, he wrote the amendment.

Mr. BLANTON. Then, I know it is all right. I am backing General McCarl, the Comptroller General of the United States.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. The matter was referred to him.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. TRUAX. I object.

The SPEAKER. This bill requires three objections. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of July 11, 1919 (ch. 9, 41 Stat. 132; U.S.C., title 31, sec. 105), be, and is hereby amended as follows: Wherever the word "Navy" appears in said act the words "or Army" be added, and wherever the words "Secretary of the Navy" appear the words "or the Secretary of War" be added.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Military Affairs, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HILL of Alabama: Page 1, line 8, strike out the period and add the following: "Provided, That the said act of July 11, 1919, shall be applicable only to the actual physical loss of Government funds, vouchers, records, or papers, and shall not include deficiencies resulting from illegal or erroneous payments in the respective services."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. McLEOD. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Michigan rise?

Mr. McLEOD. Mr. Speaker, I rise at this time in an endeavor to ascertain the sincerity of the leadership of this House, and I make the request and move to suspend the rules and pass the bill H.R. 8479.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman cannot be recognized for that purpose.

NAVAL AIR STATION, PENSACOLA, FLA.

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1103, to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with certain public works at the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this bill calls for an appropriation of over $5,000,000 to be spent down in Florida, when we need every dollar we can rake together to relieve the drought-stricken people of this country; and I object to the bill.

Mr. LAMNECK and Mr. WOLFENDEN also objected.

AQUATIC PRODUCTS

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9233, authorizing associations of producers of aquatic products.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the gentleman why it is necessary to pass this bill. Why cannot the gentleman secure the same ends under the N.R.A.?

Mr. BLAND. That may be true, but I do not think the N.R.A. would cover the situation. It was found necessary to pass legislation of this kind for agriculture. The N.R.A. is not permanent legislation; and in order to provide these beneficial associations that are needed, there should be affirmative legislation, and this is identically the same measure that has been provided for agriculture.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Does the gentleman state that you could not secure a code? Was an effort made to secure a code for this industry?

Mr. BAKEWELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. BAKEWELL. There is a code for the industry, but it does not cover this situation. Furthermore, as has been suggested by the chairman of the committee, the N.R.A. is temporary; and there is no reason under heaven why we should not give these men the same privilege of cooperative marketing that we give agriculture.

Mr. ELTSE of California. The N.R.A. is not feasible?

Mr. BAKEWELL. It is not.

Mr. ELTSE of California. I withdraw my reservation of objection.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That persons engaged in the fishery industry, as fishermen, catching, collecting, or cultivating aquatic products, or as planters of aquatic products on public or private beds, may act together in associations, corporate or otherwise, with or without capital stock, in collectively catching, producing, preparing for market, processing, handling, and marketing in interstate and foreign commerce, such products of said persons so engaged.

The term "aquatic products" includes all commercial products of aquatic life in both fresh and salt water, as carried on in the several States, the District of Columbia, the several Territories of the United States, the insular possessions, or other places under the jurisdiction of the United States.

Such associations may have marketing agencies in common, and such associations and their members may make the necessary contracts and agreements to effect such purposes: Provided, however, That such associations are operated for the mutual benefit of the members thereof, and conform to one or both of the following requirements:

First. That no member of the association is allowed more than 1 vote because of the amount of stock or membership capital he may own therein; or Second. That the association does not pay dividends on stock or membership capital in excess of 8 percent per annum.

and in any case to the following:

Third. That the association shall not deal in the products of nonmembers to an amount greater in value than such as are handled by it for members.

SEC. 2. That if the Secretary of Commerce shall have reason to believe that any such association monopolizes or restrains trade in interstate or foreign commerce to such an extent that the price of any aquatic product is unduly enhanced by reason thereof, he shall serve upon such association a complaint stating his charge in that respect, to which complaint shall be attached, or contained therein, a notice of hearing, specifying a day and place not less than 30 days after the service thereof, requiring the association to show cause why an order should not be made directing it to cease and desist from monopolization or restraint of trade. An association so complained of may at the time and place so fixed show cause why such order should not be entered. The evidence given on such a hearing shall be taken under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of Commerce may prescribe, reduced to writing, and made a part of the record therein. If upon such hearing the Secretary of Commerce shall be of the opinion that such association monopolizes or restrains trade in interstate or foreign commerce to such an extent that the price of any aquatic product is unduly enhanced thereby, he shall issue and cause to be served upon the association an order reciting the facts found by him, directing such association to cease and desist from monopolization or restraint of trade. On the request of such association, or if such association fails or neglects for 30 days to obey such order, the Secretary of Commerce shall file in the district court in the judicial district in which such association has its principal place of business a certified copy of the order and of all the records in the proceedings, together with a petition asking that the order be enforced, and shall give notice to the Attorney General and to said association of such filing. Such district court shall thereupon have jurisdiction to enter a decree affirming, modifying, or setting aside said order, or enter such other decree as the court may deem equitable, and may make rules as to pleadings and proceedings to be had in considering such order. The place of trial may, for cause or by consent of parties, be changed as in other causes.

The facts found by the Secretary of Commerce and recited or set forth in said order shall be prima facie evidence of such facts, but either party may adduce additional evidence. The Department of Justice shall have charge of the enforcement of such order. After the order is so filed in such district court and while pending for review therein, the court may issue a temporary writ of injunction forbidding such association from violating such order or any part thereof. The court may, upon conclusion of its hearing, enforce its decree by a permanent injunction or other appropriate remedy. Service of such complaint and of all notices may be made upon such association by service upon any officer, or agent thereof, engaged in carrying on its business, or on any attorney authorized to appear in such proceeding for such association, and such service shall be binding upon such association, the officers and members thereof.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 4, line 19, strike out the word "may" and insert in lieu thereof the word "shall."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING SEWARD, ALASKA, TO INSTALL A MUNICIPAL LIGHT AND POWER PLANT

The Clerk called the next bill on the Consent Calendar, H.R. 9468, to authorize the incorporated town of Seward, Alaska, to issue bonds in any sum not exceeding $60,000 for the purpose of constructing and installing a municipal light and power plant in the town of Seward, Alaska.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. ELTSE of California. Reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the gentleman from Alaska a question. By the construction of this municipal lighting plant will it confiscate private property in the shape of an electrical plant?

Mr. DIMOND. There is a privately owned plant, but it is very inefficient. For 3 weeks during the worst weather that we had last winter the people were without light and power. The people are entitled to relief. If the private plant is not able to furnish the light and power, the municipality is entitled to relief.

Mr. ELTSE of California. What provision is being made to take care of this private property?

Mr. DIMOND. None.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Reserving the right to object, I take it that this $60,000 is for the purpose of paying for the condemnation.

Mr. DIMOND. I do not know.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. The gentleman would not say that they would not do it?

Mr. DIMOND. I do not know whether it could be done or is to be done.

Mr. ELTSE of California, Mr. LEHLBACH, Mr. BAKEWELL, and Mr. WOLFENDEN objected.

BRIDGE ACROSS LAKE CHAMPLAIN FROM EAST ALBURG TO WEST SWANTON, VT.

The Clerk called the next bill on the Consent Calendar, S. 3374, to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across Lake Champlain from East Alburg, Vt., to West Swanton, Vt.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BAKEWELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, in the absence of the gentleman from Vermont, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice. I also want to inform the House that the bill has passed the Senate which gives the power to the State of Vermont to complete the construction of the bridge, and that bill in time will be substituted for this bill.

Mr. TRUAX. I object.

Mr. BAKEWELL. I think the gentleman did not hear what I said—that a substitute bill has passed the Senate and gives the power to the State of Vermont instead of to this company.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection.

CONTRACTS AND AGREEMENTS UNDER FEDERAL FARM LOAN ACT AND HOME OWNERS' LOAN ACT

The Clerk called the next bill on the Consent Calendar, S. 2817, to amend the act relating to contracts and agreements under the Agricultural Adjustment Act, approved January 25, 1934.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Reserving the right to object, I understand that this is the bill that was defeated under suspension of the rules yesterday, the purpose being to allow Members of Congress to enter into contracts with the Agricultural Adjustment Act and the Home Owners' Loan Act; and I object.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio and Mr. ZIONCHECK also objected.

PARITY OF AGRICULTURAL AND INDUSTRIAL DOLLAR

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3185, to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, with respect to farm prices.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I object.

DERIVATIVE CITIZENSHIP STATUS

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9475, to clarify the status of certain citizens who derived naturalization from parent or husband, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. LANZETTA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

BRIDGE ACROSS RIO GRANDE AT LAREDO, TEX.

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9165, authorizing the International Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Rio Grande at Laredo, Tex.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SINCLAIR, Mr. BLANTON, Mr. PIERCE, and Mr. TABER objected.

PLANNING COMMITTEE, UNITED STATES BOTANIC GARDEN

The Clerk called the next business, House Joint Resolution 327, authorizing the appointment of a Planning Committee in connection with the United States Botanic Garden, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, I object.

LOSSES RESULTING FROM ERADICATION OF THE MEDITERRANEAN FRUIT FLY

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1800, to provide for an investigation and report of losses resulting from the campaign for the eradication of the Mediterranean fruit fly by the Department of Agriculture.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object in order to ask the necessity for this. As I remember it, the whole four or five million dollars spent on the Mediterranean fruit fly was lost. What is the use of spending a lot of money to have a commission appointed to investigate how much was lost? It was all lost.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Yes.

Mr. SEARS. The Mediterranean fruit fly was discovered in Florida by an Agriculture Department expert on Government property. Then they destroyed thousands of dollars worth of property, tomatoes, and so forth. Afterward they held that this was unnecessary. We want to gather this evidence. The bill provides that this does not bind the Government morally or legally. We want to gather the evidence. Last year the P.W.A. agreed to advance enough money to make this investigation. I protested it would be a waste of Government money for Floridians to make their investigation, because some Government official ought to make it.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, in reply to what the gentleman says, I say to the House, especially those Members who were not here 3 or 4 years ago, that the older Members will remember distinctly when this money was voted. I forget exactly how many million dollars. A committee went down afterward, headed by the then Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the late gentleman from Indiana, Mr. Wood, and it brought back here a report that the expenditure of the money was a scandal, and that, as far as anybody was able to find out, nobody had ever seen a Mediterranean fruit fly down there. For that reason I object.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Speaker, I ask the gentleman to reserve his objection. While that may be true, we had nothing to do with it. That was run by the Government entirely from Washington. The Government employed the men. Civilians did not do it. Take my case. They destroyed five acres of tomatoes, but I am not asking for any damages. Three weeks after they were destroyed they said that they should not have done it.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask the Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BUCHANAN], whether there was anything brought out in the Committee on Appropriations which would justify us in voting for this.

Mr. BUCHANAN. The destruction of the fruit and vegetables and trees down there was done under the local authority of the State of Florida, and was not the act of the Federal Government.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, in order to terminate this I object.

BRIDGE ACROSS CHESAPEAKE BAY, BALTIMORE AND KENT COUNTIES

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3211, to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Chesapeake Bay between Baltimore and Kent Counties, Md.

There being no objection the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Chesapeake Bay, between Baltimore and Kent Counties, Md., authorized to be built by the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Co. by section 11 of the act of Congress approved March 4, 1933, are hereby extended 1 and 3 years, respectively, from the date of approval hereof.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

KING HILL IRRIGATION DISTRICT, IDAHO

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9583, to convey to the King Hill Irrigation District, State of Idaho, all the interest of the United States in the King Hill Federal reclamation project, and for other purposes.

Mr. TRUAX. Reserving the right to object, I want to say on the bill which was just passed that we are spending thousands of dollars today on the so-called "quarantine line of the gypsy moth." You will find them about 10 miles east of East Liverpool, Ohio. There they stop your car. They do not even look into the car, but if you say "no" you go on. They did the same thing in attempting to stop the natural flight of the European corn borer. This Government spent over $20,000,000. This entire so-called "service" of stopping the spread of insects ought to be stopped.

Mr. McGUGIN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object on this bill, H.R. 9583, which is before the House, if there is going to be any objection, I will ask unanimous consent that it go over without prejudice.

Mr. TRUAX. I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I think the bill ought to go over without prejudice.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I am the one who objected to this bill, which was introduced by our colleague, Mr. COFFIN. Before he was injured he properly explained the bill to me and I have no objection. I do not think anyone would have any objection.

Mr. McGUGIN. I have no objection.

Mr. TABER. I do not like to object, in view of Mr. COFFIN'S condition, but, from what I have heard about the bill, I feel I should have to object. I suggest that it go over without prejudice.

Mr. WHITE. If it goes over without prejudice, that will kill the bill.

Mr. TABER. Oh, we will be here all next week and probably the week after.

Mr. WHITE. This is the last day we will probably have on the Consent Calendar.

Mr. TABER. Oh, we will be calling the Consent Calendar three or four times. We are nowhere near through here now.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman that the bill be passed over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS AGAINST POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 8460, to amend section 392 of title 5 of the United States Code.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Reserving the right to object, I would like some information concerning the approximate cost of this measure. I understand from the report that annually there might be about 54 claims. Last year there were 54 claims.

Mr. MEAD. That is correct. This bill was recommended by the Bureau of the Budget. These small claims are examined by the Bureau of the Budget and by the Post Office Department, and then they are printed in a House document and considered by the Appropriations Committee. We lose more money by the method we now pursue than we would if the Postmaster General was authorized to settle these minor claims, as was the intention of the Congress when it approved legislation enabling him to do so. This bill is necessary because of a ruling of the Comptroller General, who feels that even though Congress authorized the Postmaster General to settle small claims, that all claims caused by negligence of employees and resulting in injury to property or to persons should be referred to the Congress. This ruling by the Comptroller General, while in conflict with a law enacted by Congress, is in harmony with a similar act still on the statute books.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Is there any precedent for this in any of the other departments? There must be damages sustained in the operation of vehicles by the Customs Service and other departments. Is there any precedent there?

Mr. MEAD. I cannot say, but because the Post Office Department is such an extensive institution and uses so many trucks and automobiles, it is thought that these minor claims should be adjusted by the Department. Legislation was adopted to bring that about, but as I already said, a subsequent opinion of the Comptroller General makes it necessary that these matters be referred to the Congress. The Director of the Budget and the Post Office Department recommended this legislation, and it has been unanimously approved by the Post Office and Post Roads Committee of the House.

Mr. WOLCOTT. In view of the gentleman's explanation, I will withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. I object.

The SPEAKER. Three objections are required. The Chair hears only two objections, and the Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That that part of the act of June 16, 1921 (42 Stat. 63), incorporated in the United States Code as section 392 of title 5, is amended to read as follows:

"When any damage is done to person or property by or through the operation of the Post Office Department in any branch of its service and such damage is found by the Postmaster General upon investigation to be a proper charge against the United States, the Postmaster General is invested with power to adjust and settle any claim for such damage when his award for such damage in any case does not exceed $500, and this authority shall hereafter be construed as extending to cases caused by the negligence of any officer or employee of the Post Office Department or Postal Service acting within the scope of his employment."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

WHITE SWAN SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 88, YAKIMA, WASH.

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 7361, to provide funds for cooperation with White Swan School District No. 88, Yakima County, Wash., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children of the Yakima Reservation.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Reserving the right to object, I note in the report on this bill that the Secretary of the Interior advised that the Director of the Budget stated that the proposed expenditures were not in accord with the financial program of the President. That is my idea. It is a raid on the Treasury. Just because there are 8 or 10 Indians who ought to go to school, it is proposed to have school buildings constructed in the districts. There are 10 or 12 of these bills, the aggregate of which will amount to $701,000.

Mr. HOWARD. Will the gentleman withhold his objection until I can have the gentleman from Montana [Mr. AYERS], a member of our committee, who understands this matter thoroughly and who has all the data here which I am sure will satisfy the gentleman, present these several claims to the House?

We want to group them all. If one falls, they all ought to fall. Will not the gentleman be pleased to hear the gentleman from Montana [Mr. AYERS] explain the bill?

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. AYERS of Montana. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is correct; there are 13 of these bills altogether; and they make an authorization of $701,000.

These 13 bills have to do with 21 different schools, which are State schools in the 6 different States involved. In all of the schools there are now registered 7,928 children of which about 40 percent are Indian children. In these districts an average of 70 percent of the land is nontaxable.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Why is the land nontaxable?

Mr. AYERS of Montana. Because it is Indian reservation and Indian allotment land. In the case of the first bill, introduced by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. KNUTE HILL], 90 percent of the land is nontaxable. I was chairman of the subcommittee of the Committee on Indian Affairs, which considered this whole question. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. PEAVEY], was a member of this subcommittee. The subcommittee held several hearings. We had the Commissioner of Indian Affairs before us, and we personally consulted the Secretary of the Interior. In the instance of every one of these bills the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs advised that the passage of all these bills was in harmony with the present Indian educational program. The Indian Department has changed the old program and has abandoned the Indian boarding schools, and these Indian children are now attending State public schools.

Mr. ELTSE of California. When the Interior Department made this arrangement with the State schools, did not the Department make some investigation as to whether or not the facilities were adequate to house and take care of these Indian children

Mr. AYERS of Montana. They did.

Mr. ELTSE of California. How long ago was that?

Mr. AYERS of Montana. The investigations were made at different periods. Some of them go back as far as 4 or 5 years.

Mr. ELTSE of California. And some are rather current, are they not?

Mr. AYERS of Montana. I would not say current; the most recent are 2 or 3 years.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Have the buildings so deteriorated during the interim, and has the attendance so increased that it is necessary now to expend this large sum?

Mr. AYERS of Montana. That is true, and additional Indian children farther back in the reservation are being brought to these schools by busses.

The Government made this arrangement with the various districts, with the understanding that it would pay tuition for these children. The tuition runs from 20 cents per capita per day to 40 cents. In every instance the actual overhead for teaching, heating, and the care of the buildings has amounted to 80 cents on an average for these children that are now being taught in the State schools on simply a tuition charge of less than one-half the actual cost for teachers and ordinary overhead. Nothing is provided for building and equipment.

These Indian children are wards of the Government. Their own schools have been abandoned. They are now attending the State public schools. In four different instances that I recall these children are being taught in makeshift classrooms. In one instance they are being taught in a coal shed. The result will be that when the school term opens next September there will have to be some elimination, and, of course, those eliminated will be the Indian children. The lands of the Indians are not assessable; their lands are not bearing any of the burden. The increase in attendance in many of these cases for this year will be as high as 10 percent.

Mr. ELTSE of California. As I stated a moment ago, the Director of the Budget advises that these expenses are not within the financial program of the President. Therefore, it seems inadvisable at the present time to expend this money for the construction of these buildings.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELTSE of California. I yield.

Mr. GOSS. I would like to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that in the original bill there was an actual authorization. That is why the report was made. An authorization is different from an appropriation. If the gentleman does not object to the bill, would he accept an amendment on page 2, changing the language "expenditure of any moneys so appropriated", so it would read "expenditure of any moneys when appropriated"; and to amend the title from "to provide funds" to "to authorize the appropriation of funds", thus making the title conform to the amendment if the amendment is adopted?

Mr. AYERS of Montana. The gentleman is correct; these are not appropriation bills. They are authorization bills. There would be no objection to that so far as I know.

Mr. TRUAX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELTSE of California. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. TRUAX. This will cost about $100 per pupil, as I understand the gentleman's statement. There are a little over 7,000 pupils affected, which means a total appropriation of $750,000. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that in this report there are no recommendations or reports whatsoever from any of the officials who ought to be involved in the passage of this legislation. I call attention also to the fact that we have all over the United States hundreds of schools with white children in them that will be closed. Their education will have to stop because no provision has been made by this Congress. I call attention of this House also to the fact that if we are going to enact legislation at $100 per pupil for the relief of Indian wards, let us do something for our own white children of this great country.

Mr. AYERS of Montana. We cannot do these two things at once. This is for the white children as well as the Indians.

Mr. BAKEWELL. How many are involved?

Mr. AYERS of Montana. There is involved in all these bills 7,928 and this will increase by about 10 percent on the opening of this school year.

Mr. BAKEWELL. The gentleman from Ohio has made a little mistake in his mathematics.

Mr. WOLCOTT. We are doing everything we can to balance the Budget.

Mr. AYERS of Montana. On behalf of the Indian Affairs Committee, which committee reported these bills, we accept the amendment suggested by Mr. Goss.

Mr. GOSS. I would like to amend the title after passing the bill.

Mr. AYERS of Montana. Mr. Speaker, we will consent to the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Goss].

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, it seems somewhat ironical that we over here should be constantly protecting the President against such bills as these. The Director of the Budget has reported against these bills from no. 325 on the Consent Calendar to no. 345. We do not always follow the President, but, so far as the Budget is concerned, I think we ought to get behind the President, because we stood up here awhile ago and said we were in favor of balancing the Budget. When the Director of the Budget states that this is not a part of his program and that there has been no provision for the collection of the money to take care of these expenditures, I do not think we should pass these bills by unanimous consent. Until the Director of the Budget sees some way of collecting the money to balance this expenditure I think we ought to withhold action on these bills.

Mr. GOSS. May I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that when the bill was introduced it actually appropriated money. The report came up here from the Department on the theory it was appropriating money. The committee has offered an amendment which makes it a pure authorization and, therefore, the Bureau of the Budget has nothing to do with it until the Appropriations Committee appropriates the money or makes a request for an appropriation.

Mr. WOLCOTT. In answer to the gentleman from Connecticut, may I say that there are rarely instances where the money is not appropriated after the authorization is made by Congress. Until there is some provision made for taking care of this, I do not think it should be passed. If it is necessary to pass these bills to give this relief, it is also necessary to follow them up with an appropriation.

Mr. GOSS. The Appropriations Committee cannot appropriate a cent until the legislative committees have made the authorizations. It would not be possible to get any money at all until you had the authorization, because the Appropriations Committee cannot put the authorization in these bills.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, until such time as we hear from the Director of the Budget as to whether these bills will be satisfactory to the President, I am not in favor of passing them. I ask unanimous consent that the bills on the Consent Calendar from nos. 325 to 345, inclusive, be passed over without prejudice. This request is made in the hope that this matter may be straightened out, because I am in sympathy with the legislation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, for the sole purpose of trying to tell the gentleman something of the circumstances concerning these bills:

The reason these Indian children are in the State schools is because the Department of the Interior in its economy program closed the Indian schools in the States and put these children in the district schools which have to be supported by the taxpayers of the school districts. You are going to deprive the States of getting money to help these school districts carry on their school work on behalf of both the white children and Indian children. They will have to put the Indian children out of the schools in order to take care of their own white children. This is only an authorization, and it is up to the Director of the Budget and the Department of the Interior to decide how the funds shall be obtained. All we are asking you to do in these bills is to authorize the money.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The President of the United States and the Director of the Budget should have made provision for raising the money to take care of these wards of the Government.

Mr. O'MALLEY. They have to start with an authorization.

Mr. WOLCOTT. They come in here and make a report against this relief and that leads me to believe that we should at least give the President of the United States and the Director of the Budget an opportunity to he heard on them.

Mr. Speaker, I renew my unanimous-consent request.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Does not the gentleman think, in view of the fact that we took this country from the Indians, that we ought to at least educate the Indian children?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bills on the Consent Calendar from nos. 325 to 345, inclusive, be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT, Mr. ELTSE of California, and Mr. MILLARD objected.

KING HILL IRRIGATION DISTRICT

Mr. McGUGIN. Mr. Speaker, since we passed over the bill H.R. 9583, a bill to convey to the King Hill irrigation district, State of Idaho, all the interest of the United States in the King Hill Federal reclamation project, and for other purposes, which was introduced by the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. COFFIN] I have discussed the matter with some of the Members and I do not believe there will be objection to the bill. I only did this on account of the absence of the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. COFFIN], who is in the hospital.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that we may return to Calendar No. 319, the bill H.R. 9583, to convey to the King Hill irrigation district, State of Idaho, all the interest of the United States in the King Hill Federal reclamation project, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask some gentleman who is an expert in these matters whether it is the custom to deed land to private irrigation districts without a consideration?

Mr. WHITE. This is a Carey project and it was a failure. The Government then took it over and spent a lot of money on it and the thing is now bankrupt.

Mr. ELTSE of California. I understand all that, but you are asking the Federal Government to quitclaim this property to a private irrigation district without receiving any payment for it, after the Government has spent nearly $2,000,000 on it.

Mr. WHITE. This is recommended by the Bureau of Reclamation and the Department of the Interior and they want to wipe the thing out and give these people a new start. The committee has also passed upon it.

Mr. McGUGIN. Let me say to the gentleman from California that in the light of the letter from the Secretary of the Interior it seems that here is a project on which the Government has spent $1,987,000 and from this letter it is apparent that there is no way to collect a penny out of it. It is a dead loss, and the operation of it is a loss, and it is valueless to anyone unless it is repaired, and the Government does not want to advance any further money. We took a mark-down in 1926, and the Secretary of the Interior recommends that the United States just walk out on it without any further obligation on the part of the United States.

When the original bill was introduced the Secretary of the Interior turned it down and recommended that another bill be introduced, which is the bill now before us.

Mr. ELTSE of California. In answer to the gentleman from Kansas, I may say that there is on the statute books at the present time a statute to the effect that land like this cannot be deeded to a private irrigation district or to a private concern wihout consideration. I recently put through a bill myself here where I was required to meet this requirement; and to make an exception in one case and require observance of the rule in another is hardly equitable or fair, and for this reason I shall be constrained to object. But I should ask, if it is agreeable, that the bill be passed over without prejudice, and if you can get a letter from the Department saying that this is a proper case in which to make an exception, I will let it go by.

Mr. McGUGIN. There is such a letter here.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Oh, no.

Mr. MURDOCK. This is not a question of conveying any land or any rights in any land. It simply has to do with the recision of a contract under which the Government has certain obligations.

Mr. TABER. Oh, no.

Mr. MURDOCK. Read the report.

Mr. TABER. Read the bill. The bill directly states that the Government shall quitclaim its interest.

Mr. MURDOCK. Yes.

Mr. TABER. That is a deed.

Mr. MURDOCK. It is a recision of a contract between the two and there are obligations on both parties, and the Department has recommended that this be done.

Mr. WERNER. The Government is going to be the gainer in this proposition.

Mr. BOILEAU. Has the Government a title in fee simple now?

Mr. MURDOCK. No; the Government simply has the right to be compensated for the money it has spent.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. McGUGIN. Mr. Speaker, under the circumstances, I am willing to withdraw my request.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. ELTSE]?

There was no objection.

PUBLIC-SCHOOL BUILDING AT BROCKTON, MONT.

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 7146, to provide funds for cooperation with the school board at Brockton, Mont., in the extension of the public-school building at that place to be available to Indian children of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, there is the same objection to this bill as to the preceding one.

Mr. TABER, Mr. ELTSE of California, and Mr. MILLARD objected.

MARYSVILLE SCHOOL DISTRICT, SNOHOMISH COUNTY, WASH.

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 7412, to provide funds for cooperation with Marysville School District No. 325, Snohomish County, Wash., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, it now appears that the unanimous-consent request that these seven or eight bills be passed over without prejudice was objected to and that all these bills are now going to be objected to, and I wonder if we could have them all considered at one time.

Mr. HOWARD. It will be entirely agreeable to the committee, if you want to murder all of them now.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I just ask this in the interest of saving time. I withdraw my reservation of objection, and you may go ahead with them one at a time and kill time in that way.

Mr. ELTSE of California, Mr. TABER, and Mr. MILLARD objected.

PUBLIC SCHOOL AT WOLF POINT, MONT.

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 6469, for expenditure of funds for cooperation with the public-school board at Wolf Point, Mont., in the construction or improvement of a public building to be available to Indian children of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, Mont.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to assure the gentlemen on the other side that there are no personalities involved in the consideration of the Consent Calendar. The men on this side and the men on the other side who are charged with the consideration of it give a great deal of thought to the calendar. Personally, I work nights on this Consent Calendar and I have not any personal interest in any of the bills, and I try to have every bill considered on its merits.

Remarks have been made that we on this side could go down to the President and get his consent for the consideration of these bills. I do not object to the remark, because it will not be in the RECORD, but I do think it is rather unfair to the men who are willing to take the grief of working on this Consent Calendar, as we have and as gentlemen on the other side have, to be constantly subjected to side remarks on the floor concerning our endeavors to save this country a good many dollars in money.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I simply want to point out to the gentleman that I objected to the unanimous-consent request to pass over all these bills without prejudice. The Indian Affairs Committee has spent about 3 months trying to get these bills passed. The Republicans and Democrats upon that committee were unanimous in reporting out all of these bills. It is a very serious situation in certain Western States that these schools be given some help so that the Indian children can go to school. Nobody has objected to these bills. The administration, apparently, is for them, as the Commissioner of Indian Affairs came before our committee and asked us to report the bills out favorably. There is not a word in the committee report that says that anybody in the administration is against the committee or against the bills.

All the report says is that the bill purports to make an appropriation. We have changed that so as to make it an authorization. While I appreciate the hard work the Republican Members are doing to protect the Public Treasury, they ought not to compel us to go to the Rules Committee and ask for a rule for a very vital thing.

Mr. WOLCOTT. We do take very seriously the Budget of the United States. We think the Director of the Budget has a very difficult job. He is a man who while on the floor of the House was in the forefront for the Indians. We are all familiar with his record on the floor. I am going to make this suggestion: That you who are interested in the bills get a communication from Mr. Douglas that he can reconcile them with the Budget and will recommend these bills, and I will have no objection to them.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, it is very evident that we are not going to finish this Consent Calendar tonight, and it will go over until tomorrow. Why not put these Indian bills over until tomorrow, until you can get the desired information from the Bureau? I ask unanimous consent that the bills, Calendar Nos. 325 to 354, be passed over and taken up tomorrow on the call of the Consent Calendar.

Mr. AYERS of Montana. You have had three objections to some of these bills, and they have gone off the calendar.

Mr. WERNER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I should like to direct the attention of the Republican members of the committee to this fact, that these bills ought to be considered without political rancor. The Government of the United States is obligated to educate these Indian children.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that these Indian bills, Calendar Nos. 325 to 345, be passed over and taken up tomorrow on the call of the Consent Calendar.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio that the Indian bills, Calendar Nos. 325 to 345, be passed over until tomorrow?

There was no objection.

BRIDGE ACROSS OHIO RIVER, SISTERSVILLE, W.VA.

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9618, authorizing the Sistersville Bridge Board of Trustees to finance, construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Ohio River at Sistersville, Tyler County, W.Va.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. I notice that the report refers to the bill H.R. 8665. The bill called by the Clerk is H.R. 9618. Has there been a sustitution, and does the report erroneously refer to H.R. 8665?

Mr. MILLIGAN. This is a report on a similar bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. And it is the same bridge?

Mr. MILLIGAN. Yes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I have no objection.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to promote interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, C. S. Sutton, president of the county court of Tyler County, W.Va., and his successors in office, W. L. Sutton, mayor of the city of Sistersville, W.Va., and his successors in office, and Arnold Stoeffer, president of the Board of County Commissioners of Monroe County, Ohio, and his successors in office, all as trustees, are hereby authorized to finance, construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches there to across the Ohio River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at Sistersville, Tyler County, W.Va., in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act; and said trustees shall own and hold said bridge in trust for Tyler County, W.Va., Monroe County, Ohio, and the city of Sistersville, W.Va.; said trustees being known as and functioning as the Sistersville Bridge Board of Trustees, and serving without compensation. Said board of trustees is hereby granted the right to assign, transfer, and mortgage all the rights, powers, and privileges conferred by this act.

SEC. 2. There is hereby conferred upon said board of trustees all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use real estate and other property needed for the location, construction, maintenance, and operation of such bridge and its approaches as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation or expropriation of property for public purpose in such State.

SEC. 3. The said board of trustees is hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over such bridge, and the rates of toll so fixed shall be the legal rates until changed by the Secretary of War under the authority contained in the act of March 23, 1906.

SEC. 4. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of such bridge and its approaches, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible, under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 20 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls, or the rates of toll shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and its approaches; the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same; and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

SEC. 5. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 2, line 2, after the word "to", strike out the word "finance."

The committee amendment was agreed to, and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

The title was amended to read: "A bill authorizing the Sistersville Bridge Board of Trustees to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Ohio River at Sistersville, Tyler County, W.Va."

BRIDGE ACROSS COLUMBIA RIVER, CATHLAMET, STATE OF WASHINGTON

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9563, authorizing the county of Wahkiakum, a legal political subdivision of the State of Washington, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Columbia River between Puget Island and the mainland, Cathlamet, State of Washington.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Clerk will report a similar Senate bill on the Speaker's table, S. 3615.

There was no objection; and the Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the county of Wahkiakum, a legal political subdivision of the State of Washington, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Columbia River between Puget Island and the mainland, Cathlamet, State of Washington, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in said act.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

With the following committee amendment:

Line 6, after the article "a", insert the words "free highway."

The committee amendment was agreed to; and the bill as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill (H.R. 9563) was laid on the table.

COMMEMORATION OF TERMINATION OF WAR BETWEEN THE STATES

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 8852, to amend sections 1, 2, and 3 of the act entitled "An act to provide for the commemoration of the termination of the War between the States at Appomattox Court House, Va.", approved June 18, 1930, and to establish the Appomattox Court House National Historical Park, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. DREWRY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. TRUAX. Yes.

Mr. DREWRY. This bill is similar to a bill that was passed 4 years ago, which provided for a memorial monument to commemorate the termination of the War between the States, to be erected at Appomattox Court House, Va. It was found impractical to create that as a monument. When this same area came into the hands of the Park Service it was suggested to have the memorial a park instead of a monument. That is all this bill does. It simply changes the memorial from a monument to a park.

Mr. TRUAX. Does the gentleman think that in the face of the emergencies with which the Congress is faced, in providing funds for destitute people, people who are starving, without clothing, that we should spend $100,000 now for a memorial park?

Mr. DREWRY. This park does not require the expenditure of one cent.

Mr. TRUAX. What about section 2, on page 2, which provides that there is authorized to be appropriated the sum of $100,000.

Mr. DREWRY. That is true. It authorizes it, but it does not appropriate it, and it is not expected that it will even cost anything. The people there are interested in the matter, and they want to donate the land, and a great deal of it will be donated.

Mr. TRUAX. Why not strike out section 2?

Mr. DREWRY. Because there may be some people who will try to obstruct the matter, and it may be that the Park Service will require part of the land which they cannot get by donation.

Mr. TRUAX. I am very willing to withdraw my objection and ask that it be passed over without prejudice until we can study the matter further.

Mr. DREWRY. Of course, if the gentleman is going to object to it, I have to accede to his request.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

SALE OF CERTAIN LANDS AND BUILDINGS, CAMP EAGLE PASS, TEX.

The Clerk called the bill, H.R. 8728, authorizing the Secretary of War to lease or to sell certain lands and buildings known as Camp Eagle Pass, Tex., to the city of Eagle Pass, Tex.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to enter into a lease with the city of Eagle Pass, Tex., for a term of 25 years at a nominal rental demising such of the lands and buildings known as Camp Eagle Pass, Tex., to the said city, as is not needed for war activities, upon the express condition, and to be forfeited if not so used, that the said city shall agree to use said land during said term, and maintain and preserve said land as a public park, with the reservation that the United States may at any time during said term reenter upon said land and terminate the said lease as to any or all of said demised land without any liability to pay any damages to said city or to any agency, lessee, or licensee thereof in the event that the Secretary of War should determine that said land is needed for military purposes or in the event that Congress should determine that said land or any part thereof is needed for any governmental purpose, and upon the further condition that said city may at any time during the term of said lease purchase all of said land for use for public-park purposes at a price to be ascertained by appraisal at such time.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

DIVISION OF WATERS OF THE YELLOWSTONE RIVER

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 8954, to amend an act approved June 14, 1932 (47 Stat. 306), entitled "An act granting the consent of Congress to the States of Montana and Wyoming to negotiate and enter into a compact or agreement for division of the waters of the Yellowstone River."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object, to ask someone on the committee whether or not any other State that might be dependent upon this water has been given the chance to be heard before the committee. Was this an open hearing by the committee?

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, I am on the Committee on the Public Lands. I happen to know that the water in question runs from Wyoming into Montana and no other State is affected in that district.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. The gentleman is on the committee that considered the bill?

Mr. WHITE. Yes.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Is the gentleman a member of the committee which considered this bill?

Mr. WHITE. Yes. I am a member of the committee.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I withdraw my reservation of objection, with the understanding that no other States are interested.

Mr. McFADDEN. Reserving the right to object, is this an irrigation proposal?

Mr. CARTER of Wyoming. No. It is to stop litigation between the various States when it comes to the allocation of water.

Mr. McFADDEN. For irrigation purposes?

Mr. CARTER of Wyoming. It is for whatever use it may be. It is no irrigation project.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act approved June 14, 1932 (47 Stat. 306) entitled "An act granting the consent of Congress to the States of Montana and Wyoming to negotiate and enter into a compact or agreement for division of the waters of the Yellowstone River", is hereby amended by adding the following thereto: "Provided further, That nothing in this act shall apply to any waters within the Yellowstone National Park or shall establish any right or interest in or to any lands within the boundaries thereof."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CLAIMS OF KIOWA, COMANCHE, AND APACHE INDIANS OF OKLAHOMA

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 2869, to authorize payment of expenses of formulating claims of the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache Indians of Oklahoma against the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the gentleman to explain why this claim has been allowed to stand so long.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, replying, I will state that this bill proposes to give the Comanche, Kiowa, and Apache Tribes of Indians jurisdiction to go into the Court of Claims in connection with certain claims they feel they have against the Government of the United States. If passed, this is one bill that will not cost the Government of the United States a dime. It merely proposes to permit those three tribes of Indians to spend some of their own money out of their own funds to prosecute certain claims. This bill has the endorsement of the Secretary of the Interior; it has the endorsement of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs as well as the approval of the Director of the Budget.

It is not a proposal to appropriate a penny of Government funds, but would expend funds belonging to the Indians themselves.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. How can the gentleman claim it will not cost the Government of the United States a dime if it permits them to sue the Government?

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Oh, if the Indians have any just claims against the Government of the United States, then eventually it no doubt will cost the Government something, but certainly the gentleman does not want to be in the position of saying that if the Government of the United States really owes those Indians anything, that it should not pay it. Surely the gentleman will not object to giving these Indians their day in court. This is simply a jurisdictional bill. It permits them to get their evidence and present same to the Court of Claims.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. If it is a matter that has been adjusted 20 years ago——

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Oh, I feel sure the gentleman is mistaken. That is the trouble; it has never been adjusted.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. And now they come and ask permission to sue the Government.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. If they have a just claim, or even if they feel that they have, why should not they be granted such a right? I do not know whether they have just claims or not. But I do know that for 25 or 30 years these Indians have claimed that they did not get a square deal out of the Medicine Lodge Treaty, as well as other treaties made between their tribes and this Government. They are here with clean hands asking Congress to permit them to spend some of their own money for the expenses of an attorney, for instance, to come to Washington, not to pay attorneys' fees, you understand, but to prepare and present their claim. I personally know it is no fault of these tribes of Indians that such a bill as this has not been passed years ago.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I hesitate to oppose the gentleman's bill. I judge the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS] is going to take up the cudgels with the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. JOHNSON], and I dislike to interpose my opinion against the opinion of those gentlemen who come from the Indian Territory; but both of the gentlemen know that in times gone by it has been the policy to object to these old, aged claims. Of course, if the gentleman takes the position that it is for the benefit of the Indians to spend their own money in lawyers' fees and various things like that, I perhaps should not object.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. No; not a penny of it goes for any lawyers' fees. These Indians are broke. They do not have any money. They are poor Indians. This money comes out of what is known as "the 4-percent hospital fund". The Indian hospital has been constructed and there should be no objection to permitting these Indians to spend their own money at least satisfying them as to their rights.

Mr. ELTSE of California. The gentleman says that no part of the money could be used for attorneys' fees.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. That is absolutely correct.

Mr. ELTSE of California. I call the gentleman's attention to the letter from the Secretary of the Interior which says that the bill under consideration authorizes the use of not to exceed $10,000 for expenses involved, no part of which is to be used for attorneys' fees, although expenses of attorneys in formulating these claims are permissible.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. That is correct and that is what I said a moment ago; it is to pay the expenses of attorneys to come to Washington, but cannot be paid for attorney fees. The identical bill passed the Senate yesterday and I shall therefore ask that the Senate bill be substituted for the House bill.

Mr. ELTSE of California. And the claims go back as far as 1907.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, regular order.

Mr. HASTINGS. Now, will the gentleman give me just 1 minute?

Mr. TRUAX. Many Members are waiting here who have bills and want to have those bills called up.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS]?

There was no objection.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker, I will not trespass upon that time. These Indians have $14,000 to their credit. They want to make some investigations, and this amount of money, $10,000, is to be used only for the purpose of paying expenses. It comes out of their own money. They think they have some claims against the Government of the United States. If after they make investigation, then Congress passes a jurisdictional bill, and they think they have some claims, those claims are referred to our own court, the Court of Claims and the Supreme Court of the United States. Surely the gentleman from California [Mr. ELTSE] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS] would not close the door of the Court of Claims against the wards of this Nation to come in and present any just claims they may have against the Government. I am not afraid of the Court of Claims. I am not afraid of the United States Supreme Court. I believe that the wards of this Government ought to have the power and privilege of going to court and presenting their claims.

Mr. ELTSE of California. If the gentleman will yield, I was about to make a unanimous-consent request that we return to the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 353, H.R. 2869.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Clerk called the bill (H.R. 2869) to authorize payment of expenses of formulating claims of the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache Indians of Oklahoma against the United States, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, a similar Senate bill, S. 74, will be substituted for the House bill.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of the Kiowa Agency Hospital 4-percent fund, not to exceed the sum of $10,000, to pay the expenses of the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache tribal council in the formulation of any claims of said tribes against the United States. Such expenses shall include traveling and other expenses of members of the tribal council, or committees thereof, including visits to Washington, D.C., when duly authorized or approved by the Secretary of the Interior; costs of procuring the attendance of witnesses, and the expenses of attorneys employed under contract in accordance with existing law. All claims for expenses hereunder shall be presented and paid in conformity with existing regulations.

With the following committee amendment:

On line 3, page 1, strike out the word "appropriated" and insert in lieu thereof "expended."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill was laid on the table.

CHALLIS NATIONAL FOREST

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 5791, to add certain lands to the Challis National Forest.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this bill, involving about 23,705 acres including public and private land, is approved by the Department of Agriculture but not approved by the Department of the Interior. Will the author of the bill advise me why the Interior Department expresses disapproval of the bill?

Mr. WHITE. The Interior Department does not disapprove the bill as amended to protect existing rights.

Mr. TRUAX. I read the gentleman a paragraph from the letter of Secretary Ickes of April 9, 1934:

In view of the character of the land, it is apparent that the object sought in the present bill is the regulation of grazing on the area. In my opinion, a wise method of dealing with the grazing problem on the unreserved public lands is to coordinate the use of all such lands under a comprehensive system which would promote the economic value and highest use of the entire public domain, instead of adding areas such as that involved to a national forest.

Mr. WHITE. The main objection of the Department of the Interior was because there was not an amendment in the bill protecting existing claims. The Secretary of the Interior depended upon the passage of the grazing bill, which failed.

The bill now under consideration was introduced at the request of the sportsmen's organization of Idaho to protect one of the few remaining bands of bighorn sheep. They are up in a rough, rugged country and without protection will be crowded out.

Mr. TRUAX. Can the gentleman get a statement to that effect from the Secretary?

Mr. WHITE. This bill was approved by the committee. We want to protect the bighorn sheep. We do not want to have to wait for the passage of the Taylor bill, for it may fail; we want to put these sheep under the protection of the forest organization.

Mr. TRUAX. Are any transfers of land involved?

Mr. WHITE. There are no transfers at all. This is one bill which has no graft in it and no connection with any exchange.

Mr. TRUAX. Does the gentleman admit that transfers have graft in them?

Mr. WHITE. They may have; I have known of such cases.

Mr. TRUAX. If the gentleman will assure me that there is no exchange involved, I will withdraw my objection.

Mr. WHITE. Absolutely none. This puts the bighorn sheep under the protection of the forest reserve game wardens.

Mr. TRUAX. So that the sports from the Northwest can go out and shoot one occasionally.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following-described lands, are hereby added to the Challis National Forest, Idaho, and made subject to all laws applicable to national forests:

All of sections 5, 6, 7, 8, 17, 18, 19, 20, 30, and 31, and that part of sections 29 and 32 lying west of the Salmon River, township 13 north, range 19 east, Boise meridian.

All of sections 2, 3, 10, 11, 14, 15, 22, 23, 26, 27, 34, and 35, township 14 north, range 18 east, Boise meridian.

All of the remaining portions of township 13 north, range 18 east, Boise meridian, not now included within the national forest.

With the following committee amendment:

Line 3, page 1, after the word "lands", insert: "subject to existing valid rights."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MERRIMACK RIVER AT LAWRENCE, MASS.

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9571, granting the consent of Congress to the county commissioners of Essex County, in the State of Massachusetts, to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Merrimack River, in the city of Lawrence, Mass.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman from Massachusetts advise us how far this proposed bridge is located from the nearest existing bridge?

Mr. CONNERY. My understanding is that they will probably do away with an old bridge, building the new bridge on the same site.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Does this bridge come in competition with any existing bridge?

Mr. CONNERY. No. It is a free highway bridge. There is no question of tolls involved.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the county commissioners of Essex County, in the State of Massachusetts, and their successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge and approaches thereto across the Merrimack River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at Broadway, in the city of Lawrence, in the county of Essex, in the State of Massachusetts, in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS BAYOU BARTHOLOMEW, MOREHOUSE PARISH, LA.

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9594, granting the consent of Congress to the Tensas Basin Levee Board of the State of Louisiana to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across Bayou Bartholomew at or near its mouth in Morehouse Parish, La.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, a similar Senate bill (S. 3640) will be substituted for the House bill.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Tensas Basin Levee Board of the State of Louisiana to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge and approaches thereto across Bayou Bartholomew, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near its mouth in Morehouse Parish, La., in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider and a similar House bill were laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSOURI RIVER, WASHINGTON, MO.

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9645, to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Washington, Mo.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Washington, Mo., authorized to be built by the city of Washington, Mo., by an act of Congress approved June 15, 1933, are hereby extended 1 and 3 years, respectively, from June 15, 1934.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

GENERAL JOHN J. PERSHING NATIONAL MILITARY PARK

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 7517, providing for the establishment of the General John J. Pershing National Military Park near Laclede, in Linn County, Mo.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this bill carries an appropriation of $250,000.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRUAX. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. This bill is to preserve the birthplace of General Pershing.

Mr. TRUAX. Was not General Pershing a member of the Economy League?

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I do not know anything about that; that had nothing to do with the purpose of this bill.

Mr. McFARLANE. I can tell the gentleman that General Pershing was a member of the Economy League.

Mr. ROMJUE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRUAX. I yield.

Mr. ROMJUE. This bill does not carry an appropriation of $250,000 as stated by the gentleman from Ohio; this bill is merely an authorization giving the Secretary of War the privilege of asking for anywhere from $1 to $250,000 for park purposes, and whatever amount is needed may be appropriated.

Mr. TRUAX. It means the same thing.

Mr. ROMJUE. No; it does not mean the same thing. It means instead of a certain expenditure of that amount of money that the Seecretary of War may have a survey made and see what amount of money is needed, not exceeding that sum, and any amount below that may be asked for. It might not take over $50,000, or it might not require even that. I regret Congressman COFFIN is confined to the hospital and cannot be here today, as he is much interested in the passage of this bill and made the report in accordance with the wishes of the committee thereon. The Secretary of War, under the provisions of this bill, is authorized to acquire title to such acreage in such quantity and character as he deems advisable for the purpose of establishing this memorial park. The land and acreage near the town of Laclede are suitable and admirable in character for a park site. The territory near the town of Laclede includes a beautiful forest and stream area, the scene of General Pershing's boyhood playground. Near by exists the remains of an old and ancient mill and the boyhood swimming pool of General Pershing.

The establishment of the General John J. Pershing Park, as provided by this bill, as I said, has been endorsed by several State legislatures and by many leading citizens and organizations throughout the country. The Gold Star Mothers and many American Legion posts, farm organizations, and chambers of commerce throughout the country have enthusiastically endorsed the establishment of this park.

Gen. John J. Pershing's military and public career is so outstanding and appreciated generally, not only by the people of our own country, but his achievements and accomplishments and the knowledge thereof are world-wide. And the committee having this bill in charge have recommended its passage. Hon. Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, most heartily commends this project. Now is an ideal time to establish this park. It will give needed employment to many now unemployed.

It does not mean what the gentleman seems to think.

Mr. TRUAX. It does not?

Mr. ROMJUE. No; it may be much less than the amount stated by the gentleman and will no doubt be.

Mr. TRUAX. Will the gentleman tell me what it does mean?

Mr. ROMJUE. May I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Goss] to answer, as he started to do a moment ago? Of course, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRUAX] has a right to object to the passage of the bill. I trust he will not do so.

Mr. GOSS. The gentleman who has charge of the bill, the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. COFFIN], is in the hospital, but I was on the committee that recommended the bill and all of these monumental bills unanimously. I may say to the gentleman that he knows how I have fought on this floor in reference to appropriations. All this does is to authorize the appropriation. It has to come up again before the Appropriations Committee before one cent of Government money may be spent.

Mr. TRUAX. But without the authorization the Appropriations Committee cannot spend the money?

Mr. GOSS. That is perfectly true.

Mr. TRUAX. Does not the gentleman believe that the spending of $250,000 on one of the war generals who now draws a retired pay of $21,000 a year could be spent to better advantage to feed some hungry mouths and clothe some naked bodies?

Mr. GOSS. No. The Appropriations Committee does not appropriate money for anything that is not included in a message from the Bureau of the Budget, and unless the Director of the Budget, and necessarily the President of the United States, desires to have this money spent, not one cent of it could be spent, because the Appropriations Committee does not pass appropriations unless they are in the Budget.

Mr. TRUAX. If this bill is stopped here and now, then the Appropriations Committee cannot authorize the expenditure of the money; hence we will save a quarter of a million dollars with which to relieve the poor people of this country.

Mr. GOSS. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that unless the money——

Mr. TRUAX. Will the gentleman answer my inquiry.

Mr GOSS. I am saying absolutely no; that that money would not be available for relief unless it came from the Budget.

Mr. TRUAX. But the money will be there. It will not be spent for some memorial.

Mr. GOSS. That is true.

Mr. TRUAX. If it is necessary for the President of the United States to draw money to feed the people in these drought-stricken areas the money will still be there?

Mr. GOSS. No; because unless the President requests the appropriation it would not be possible to draw the money, even for relief purposes.

Mr. ROMJUE. May I explain something to the gentleman that has occurred even since this bill was before the committee?

Since the committee passed on this matter, the school children of Missouri and other public-spirited citizens made up enough money themselves to purchase 100 acres of land. If the gentleman from Ohio does not want to participate in it, I know that farm organizations, chambers of commerce, and American Legion posts all over the State of Ohio have endorsed this proposition, as well as legislatures from Texas, Illinois, and other States.

Mr. TRUAX. If the gentleman from Ohio does not want to participate, the taxpayers of this country do not want to participate in such a measure.

Mr. ROMJUE. The school children of Missouri are going to help buy the ground and are doing so.

Mr. TRUAX. You can get them to do anything that is suggested.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I know the gentleman's interest in the Economy League is about the same as mine. No one has ever accused the gentleman from Ohio or myself of ever being particularly friendly with the Economy League. I may say in deference and in fairness to General Pershing that after the Economy League's activities were known to the country, and the purposes of the Economy League were published, General Pershing cabled the Economy League withdrawing his name as a sponsor. I just wanted the RECORD to show that fact.

Mr. TRUAX. He was a member when the Economy Act was passed?

Mr. WOLCOTT. No; I understand he was not. That is the impression I desired to correct.

Mr. TRUAX. Regardless of that fact, I am opposed to an appropriation of $250,000 here and $100,000 there for memorials when 95 percent of the people of this country are bankrupt.

Mr. GOSS. I agree with the gentleman, but may I call his attention to this——

Mr. ARENS. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. TRUAX. I object, Mr. Speaker.

HABEAS CORPUS PROCEEDINGS

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9547, to amend section 766 of the Revised Statutes, as amended.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 766 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, be, and it is hereby, further amended so as to read as follows:

"Pending the proceedings or appeal in the cases mentioned in the three preceding sections, and until final judgment therein, and after final judgment of discharge, any proceeding against the person so imprisoned and confined or restrained of his liberty, in any State court, or by or under the authority of any State, for any matter so heard and determined, or in process of being heard and determined, under such writ of habeas corpus, may be stayed by a judge of any court of the United States in which are pending any such proceedings or appeal. After the granting of such a stay any such proceeding in any State court, or by or under the authority of any State, subsequent thereto, shall be deemed null and void. If no such stay is granted, any such proceeding in any State court, or by or under the authority of any State, shall be as valid and of as full force and effect as if no proceedings or appeal in the cases mentioned in the three preceding sections were pending in any court of the United States. No such appeal shall be had or allowed unless taken within 3 months after the date of the judgment or order complained of. Any proceeding, except final judgment or execution thereof, heretofore taken in any State court, or by or under the authority of any State, for any matter heard and determined, or in process of being heard and determined, in any proceeding or appeal in the cases mentioned in the three preceding sections now pending in any court of the United States, shall be as valid and of as full force and effect as if no such proceedings or appeal had been pending in any court of the United States at the time such proceeding was taken."

With the following committee amendment:

On page 2, line 6, after the word "thereto", insert the following: "pending the final adjudication of such habeas corpus proceedings in the court of the United States."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MARINE BAND

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9145, to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic to be held at Rochester, N.Y., August 14, 15, and 16, 1934.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I ask that this bill be amended in accordance with the Navy Department's recommendation that the amount be reduced from $5,000 to $3,700, which they think will be ample.

Mr. ANDREW of Massachusetts. The $5,000 was only an authorization. The Navy Department states it will not cost more than $3,700. The amendment is acceptable.

Mr. TRUAX. Is the gentleman willing to offer such an amendment?

Mr. ANDREW of Massachusetts. Yes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President is authorized to permit the band of the United States Marine Corps to attend and give concerts at the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic to be held at Rochester, N.Y., on August 14, 15, and 16, 1934.

SEC. 2. For the purpose of defraying the expenses of such band in attending and giving concerts at such encampment there is authorized to be appropriated the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the provisions of this act: Provided, That in addition to transportation and Pullman accommodations the leaders and members of the Marine Band be allowed not to exceed $5 per day each for actual living expenses while on this duty, and that the payment of such expenses shall be in addition to the pay and allowances to which they would be entitled while serving at their permanent station.

Mr. ANDREW of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ANDREW of Massachusetts: Line 11, page 1, strike out "$5,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$3,700."

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, when this bill was before our committee there was some question raised about it. There were two or three bills of this nature before the committee, and I should like to inquire what became of the other bills.

Mr. ANDREW of Massachusetts. I do not remember what bills were before the committee.

Mr. McFARLANE. There was one for the G.A.R.

Mr. ANDREW of Massachusetts. This bill was unanimously reported by the committee, but I do not recall what other bills were before the committee.

Mr. McFARLANE. There was a bill to send one band to the G.A.R. encampment and another bill to send a band to the Confederate encampment. What became of that bill?

Mr. ANDREW of Massachusetts. I do not recall. The Confederate reunion is now being carried on. This is supposedly the last reunion of the Grand Army. The same procedure has been followed in the past with respect to the Confederate veterans at Biloxi, Miss., and at Charlotte, N.C., but I do not recall any other bill being before the committee on the same day.

Mr. TRUAX. I may say to the gentleman that I am in favor of sending the Marine Band to this encampment. I would also send them to the encampments of all the other veterans' organizations.

Mr. ANDREW of Massachusetts. I would also.

Mr. McFARLANE. That is what I have in mind.

Mr. TRUAX. I would send them to the meeting of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Disabled American Veterans, the American Legion, and the other organizations.

Mr. McFARLANE. I was in favor of treating them all alike.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONDEMNATION PROCEEDINGS

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 2647, prescribing the procedure and practice in condemnation proceedings brought by the United States of America, conferring plenary jurisdiction on the district courts of the United States to condemn and quiet title to land being acquired for public use, and for other purposes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, it appears to me that unless there is something which saves this bill in existing law that I am not familiar with, the bill is very loosely drawn. I want to call the attention of the chairman of the committee to the fact that this is a new bill, separate and apart from any existing condemnation statutes. There is no provision in this bill requiring that the commissioners appointed by the court find that the taking of the land is necessary to the project or for the purposes set forth in the petition.

In addition to this I find there is no provision made for paying the award after the commissioners have determined the amount due the landowners.

In all condemnation matters that I have ever had anything to do with, there are three things which must be found either by the court or the commissioners: One is the necessity for the project, which is usually determined by the court on a hearing on the petition. The other two things are the necessity for taking the land for the purposes set forth in the petition, and the award of damages, both of which must be found by the commissioners.

I assume the Government agencies which file the petition will have found the necessity for the project before they file the petition, but there is nothing in the statute, as I read it, which provides that the commissioners shall find it is necessary to take the land set forth in the petition for the purposes of the project, neither is there any provision made for payment of the award after it is made, either to the landowner or by depositing it with the clerk of the court, the Federal Treasury, or some other agency of the Government.

I may say to the gentleman I have no particular objection to the bill, but I do want to say I think it is about the most loosely drawn condemnation statute I have ever had occasion to read.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I do not care what the gentleman says about the bill, just so he does not object.

I appreciate what is in the mind of the gentleman. This bill, as I believe has been explained, has been approved by the Department of Justice. There were some interdepartmental difficulties and two bills were sent to the committee. This bill is the one agreed on and was in fact drafted by the Department of Justice.

The urgency for this bill grows out of the fact, as the gentleman knows, the Government is in process of acquiring or attempting to acquire sites for dams and lakes for the impounded waters, and so forth. Much of the land is wild land and it is very difficult to locate who are the owners of the land. In order to hurry the program it is desired by the Government to run boundaries around the lands and proceed not as you would proceed under ordinary circumstances.

I telephoned the Department of Justice with regard to what is in the mind of the gentleman. They tell me they have filed about 7,000 condemnation suits and with no criticism as to allegation. I think there is no doubt, of course, that the Government will pay the award.

The gentleman will notice that the Government must pay 6-percent interest on the award from the time it was taken.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The necessity of the project is jurisdictional. Section 2, page 2 of the bill provides that the petition shall set forth the name of the petitioner, a description of the property, to which there may be attached a map, the purpose for which the property is to be acquired, the names of all owners, if known.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I do not believe that I am going to object. However, I think that the Department of Justice, for its own reputation should draw a better bill than this. Any lawyer who pretends to be a lawyer can draw a better bill.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. I withdraw my request.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Nowhere in this bill does it provide that any tribunal or any agency of the Government has found the necessity for the project.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever any agent, or the head of any department, or any other officer, who is authorized to procure real estate, including fixtures thereon, for the use of the United States of America, shall request the Attorney General to do so, the Attorney General may cause to be instituted in the United States district court of the district wherein such property, or a part thereof, is situate, or in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the District Court for the Territory of Alaska, or the District Court for the Territory of Hawaii, if the property is situate, respectively, in the District of Columbia, the Territory of Alaska, or the Territory of Hawaii, a proceeding in condemnation and in the nature of a bill to quiet title, to acquire such property, or such easement, or right, or title, or ownership therein as shall be desired; and in said proceeding the court shall have plenary jurisdiction, to the end that title to said property, or such easement, or right, or title, or ownership therein desired shall be vested in the United States of America, and divested out of all other persons, firms, or corporations: Provided, That any such proceeding instituted in the Territory of Alaska shall be instituted in the division of the court within which the property, or a part thereof, involved, is situate.

SEC. 2. In all condemnation petitions filed hereunder, which need not be verified by affidavit, it shall be sufficient to allege—

(a) The name of the petitioner.

(b) A description of the property, to which there may be attached a map thereof.

(c) The purpose for which the property is to be acquired.

(d) The names of all the owners, if known, of the property sought to be condemned and their residences, if known, and giving the names of any of them under 21 years of age, or of unsound mind, or suffering under any other disability.

(e) The petition may also allege that there are unborn persons who may have some inchoate title or interest in, or lien or encumbrance on or against the property; and such allegation may be made on information or belief.

(f) A suitable prayer for the relief and for process.

SEC. 3. The list of owners, their conditions, ages, and addresses, and a description of the property, or any other relevant allegation or matter, may be set out in the body of the petition, or attached as exhibits or schedules thereto; and such exhibits or schedules shall be and are parts of the petition itself and the petition or the exhibits or schedules or other pleadings may be amended at any time before final judgment.

SEC. 4. Notice of such proceeding shall be given in the following manner:

(a) All persons, including minors, over 14 years of age, and the guardians of minors and all persons non compos mentis, having any interest in the property, residing within the jurisdiction of the court where the property sought to be condemned is situate, and whose residence is known, must be notified of the pendency of the proceeding by personal service on them of a citation by the United States marshal, or one of his deputies, or by a due admission of service by such persons, or by mailing a notice to him at his last known address.

(b) In addition to the notice provided in the preceding subsection, all minors, and all persons of unsound mind, shall have their interest represented and protected by a guardian ad litem, appointed by a judge of the court in which the petition is filed.

(c) All minors under the age of 14 years having a legal guardian must have notice served upon such guardian as provided in subsection (a) hereof. If such minors have no legal guardian, notice shall be served upon the person or persons having custody of the bodies of such minors.

(d) All nonresidents of the jurisdiction wherein the petition is filed, and all unknown parties, and all parties whose residences or post-office addresses are unknown, shall be notified of the pendency of the proceedings by publication once a week for 3 successive weeks in some newspaper published in the county, parish, or district where the land is situate; and if no newspaper is published therein, then the same shall be published in an adjoining county, parish, or district, or in such other manner as the court may direct.

SEC. 5. The notice to be served personally, or by publication, shall be substantially in the following form:

In the United States District Court for the _____ District of _____:

Notice:

The United States of America has filed a petition in the above court to appropriate and acquire title to a certain tract of land in the city _____ of _____, county of _____, State of _____, described as follows:

(Here describe the land)

"A", whose residence is unknown;

"B", who lives at _____, in the State of _____; and any and all other persons, firms, or corporations whomsoever or whatsoever, known or unknown, are hereby notified of the filing of such proceedings; and that the same will be heard before said court at the place of holding the same at _____ o'clock, ___m., on the _____ day of _____, 19____.

_____,
Clerk of said court.

SEC. 6. Each defendant shall have 10 days after the service of notice as aforesaid to plead to the petition.

After the cause is at issue, all other notices may be given by delivering copies of the papers to the attorneys of record, or by filing the same in the office of the clerk of the court where the proceeding is pending.

SEC. 7. If the issues are determined in favor of the petitioner, the court shall enter a decree condemning the property; vesting title in the United States of America, according to the prayer of the petition, quieting title to said property and appointing commissioners to fix just compensation therefor: Provided, That no commissioners shall be appointed in any case where a jury trial has been allowed.

SEC. 8. The petitioner may file a written demand for a common-law jury trial with the petition, and any defendant or intervenor to the suit may file a written demand for a jury trial at any time within which he is allowed to plead to the petition. In such event the cause shall be tried as other jury cases. If no jury trial is demanded, the court shall appoint as commissioners three disinterested residents of the judicial district, the District of Columbia, the Territory of Hawaii, or the division of the district court for the Territory of Alaska, as the case may be, where the property, or any part thereof, is situate, to view the property, hear testimony, and value the same and award damages to the owner for the taking.

SEC. 9. The order appointing the commissioners may be in substantial compliance with the following form:

United States of America v. a certain parcel of land et al., defendants

In the United States District Court for the ____ District of _____ Notice to_____

_____
_____
_____
_____

You are hereby appointed and notified of your appointment as commissioners to fix the amount of damages to which the several defendants in the above-entitled cause are entitled for taking their property under the proceedings therein, and you must make the return of your award within 15 days from the time you are sworn in as such commissioners, in substantially the following form.

_____,
Judge of the District Court.

The commissioners must report in writing, which may be substantially in the following form:

The undersigned commissioners named in the foregoing order in the above-entitled cause to view the property described in the petition and exhibits attached, after being duly sworn, viewed the property and examined the witnesses under oath in regard to the matters under inquisition, and respectfully report our findings as follows:

(The report shall contain)

(a) The names of the owners of each parcel of property, describing it, the value of the land, the value of the improvements, if any, the value of fixtures, if any.

(b) A list of all of the liens of every kind and character against said property, including taxes and assessments; and the value placed upon each and every parcel, and each and every interest therein, and any other matters which may be submitted under the direction of the court, together with a brief statement of the manner in which they arrived at the amount of compensation awarded.

SEC. 10. The commissioners must be duly sworn, and must subscribe the oath, which shall be in substantially the following form:

We, and each of us, do solemnly swear that we will well and truly inquire into, and find and return a true award of damages and compensation to the property owners in a certain cause pending in said court, wherein the United States of America is petitioner and _____ are defendants, for the taking and appropriating the property described in the petition and in the foregoing commission appointing the undersigned as commissioners, according to the best of our ability.

Neither of us is in any way interested in said cause, nor are we, or any of us, of kin, nor related, to any of the parties to said cause by affinity or consanguinity.

_____,
_____,
_____,
_____,
_____,

The foregoing was subscribed and sworn to before me, the undersigned authority, by each and all of the above-named commissioners, on this, the ____ day of _____, 19__.

_____
(Here give the official title)

SEC. 11. The above oath may be administered by and sworn to before any judge of any court of record, or the clerk of any court of record, or notary public.

SEC. 12. There may be attached to the petition, and made a part thereof, a suitable and correct map of the land sought to be condemned, and the order of the court appointing the commissioners may have attached thereto a true copy of the petition and all exhibits or schedules exhibited.

SEC. 13. Where there are several parcels of land, regardless of whether they are owned by the same or different persons, jointly or separately, they may all be joined and condemned in one petition or proceeding, provided such parcels are contiguous, or provided they are being taken for one and the same project. Where lands sought to be acquired are contiguous and lie within the jurisdiction of two or more courts, the petition may be filed in either.

SEC. 14. It shall be the duty of the commissioners so appointed to examine into the value of the lands sought to be condemned, to conduct hearings and receive evidence, and generally to take such other and additional steps as may be proper for the determination of the value of the lands, as well as rights-of-way or other interests sought to be condemned, and for such purposes the commissioners are authorized to subpena witnesses, administer oaths, and conduct hearings for the ascertainment of just compensation to be awarded for the appropriation of the property. The award must be filed with the clerk of the court in which such proceedings are pending within 15 days from the date of the taking of the oath, unless further time is granted by the court, and upon the filing of such award in court, the clerk shall give notice of such filing to all the parties to said proceeding in the manner and form directed by a judge of said court.

SEC. 15. At any time within 20 days from the date of the filing of the said award in court, any party may file exceptions thereto. Such exceptions shall be heard before the court, which shall review questions of law and fact and shall render a final decree fixing just compensation.

SEC. 16. At any time within 30 days from the filing of the decree of the court any party may appeal therefrom to the Circuit Court of Appeals or the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, as the case may be.

SEC. 17. The United States may appeal without giving bond; but any other party appealing shall give bond, with good and sufficient surety, to be approved by the court, conditioned to pay all costs taxed against appellant on such appeal.

SEC. 18. If no exceptions shall be filed within 20 days from the filing of report of commissioners with the clerk, the court shall cause to be entered a decree fixing the amount of damages or compensation to which each and every party is entitled. The United States may withdraw or dismiss its petition at any time before the vesting of title to the property in the United States of America.

SEC. 19. All judgments or decrees awarded for the appropriation of property by the United States of America shall bear 6 percent interest from the time that title vests in the United States, subject to abatement for use, income, rents, or profits derived therefrom subsequent to entry of judgment or award, or verdict.

SEC. 20. On the rendition of the final decree, the clerk shall make and certify, under the seal of the court, a copy or copies of such decree, which shall be recorded in the proper local recording office or offices.

SEC. 21. Whenever, in the judgment of the court, there are so many defendants as to make it too expensive and impracticable to have all of them summoned as parties, the court may enter an order directing that a certain number of each class of claimants or owners, if there are more than one class, be selected for service and notice; and shall order notice given to all others by publication, as hereinbefore set out.

SEC. 22. Any person not already a party to the suit, who claims any interest in the property, may intervene as a party defendant.

SEC. 23. The court shall have full power and authority to determine any and all adverse claims or title or interest in the property, and the priority of liens thereon, without the intervention of a jury, unless demanded.

SEC. 24. All condemnation suits shall be preferred cases having precedence over all others except criminal causes where the defendants are in jail.

SEC. 25. All laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed: Provided, That the act approved February 26, 1931, entitled "An act to expedite the construction of public buildings and works outside of the District of Columbia by enabling possession and title of sites to be taken in advance of final judgment in proceedings for the acquisition thereof under the power of eminent domain", shall not be deemed repealed by this act.

SEC. 26. Should any provision or part of this act be declared unconstitutional or invalid, such decision shall not affect any other portion or part thereof.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 3, line 24, strike out the word "is."
Page 4, line 4, after the word "or", insert "if such person cannot be found in the district."
Page 4, line 20, after the word "proceedings", insert "in such manner as the court may direct, and if the court orders that notice be given."
Page 4, line 22, after the word "publication", insert "such publication shall be."
Page 5, line 2, strike out the words "or in such other manner as the court may direct."
Page 5, line 4, strike out the word "shall" and insert the word "may."
Page 5, line 10, after the word "in", strike out the words "the city."
Page 6, line 1, strike out "Each defendant shall have 10 days after the service of notice as aforesaid to plead to the petition" and insert "After the expiration of 10 days from the personal service or service by mail as provided herein of notice as above required, the cause shall be at issue. Where notice is given by publication, the cause shall be at issue 10 days after the notice has been published the third and last time."
Page 6, line 10, after the word "or", insert "if any party fails to appear by attorney, then."
Page 7, line 7, after the word "taking", insert "The compensation of said commissioners shall not exceed $15 per day plus travel and subsistence expenses."
Page 10, line 7, after the word "clerk", insert "or any deputy clerk."
Page 12, line 20, strike out section 21.
Page 13, line 2, strike out "22" and insert "21."
Page 13, line 5, strike out "23" and insert "22."
Page 13, line 9, strike out "24" and insert "23."
Page 13, line 12, strike out "25" and insert "24."
Page 13, line 20, strike out section 26.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENDING BENEFITS OF EMERGENCY FARM MORTGAGE ACT

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9528, to amend section 32 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a similar Senate bill, S. 3540, be substituted in lieu of the House bill.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is the language of the amendment, the language which is stricken out in the Senate bill the same as in the House bill?

Mr. JONES. It is identical.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the Senate bill is to be substituted. I reserve the right to object to the Senate bill and ask the gentleman if he does not think that by striking out that language of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act it will make it possible for the mortgagor, however long ago the foreclosure took place, to come in and cause considerable trouble in demanding redemption.

Mr. JONES. No; he can only redeem when both parties agree or where redemption is a matter of right under existing law. This is to make it possible where the mortgagee is willing, for the Commissioner to make the necessary loan provided the mortgagor is able to meet the requirement. This does not confer an equity of redemption. It enables the Farm Credits Administration to furnish the money if an arrangement to redeem can be made.

Mr. ELTSE of California. And this has nothing to do with the limitation period?

Mr. JONES. Nothing at all.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Senate bill.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the fifth sentence of section 32 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933 is amended by striking out "which has been foreclosed at any time between July 1, 1931, and the date of the enactment of this act, or which is foreclosed after the enactment of this act."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

A similar House bill (H.R. 9528) was laid on the table.

PROHIBITING CERTAIN USES OF PATRONAGE

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1884, to prevent the use of Federal official patronage in elections and to prohibit Federal officeholders from misuse of positions of public trust for private and partisan ends.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Will the gentleman please explain the bill?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I think there is no explanation other than that which is in the report. Has the gentleman the report available? The purpose is to prevent these people holding Government jobs from stacking conventions.

Mr. TRUAX. Does not the distinguished Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary think he ought to have an amendment there which would prevent national committeemen and national committeewomen, after they are appointed to office, from controlling appointments back home? That is the condition in my State today. Would the gentleman be willing to accept an amendment to this bill?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Has the gentleman got such an amendment worked out?

Mr. TRUAX. I think I can work it out.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I suggest that the gentleman let the bill go over until tomorrow.

Mr. TRUAX. Very well. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice, to be considered on tomorrow's calendar.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

CONCERNING RATES OF PAY FOR LABOR

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3041, to effectuate the purpose of certain statutes concerning rates of pay for labor by making it unlawful to prevent anyone from receiving the compensation contracted for thereunder, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object to inquire whether or not this bill, if enacted, will apply to those cases where this very thing has already happened, and which a Senate committee is now engaged in checking over?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. It could not be retroactive, as the gentleman knows.

Mr. McFADDEN. Is there a bill that would cover the present situation?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. It is intended by this bill to do that. It is intended by this bill to make it a penal offense and that is as far as legislation can go.

Mr. McFADDEN. Take these cases now under investigation by the Senate committee, of which Senator WALSH is the chairman.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. We have a constitutional prohibition which prevents us from legislating and making penal a thing already happened, which is not now a violation of law. We cannot make a thing against the law which was not against the law at the time it was done. We are doing all that can be done in this bill.

Mr. McFADDEN. And it would not apply to any of the cases that might be uncovered in the Senate committee investigation?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. No; we could not do that.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That whoever shall induce any person employed in the construction, prosecution, or completion of any public building, public work, or building or work financed in whole or in part by loans or grants from the United States, or in the repair thereof to give up any part of the compensation to which he is entitled under his contract of employment, by force, intimidation, threat of procuring dismissal from such employment, or by any other manner whatsoever, shall be fined not more than $5,000, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

SEC. 2. To aid in the enforcement of the above section, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of the Interior jointly shall make reasonable regulations for contractors or subcontractors on any such building or work, including a provision that each contractor and subcontractor shall furnish weekly a sworn affidavit with respect to the wages paid each employee during the preceding week.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

Mr. HOLMES. I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

Mr. BYRNS. I hope the gentleman will not insist upon that. I think the gentleman ought to understand the responsibility that some of us have for putting this legislation through and giving the Members an opportunity to have their bills called. If the gentleman insists on quitting work at 5:15 and going home, I cannot help it, of course; but I am going to move a call of the House if the gentleman makes the point of order. We will waste 30 or 40 minutes for nothing, and then when we come we will stay here until we complete this calendar.

Mr. SNELL. I understood that the gentleman was going to rise?

Mr. BYRNS. I am going to rise directly.

Mr. HOLMES. I will withdraw the point of order for the time being.

JOHN P. LEONARD

Mr. HILL of Alabama submitted a conference report on the bill (H.R. 541) for the relief of John P. Leonard for printing in the RECORD.

PAUL JELNA

Mr. HILL of Alabama submitted a conference report on the bill (H.R. 3032) for the relief of Paul Jelna for printing in the RECORD.

WILLIAM G. BURRESS, DECEASED

Mr. HILL of Alabama submitted a conference report on the bill (H.R. 2439) for the relief of William G. Burress, deceased, for printing in the RECORD.

MARINE BAND TO ATTEND UNITED CONFEDERATE VETERANS' 1934 REUNION

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H.R. 8539) to authorize attendance of the Marine Band at the United Confederate Veterans' 1934 reunion at Chattanooga, Tenn.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. McFARLANE]?

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, this bill will permit sending the Marine Band to the Confederate reunion. It was stated that this bill had already been passed. I find on checking up that it has not been passed, so I trust there will be no objection made to it, because we have already passed bill no. 361 on the calendar to send the band to the G.A.R. convention at New York. It is in the interest of fairness to both parties, and I hope there will be no objection.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Reserving the right to object, the gentleman is asking the privilege of having his bill come before 75 or 100 other bills.

Mr. McFARLANE. No; these bills were both reported out of the committee together.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. But the gentleman has not taken the precaution to have it put on the calendar. What does the bill propose?

Mr. McFARLANE. It proposes to permit the Marine Band to attend this year's Confederate reunion at Chattanooga, Tenn.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. How much is the appropriation?

Mr. McFARLANE. Five thousand dollars, or as much of that amount as may be necessary.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Is it not a fact that heretofore the appropriation has only been $3,700?

Mr. McFARLANE. I will be glad to accept such an amendment.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I will not object if that amendment is accepted.

Mr. McFARLANE. That was the same amendment that was offered to the other bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. McFARLANE]?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President is authorized to permit the band of the United States Marine Corps to attend and give concerts at the United Confederate Veterans' Reunion to be held at Chattanooga, Tenn., on June 6, 7, and 8, 1934.

SEC. 2. For the purpose of defraying the expenses of such band in attending and giving concerts at such reunion there is authorized to be appropriated the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the provisions of this act: Provided, That in addition to transportation and Pullman accommodations the leaders and members of the Marine Band be allowed not to exceed $5 per day each for actual living expenses while on this duty, and that the payment of such expenses shall be in addition to the pay and allowances to which they would be entitled while serving at their permanent station.

Mr. McFARLANE. I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. McFARLANE: On page 1, line 9, strike out "$5,000" and insert "$3,700."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

KENNESAW MOUNTAIN NATIONAL MEMORIAL MILITARY PARK

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 1729, to create a national memorial military park at and in the vicinity of Kennesaw Mountain in the State of Georgia, and for other purposes.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I object. This appropriates $100,000 for another national park.

Mr. TARVER. Will the gentleman reserve it?

Mr. TRUAX. I will reserve it, but I will not withdraw it.

Mr. TARVER. I hope the gentleman will not close his mind against the arguments which I intend to address to him, and which I think ought to make an impression upon him.

I have listened to the gentleman's remarks with regard to one or two other legislative proposals this afternoon of a similar nature. I am not entirely out of sympathy with the position the gentleman takes, but I wish to point out some things to him which make a distinction between those proposals and the one we are now considering.

Mr. TRUAX. I think the gentleman will agree that I could not with consistency allow his bill to pass and object to the other bills.

Mr. TARVER. That is exactly the point. I am undertaking to point out some very substantial differences between the other bills and the bill under consideration.

Mr. TRUAX. I shall be glad to hear the gentleman.

Mr. TARVER. In the first place, permit me to point out to the gentleman that the Battle of Kennesaw Mountain and the engagements around Kennesaw Mountain were participated in by 150,000 soldiers of the North and South, and that the losses in that battle on both sides, killed, wounded, and missing were 25,000. The Federal Government has not memorialized a single battlefield of the entire Johnston-Sherman campaign from Dalton to Atlanta in the spring of 1864, one of the most important campaigns of the War Between the States. No battlefield in the country is of greater interest nor more suited to memorialization purposes than Kennesaw Mountain.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, regular order.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes.

Mr. TRUAX. I will have to object to that. I want to say to the gentleman that I am willing to agree to every contention he has made, but I wonder if the gentleman has thought about the thousands and hundreds of thousands of economic casualties in this country today that are living and that have to be taken care of?

Mr. TARVER. Unless I am permitted to go into this matter briefly I shall demand a quorum.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman insists upon demanding the regular order, I shall make a point of no quorum.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman will not make the point of no quorum.

Mr. TARVER. All I ask is to be allowed the privilege of briefly stating the facts regarding this bill.

Mr. BYRNS. The gentleman never ceased work at home at 5:20 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to cease work; I want to continue to work. I ask only the privilege of explaining my bill.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I do not think the gentleman ought to take it out on other Members of the House who are sitting here patiently hoping their bills will be called.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, nothing is further from my purpose. Will not the gentleman withdraw his demand for the regular order and allow me to proceed for 2 minutes?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my demand for the regular order.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I want to point out to the gentleman from Ohio that this in a way is an unemployment-relief proposition. The purpose of the proposed legislation is to pave the way for an application to the Public Works Administration for an allocation to this project, which includes the construction of a road alongside 4½ miles of breastworks, part of a battlefield where organizations from 14 different States of the Union were engaged, so that the people who travel the Dixie Highway alongside this battlefield may have an opportunity of going over this historic ground.

We do not intend to ask a single dollar of appropriation by the Congress at this time. We intend to ask the money of the P.W.A. The State of Georgia has received only a very limited amount for Federal projects out of the $3,300,000,000 appropriated by Congress for public works. We want an opportunity to participate in this Public Works program. We have not had it to any considerable extent. This is a comparatively small amount. We want it partly for the purpose of furnishing employment to our unemployed. Surely the gentleman cannot in good faith object upon the grounds mentioned by him.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I may say to the gentleman from Georgia that I would consider the employment proposition involved in this case the same as I do the employment relief afforded by certain public road-building projects. If the gentleman will go over route no. 40 he will notice cuts being made in some of the mountains, curves being straightened, and fills being made. How is this work being done? They have two or three steam shovels, two or three tractors, and a number of trucks; and a project that formerly would give employment to 2,000 men now gives employment to about 20.

Mr. TARVER. The work contemplated under this bill would give employment to a large number of men, as most of it is to be done on the rugged sides of Kenesaw Mountain, where the use of machinery would be difficult.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I object.

EXTENSION OF GEOLOGICAL SURVEY TO PUERTO RICO

The Clerk called the next bill, H.J.Res. 202, providing for extension of cooperative work of the Geological Survey to Puerto Rico.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, I object.

PHILIPPINE CURRENCY RESERVE

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9459, relating to Philippine currency reserves on deposit in the United States.

Mr. McDUFFIE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

BRIDGE ACROSS AGATE PASS, KITSAP COUNTY, WASH.

The Clerk called the next bill, H.. 9723, a bill to revive and reenact the act entitled "An act authorizing the Bainbridge Island Chamber of Commerce, a corporation, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across Agate Pass connecting Bainbridge Island with the mainland in Kitsap County, State of Washington.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is this a toll bridge?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. No; it is not. It will be a toll bridge until the State of Washington wants to take it over. At the present time the State is in no position to build this bridge.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this is a toll bridge.

Mr. MILLIGAN. The bill provides that it may be a toll bridge for 20 years.

Mr. GOSS. Authorization to build this bridge was granted way back in 1929. I have been to Bainbridge Island and am familiar with that country myself.

Mr. MILLIGAN. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I object.

BRIDGE ACROSS COLUMBIA RIVER AT ASTORIA, OREG.

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9706, authorizing the Oregon-Washington Bridge board of trustees to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Columbia River at Astoria, Clatsop County, Oreg.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill S. 3502 may be considered in lieu of the House bill.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in order to facilitate interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, the Oregon-Washington Bridge Commission (hereinafter created, and hereinafter referred to as the "commission") and its successors and assigns, be, and is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Columbia River at or near the city of Astoria, Oreg., at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act. Such commission is further authorized and directed to acquire all the assets and liabilities of the Rivers Improvement Corporation, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Oregon.

SEC. 2. There is hereby conferred upon the commission and its successors and assigns the right and power to enter upon such lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use such real estate and other property in the States of Oregon and Washington as may be needed for the location, construction, operation, and maintenance of such bridge and its approaches, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation of private property for public purposes in said States, respectively.

SEC. 3. The commission and its successors and assigns are hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over such bridge in accordance with the provisions of this act.

SEC. 4. The commission and its successors and assigns are hereby authorized to provide for the payment of the cost of the bridge and its approaches and the necessary lands, easements, and appurtenances thereto by an issue or issues of negotiable bonds of the commission, bearing interest at not more than 6 percent per annum, the principal and interest of which bonds and any premium to be paid for retirement thereof before maturity shall be payable solely from the sinking fund provided in accordance with this act. Such bonds may be registrable as to principal alone or both principal and interest, shall be in such form not inconsistent with this act, shall mature at such time or times not exceeding 25 years from their respective dates, shall be in such denominations, shall be executed in such manner, and shall be payable in such medium and at such place or places as the commission may determine. The commission may repurchase and may reserve the right to redeem all or any of said bonds before maturity in such manner and at such price or prices, not exceeding 105 and accrued interest, as may be fixed by the commission prior to the issuance of the bonds. The commission may enter into an agreement with any bank or trust company in the United States as trustee having the power to make such agreement, setting forth the duties of the commission in respect of the construction, maintenance, operation, repair, and insurance of the bridge, the conservation and application of all funds, the safeguarding of moneys on hand or on deposit, and the rights and remedies of said trustee and the holders of the bonds, restricting the individual right of action of the bondholders as is customary in trust agreements respecting bonds of corporations. Such trust agreement may contain such provisions for protecting and enforcing the rights and remedies of the trustee and the bondholders as may be reasonable and proper and not inconsistent with the law and also provisions for approval by the original purchasers of the bonds of the employment of consulting engineers and of the security given by the bridge contractors and by any bank or trust company in which the proceeds of bonds or of bridge tolls or other moneys of the commission shall be deposited, and may provide that no contract for construction shall be made without the approval of the consulting engineers. The bridge constructed under the authority of this act shall be deemed an instrumentality for interstate commerce, the postal service, and military and other purposes authorized by the Government of the United States. Said bonds shall be sold in such manner and at such time or times and at such price as the commission may determine, but no such sale shall be made at a price so low as to require the payment of more than 6-percent interest on the money received therefor, computed with relation to the absolute maturity of the bonds in accordance with standard tables of bond values and the face amount thereof shall be so calculated as to produce, at the price of their sale, the cost of the bridge and its approaches, and the land, easements, and appurtenances used in connection therewith. The cost of the bridge shall be deemed to include interest during construction of the bridge, and for 12 months thereafter, and all engineering, legal, architectural, traffic surveying, and other expenses incident to the construction of the bridge and the acquisition of the necessary property, and incident to the financing thereof, including the cost of acquiring existing franchises, rights, plans, and works of and relating to the bridge, now owned by any person, firm, or corporation, and the cost of purchasing all or any part of the shares of stock of any such corporate owner if, in the judgment of the commission, such purchases should be found expedient. If the proceeds of the bonds issued shall exceed the cost as finally determined, the excess shall be placed in the sinking fund hereinafter provided. Prior to the preparation of definitive bonds the commission may, under like restrictions, issue temporary bonds, or interim certificates with or without coupons of any denomination whatsoever, exchangeable for definitive bonds when such bonds have been executed and are available for delivery.

SEC. 5. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge, the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to pay the principal and interest of such bonds as the same shall fall due and the redemption or repurchase price of all or any thereof redeemed or repurchased before maturity as herein provided. All tolls and other revenues from said bridge are hereby pledged to such uses and to the application thereof as hereinafter in this section required. After payment or provision for payment therefrom of all such cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating and the reservation of an amount of money estimated to be sufficient for the same purpose during an ensuing period of not more than 6 months, the remainder of tolls collected shall be placed in the sinking fund, at intervals to be determined by the commission prior to the issuance of the bonds. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and its approaches, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected, shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested. The commission shall classify in a reasonable way all traffic over the bridge, so that the tolls shall be so fixed and adjusted by it as to be uniform in the application thereof to all traffic falling within any such reasonable class, regardless of the status or character of any person, firm, or corporation participating in such traffic, and shall prevent all use of such bridge for traffic except upon payment of the tolls so fixed and adjusted. No toll shall be charged officials or employees of the commission or of the Government of the United States or any State, county, or municipality in the United States while in the discharge of their duties.

SEC. 6. After payment of the bonds and interest, or after a sinking fund sufficient for such payment shall have been provided and shall be held for that purpose, the commission shall deliver deeds or other suitable instruments of conveyance of the interest of the commission in and to the bridge, that part within Oregon to the State of Oregon or any municipality or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereinafter referred to as the "Oregon interests") and that part within Washington to the State of Washington or any municipality or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereinafter referred to as the "Washington interests"), under the condition that the bridge shall thereafter be free of tolls and be properly maintained, operated, and repaired by the Oregon interests and the Washington interests, as may be agreed upon; but if either the Oregon interests or the Washington interests shall not be authorized to accept or shall not accept the same under such conditions, then the bridge shall continue to be owned, maintained, operated, and repaired by the commission, and the rates of tolls shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management, until such time as both the Oregon interests and the Washington interests shall be authorized to accept and shall accept such conveyance under such conditions.

SEC. 7. For the purpose of carrying into effect the objects stated in this act, there is hereby created the Oregon-Washington Bridge Commission, and by that name, style, and title said body shall have perpetual succession; may contract and be contracted with, sue and be sued, implead and be impleaded, complain, and defend in all courts of law and equity; may make and have a common seal; may purchase or otherwise acquire and hold or dispose of real estate and other property; may accept and receive donations and gifts of money or other property and apply same to the purposes of this act; and shall have and possess all powers necessary, convenient, or proper for carrying into effect the objects stated in this act.

The commission shall consist of Guy Boyington, A. W. Norblad, and M. R. Chessman, all of the city of Astoria, Oreg., and L. D. Williams and O. H. Roessler, of Pacific County, Wash. Such commission shall be a body corporate and politic. Each member of the commission shall qualify within 30 days after the approval of this act by filing in the office of the Secretary of the Interior an oath that he will faithfully perform the duties imposed upon him by this act, and each person appointed to fill a vacancy shall qualify in like manner within 30 days after his appointment. Any vacancy occurring in said commission by reason of failure to qualify as above provided, or by reason of death or resignation, shall be filled by the Secretary of the Interior. Before the issuance of bonds as hereinabove provided, each member of the commission shall give such bond as may be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior, conditioned upon the faithful performance of all duties required by this act. The commission shall elect a chairman and a vice chairman from its members, and may establish rules and regulations for the government of its own business. A majority of the members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

SEC. 8. The commission shall have no capital stock or shares of interest or participation, and all revenues and receipts thereof shall be applied to the purposes specified in this act. The members of the commission shall be entitled to a per diem compensation for their services of $10 for each day actually spent in the business of the commission, but the maximum compensation of the chairman in any year shall not exceed $2,500 and of each other member shall not exceed $500. The members of the commission shall also be entitled to receive traveling-expense allowance of 10 cents a mile for each mile actually traveled on the business of the commission. The commission may employ a secretary, treasurer, engineers, attorneys, and such other experts, assistants, and employees as they may deem necessary, who shall be entitled to receive such compensation as the commission may determine. All salaries and expenses shall be paid solely from the funds provided under the authority of this act. After all bonds and interest thereon shall have been paid and all other obligations of the commission paid or discharged or provision for all such payment shall have been made as hereinbefore provided, and after the bridge shall have been conveyed to the Oregon interests and the Washington interests as herein provided, the commission shall be dissolved and shall cease to have further existence by an order of the Secretary of the Interior made upon his own initiative or upon application of the commission or any member or members thereof, but only after a public hearing in the city of Astoria, Oreg., notice of the time and place of which hearing and the purpose thereof shall have been published once, at least 30 days before the date thereof, in a newspaper published in the city of Astoria, Oreg., and a newspaper published in South Bend, Wash. At the time of such dissolution all moneys in the hands of or to the credit of the commission shall be divided into two equal parts, one of which shall be paid to said Oregon interests and the other to said Washington interests.

SEC. 9. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize or permit the commission or any member thereof to create any obligation or incur any liability other than such obligations and liabilities as are dischargeable solely from the funds provided by this act. No obligation created or liability incurred pursuant to this act shall be an obligation or liability of any member or members of the commission, but shall be chargeable solely to the funds herein provided, nor shall any indebtedness created pursuant to this act be an indebtedness of the United States.

SEC. 10. All provisions of this act may be enforced, or the violation thereof prevented, by mandamus, injunction, or other appropriate remedy brought by the attorney general for the State of Oregon, the attorney general for the State of Washington, or the United States district attorney for any district in which the bridge may be located in part, in any court having competent jurisdiction of the subject matter and of the parties.

SEC. 11. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

SEC. 12. Section 1 of the act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of certain bridges and to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of other bridges over the navigable waters of the United States", approved June 10, 1930, as amended, is hereby repealed.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the Senate bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MOTT: Page 1 of the bill, S. 3502, after the word "bridge", in the title of the bill, strike out the word "Commission" and insert in lieu thereof "Board of Trustees."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, I offer a further amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MOTT: Strike out all of the provisions of the Senate bill following the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That in order to promote interstate commerce, improve postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, Guy Boyington, judge of the county court of Clatsop County, Oreg., and his successors in office, J. C. Ten Brook, mayor of the city of Astoria, Oreg., and his successors in office, and L. D. Williams, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners of Pacific County, Wash., and his successors in office, all as trustees, are hereby authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Columbia River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at Astoria, Clatsop County, Oreg., in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act; and said trustees shall own and hold said bridge in trust for Clatsop County, Oreg., Pacific County, Wash., and the city of Astoria, Oreg.; said trustees being known as and functioning as the Oregon-Washington Bridge Board of Trustees, and serving without compensation. Said board of trustees is hereby granted the right to assign, transfer, and mortgage all the rights, powers, and privileges conferred by this act.

"SEC. 2. There is hereby conferred upon said board of trustees all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use real estate and other property needed for the location, construction, maintenance, and operation of such bridge and its approaches as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation or expropriation of property for public purposes in such State.

"SEC. 3. The said board of trustees is hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over such bridge, and the rates of toll so fixed shall be the legal rates until changed by the Secretary of War under the authority contained in the act of March 23, 1906.

"SEC. 4. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of such bridge and its approaches, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible, under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 25 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls, or the rates of toll shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and its approaches; the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same; and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

"SEC. 5. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NAVY AND MARINE CORPS

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 4554, to amend section 4808 of the Revised Statutes (U.S.C., title 24, sec. 3) to prevent discriminatory reductions in pay of the retired personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the author explain the purpose of the bill?

Mr. HOEPPEL. The purpose of the bill is to extend the same hospital privileges and considerations to enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps that are today enjoyed by the Army.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the 1st day of the month following the passage of this act provisions of section 4808 of the Revised Statutes (U.S.C., title 24, sec. 3) are hereby amended to provide that the deduction of 20 cents per month from the pay of officers and men in the Navy shall not apply to transferred members of the Fleet Naval Reserve, Marine Corps Reserve, and officers and men on the retired lists of the Navy and Marine Corps while on inactive duty: Provided, That no existing rights of such personnel to admission and treatment in naval hospitals shall be affected by the provisions of this act.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS AGATE PASS, STATE OF WASHINGTON

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to no. 372 on the Consent Calendar, the bill (H.R. 9723) to revive and reenact the act entitled "An act authorizing the Bainbridge Island Chamber of Commerce, a corporation, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across Agate Pass connecting Bainbridge Island with the mainland in Kitsap County, State of Washington", and to substitute for the House bill the Senate bill S. 3604.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

Mr. MILLIGAN. Mr. Speaker, I object to returning to any of these previous bills.

ALIEN VETERANS OF THE WORLD WAR

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 6912, to amend the act entitled "An act to admit to the United States and to extend naturalization privileges to, alien veterans of the World War", approved May 26, 1926.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

UPPER MISSISSIPPI WILD LIFE AND FISH REFUGE

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9646, to authorize the acquisition of additional land for the Upper Mississippi River Wild Life and Fish Refuge.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the author of the bill how much this is going to cost?

Mr. BIERMANN. It will not cost anything.

Mr. ELTSE of California. How many acres are involved?

Mr. BIERMANN. It is an indefinite amount. The Sixty-eighth Congress authorized the expenditure of a million and a half dollars for this Upper Mississippi River Wild Life and Fish Refuge, and it confined the expenditure to land which is subject to overflow. This bill eliminates that part of the authorization which confined the purchases to lands subject to overflow. This does not add a dollar to the authorization and the average price of the land cannot be over $5 an acre.

Mr. ELTSE of California. It is overflow land?

Mr. BIERMANN. Under present law it has to be confined to overflow land. This bill allows the purchase of land along the hillsides and banks of the river. I may say that the Chief of the Biological Survey endorses this proposition and his predecessor also endorsed it.

Mr. ELTSE of California. What does this have to do with fish?

Mr. BIERMANN. This is the Upper Mississippi River Wild Life and Fish Refuge.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the Upper Mississippi River Wild Life and Fish Refuge Act (43 Stat. 650) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, gift, or lease, such areas of land, or of land and water, situated between Rock Island, Ill., and Wabasha, Minn., on either side of or upon islands in the Mississippi River which are not used for agricultural purposes, as he determines suitable for the purposes of this act."

With the following committee amendment:

On page 1, line 7, strike out the words "and directed."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EMERGENCY CONSERVATION WORK

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9619, to authorize the disposal of surplus personal property, including buildings, of the emergency conservation work.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. GOSS. Will the gentleman withhold that a minute?

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, this affects the disposition of the abandoned property involved in C.C.C. work.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I object.

UNIFORMITY IN LAWS AFFECTING LABOR AND INDUSTRIES

The Clerk called the resolution (H.J.Res. 267) to authorize the several States to negotiate compacts or agreements to promote greater uniformity in the laws of such States affecting labor and industries.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this joint resolution be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Will the gentleman withhold his request for a moment in order that I may make an explanation?

Mr. TRUAX. Why not let it go over until tomorrow?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

EMERGENCY FARM MORTGAGE ACT OF 1933

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 8389, to amend section 36 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933 and amendments thereto.

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker. I object.

Mr. DOXEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his objection and tell me the reason for his objection?

Mr. HOLMES. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ELTSE of California. Mr. Speaker, I object.

PIONEER NATIONAL MONUMENT, STATE OF KENTUCKY

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 3443, to provide for the creation of the Pioneer National Monument in the State of Kentucky, and for other purposes.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the author of the bill is here——

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I object.

CONSTRUCTION OF PUBLIC WORKS BY THE NAVY

The Clerk called the next bill, H.R. 9272, to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of certain public works, and for other purposes.

Mr. BAKEWELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object——

Mr. TARVER. I demand the regular order, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BAKEWELL. I object, Mr. Speaker.

AGRICULTURAL PURCHASING POWER

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 2674, to amend an act entitled "An act to relieve the existing national economic emergency by increasing agricultural purchasing power, to raise revenue for extraordinary expenses incurred by reason of such emergency, to provide emergency relief with respect to agricultural indebtedness, to provide for the orderly liquidation of joint-stock land banks, and for other purposes", approved May 12, 1933.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object——

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

Mr. HOLMES. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order there is no quorum present.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I want to know if this procedure is going to be followed, so that we are not going to be allowed an opportunity to have these bills explained.

Mr. TARVER. The gentleman is out of order. I demand the regular order.

Mr. BYRNS. Will the gentleman withhold his point of order while I make a brief statement?

Mr. HOLMES. I withhold it, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I am not going to stand here and insist that the House stay in session any longer. I have had only one purpose in view, and that has been to give the gentlemen here who have bills on the calendar an opportunity to have the House pass on them. I do not know whether you will have another opportunity at this session of Congress or not, and this is the reason I have been anxious to get as far along with the calendar as possible.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, I may say that this afternoon when the gentleman asked unanimous consent to take up the Private Calendar tomorrow I objected because at that time I wished to clear up something in the RECORD. If the gentleman renews his request at this time, I shall not object.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. May I ask the majority leader a question?

Mr. BYRNS. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I understood when the majority leader submitted his consent request this afternoon the understanding was we would continue with the Consent Calendar tomorrow.

Mr. BYRNS. We can only do that by taking a recess, and I shall see just what will happen when I make a motion to recess in a few minutes. Of course, if someone makes the point of no quorum——

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. We have passed over certain bills this afternoon so that we might consider them later.

Mr. BYRNS. And I think those gentlemen are entitled to have the bills considered, and I am willing to stay here until 2 o'clock in the morning, although I have not a single bill on either calendar.

Mr. BOILEAU. The gentleman could have the Consent Calendar brought up tomorrow by unanimous consent.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it shall be in order tomorrow to consider bills on the Private Calendar unobjected to, beginning at the star.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman from Tennessee advise us at what hour we are to meet?

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. This is the regular order.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object to inquire about the hour of convening tomorrow.

Mr. BYRNS. I have not submitted that motion. I am simply asking now, regardless of the hour at which we assemble, that we may consider bills on the Private Calendar unobjected to. I may say to my friend that if we meet at 11 o'clock in the morning, we will adjourn sooner tomorrow night, and while I am not going to do it tonight, I am going to ask a majority of this House to stay here tomorrow night to make up for the hour we will lose on the calendar, because I do think at the heels of the session Members ought to be willing to stay here and transact the business of the House and give the Members an opportunity to have their bills considered. This is the only reason I am submitting this request now.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object——

Mr. BYRNS. I am going to move to recess until 11 o'clock tomorrow, and it is up to the House to decide whether or not they will adopt the motion, I will say to my friend from Ohio.

Mr. AYERS of Montana. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, does this unanimous-consent request mean that the Private Calendar will be taken up tomorrow after consideration of the Consent Calendar is completed, including the bills we have passed over today?

The SPEAKER. It simply makes the calling of the Private Calendar in order.

Mr. BYRNS. And if a recess is taken, the calling of the Consent Calendar tomorrow will be in order.

Mr. TRUAX. I want to say to the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee that in the closing days of this session we ought to be considering some legislation for the benefit of all the people of this country, and not for the few who have bills on the Private Calendar and the Consent Calendar.

We ought to be considering bills to relieve the farmers of the country, so that they will not have their farms confiscated every day.

JEAN BAPTISTE DE LA SALLE

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, in the year 1651 in Rheims, France, was born a son to the wife of a wealthy lawyer of that famous city. This son was christened Jean Baptiste de la Salle. To his youthful and adult education was devoted all the interest of his well-educated parents and all of their resources. From the noble University of Rheims, in France, young La Salle received his degree of master of arts and later his doctorate degree.

Though every opportunity was open to young La Salle to follow in the routine of the higher classes of his time, he chose the church as his field of endeavor, and his father obtained for him a canonry in the cathedral at Rheims. Here La Salle established a school where he gave free instruction to poor children. This enterprise grew beyond La Salle's dearest hopes, and about him gathered a devoted band of young and enthusiastic assistants.

La Salle, following his inspiration, resolved to devote his life entirely to education. In his day there was no middle class. Persons were either rich or poor, and the poor were very poor. Education of the poor was a most radical step, and bitterly opposed by those who wished to keep them in a chattel-like condition of life, tethered to a bare subsistence and with no future possible, except that to which "their lot in life and Providence had called them", as it was impiously expressed by a sycophant of the upper classes of that day.

La Salle and his assistants organized themselves into a community under La Salle's leadership, and this community spread throughout France. A training school for teachers, the Collège de Saint-Yon, was set up in Rouen and was so successful that it was recognized by the Pope of that time, in the short space of 6 years after the death of La Salle, under the official title of "Brothers of the Christian Schools." The members of this order took the usual monastic vows but did not aspire to the priesthood.

For the first century of its existence the brotherhood confined its activities to France, and the education they inculcated in the young was responsible for the increase in intelligence in the French people in that century, by which they were lifted from serfs of the soil and shop to rational, thinking beings. During the nineteenth century the brotherhood and their system spread throughout Europe and found a hearty welcome and support in the United States, where it found a fertile field among those who had left the shackles of European life behind to find the freedom of thought, speech, and action guaranteed in the United States.

La Salle was canonized in 1900 and became St. Jean de la Salle, commonly called "St. La Salle", and as such is venerated by Roman Catholics the world over. His canonization helped forward the educational work of which he was the pioneer, but before he was raised to that eminence there had been established in the city of New York, in the Fourteenth Congressional District, which I have the honor to represent in Congress, the La Salle Academy, which chose a site at 44 Second Street and for nearly a hundred years has there maintained the traditions so nobly set up by St. La Salle. The academy has become known to the public, not alone of its vicinage but throughout the United States, as "Old La Salle."

Many of our leading citizens received their education at Old La Salle, among them His Eminence, Patrick Cardinal Hayes, of New York, and the other, His Eminence, George Cardinal Mundelein. Another alumnus is Monsignor Lavelle, vicar-general of the Archdiocese of New York. Former Gov. Alfred Emanuel Smith, of New York, one time candidate for the Presidency of the United States, just 50 years ago was presented by Old La Salle with a medal for oratory—the first medal for that accomplishment that he ever received and now among his dearest treasures.

This year Old La Salle will inaugurate a world-wide celebration in honor of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the first institute of popular education by Jean Baptiste de la Salle.

St. La Salle was not the only member of his family that attained eminence in public life. Two famous American explorers, Pere Marquette, whose statue adorns the Statuary Hall in the Capitol of the United States, placed there in grateful remembrance of his work by the State of Louisiana, and René Robert Cavalier, Sieur de la Salle, the discoverer of the Illinois, Ohio, and lower Mississippi Rivers and the explorer of the Great Lakes.

Indirectly Old La Salle cherishes the memory of these men though not to the same extent as they do that of their patron saint.

Old La Salle has carried forward to a well-rounded system the plan of group education originated by St. La Salle. La Salle found great opposition among the wealthy classes to any education in group form, preferring the teaching of their youth to be individual and through tutors. To achieve group education it is necessary to have the service of properly trained teachers, and St. La Salle established the first normal school for training these teachers. Scarcity of books handicapped La Salle's work, so he established circulating libraries. The Academy of La Salle follows along these lines and emphasizes the thorough education of those who are, in their turn, to teach the young.

Old La Salle Academy, at Second Street and Second Avenue in New York, will be the focus of the La Salle anniversary celebration in the United States because that institution is considered the cradle of the Christian Brothers' schools throughout America. It is proud of such schools as St. Mary's College, of California; Manhattan College, of New York; La Salle College, of Philadelphia; St. Thomas' College, of Scranton; De La Salle College, of Maryland, and hundreds of primary and secondary schools which today valiantly serve the cause of education among the poor.

In 1900, at the time of the canonization of La Salle by Pope Leo XIII, and this year, on the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of St. La Salle's contribution to the cause of universal education, the friends and alumni of Old La Salle plan to rebuild the ancient edifices that have served the academy so well, and to do it in the same way that public funds were raised for the completion of the Washington Monument and for the pedestal of the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor by accepting contributions from 1 penny upward.

In a recent message to Brother Andrew, director of Old La Salle, Cardinal Hayes pronounced a blessing on all who will cooperate to make a success of this laudable project. The cardinal wrote:

> The movement has my fullest approval. Nothing could give greater joy to those who have studied within the walls of the venerable old institution than to find it renewing its youth in a modern structure for a continuance of its noble career in the field of education.

Old La Salle Academy has contributed to the great intellectual and spiritual development of our Nation. We pray God that the New La Salle Academy when completed will carry along the beautiful and magnificent traditions of this glorious institution of the past, to achieve and realize the tremendous possibilities for public service to the people of our Republic in the future. [Applause.]

TEACHERS' OATH

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by including House Joint Resolution 339, introduced by me.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following joint resolution introduced by me:

[H.J.Res. 339, 73d Cong., 2d sess.]

Joint resolution memorializing the States of the Union to require the taking of an oath of allegiance to the Constitution of the United States by all teachers of the public schools and other institutions of learning, and for other purposes

Resolved, etc., That it is the sense of the Senate and the House of Representatives that each teacher, officer, and employee of every public school or other public educational institution in the United States shall, before assuming the duties of his position or office, be required by law to take substantially the following oath:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

State of ———
County of ———

I, ——— ——— (name in full), having been duly appointed by the Board of Education of (district, city, or town) an employee of the public schools of the (district, city, or town), do solemnly swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States and faithfully discharge the duties of the aforesaid office, and that I have neither promised nor paid, nor has anyone to my knowledge either promised or paid, any monetary or other valuable consideration to any person for influence or other assistance in securing my appointment or promotion.

Sworn to and subscribed to before me this — day of ———, 19—.

———.
(Signature of applicant)

SEC. 2. The Secretary of State is authorized and directed to transmit a copy of this resolution to the Governor of each State and Territory.

THE ROOSEVELT FARM PROBLEM

Mr. ARENS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ARENS. Mr. Speaker, I was 1 of 18 this afternoon who voted against the bill exempting 2,000 pounds of pork from the processing tax. I had no opportunity to explain my vote at that time. I wish to say that under that bill, if that amount of pork is exempted, it will not enable the A.A.A. to fulfill its contracts under the corn and hog program. Hogs selling in the stockyards will be subject to the processing tax, and will fix the price of pork. The bill will not add one cent to the price of hogs. It will make bootleggers of the farmers. It is a shot in the back. I do not like to see the agricultural program killed off in that way.

Mr. Speaker, under this act every farmer that raises hogs is going to have 2,000 pounds of live hogs, besides what he needs for his own use, exempted from the processing tax, if he does not sell them in the public stockyards or to the packer. It will cut in two the receipts through the processing tax; and, unless money is appropriated, it will not enable the Agricultural Department to fulfill its contract under the corn and hog agreement. All hogs sold in stockyards will pay the processing tax. They will fix the price of hogs as in the past. The farmer who sells his 2,000 pounds locally will have to sell at this price, plus the cost of killing the hogs. It will not add one cent to the price of hogs per pound. If the farmer sells to the local butcher, the butcher, who buys part of his pork from the packer, will add the tax to the price of pork chops, although he will not pay it to the farmer. The local butcher, although he is going to make a small extra profit on locally purchased hogs, will lose by the farmer selling hogs direct to his trade.

The farmer who has a hog or two more than the exempted 2,000 pounds will be apt to "bootleg" them and land in jail. There cannot be any benefit to anybody, not even the packer.

The processing tax has brought no benefit to the farmer. We should repeal it completely and appropriate enough money to fulfill the corn-hog contracts now made, or have the repeal go into effect on a day when enough money has been collected to honor these contracts. We should not destroy the agricultural program by such underhanded methods as proposed in this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD, and I also ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD a speech delivered by my colleague, Mr. MAGNUS JOHNSON, over the radio the other night.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ARENS. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following radio address of my colleague, Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota, delivered on June 4:

To discuss fully the present farm situation and the measures so far adopted by the special and regular sessions of the Seventy-third Congress is impossible in the time allotted me, and I shall only endeavor to point out the high lights of the President's program in trying to raise farm prices toward parity with the things the farmer must buy to maintain his home and property.

The wide difference that has existed since 1914 between the purchasing power of the farmer and what he receives in return for the sale of his products after his numerous fixed charges have been deducted is known to every American farmer. It has been impressed upon him every time he ships his products to market. It has been impressed upon him every time he goes to town to purchase the necessities for his house and family, and God knows he has not even had the money to buy the bare necessities.

This great gap in the orderly marketing of the farmer's products had been widening steadily until 1932 and the outset of 1933 it had reached such gigantic proportions that not a single farmer was able to withstand the pressure of low prices, sagging markets, and the far from cost of production for the things he raises for sale. In April 1933, just after the President took the oath of office, the farmer was compelled to pay exactly twice as much in dollars and cents for the things he had to buy, whatever they may have been, than what he was getting for the crops he was raising on his farm. It does not take college professors or trained economists to tell the average farmer that under such conditions he can not long stay in the business of farming. Could any merchant, no matter how strictly he attended to his business, continue to sell his wares for less than what it cost him to buy them? No, my good friends; it would not be long before he would be bankrupt and foreclosed, and this is what is actually happening now to thousands of farmers, a great number of whom will never be able to recoup their finances to such a state where they can again farm successfully for a livelihood.

An earlier political administration paralleled farm prosperity with high tariffs; they clamored that the American market must be protected; and yet when they were granted that authority, did they protect the American farmer? No. They sold him out. And how they sold him out! Industrial giants reaped billions in profits while everywhere in the Farm Belt our farmers, unorganized and misled, were mulcted out of even a cost of production. For 8 years the steal went on, farm prices dropping and prices on manufactured goods going up. At every turn of the road, farm mortgages were being foreclosed and interest obligations on new debts were mounting. For relief to agriculture, our Government floated huge sums to be lent the farmer.

This same previous administration, representing that once great political party, kept making idle pledges to the farmer and continuing their money-loaning system. But they knew that this would never solve the farmer's problems and they knew that he needed more than loans. What was needed and what he could not get was production control coupled with Government supervision of markets. They knew that this must come about and yet they failed and miserably so; and at this point may I congratulate the effort now being exercised by the President in trying to establish parity through a logical and orderly planned production-control program. However, I must state here that great impetus can be given this control plan by the enactment of the Frazier-Lemke bill to refinance farm indebtedness at a low rate of interest and a scaling down of the farm-mortgage debt. This load must be taken from the farmer's back if he is to make reasonable recovery. In a speech made a few weeks ago, I urged such refinance legislation, and I urge every farmer within the sound of my voice tonight to carry on the fight for such a bill to be passed by the National Congress, and I hope that the President will heed the farmer's plea for farm-relief legislation of this type.

No matter what political spellbinders may tell you, the farmer's cash income has increased with the passage of the Smith-Jones Farm Act in the special session called by President Roosevelt. At the present time, with the program still in the formulative stage on some crops included in the emergency act, the farmer has received many millions of dollars in benefit payments, and mind you, they are not benefit in the sense of charity. No; they are actual earnings no matter what persons opposed to the President's farm-relief program might say. They represent earnings because they are based on efforts toward price fixing.

And now when the farmers ask for a reasonable control and supervision of markets, meat packers and food processors immediately raise the cry that the American farmer is being made a serf, he is being dictated to, he is being ground under foot by Government domination, and that he has been made the ignorant subject of a dictator. Such is not the case. The farmers themselves, I am sure, will realize this. The farmers know that when the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill became a law that their foreign market which absorbed normal surpluses was lost and that they had been duped. If they did not realize it then, they most certainly do now. They know now that the passage of that unjust, unfair, and despicable measure that was sponsored by Mellon, Grundy, and Vare, and which placed a high tariff wall around the United States, meant the loss of foreign trade. It meant that competitive purchasing of foreign goods was lost; it meant an era of high prices for everything the laborer in the city and the farmer in the country had to buy; and yet G.O.P. political leaders said it was wisdom, it was building prosperity, it was making America for Americans.

Monopolistic control of price fixing by industry which is in complete control and which is forcing high prices on manufactured goods down the throats of underpaid laborers and struggling farmers has made it doubly hard for the President to push his fight for parity prices for the farmer. Nor can he shake off this grip on Government that the industrial leaders now hold and are enforcing. Continuing along a definite plan started by capitalists bent on choking independent business men, beating down wages, lengthening working hours, and pegging farm prices far below the cost of producing them, these industrial giants will not yield until they crash, and the great majority of the people will welcome the breaking down of this type of monopolistic control which will erase gigantic mergers that throw thousands of people out of employment and onto the city's and county's bread lines.

Today throughout the Nation alarming conditions of unrest among the people have been breaking out. Farmers have congregated in angry groups preventing foreclosures on farm mortgages, and in the cities both organized and unorganized labor have been striking for better wages and shorter hours. These conditions are a direct result of capital's vicious control over the people. These unhappy conditions will continue to exert themselves unless radical changes in the system are made. Call it under any name you like, label any way you see fit, these conditions must change and change soon; neither the farmer nor the laborer will continue to tolerate much longer such domination of our natural resources, our wealth, and private ownership of public services that have been stolen from them. Everywhere throughout the Nation evidences of a desire to break away from capital's grip on the financial structure is displaying itself by the rank and file. The time has arrived for greater recognition of human rights.

When agriculture fails, the Nation fails. I am of the firm opinion that the President knows this. I am hopeful that the gradual rise or increase in the cash income and spending power of the farmer will continue. Briefly speaking, the President's program has pushed the farmer's purchasing power up nearly 20 percent, and this increase would be even greater, figured in terms of parity price, if profiteering by industry under the N.R.A. had been severely dealt with by N.R.A. officials and not allowed to get out of control. Although I shall not deal with this phase of the President's program, I cannot too strongly urge administration officials to crack down on these capitalists that are accumulating fortunes in profits while labor and agriculture are still suffering from the terrific blow dealt them during the past 5 years.

Granted broad, sweeping powers under the Smith-Jones Act, I hope the Secretary of Agriculture will carry out the authority of this act that has been so granted him. In administering this agricultural adjustment measure I hope that the Secretary will never lose sight of these five major principles which I believe are absolutely necessary for substantial farm recovery. First, the farmer be granted cost of production plus a reasonable profit; that, secondly, the program for acreage control and the rental basis features be continued at least until definite stabilization sets in; third, that price levels on major crops be maintained at the 1910–14 basis; fourth, that processors be so taxed as to aid in forming a definite price-fixing feature and that this be maintained in such a way as to aid in determining the price level to be paid for the farmers' crops; and, fifth, that the Secretary should not lose sight of, in dealing with those processors and packers that do not wish to help the farmer, that all wealth comes from the soil, and by definite and orderly control of those who till the land can they be given a fair deal.

There is no question in my mind but that this carefully and well-laid plan of production control will be seriously retarded because of the wide-spread and general drought now wreaking havoc throughout the Farm Belt. Although farmers and governmental agencies, in cooperation with Congress, are doing everything possible to alleviate the suffering and distress in this area, I do not believe there is anyone that can foretell the exact outcome of this extensive drought.

Thousands of acres that had been designated as "idle acres" under the Agricultural Adjustment Act will be thrown into production and used for forage crops and for the raising of stock feed. That this maladjustment created by this unforeseen drought will seriously affect prices and will perhaps cause a wide-spread breach in an extensive corn-hog and wheat-control plan is evident. Livestock prices will unquestionably be hit the hardest as a result of this dry wave, and unless rain falls over this great area thousands upon thousands of cattle and horses will die and untold thousands of head of cattle will be disposed of to the Department of Agriculture, now conducting a cattle-buying program at a frightful loss.

During the latter part of last week, I introduced into the House a bill providing for a moratorium on the payment of interest on all farm indebtedness and also providing for a moratorium on mortgage foreclosures in the drought areas. This legislation, now being considered by the House Agricultural Committee, will be a boon to the farmers in this wide area now stricken by the worst drought of the century.

I hope that the farm program started under President Roosevelt and enacted into law by the Seventy-third Congress is given a fair trial. However, a unified farm organization must be effected at all costs if the farmers are to get a square deal from any administration. They must be solid in their demands and they must present them with the same militancy that other groups do that come before the National Government seeking aid. The farmer has too long maintained himself as an individual, and as such he has sought legislation. He must organize to protect himself. Big business found this out years ago; and because of their completeness in this respect, they have been successful in keeping the small-store owner, the local merchant, and the farmer from doing likewise. They know that as soon as labor organizes, local merchants organize, and the farmers organize their day of highjacking and racketeering is over.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin, indefinitely, on account of injury.

ENROLLED BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill and a joint resolution of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H.R. 9322. An act to provide for the establishment, operation, and maintenance of foreign-trade zones in ports of entry of the United States, to expedite and encourage foreign commerce, and for other purposes; and

H.J.Res. 352. Joint resolution to provide funds to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate with States in control of chinch bugs.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on June 7, 1934, present to the President, for his approval, bills and a joint resolution of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 8687. An act to amend the Tariff Act of 1930;

H.R. 9280. An act relating to deposits in the United States of public moneys of the government of the Philippine Islands;

H.R. 9322. An act to provide for the establishment, operation, and maintenance of foreign trade zones in ports of entry of the United States, to expedite and encourage foreign commerce, and for other purposes; and

H.J.Res. 352. Joint resolution to provide funds to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to cooperate with States in control of chinch bugs.

RECESS

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House stand in recess until 11 o'clock tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 45 minutes p.m.) the House stood in recess until tomorrow, Friday, June 8, 1934, at 11 o'clock a.m.

COMMITTEE HEARING

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

(Friday, June 8, 10 a.m.)

Hearing on H.R. 9596—railroad pensions.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. MILLIGAN: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H.R. 9827. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the State highway commission to construct, maintain, and operate a highway bridge across Eleven Points River, in section 17, township 23 north, range 2 west, approximately 12 miles east of Alton, on route no. 42, Oregon County, Mo.; with amendment (Rept. No. 1911). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. MILLIGAN: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H.R. 8893. A bill relating to the construction, maintenance, and operation by the city of Davenport, Iowa, of a bridge across the Mississippi River, at or near Tenth Street, in Bettendorf, State of Iowa; with amendment (Rept. No. 1912). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. MILLIGAN: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H.R. 9826. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the State highway commission to construct, maintain, and operate a highway bridge across Eleven Points River, in section 17, township 23 north, range 2 west, approximately 12 miles east of Alton, on route no. 42, Oregon County, Mo.; with amendment (Rept. No. 1913). Referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. BLACK: Committee on Claims. H.R. 7721. A bill for the relief of George S. Van Schaick as superintendent of insurance of the State of New York, and as liquidator of Equitable Casualty & Surety Co., in liquidation; with amendment (Rept. No. 1899). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BLACK: Committee on Claims. H.R. 7722. A bill for the relief of George S. Van Schaick, as superintendent of insurance of the State of New York, and as liquidator of Equitable Casualty & Surety Co., in liquidation; with amendment (Rept. No. 1900). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BLACK: Committee on Claims. H.R. 7723. A bill for the relief of George S. Van Schaick, as superintendent of insurance of the State of New York, and as liquidator of Equitable Casualty & Surety Co., in liquidation; with amendment (Rept. No. 1901). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BLACK: Committee on Claims. H.R. 7724. A bill for the relief of George S. Van Schaick, as superintendent of insurance of the State of New York, and as liquidator of Equitable Casualty & Surety Co., in liquidation; with amendment (Rept. No. 1902). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BLACK: Committee on Claims. H.R. 7737. A bill for the relief of Alta Melvin and Thomas Melvin; with amendment (Rept. No. 1903). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. SCHULTE: Committee on Claims. H.R. 3483. A bill for the relief of Anthony Nowakowski; with amendment (Rept. No. 1904). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BLACK: Committee on Claims. H.R. 6115. A bill granting compensation to the estate of Thomas Peraglia, deceased; with amendment (Rept. No. 1905). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WALTER: Committee on Claims. H.R. 7622. A bill granting compensation to Walter F. Northrop; with amendment (Rept. No. 1906). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BLACK: Committee on Claims. H.R. 7719. A bill for the relief of George S. Van Schaick, as superintendent of insurance of the State of New York, and as liquidator of Equitable Casualty & Surety Co., in liquidation; with amendment (Rept. No. 1907). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. MONTET: Committee on Military Affairs. H.R. 7443. A bill for the relief of Thomas Lee Mitchum; without amendment (Rept. No. 1908). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BLACK: Committee on Claims. H.R. 9053. A bill to authorize the Comptroller General of the United States to settle and adjust the claim of the George A. Fuller Co.; with amendment (Rept. No. 1909). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BLACK: Committee on Claims. H.R. 9537. A bill authorizing the payment of compensation to Fred L. Applewhite for the death of his son, Fred L. Applewhite, Jr.; with amendment (Rept. No. 1910). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. DOBBINS: A bill (H.R. 9866) amending the act of May 23, 1930, authorizing the Postmaster General to impose demurrage charges on undelivered collect-on-delivery parcels; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. LAMNECK: A bill (H.R. 9867) amending the Independent Offices Appropriation Act of 1935; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. McSWAIN: A bill (H.R. 9868) to authorize an appropriation for the construction and installation of safe ammunition storage facilities at Edgewood Arsenal, Md.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WADSWORTH: A bill (H.R. 9869) to make further provision concerning the method of amending the Constitution of the United States; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. VINSON of Georgia: Joint resolution (H.J.Res. 367) to prohibit limitations on the establishment of certain industries; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, a memorial was presented and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Louisiana, memorializing Congress regarding the establishment of a national memorial park on the Battlefield of Chalmette in commemoration of the Battle of New Orleans; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CROWTHER: A bill (H.R. 9870) granting a pension to Lester Aumick; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. FORD: A bill (H.R. 9871) to amend an act entitled "An act for the relief of Arabella E. Bodkin", approved May 21, 1934; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HOWARD: A bill (H.R. 9872) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay Paul Ashford, of Winnebago, Nebr., for funeral services and supplies furnished to Indians; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. McCORMACK: A bill (H.R. 9873) for the relief of Charles S. Perkins; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SNYDER: A bill (H.R. 9874) granting a pension to Michael Gannon; to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

5022. By Mr. LEHR: Petition of the Farmers' Union of Britton, Mich., urging support of the Frazier-Lemke bill; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

5023. By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of the National Gauge Corporation, G. M. Cowenhoven, president, Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the Wagner labor-disputes bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5024. Also, petition of Norman Winnall, of Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the Wagner bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5025. Also, petition of the Broadway Merchants' Chamber of Commerce, Inc., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the Wagner bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5026. Also, petition of H. S. Chardavoyne, Inc., Brooklyn, N.Y., urging postponement of the Wagner labor bill until the next session of Congress; to the Committee on Labor.

5027. Also, petition of Scranton & Lehigh Coal Co., George J. Patterson, president, Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the amended Wagner labor disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5028. Also, petition of the Burton-Dixie Corporation, Keith Wallace, sales manager, bedding division, Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the Wagner labor bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5029. Also, petition of the Kroger Grocery & Baking Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, opposing the amended Wagner labor bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5030. Also, petition of Edward F. Caldwell & Co., Inc., New York City, opposing the passage of the Wagner labor disputes bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5031. Also, petition of M. Lowenstein & Sons, Inc., New York City, opposing the 3-cent tax per pound on coconut oil; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

5032. Also, petition of Chase Bag Co., New York City, opposing the passage of Senate bill 3326; to the Committee on Labor.

5033. Also, petition of Holland Laundry, Inc., Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the Wagner labor bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5034. Also, telegram from the Torrington Co. of New York, opposing the Wagner bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5035. Also, petition of the Peoples National Bank of Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the Wagner bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5036. Also, petition of the Cooking & Heating Appliance Manufacturing Industry, Washington, D.C., opposing the Wagner labor disputes bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5037. Also, petition of the Burton-Dixie Corporation, E. F. Rusboldt, manager bedding division, Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the Wagner bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5038. Also, petition of the New York Towboat Exchange, New York City, opposing the Wagner labor bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5039. Also, petition of the National Association of Pattern Manufacturers, Chicago, Ill., opposing the Wagner labor bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5040. By Mr. RUDD: Petition of Chase Bag Co., New York City, opposing the passage of Senate bill 3326; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

5041. Also, petition of the Kroger Grocery & Baking Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, opposing the passage of the Wagner disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5042. Also, petition of the National Association of Pattern Makers, Chicago, Ill., opposing the new Wagner disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5043. Also, petition of the Cooking and Heating Appliance Manufacturing Industry, Washington, D.C., opposing the new Wagner disputes bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5044. Also, petition of Edward F. Caldwell & Co., New York City, opposing the new Wagner disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5045. Also, petition of the Holland Laundry, Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the passage of the Wagner disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5046. Also, petition of the Peoples National Bank, Brooklyn, N.Y., opposing the new Wagner disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5047. Also, petition of the Torrington Co. of New York, protesting against the passage of the new Wagner disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

5048. Also, petition of the New York Tow Boat Exchange, New York City, opposing the passage of the Wagner bill (S. 2926); to the Committee on Labor.

5049. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the Profile Timber Corporation, opposing House bill 8301; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

5050. Also, petition of the Woman's Press Club of New York City, opposing House bill 9323; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

5051. Also, petition of the senior branch of the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin Mary of Mary Help of Christians Church of the city of New York; to the Committee on Merchant Marine, Radio, and Fisheries.

5052. Also, petition of the city of Clinton, Iowa, regarding the construction of Locks and Dam No. 13; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

5053. Also, petition of numerous railway employees of southern Illinois, supporting House bills 9596 and 9597; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

5054. Also, petition of W. H. Davis and others, supporting House bill 9596; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

5055. Also, petition of Henry Cabral and others, supporting House bill 9596; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

5056. Also, petition of the Junior Holy Name Society of St. Margaret Mary's Church, Bronx, N.Y.; to the Committee on Merchant Marine, Radio, and Fisheries.

5057. Also, petition of the Railroad Employees' National Pension Association, Inc., supporting Senate bill 3231 and House bills 9596 and 9597; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

5058. By Mr. GOODWIN: Petition of W. S. Wilson, of Hudson, N.Y., opposing the National Industrial Act; to the Committee on Labor.

5059. By Mr. MILLARD: Petition signed by railway employees of the New York Central Railroad Co., urging the passage of House bill 9596 and amendments to the Railway Labor Act (H.R. 9689); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

SENATE

FRIDAY, JUNE 8, 1934

(Legislative day of Wednesday, June 6, 1934)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On motion of Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Thursday, June 7, was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT—APPROVAL OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who announced that the President had approved and signed the following acts and joint resolution:

On June 4, 1934:

S. 2623. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to require the erection of fire escapes in certain buildings in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes", approved March 19, 1906, as amended.

On June 5, 1934:

S. 2745. An act to provide for changing the time of the meeting of Congress, the beginning of the terms of Members of Congress, and the time when the electoral votes shall be counted, and for other purposes; and

S. 3290. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole for the District of Columbia and to determine its functions, and for other purposes", approved July 15, 1932.

On June 6, 1934:

S. 308. An act to authorize the award of a decoration for distinguished service to Harry H. Horton;

S. 1073. An act for the relief of E. Walter Edwards;

S. 1081. An act for the relief of McKimmon & McKee, Inc.;

S. 1429. An act for the relief of Anthony J. Lynn;

S. 1932. An act for the relief of Alfred Hohenlohe, Alexander Hohenlohe, Konrad Hohenlohe, and Viktor Hohenlohe by removing cloud on title;

S. 2342. An act for the relief of I. T. McRee;

S. 2748. An act to authorize an appropriation for the reimbursement of Stelio Vassiliadis;

S. 2798. An act for the relief of Nephew K. Clark;

S. 3128. An act to pay certain fees to Maude G. Nicholson, widow of George A. Nicholson, late a United States commissioner;

S. 3307. An act for the relief of W. H. Le Duc; and

S.J.Res. 123. Joint resolution empowering certain agents authorized by the Secretary of Agriculture to administer oaths to applicants for tax-exemption certificates under the Cotton Act of 1934.

On June 7, 1934:

S. 3586. An act for the relief of George A. Fox.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Costigan	Kean	Robinson, Ark.
Ashurst	Couzens	King	Robinson, Ind.
Austin	Cutting	La Follette	Russell
Bachman	Davis	Lewis	Schall
Bailey	Dickinson	Logan	Sheppard
Bankhead	Dieterich	Lonergan	Shipstead
Barkley	Dill	Long	Smith
Black	Erickson	McCarran	Stelwer
Bone	Fess	McGill	Stephens
Borah	Fletcher	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Brown	Frazier	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Bulkley	George	Murphy	Thompson
Bulow	Gibson	Neely	Townsend
Byrd	Glass	Norbeck	Tydings
Byrnes	Goldsborough	Norris	Vandenberg
Capper	Gore	Nye	Wagner
Caraway	Hale	O'Mahoney	Walcott
Carey	Harrison	Overton	Walsh
Clark	Hatch	Patterson	Wheeler
Connally	Hatfield	Pittman	White
Coolidge	Hayden	Pope
Copeland	Johnson	Reynolds

Mr. LEWIS. I announce the absence of the Senator from California [Mr. MCADOO], occasioned by illness; and the absence of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY], the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], who are necessarily detained. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. FESS. I desire to announce that the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED], the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF], the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES], and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR] are necessarily absent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

PROGRAM OF THE ADMINISTRATION (H.DOC. NO. 397)

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

You are completing a work begun in March 1933, which will be regarded for a long time as a splendid justification of the vitality of representative government. I greet you and express once more my appreciation of the cooperation which has proved so effective.

Only a small number of the items of our program remain to be enacted, and I am confident that you will pass on them before adjournment. Many other pending measures are sound in conception, but must for lack of time or of adequate information be deferred to the session of the next Congress. In the meantime we can well seek to adjust many of these measures into certain larger plans of governmental policy for the future of the Nation.

You and I, as the responsible directors of these policies and actions, may with good reason look to the future with confidence just as we may look to the past 15 months with reasonable satisfaction.

On the side of relief we have extended material aid to millions of our fellow citizens.

On the side of recovery we have helped to lift agriculture and industry from a condition of utter prostration.

But in addition to these immediate tasks of relief and recovery we have properly, necessarily, and with overwhelming approval determined to safeguard these tasks by rebuilding many of the structures of our economic life and of reorganizing it in order to prevent a recurrence of collapse.

It is childish to speak of recovery first and reconstruction afterward. In the very nature of the processes of recovery we must avoid the destructive influences of the past. We have shown the world that democracy has within it the elements necessary to its own salvation.

Less hopeful countries where the ways of democracy are very new may revert to the autocracy of yesterday. The American people can be trusted to decide wisely upon the measures taken by the Government to eliminate the abuses of the past and to proceed in the direction of the greater good for the greater number.

Our task of reconstruction does not require the creation of new and strange values. It is rather the finding of the way once more to known, but to some degree forgotten, ideals and values. If the means and details are in some instances new, the objectives are as permanent as human nature.

Among our objectives I place the security of the men, women, and children of the Nation first.

This security for the individual and for the family concerns itself primarily with three factors. People want decent homes to live in; they want to locate them where they can engage in productive work; and they want some safeguard against misfortunes which cannot be wholly eliminated in this man-made world of ours.

In a simple and primitive civilization homes were to be had for the building. The bounties of nature in a new land provided crude but adequate food and shelter. When land failed our ancestors moved on to better land. It was always possible to push back the frontier, but the frontier has now disappeared. Our task involves the making of a better living out of the lands that we have.

So, also, security was attained in the earlier days through the interdependence of members of families upon each other and of the families within a small community upon each other. The complexities of great communities and of organized industry make less real these simple means of security. Therefore, we are compelled to employ the active interest of the Nation as a whole through government in order to encourage a greater security for each individual who composes it.

With the full cooperation of the Congress we have already made a serious attack upon the problem of housing in our great cities. Millions of dollars have been appropriated for housing projects by Federal and local authorities, often with the generous assistance of private owners. The task thus begun must be pursued for many years to come. There is ample private money for sound housing projects; and the Congress, in a measure now before you, can stimulate the lending of money for the modernization of existing homes and the building of new homes. In pursuing this policy we are working toward the ultimate objective of making it possible for American families to live as Americans should.

In regard to the second factor, economic circumstances and the forces of nature themselves dictate the need of constant thought as to the means by which a wise government may help the necessary readjustment of the population. We cannot fail to act when hundreds of thousands of families live where there is no reasonable prospect of a living in the years to come. This is especially a national problem. Unlike most of the leading nations of the world, we have so far failed to create a national policy for the development of our land and water resources and for their better use by those people who cannot make a living in their present positions. Only thus can we permanently eliminate many millions of people from the relief rolls on which their names are now found.

The extent of the usefulness of our great natural inheritance of land and water depends on our mastery of it. We are now so organized that science and invention have given us the means of more extensive and effective attacks upon the problems of nature than ever before. We have learned to utilize water power, to reclaim deserts, to recreate forests, and to redirect the flow of population. Until recently we have proceeded almost at random, making many mistakes.

There are many illustrations of the necessity for such planning. Some sections of the Northwest and Southwest, which formerly existed as grazing land, were spread over with a fair crop of grass. On this land the water table lay a dozen or 20 feet below the surface, and newly arrived settlers put this land under the plow. Wheat was grown by dry-farming methods. But in many of these places today the water table under the land has dropped to 50 or 60 feet below the surface, and the topsoil in dry seasons is blown away like driven snow. Falling rain, in the absence of grass roots, filters through the soil, runs off the surface, or is quickly reabsorbed into the atmosphere. Many million acres of such land must be restored to grass or trees if we are to prevent a new and man-made Sahara.

At the other extreme there are regions originally arid, which have been generously irrigated by human engineering. But in some of these places the hungry soil has not only absorbed the water necessary to produce magnificent crops, but so much more water that the water table has now risen to the point of saturation, thereby threatening the future crops upon which many families depend.

Human knowledge is great enough today to give us assurance of success in carrying through the abandonment of many millions of acres for agricultural use and the replacing of these acres with others on which at least a living can be earned.

The rate of speed that we can usefully employ in this attack on impossible social and economic conditions must be determined by businesslike procedure. It would be absurd to undertake too many projects at once or to do a patch of work here and another there without finishing the whole of an individual project. Obviously the Government cannot undertake national projects in every one of the 435 congressional districts, or even in every one of the 48 States. The magnificent conception of national realism and national needs that this Congress has built up has not only set an example of large vision for all time but has almost consigned to oblivion our ancient habit of pork-barrel legislation; to that we cannot and must not revert. When the next Congress convenes I hope to be able to present to it a carefully considered national plan covering the development and the human use of our natural resources of land and water over a long period of years.

In considering the cost of such a program it must be clear to all of us that for many years to come we shall be engaged in the task of rehabilitating many hundreds of thousands of our American families. In so doing we shall be decreasing future costs for the direct relief of destitution. I hope that it will be possible for the Government to adopt as a clear policy to be carried out over a long period the appropriation of a large, definite, annual sum so that work may proceed year after year not under the urge of temporary expediency but in pursuance of the well-considered rounded objective.

The third factor relates to security against the hazards and vicissitudes of life. Fear and worry based on unknown danger contribute to social unrest and economic demoralization. If, as our Constitution tells us, our Federal Government was established, among other things, "to promote the general welfare", it is our plain duty to provide for that security upon which welfare depends.

Next winter we may well undertake the great task of furthering the security of the citizen and his family through social insurance.

This is not an untried experiment. Lessons of experience are available from States, from industries, and from many nations of the civilized world. The various types of social insurance are interrelated; and I think it is difficult to attempt to solve them piecemeal. Hence I am looking for a sound means which I can recommend to provide at once security against several of the great disturbing factors in life—especially those which relate to unemployment and old age. I believe there should be a maximum of cooperation between States and the Federal Government. I believe that the funds necessary to provide this insurance should be raised by contribution rather than by an increase in general taxation. Above all, I am convinced that social insurance should be national in scope, although the several States should meet at least a large portion of the cost of management, leaving to the Federal Government the responsibility of investing, maintaining, and safeguarding the funds constituting the necessary insurance reserves.

I have commenced to make, with the greatest of care, the necessary actuarial and other studies necessary for the formulation of plans for the consideration of the Seventy-fourth Congress.

These three great objectives—the security of the home, the security of livelihood, and the security of social insurance—are, it seems to me, a minimum of the promise that we can offer to the American people. They constitute a right which belongs to every individual and every family willing to work. They are the essential fulfillment of measures already taken toward relief, recovery, and reconstruction.

This seeking for a greater measure of welfare and happiness does not indicate a change in values. It is rather a return to values lost in the course of our economic development and expansion.

Ample scope is left for the exercise of private initiative. In fact, in the process of recovery, I am greatly hoping that repeated promises that private investment and private initiative to relieve the Government in the immediate future of much of the burden it has assumed will be fulfilled. We have not imposed undue restrictions upon business. We have not opposed the incentive of reasonable and legitimate private profit. We have sought rather to enable certain aspects of business to regain the confidence of the public. We have sought to put forward the rule of fair play in finance and industry.

It is true that there are a few among us who would still go back. These few offer no substitute for the gains already made, nor any hope for making future gains for human happiness. They loudly assert that individual liberty is being restricted by government, but when they are asked what individual liberties they have lost they are put to it to answer.

We must dedicate ourselves anew to a recovery of the old and sacred possessive rights for which mankind has constantly struggled—homes, livelihood, and individual security. The road to these values is the way of progress. Neither you nor I will rest content until we have done our utmost to move further on that road.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, June 8, 1934.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The message will lie on the table and be printed.

SUPPLEMENTAL ESTIMATE OF APPROPRIATION—DISTINCTIVE PAPER FOR SECURITIES (S.DOC. NO. 202)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the Treasury Department for the fiscal year 1935, amounting to $69,220, to cover the increased cost of distinctive paper for United States securities, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

MANUFACTURE AND SALE OF MUNITIONS—PETITION

Mr. FRAZIER. I present a petition submitted by the executive committee of the International Reform Federation to the Senate of the United States and ask that it be printed in the RECORD and lie on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The petition is as follows:

To the honorable Senate of the United States:

Whereas world peace is impossible without world disarmament, both material and psychological;

Whereas the chief obstacles to disarmament come from manufacturers of war implements and their sinister influence over politics in various nations, according to the revelations concerning the makers of munitions contained in recent literature, especially in two books—"Merchants of Death" and "Iron, Blood, and Profits."

Whereas the arms agreement proposed by the League of Nations in 1919 never went into effect, though ratified by all smaller nations, because the great munitions-producing countries had all agreed that they must ratify in a body or not at all, and the United States refused to ratify because it did not wish to refuse to send arms to revolutionary governments in South and Central America;

Whereas the United States Government in that and similar decisions acted to protect the private manufacturers of munitions of war and bankers whose funds were invested in that antisocial international trade, which is a menace to our civilization;

Whereas the Department of State has on several occasions urged that it be given favorable consideration and President Hoover in a message on January 10, 1933, recommended that the Senate consent to its ratification;

Whereas President Franklin Roosevelt has expressed the hope that the representatives of the nations in the League of Nations may be able to agree upon a convention containing provisions for the supervision and control of the traffic in arms much more far-reaching than those which were embodied in the convention of 1925;

Whereas the Seventy-first Congress, by Public Resolution No. 98, approved June 27, 1930, responding to the long-standing demands of American war veterans, speaking through the American Legion, for legislation "to take the profit out of war", created a War Policies Commission, which reported recommendations on December 7, 1931, and on March 7, 1932, to decommercialize war and to equalize the burdens thereof, and these recommendations never have been translated into the statutes;

Whereas the Senate of the Seventy-third Congress has appointed a committee of five Sentaors, of which Senator NYE is chairman—

"(a) To investigate the activities of individuals and of corporations in the United States engaged in the manufacture, sale, distribution, import, or export of arms, munitions, or other implements of war; the nature of the industrial and commercial organizations engaged in the manufacture of or traffic in arms, munitions, or other implements of war; the methods used in promoting or effecting the sale of arms, munitions, or other implements of war; the quantities of arms, munitions, or other implements of war imported into the United States and the countries of origin thereof, and the quantities exported from the United States and the countries of destination thereof; and

"(b) To investigate and report upon the adequacy or inadequacy of existing legislation and of the treaties to which the United States is a party for the regulation and control of the manufacture of and traffic in arms, munitions, or other implements of war within the United States, and of the traffic therein between the United States and other countries; and

"(c) To review the findings of the War Policies Commission and to recommend such specific legislation as may be deemed desirable to accomplish the purposes set forth in such findings and in the preamble to this resolution; and

"(d) To inquire into the desirability of creating a Government monopoly in respect to the manufacture of armaments and munitions and other implements of war, and to submit recommendations thereon."

Therefore, we, the undersigned, the executive committee of the International Reform Federation, representing thousands of members of all branches of the Christian Church, respectfully petition Congress to add another duty to the Nye committee, viz:

To recommend to Congress a bill designed to protect Congress and official representatives of the people in the Federal Government—executive, legislative, and judicial—from political leaders, who because of voluntary contributions for political campaigns have exercised political pressure in moral crises which are destructive of the Constitution, the foundation rock of our Republic, from which our liberties and unprecedented prosperity have come and our departure from which has brought just penalty for our sins.

ROBERT WATSON, President.
JOHN W. ELLIOTT, Vice President.
GEORGE S. DUNCAM, Secretary.
W. W. MILLAN, Treasurer.
WILLIAM SHEAFE CHASE, Superintendent.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. STEPHENS, from the Committee on Commerce, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 3679. An act to place officers and men of the Coast Guard on the same basis as officers and men of the Navy with respect to Medals of Honor, Distinguished Service Medals, and Navy Crosses (Rept. No. 1290);

S. 3737. An act authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to dispose of certain lighthouse reservations, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 1291);

H.R. 6622. An act authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to lease certain Government land at Woods Hole, Mass. (Rept. No. 1292);

H.R. 8930. An act to provide for the construction and operation of a vessel for use in research work with respect to ocean fisheries (Rept. No. 1293); and

H.R. 9654. An act to authorize the Department of Commerce to make special statistical studies upon payment of the cost thereof, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 1294).

Mr. STEPHENS also, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H.R. 7161) to provide for the refund or abatement of the customs duty on altar candlesticks and cross imported for the Church of the Good Shepherd, Memphis, Tenn., reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1337) thereon.

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1601) to carry out the findings of the Court of Claims in the case of the Atlantic Works, of Boston, Mass., reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1295) thereon.

He also, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2539) for the relief of Anthony J. Constantino, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1343) thereon.

Mr. BAILEY, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H.R. 3130. An act to extend the benefit of the United States Employment Compensation Act to Frank A. Smith (Rept. No. 1296);

H.R. 3243. An act for the relief of Harry E. Good, administrator de bonis non of the estate of Ephraim N. Good, deceased (Rept. No. 1297);

H.R. 3748. An act for the relief of Mary Orinski (Rept. No. 1298);

H.R. 4447. An act for the relief of Vertner Tate (Rept. No. 1299);

H.R. 4952. An act for the relief of Theodore W. Beland (Rept. No. 1300);

H.R. 5639. An act for the relief of Harriet V. Schindler (Rept. No. 1301);

H.R. 5835. An act for the relief of Ward J. Lawton, special disbursing agent, Lighthouse Service, Department of Commerce (Rept. No. 1302);

H.R. 5947. An act authorizing adjustment of the claim of the Western Union Telegraph Co. (Rept. No. 1303);

H.R. 6324. An act for the relief of Mabel Carver (Rept. No. 1304);

H.R. 7067. An act for the relief of St. Anthony's Hospital at Michigan City, Ind.; Dr. Russell A. Gilmore; Emily Molzen, nurse; and the Hummer Mortuary (Rept. No. 1305);

H.R. 7292. An act for the relief of the Boston Store Co., a corporation, Chicago, Ill. (Rept. No. 1306);

H.R. 7372. An act for the relief of Donald K. Warner (Rept. No. 1307); and

H.R. 7631. An act for the relief of Arthur A. Burn, Sr., and J. K. Ryland (Rept. No. 1308).

Mr. BAILEY also, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally with an amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H.R. 3502. An act for the relief of the estate of William Bardel (Rept. No. 1308);

H.R. 3749. An act for the relief of Hunter B. Glasscock (Rept. No. 1310);

H.R. 5400. An act for the relief of Thomas F. Olsen (Rept. No. 1311);

H.R. 7736. An act for the relief of Rocco D'Amato (Rept. No. 1312); and

H.R. 9830. An act for the relief of the State of Nebraska (Rept. No. 1313).

Mr. GIBSON, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H.R. 4175. An act for the relief of Oscar C. Olson (Rept. No. 1314);

H.R. 4666. An act for the relief of Jerry O'Shea (Rept. No. 1315);

H.R. 4670. An act for the relief of Lyman D. Drake, Jr. (Rept. No. 1316);

H.R. 4957. An act for the relief of F. M. Peters and J. T. Akers (Rept. No. 1317); and

H.R. 5031. An act for the relief of Edith L. Peeps (Rept. No. 1318).

Mr. GIBSON also, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H.R. 4793) for the relief of Moses Israel, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1319) thereon.

Mr. TOWNSEND, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H.R. 3146. An act for the relief of John W. Barnum (Rept. No. 1320);

H.R. 4082. An act for the relief of John J. Corcoran (Rept. No. 1321);

H.R. 4446. An act for the relief of E. E. Hall (Rept. No. 1322);

H.R. 4832. An act for the relief of Edgar Sampson (Rept. No. 1323); and

H.R. 5109. An act for the relief of Joe G. Baker (Rept. No. 1324).

Mr. TOWNSEND also, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H.R. 4395) for the relief of the General Warehousing Co., reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1325) thereon.

Mr. CAPPER, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H.R. 452. An act for the relief of Laura B. Crampton (Rept. No. 1326); and

H.R. 8688. An act for the relief of Stella E. Whitmore (Rept. No. 1327).

Mr. WHITE, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H.R. 3606. An act for the relief of William Sheldon (Rept. No. 1328);

H.R. 6350. An act for the relief of Arthur Smith (Rept. No. 1329);

H.R. 7107. An act for the relief of Frank Baglione (Rept. No. 1330);

H.R. 7264. An act for the relief of M. N. Lipinski (Rept. No. 1331);

H.R. 7387. An act for the relief of Royce Wells (Rept. No. 1332);

H.R. 7697. An act for the relief of William Chinsky (Rept. No. 1333); and

H.R. 8727. An act for the relief of the First State Bank & Trust Co., of Mission, Tex. (Rept. No. 1334).

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 3121. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to lease or to sell certain lands and buildings, known as "Camp Eagle Pass, Tex.", to the city of Eagle Pass, Tex. (Rept. No. 1338);

S. 3464. An act to retire Walter L. Rasasco with the rank of second lieutenant, Air Corps, United States Army (Rept. No. 1344); and

S. 3528. An act to grant permission to the Willard Family Association to erect a tablet at Fort Devens, Mass. (Rept. No. 1342).

Mr. TYDINGS, from the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, to which were referred the following bill and joint resolution, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H.R. 5330. An act to amend the act of March 2, 1917, entitled "An act to provide a civil government for Puerto Rico, and for other purposes" (Rept. No. 1335); and

H.J.Res. 344. Joint resolution to amend the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution for the relief of Porto Rico", approved December 21, 1928, to permit an adjudication with respect to liens of the United States arising by virtue of loans under such joint resolution (Rept. No. 1336).

Mr. PITTMAN, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H.R. 1769. An act for the relief of Jeannette S. Jewell (Rept. No. 1339); and

H.R. 7781. An act for the relief of Rosemund Pauline Lowry (Rept. No. 1340).

Mr. STEIWER, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 1508) providing for the final enrollment of the Indians of the Klamath Indian Reservation in the State of Oregon, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1341) thereon.

REGULATION OF TRAFFIC IN FOOD AND DRUGS

Mr. COPELAND. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably certain additional amendments—and I hope the last—to the food and drug bill, being Senate bill 2800, now on the calendar as Order of Business 520. Various amendments were considered and adopted by the committee. I ask that the bill be reprinted showing all the amendments.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. WAGNER:

A bill (S. 3762) to amend the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. McCARRAN:

A bill (S. 3763) relating to automatic promotions of Federal employees; to the Committee on Civil Service.

By Mr. McKELLAR:

A bill (S. 3764) to reduce the fee to accompany applications for entry as second-class matter of publications of limited circulation;

A bill (S. 3765) to enable the Postmaster General to withhold commissions on false returns made by postmasters; and

A bill (S. 3766) to amend the act entitled "An act authorizing the Postmaster General to adjust certain claims of postmasters for loss by burglary, fire, or other unavoidable casualty", approved March 17, 1882, as amended; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

By Mr. STEIWER:

A bill (S. 3767) to credit the Klamath Indian tribal funds with certain amounts heretofore expended from tribal funds on irrigation works of the Klamath Reservation, Oreg.; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

A bill (S. 3768) for the relief of F. T. Wade, M. L. Dearing, E. D. Wagner, and G. M. Judd; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. COOLIDGE:

A bill (S. 3769) to provide for legalizing the residence in the United States of certain classes of aliens;

A bill (S. 3770) to provide adjustment of status of certain aliens lawfully admitted without requirement of departure to foreign country; and

A bill (S. 3771) to authorize the deportation of the habitual criminal, to guard against the separation from their families of aliens of the noncriminal classes, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Immigration.

By Mr. McKELLAR:

A joint resolution (S.J.Res. 136) authorizing an appropriation for the expenses of the arbitration of the claim of George R. Jones Co., Inc., against the Government of Norway; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

A joint resolution (S.J.Res. 137) designating or naming a certain mountain in the State of Tennessee "Mount Roosevelt", and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

MONETARY USE AND ACQUISITION OF SILVER—AMENDMENT

Mr. GORE (by request) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H.R. 9745) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase silver, issue silver certificates, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

AMENDMENT OF THE BANKING ACT OF 1933—AMENDMENTS

Mr. BULKLEY submitted four amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 3748) to amend certain sections of the Banking Act of 1933 and the Federal Reserve Act, and for other purposes, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

REGULATION OF TRAFFIC IN FOOD AND DRUGS—AMENDMENT

Mr. COSTIGAN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2800) to prevent the manufacture, shipment, and sale of adulterated or misbranded food, drink, drugs, and cosmetics, and to regulate traffic therein; to prevent the false advertisement of food, drink, drugs, and cosmetics, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

FINANCING OF HOME CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR—AMENDMENT

Mr. WAGNER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 3603) to improve Nation-wide housing standards, provide employment, and stimulate industry; to improve conditions with respect to home mortgage financing, to prevent speculative excesses in new mortgage investment, and to eliminate the necessity for costly second mortgage financing, by creating a system of mutual mortgage insurance and by making provision for the organization of additional institutions to handle home financing; to promote thrift and protect savings; to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act; to amend the Federal Reserve Act; and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency and ordered to be printed.

ADDITIONAL COPIES OF HEARINGS RELATIVE TO ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAYS TREATY

Mr. PITTMAN submitted the following concurrent resolution (S.Con.Res. 20), which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), that in accordance with paragraph 3, of section 2, of the Printing Act approved March 1, 1907, the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate be, and is hereby, empowered to have printed for its use 2,000 copies of the hearings held before a subcommittee of said committee during the second session of the Seventy-second Congress, on the resolution (S.Res. 278), a resolution authorizing the Committee on Foreign Relations to make an investigation and to hold hearings respecting matters touching the St. Lawrence Waterways Treaty, part 1 and part 2.

STRENGTH OF OFFICER AND ENLISTED PERSONNEL OF THE ARMY

Mr. SHEPPARD submitted the following resolution (S.Res. 264), which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

Resolved, That the Committee on Military Affairs, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized and directed to make an inquiry into the need for an increase in the present strength of the officer and enlisted personnel of the Regular Army of the United States.

LIABILITY OF POSTAL CONTRACTORS—MOTION TO RECONSIDER

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I desire to enter a motion to reconsider the vote on the passage on June 6, 1934, of House bill 7340, to authorize the Post Office Department to hold contractors or carriers transporting the mails by air or water on routes extending beyond the borders of the United States responsible in damages for the loss, rifling, damage, wrong delivery, depredations upon, or other mistreatment of mail matter due to fault or negligence of the contractor or carrier, or an agent or employee thereof.

I have no particular objection to the spirit of the bill, but I think in the form in which it was passed it is not as it should be; and I enter a motion to reconsider the vote whereby it was passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. POPE in the chair). The motion will be entered.

Mr. COPELAND. I now move that the House be requested to return the bill to the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New York.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. COPELAND. I ask, in this connection, that a letter I have relative to the matter be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

The letter is as follows:

MAY 29, 1934.

H.R. 7340. To hold mail carriers liable for damages for loss, etc., of mail

Hon. ROYAL S. COPELAND,
United States Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SIR: H.R. 7340, which has passed the House and has been favorably reported by the Senate Post Office Committee, would, it appears to us, expose any steamship or aircraft carrying mail to claims for unlimited damages without any opportunity for adequate protection.

A large part of the foreign mail of the United States is carried by American vessels under mail contracts which make the contractor answerable in damages for loss, rifling, damaging, etc., of mail.

The pending bill gives the Government no additional protection with regard to mail thus carried under contract, but carriers of noncontract mail carrying smaller amounts of mail at poundage rates fixed many years ago would be very seriously affected by this bill.

Steamships are, from time to time, given mail in sacks to be carried to foreign destination. Except in the case of registered mail, no record is kept by the postal authorities or anyone else of the number of pieces in each sack or their identity or value. The carrier has no means of knowing the value. The rate of compensation is based on performance of service and not on responsibility in damages for the full value of any piece of mail lost.

Existing law authorizes the Post Office Department by fine to penalize the carrier for negligence in handling the mail and to deduct the amount of the fine from his mail pay, but the proposal now advanced to make the carrier of noncontract mail answerable in full damages seems to turn the Post Office Department into a collector of damages for the sender, without giving the carrier any opportunity to know the value of the mail when he accepts it.

No express company is so exposed. The Post Office itself in carriage of parcel post is open only to a limited liability. For ordinary mail the Government itself assumes no liability for damages, yet the proposed legislation would make the carrier heavily liable.

A similar bill, S. 3445, applicable to domestic railroads, was the subject of hearings before the Post Office Committee of the Senate, and the basic difficulties and objections to the principle of this legislation were there presented by representatives of the railroads.

We feel that the same injustice exists in H.R. 7340, and we hope it will not pass, and for this reason have given you our views as above.

Respectfully,

ROBERT H. PATCHIN,
Vice President, Grace Steamship Co.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE ACT

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, there appeared in the New York Times on yesterday an editorial in relation to the Stock Exchange Act, which I ask to have printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE STOCK EXCHANGE ACT

Now that the stock exchange control bill has become law, Wall Street will doubtless call a truce in criticism of its more questionable provisions and begin quietly to make the necessary adjustments. The act, as amended, is far less drastic than had been supposed. The margin requirements, for example, turn out on closer scrutiny to be actually more liberal for some stocks than the exchange's own regulations. If the prices of these stocks should advance substantially, the new margin requirements would automatically become greater (unless the Federal Reserve Board should decide otherwise), but this could only act as a stabilizing force in the market. The new regulations governing margins are not effective until October 1, and do not apply to outstanding margins until July 1, 1937; so no danger faces the market from forced selling out of accounts.

The new law, further, in its final section, repeals or modifies many of the most onerous restrictions previously existing under the Securities Act of 1933. Many critics of the Roosevelt policies have regarded that law as a greater obstruction to recovery than any other single measure yet enacted. In a careful analysis of the new amendments, published in yesterday's New York Times, Eustace Seligman, who has hitherto been one of the most vigorous critics of the Securities Act, expresses the opinion that the amendments remove at least four-fifths of the warranted objections to the original measure.

These amendments show that the administration is not entirely deaf to criticism, even if much of it comes from Wall Street, and they are at least an indication that if the present stock exchange control law proves to be in some respects ill-advised, it, too, will probably be modified.

Many provisions in the new measure may prove not mere vexatious restrictions but genuinely stabilizing influences. Those which attempt to curb manipulation and pools, and which require fuller and more frequent corporation reports, may eventually do a great deal to restore public confidence. There is little reason to suppose that the new measure, if administered by the Federal Reserve Board and the newly created commission with reasonable wisdom, will in the long run seriously lower the general level of security prices. It may, indeed, tend to reduce the total volume of transactions compared with what it might otherwise have been. No doubt this consideration has been one of the causes for the pessimism concerning the bill felt in some brokerage houses. Their gloom appears in recent weeks to have communicated itself unduly to their customers, and the sagging stock market has in turn affected business sentiment. But perhaps the financial community will soon begin to recognize that a few of its misgivings have been much greater than the facts justify.

INDIANS AT WORK—ARTICLE BY COMMISSIONER OF INDIAN AFFAIRS

Mr. CUTTING. Mr. President, I ask that there be inserted in the RECORD a very important article by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Mr. John Collier, entitled "Indians at Work", published in the Survey Graphic for June 1934.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

INDIANS AT WORK

By John Collier

A crisis is upon the Indians. Through soil erosion, through the allotment system, their lands are melting away. The remedy involves a radical change in their mode of life, great personal sacrifice, hard work. How the Indians have responded—their cooperation, their readiness to learn new ways and apply them—is told here by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. The Wheeler-Howard bill, urged by President Roosevelt, essential to the reorganization of Indian economy, and to the provision of land for 150,000 landless Indians, is being resisted by numerous special interests and by some schools of opinion, and its fate in Congress is uncertain at this writing.

Is it too late for Indian tribes, wards of the Government, to demonstrate statesmanship? Have the Indians still a race to run?

The 12 months behind, even the 5 years behind, have supplied, for the Indians as a whole, merely the beginnings of a possible answer. Whether (ignoring the question of their capacity) the Indians shall be allowed to try to run their race at all is still an unanswered question. It is discussed below. But let us start at the point of clearest evidence and greatest hope.

That point is the Navajo Tribe and the Navajo regional plan. Forty-five thousand Indians, pure bloods and mostly non-English-speaking; in their religion, pre-Columbian; a nomad desert tribe, occupying nearly 25,000 square miles of desert land of wild, somber, and splendid beauty. They have multiplied nearly four-fold in 70 years. Their flocks have multiplied faster. They overpopulate and congest their barren range, and their sheep and goats desperately overgraze it. Their material standard of living is very low, indeed; their physical standard is high; their elan vital is irrepressible. They are esthetes, adventurers, gamblers, sportsmen, and nature mystics. They have not the peasant's submissiveness to work nor the bourgeoise idolatry toward it.

And suddenly the Navajos have been faced with a crisis which in some aspects is nothing less than a head-on collision between immediate advantages, sentiments, beliefs, affections, and previously accepted preachments, as one colliding mass, and physical and statistical facts as the other.

The crisis consists in the fact that the soil of the Navajo Reservation is hurriedly being washed away into the Colorado River. The collision consists in the fact that the entire complex and momentum of Navajo life must be radically and swiftly changed to a new direction and in part must be totally reversed.

And the changes must be made, if made at all, through the choice of the Navajos themselves—a choice requiring to be renewed through months and years, with increasing sacrifices for necessarily remote and hypothetical returns, and with a hundred difficult technical applications.

Nor is the burden of sacrifice an equal one; indeed, those Navajos, individuals and families, who have the greatest power to prevent the collective sacrifice from being made, are the ones whose uncompensated individual sacrifice must be greatest.

It is the Navajos' past which has made their virtues. Their past still is, psychologically, their present. These virtues, aggressive and yet attractive and appealing, must not die from the new order which has suddenly become a matter of life or death. Yet can they live on? For human qualities are institutional products. The question is intense with sociological as well as with human interest.

About 10 months ago a joint committee of the Departments of Agriculture and Interior described the crisis and charted the emergency program. Soil erosion, they found, due to extreme overgrazing, had totally destroyed several hundred thousand acres of the Navajo range. It had seriously damaged millions of acres more. It was advancing not in arithmetical but in geometrical progression, and in 15, perhaps 20, years the Navajo Reservation would be changed to a divinely painted desert and the Navajos would be homeless on the earth.

Whereupon last July the Navajo tribal council and 2,000 other Navajos were brought together at Fort Wingate, N.Mex. With technical detail, through interpreters, and endless hours of discussion the facts were supplied them. And the condition precedent to an ultimate saving of the soil was stated with no sparing of words. That condition was a sacrifice of hundreds of thousands of their sheep and goats. But in addition there must be a planning of economic use for the whole reservation; range control, with redistribution of range privileges; an intensive revival of subsistence farming, irrigated and dry; a recasting and diminution of the road-building program; the fencing of areas of the range for soil experimentation, with total removal of stock from these areas; and erosion engineering and revegetative operations, under time pressure, throughout the wide region.

Nor could Government funds pay for all the needed innovations. The Navajos themselves must pay, in labor and money.

The Navajo Reservation is being washed into the Boulder Dam Reservoir. That reservoir's rate of silting has been computed upon a static erosion rate which is but a fraction of the present and speeding-up rate. Hence southern California, as well as New Mexico and Arizona, is involved with the Navajos in their crisis. Actually two-thirds of the silt being fed to Boulder Dam is washed from the Navajo lands.

Mandatory sheep and goat reduction, mandatory range control, Federal dominance over the Navajos' present and future program are already possible in law, and might be justified from the standpoint of national necessity.

But the Navajos were expressly and formally told that compulsion would not be used. This problem was their own and they, not the Government, must do the things necessary to its solution. A profound recasting of the economic and social life of a people must be sought through knowing consent of the people and must be forced through their own will, or it must fail.

How did the Navajos respond? The tribal council adopted the program, with the proviso that it must go by referendum to the whole Navajo people through those local chapters which are the ultimate units of Navajo government. The tribe adopted the program at this referendum.

Again, after 4 months, a more drastic and more fast-moving program went before the council, was by it submitted to the people, and was adopted. The Navajos through this decision surrendered 90,000 of their sheep.

And again, after 4 months, a yet more drastic program was submitted. It called for the immediate sacrifice of 150,000 Navajo goats and for coordinate adjustments that will cut the total of Navajo flocks by much more than one-third. The cost of this latest stock reduction will be $225,000; the Government does not undertake to pay the bill, and the Navajos themselves are proposing to pay it, dependent on a Government loan to the tribe. This latest sacrifice was adopted by referendum and confirmed by the tribal council in early April.

Meantime, the positive tasks of erosion control are well under way. The technical direction is being supplied by the soil-erosion service of the Department of the Interior. The Navajos are themselves carrying out the projects. In February, at Washington, the Carnegie Institute presented a photographic display showing erosion as a menacing condition threatening many parts of the United States. The exhibit climaxed with photographs of model erosion-control operations. The pictures bore no local designations, but they were photographs of the engineering works not merely built with Navajo hands but planned, practically in their entirety, by the Navajos. Four hundred Navajos had worked at the projects, assisted by only two white men.

